Whether any Occupation of Rooms in House as Owner or Tenant.]—Although by the Parliamentary and Municipal Registration Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. 26), s. 5, the term "dwelling-house" in the Representation of the People Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 102), is to mean part of a house separately occupied, yet in order to be entitled to the borough franchise as the occupier of a dwelling-house, the person must have an occupation in respect of which he can be rated to the relief of the poor, and therefore he is not entitled to such dwelling-house franchise by reason of the occupation of part of a house if he occupies such part as a lodger. The tenant of two rooms, which he took unfurnished at a weekly rent, had the exclusive use of such rooms, and a key of the outer door of the house. His landlord had also a key of the outer door, and resided in all the rest of the house, but supplied no attendance or service to such tenant:—Held, that such tenant occupied the rooms as a lodger, and consequently that, in respect of such occupation, he could not acquire the dwelling-house franchise under the Representation of the People Act, 1867. Bradley v. Baylis, Colt. 163; 51 L. J., Q. B. 183; 8 Q. B. D. 195; 46 L. T. 253; 30 W. R. 823; 45 J. P. 847—C. A.

The tenant of two rooms, which he took unfurnished at a weekly rent, had, in common with the other tenants of the house, which was wholly let out on similar tenancies, the use of the passages, staircase, street door, and usual conveniences of the house. The landlord and not the tenant was rated, and the landlord did all repairs inside and out, but he did not reside in the house, nor did he, save as aforesaid, retain the control and dominion over the house, or render any services to any of the tenants:—Held, that such tenant did not occupy the rooms as a lodger, but as an occupying tenant under the Representation of the People Act, 1867, and that he could therefore acquire the dwelling-house franchise in respect of such occupation. Ib.

The occupier of a floor in a house in which the landlord himself resides is a mere lodger, and, previous to 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, was not entitled to be registered as a voter, although he has a key to the outer door. Wauscy v. Perkins, Hill's Case, 7 Man. & G. 151; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 252; 8 Scott (N.R.) 979; 14 L. J., C. P. 75; 9 Jur. 116. S. P., Crocker v. Lambeth, 8 Scott (N.R.) 985; 7 Man. & G. 156, n.; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 255, n.

The voter occupied for the qualifying year as his residence a room in a dwelling-house at a weekly rent, and had a right of ingress and egress by the stairs, passage and front door. He had a key of his room and also of the front door. All the rooms of the house were let to tenants as their residences with the like rights. During the qualifying year one of the tenants quitted his room and gave up his keys to the landlord, who thereupon took the usual steps to obtain a new tenant. The landlord did not reside in the house, nor exercise any control over it, nor, in fact, have any control except such (if any) as the law would confer on him by the vacating of the room by the out-going tenant:—Held, that the voter was an inhabitant occupier of a dwelling-house within 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 3, and 41 & 42 Vict. c. 26, s. 5, and not merely a lodger. Anchetill v. Baylis, Colt. 289; 52 L. J., Q. B. 104; 10 Q. B. D. 577; 48 L. T. 342; 31 W. R. 233; 47 J. P. 356—C. A.

Where the revising barrister finds as a fact that a voter, during the qualifying period, separately occupied as a separate dwelling-house two rooms on a flat in a tenement house, having the exclusive control of the said rooms and the use of the stairs, yard, &c., in common with the other inmates of the tenement house, the fact that the landlord also resided in the house does not per se as matter of law disfranchise the voter. Where the inmates of such a house are otherwise duly qualified, in order to deprive them of the franchise as inhabitant householders, the landlord must so reside upon the premises as to retain his quality of master, reserving to himself a general control and dominion over the whole structure. M'Laughlin v. Chambers, [1896] 2 Ir. R. 497—C. A.

A tenant of a set of chambers in the Inns of Court, forming a house within 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 27, does not cease to occupy them within the meaning of that section, by letting a room unfurnished to another person, he himself still retaining another room for his own use, and being bound to supply a clerk, a laundress, and coals for such person, and pay the rates and taxes, though such person has a key of the outer door and may look up his room if he pleases. Smith v. Lancaster, 1 Hopw. & C. 287; 39 L. J., C. P. 33; L. R. 5 C. P. 246; 21 L. T. 492; 18 W. R. 170.

A. occupied, as a counting-house, a room in a house, the landlord of which also had a counting-house there, but did not reside there. There was an outer door, which was locked at night. A. had no key of this door, nor was there any key-hole on the outside. A person employed and paid by the landlord lived in the house for the purpose of protecting the premises and letting in the several tenants when the outer door was closed :—Held, that A. was tenant of a countinghouse, within 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 27. Downing v. Luckett, 5 C. B. 40 ; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 33 ; 17 L. J., C. P. 31 ; 11 Jur. 993.

One who has the exclusive occupation of apartments in a house, at a rent, having a key of the outer door, and free and uncontrolled access thereto at all times—the landlord occupying a portion of the premises, but not residing therein—is entitled to be registered as tenant of a building, within 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 27. Toms v. Luckett, 5 C. B. 23 ; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 19 ; 17 L. J., C. P. 27 ; 11 Jur. 993.

But the occupier of part of a house, where the landlord resides upon the premises and retains the key of the outer door, is a mere lodger, and is not a person occupying as owner or tenant. Pitts v. Smedley, 7 Man. & G. 85 ; 8 Scott (N.R.) 907 ; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 196 ; Barr. & Arn. 344 ; 14 L. J., C. P. 73 ; 9 Jur. 69.

The occupier of part of a house, who has a key of the outer door, the landlord not residing in or occupying any portion of the premises, is entitled to a vote. Score v. Huggett, 8 Scott (N.R.) 919 ; 7 Man. & G. 95 ; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 198 ; Barr. & Arn. 355 ; 14 L. J., C. P. 74 ; 9 Jur. 70.

B. occupied three rooms on the first floor of a house, in which the landlord resided. He had a key to the outer door. There was no internal communication between the three rooms, each having a separate door opening upon the landingplace :—Held, that he was not entitled to be registered. Page v. Perkins, 8 Scott (N.R.) 983 ; 7 Man. & G. 156 ; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 255.

A. B., C. D. and E. were the lessees of a house, and alone were liable for the rent. They were, however, members of an association, out of the funds of which the rent was, in fact, paid, and whose servants, also paid out of the fund, had charge of the premises, which were used for the purposes of the association. Various members of the association transacted the business of the association upon the premises, and each of the lessees, when in London, frequented the premises, and transacted there the business of the association, and partly their own affairs :—Held, that the revising barrister was justified in finding that these lessees occupied as tenants. Luckett v. Bright, 2 C. B. 193 ; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 456 ; Barr. & Arn. 737 ; 15 L. J., C. P. 85 ; 10 Jur. 75.

A master ropemaker in the dockyard at Chatham, occupied a house (as his residence) within the dockyard, belonging to the commissioners of the Admiralty. He paid no rent in money for it, but had it as part remuneration for his services ; no part of it was used for public purposes, the office at which he performed his public services being at a distance. It he had not had the house, he would have had an allowance for a house, in addition to his salary :—Held, that he occupied the house as tenant. Hughes v. Chatham Overseers, 7 Scott (N.R.) 581 ; 5 Man. & G. 54 ; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 51 ; 13 L. J., C. P. 44 ; 7 Jur. 1136.

A sergeant on the permanent staff of the militia, as such occupied a house close to the premises in which the arms, accoutrements, &c., of the corps were stored, which was built expressly for the accommodation of the men employed in looking after the stores, under the provisions of the Militia Act, 1854. The house was assigned to him by the commanding officer as a place to live in ; and, if he left it without the permission of his officer, he would be guilty of a breach of discipline, for which he would probably be dismissed the service ; and he was liable to be turned out at any time. He had 2*s.* 4*d.* per week deducted out of his pay, as occupier of the house ; but he would not receive the 2*s.* 4*d.* extra if he resided elsewhere. He could perform the duties required of him equally well if he was living elsewhere, which he might do with his officer's permission :—Held, that the sergeant did not occupy the premises as tenant, within 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 3. Fox v. Dally, 2 Hopw. & C. 261 ; 44 L. J., C. P. 42 ; L. R. 10 C. P. 285 ; 31 L. T. 478 ; 23 W. R. 244.

The surgeon to Greenwich Hospital occupied, as such surgeon, the house at the infirmary of the hospital, which is appropriated by the Lords of the Admiralty to the person holding that appointment. By one of their regulations, it is required, that all officers having separate apartments are to inhabit those assigned to them ; and that no exchange or other appropriation of apartments is to be made without express permission. There is also an order in force by the inspector-general of hospitals, that surgeons of hospitals, when not provided with a residence within the hospital, are to be allowed 15*s.* a week lodging-money :—Held, that he did not occupy as tenant, inasmuch as he was required to occupy the same with a view to the more efficient performance of his duties as surgeon. Dobson v. Jones, 5 Man. & G. 113 ; 8 Scott (N.R.) 80 ; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 105 ; Barr. & Arn. 243 ; 13 L. J., C. P. 126.

A. claimed to be registered as occupier of a house of the requisite yearly value to confer a vote ; the revising barrister found that he was the keeper of the Guildhall at B. ; that the house was the residence assigned by the corporation to the hall-keeper, and in which he was required to reside, and that it was necessary, for the due performance of his duties as hall-keeper, that he should reside there :—Held, that this was an occupation as servant to the corporation and not an occupation as tenant. Clarke v. St. Mary, Bury St. Edmunds, Overseers, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 23 ; 26 L. J., C. P. 12 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 645 ; 5 W. R. 21.

A lay clerk, appointed to his office by the dean and canons of Windsor, which office he held for life, or so long as he discharged his duties, which did not require residence, occupied a house, one of a number of houses, the freehold of which was vested in the dean and canons (that number being less than the number of lay clerks) ; he was not obliged to reside in it ; though he could let the house which he occupied without the permission of the dean and canons, he was not entitled to vote for the borough, either as owner or tenant. Bridgewater v. Durant, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 7 ; K. & G. 377 ; 31 L. J., C. P. 46 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 590 ; 5 L. T. 491 ; 10 W. R. 171.

A hospital incorporated by act of parliament consists of a master and twelve brethren. Each of the brethren is appointed for life, and takes oath, upon election, to obey the master and certain rules, for disobedience of which rules he may be removed. He also occupies exclusively certain rooms in the hospital of greater value than 10*l.* per annum, for which he is rated to the parish : —Held, that such occupation does not, under 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 27 (repealed), give a borough vote, as it is not an occupation as owner or tenant, the ownership being in the corporation aggregate, which must be taken also to occupy in the persons of its individual members. Heath v. Haynes, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 389 ; K. & G. 99 ; 27 L. J., C. P. 50 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 664 ; 6 W. R. 52.

Rating is not the test of occupation as tenant. Ib.

The members of the eleemosynary foundation of the Military Knights of Windsor are not entitled to vote for the borough of New Windsor, the constitution of the body, and the terms and mode of their appointments, shewing that they do not occupy the rooms which they hold in virtue of such appointments, within the castle of Windsor, either as owners or tenants, the legal estate being in the dean and canons of Windsor, and the occupation being entirely of an eleemosynary character, although during good behaviour. Heartley v. Banks, K. & G. 219; 5 C. B. (N.S.) 40; 28 L. J., C. P. 144; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 492; 7 W. R. 342.

To render the occupation of a voter an occupation "as tenant" within 2 Will. 4, c. 45. s. 27 (repealed), it is not essential that the voter's lessor should have a valid legal title to demise. Therefore where premises comprised in a settlement deed were demised to the voter by one of the trustees, who, until such demise, had himself occupied them, paying rent to the cestui que trust, without the interference of his co-trustee:—Held, that assuming any valid objection to exist to the lessor's title to demise, such objection did not affect the voter's qualification as the occupier "as tenant" of the demised premises. Fowle v. Trevor, Colt. 82.

During the qualifying year, and for some time previously, a separate room in the dwelling-house of claimant's father was allotted by him to the claimant, who slept in and occupied the room, separately and exclusively for his own purposes, as his own. The claimant's father was sole tenant of the premises, and had control of the door and of the rest of the house:—Held, that the claimant was not entitled to the franchise. Clarke v. Buchanan, 21 L. R., Ir. 201—C. A.

Whether any Occupation of House as Owner or Tenant.]—A person claimed a borough vote in respect of his occupation of one of a series of houses known as Lord Coningsby's Hospital, to which he had been duly nominated. The persons who occupy these houses are nominated by the owner of certain estates, out of which fixed payments are made to such occupants, who are called servitors, and are subject to certain rules made for their government in 1614, when the hospital was founded, and which they must obey under the penalty of a fine. They pay no rent, and clothes and coals are supplied to them out of the funds of the hospital. When a man is appointed to one of the houses he holds it, with a garden near to it, for life, and cannot be disturbed in his occupation by any one, except for a murder or a felony, or something of that kind. None of the houses had ever been let by any of the persons appointed to them, but a garden appertaining to the house held by the claimant had been let by him because he was too old to cultivate it himself:—Held, that the claimant had a freehold interest in the house to which he had been appointed, and that his occupation was not of such an eleemosynary character as to prevent his acquiring the borough franchise as an inhabitant occupier under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 3. Fryer v. Bodenham, 1 Hopw. & C. 204; 38 L. J., C. P. 185; L. R. 4 C. P. 529; 19 L. T. 645; 17 W. R. 294.

The Naval Knights of Windsor were incorporated by royal charter. According to the rules of the foundation, which was of a collegiate character, the members dined together in a common hall; each knight was on his election placed in the occupation of a dwelling-house forming part of the collegiate buildings which were conveyed to the corporation; he held the house, by virtue of his appointment for life, subject to expulsion in the event of his marrying or being guilty of certain offences or breaches of discipline; and had to keep it in repair:—Held, that the occupation of each knight was as a member of the corporation merely, and subject to regulations which were inconsistent with ownership in the individual, and therefore did not confer a right to a vote as an inhabitant occupier as owner or tenant. Durant v. Kennett, 1 Hopw. & C. 297; 39 L. J., C. P. 17; L. R. 5 C. P. 262; 21 L. T. 603; 18 W. R. 286.

The dean and chapter of Exeter is a corporation aggregate; there are five canons in the chapter, who are appointed for life, and five houses which the canons are entitled to occupy, and with their enjoyment of which the chapter cannot interfere. At the election of a canon he produces the key of the house occupied by his predecessor, and prays to be admitted. As one of the canons he is elected and decreed to be installed, and thereupon takes possession of his house. Each canon repairs his house at his own expense:—Held, that the proper inference was that each canon holds his house as a corporation sole and not as a member of the chapter; and that he is therefore entitled to a vote for the city in respect of it. Ford v. Harington, 1 Hopw. & C. 331; 39 L. J., C. P. 107; L. R. 5 C. P. 282; 21 L. T. 609; 18 W. R. 289.

Occupation as Tenant—Severance of Reversion.]—Premises consisting of five closes of land, a barn and other buildings of the annual value of 40*l.* were let to A. as tenant from year to year at the yearly rent of 40*l.*; prior to the last day of July, 1859, the landlord assigned his interest in the barn and other buildings to a third person for the express purpose of depriving the tenant of the right of voting, the premises retained by the landlord not being sufficient of themselves to confer a vote:—Held, that the requisitions of 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 27 (repealed), in respect of occupation under the same landlord had been substantially complied with, and that the severance of the reversion did not affect the tenant's right to be upon the register, the taking from the same landlord of premises of sufficient value being the principal test relied on by the legislature. Smerdon v. Tucker, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 37; K. & G. 305; 29 L. J., C. P. 93; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 557; 1 L. T. 549; 8 W. R. 151.

Bankrupt continuing to Occupy.]—A yearly tenant of a dwelling-house was adjudicated bankrupt, but his occupation of the house was never disturbed, and, after the adjudication, the landlord, on the usual quarter-days, accepted the rent from him. No act of any kind in relation to the bankrupt or the dwelling-house was ever done or signified by any one officially connected with the bankruptcy. At the next revision of the parliamentary and municipal lists of voters of the borough in which the house was situate, objection was taken to the name of the bankrupt being retained upon the lists, on the ground that, as by the 20th section of the Bankruptcy Act, 1883, the property of the bankrupt vested in his trustee, and as the bankruptcy occurred within the qualifying period, the bankrupt had not occupied the house as tenant during the whole of the period within the meaning of 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 3, sub-s. 2 :—Held, that the undisturbed holding over of the bankrupt, together with the subsequent sufferance, consent, and receipt of rent by the landlord, constituted a tenancy by the bankrupt as tenant to the landlord from the date of the adjudication, and that, his occupancy being otherwise continuous, he was entitled to have his name retained upon the lists. Mackay v. McGuire, Fox, 201 ; 60 L. J., Q. B. 24 ; [1891] 1 Q. B. 250 ; 64 L. T. 83 ; 39 W. R. 109 ; 55 J. P. 214.

Occupation of Room in Factory.]—The fact of the landlord contracting to furnish, and furnishing, power from a steam-engine to work a spinning-machine in a room in a factory, does not destroy the exclusive character of the occupation of a tenant of the room. Wright v. Stockport Town Clerk, 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 32 ; 5 Man. & G. 33 ; 7 Scott (N.R.) 561 ; Barr. & Arn. 39 ; 13 L. J., C. P. 50 ; 7 Jur. 1112.

Occupation of Stand or Stall in Market.]—A. and B. occupied respectively a stall and a stand in Spitalfields Market. A stall was erected on a fixed stand, upon which A. exposed goods for sale. The stand was a fixed standing place for a cart, from which B. could offer goods for sale. The whole area of the market was leased by one H., who allowed A., B., and others to occupy such stalls or stands at fixed prices, admittedly of an annual value exceeding 10*l.* The stands were not marked off, but their limits were known to H. and to the occupants of the market. If a stand was not occupied on any particular market day by the person paying for the right to occupy it, H. could allow any other applicant to occupy it, but the price agreed upon for the right to occupy was paid whether the stand were occupied on the several market days or no. H. could give A., B., and the other occupants of stalls or stands notice to quit at any time, which was sometimes given verbally :—Held, that A. and B. "occupied land or tenement of an annual value of not less than 10*l.* as tenants" within the meaning of ss. 5 and 7 (7), of the Representation of the People Act, 1884, as defined by s. 27 of the Reform Act, 1832, and were, therefore, entitled to be registered as voters on the occupiers' list. Hall v. Metcalfe, Fox, 227 ; 61 L. J., Q. B. 53 ; [1892] 1 Q. B. 208 ; 66 L. T. 496.

Husband and Wife—Wife Tenant of the Qualifying Premises.]—The husband of a married woman, who carried on business in her own name in premises occupied by her as tenant, and for which she paid the rates and taxes, is not qualified to vote in respect of such premises. Prentice v. Markham, Fox, 301.

Under an Unlawful Agreement.]—A partnership of twenty persons for carrying on the business of farming, is within the Companies Act of 1862 (25 & 26 Vict. c. 89, s. 4), and if not registered under that act is illegal. Harris v. Amery, 1 H. & R. 358 ; 1 H. & P. 294 ; 35 L. J., C. P. 89 ; L. R. 1 C. P. 148 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 165 ; 13 L. T. 504 ; 14 W. R. 199.

Where land and buildings have been rented by such partnership for carrying on such business, and the only occupation by its members is a constructive one arising out of the occupation of one who acted as manager, no qualification to confer a borough vote can be acquired by its members, as the occupation cannot be shewn without disclosing the illegal partnership. Ib.

Successive Occupation.]—A person on the register, whose qualification is there described to be land in his occupation in a particular parish, and who afterwards, during the year, changes his occupation for other land in the same parish, must send in a new claim, or he cannot retain his name on the list, although the description of the qualification on the register will apply equally to both occupations. Burton v. Gery, 5 C. B. 7 ; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 4 ; 17 L. J., C. P. 66 ; 11 Jur. 948.

Where the right to vote depends upon the occupation of premises in immediate succession, the whole of the subject-matter composing the qualification must be fully described in the register. Ib.

A claim to the parliamentary franchise may be sustained by combining a series of occupation of dwelling-houses during the qualifying period—(a) partly by virtue of service, and partly under ordinary tenancies, or (b) wholly by virtue of service. Turish v. Clark, 18 L. R., Ir. 285—C. A.

G. claimed a vote for the borough of Lewisham in respect of the occupation of two houses in immediate succession, the first house being situated at Beckenham, and the second at Lower Sydenham. Before the passing of the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, both Beckenham and Lower Sydenham were included in the west division of the county of Kent ; but by that act Beckenham became included in the Sevenoaks division of the county, and Lower Sydenham became included within the area of the parliamentary borough of Lewisham, which borough was then first created :—Held, that G. was entitled to be registered as a voter for the borough of Lewisham by virtue of s. 17 of the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885. Down v. Steele, Colt. 458 ; 55 L. J., Q. B. 36.

A person is entitled to be put on the list of voters who has occupied during the qualifying period in immediate succession a series of dwelling-houses partly by virtue of service and partly as an ordinary tenant. Nicholson v. Yeoman, Fox, 150 ; 59 L. J., Q. B. 104 ; 24 Q. B. D. 145 ; 61 L. T. 813 ; 54 J. P. 166.

Joint Occupiers.]—Two claimants claimed in respect of a "house and land joint," and occupied a dwelling-house which they rented above the value of 20*l.* a year, but with no land attached to it except a garden. On behalf of the claimants it was contended that the case came within the definition of a 10*l.* qualification under the Reform Act, 1832, s. 29, a house being a tenement. It was objected that one of the claimants' names was already on the overseers' occupiers' list for the same house, and that two persons could not have a joint occupation of a dwelling-house under the Representation of the People Act, 1867, s. 3:—Held, that the objections failed, and that both claimants were entitled to be registered in respect of the qualification. Druitt v. Gossling, Fox, 123; 58 L. J., Q. B. 109; 60 L. T. 325.

A., being lessee of a mill for a term of ninety-nine years, at 350*l.* rent, terminable on lives, took B., C. and D. into partnership in the business which he carried on at the mill; they lived in the house with him, and each paid one-fourth of the expenses, including rent, and received one-fourth of the profits; all four were rated for the premises:—Held, that B., C. and D. had each a right to a borough vote, and had properly claimed to have their names inserted on the list of 10*l.* occupiers as for one undivided fourth part of the house and mill. Rogers v. Harvey, K. & G. 169; 5 C. B. (N.S.) 3; 28 L. J., C. P. 17; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 199; 7 W. R. 17.

A person, otherwise qualified as an inhabitant occupier, as owner or tenant, of a dwelling-house in a borough, under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 3, does not become a joint occupier within the proviso, and so lose his qualification, by letting to a lodger the exclusive use of a bedroom and the joint use of a sitting-room. Brewer v. M'Gowen, 1 Hopw. & C. 275; 39 L. J., C. P. 30; L. R. 5 C. P. 259; 21 L. T. 462; 18 W. R. 167.

G. and W. jointly rented a sitting-room, and each of them had a bedroom in the same house. The three rooms were of the requisite value:—Held, that the claimants were entitled to the franchise. Gilliland's Case, 28 L. R., Ir. 289—C. A.

The four canons of Bangor Cathedral by arrangement between themselves, resided each for three months in the year in the canonry, a residence set apart for their joint occupation. The value of the premises being admitted to be sufficient:—Held, that subject to the necessity of residence in or within seven miles of the borough during six months immediately preceding July 15th, this constituted an occupation by each during the qualifying period for the purpose of the franchise. Jones v. Pritchard, Fox, 259.

Four canons of a cathedral chapter entered into an arrangement that they should in every year occupy the canonry house in turn for three months at a time:—Held, that there had been no occupation for the qualifying period. Rowland v. Pritchard, Fox, 310; 62 L. J., Q. B. 319; 5 R. 311; 68 L. T. 586; 57 J. P. 759.

Prior to March, 1892, two sons lived with their father in premises of which he was the tenant, and which it became desirable to take down and rebuild. In March, 1892, it was arranged that the sons should become the joint tenants of other premises, and be jointly rated in respect of the same, in order to qualify themselves for the franchise. As soon as the arrangement was completed the father and the two sons moved into the premises of which the sons thus became the tenants, and resided there till August, 1893, when all three moved back into the premises of which the father was tenant, and which had been rebuilt in the interval. The sons paid the rent and poor rates of the premises of which they were the tenants, but the father was surety for the rent and paid all the household expenses of the establishment, including the maintenance of his two sons:—Held, that the sons were entitled to the franchise as joint rated occupiers of the premises of which they were tenants. Mooney v. Chambers, [1894] 2 Ir. R. 374—C. A.

Joint Tenancy — Separate Occupation.]—A claim to be placed on the register of parliamentary voters may be sustained by each of two persons who are joint tenants of an entire holding consisting of separately rated dwelling-houses and land, pay a single rent, and accept receipts in their joint names, but live each in one of the dwelling-houses separately, and work portions of the land severally, and the remainder jointly. Torish v. Clark, 18 L. R., Ir. 289—C. A.

Service Franchise—Occupation of Bedroom by virtue of Office or Employment—Tenant of Dwelling-house.]—H., a servant, occupied exclusively, by virtue of his service, a furnished bedroom in a dwelling-house belonging to his master, and had in common with another young man the use of a sitting-room in the same house. All the furniture belonged to the master, who did not reside in the house, but had free access at all times to every portion of it except H.'s bedroom, and had access to it whenever he asked for the key, which he had a right to demand whenever he chose; the bedrooms were made up by a charwoman who was paid by the master and did not reside on the premises:—Held, that H. was entitled to the franchise. Hasson v. Chambers, 18 L. R., Ir. 68—C. A.

R. was foreman of a shop and place of business in which a number of young men were employed. By virtue of that employment he and they lived in a separate house in which he had a bedroom that he occupied exclusively. He and the other employés took their meals in a common sitting-room, and the only resident in the house was a servant paid by the employer to attend to the occupants; R. had a latchkey for the hall door and had also charge of the other keys, and it was his duty to see that the doors were locked and the occupants within doors every night:—Held, that R. was entitled to the franchise. Lynch v. Buchanan, 18 L. R., Ir. 68—C. A.

The claimant, a shop assistant, had, during the qualifying period, by virtue of his employment, the sole use of a bedroom in a dwelling-house belonging to his employers, in which were a number of other bedrooms occupied by other persons in the same employment. The claimant and all the other persons residing in the house had their meals in a common room, of which they each had the joint use, in addition to the separate use of their respective bedrooms. The employers exercised a general control over the house, and enforced such control by means of a resident caretaker, but not otherwise:—Held, that each assistant who had the sole use of a bedroom under the above circumstances had obtained the service franchise by virtue of s. 3 of the Representation of the People Act, 1884. Stribling v. Halse, Colt. 409; 55 L. J., Q. B. 15; 16 Q. B. D. 246; 54 L. T. 268; 49 J. P. 727.

Each teacher in a college conducted by a religious community had, as such, during the qualifying period, the exclusive use of a separate bedroom in the college by virtue of his office or employment as a teacher in the college, which was managed by a resident principal, under the supreme control of the superior-general of the community, who himself lived in Paris. The revising barrister having found that each bedroom so occupied constituted a "dwelling-house" for the purpose of the franchise, and was not inhabited by the person by whom the teachers were employed, or under whom they served:—Held, that the teachers were entitled to the franchise. Stribling v. Halse (16 Q. B. D. 246) followed. Alexander v. Burke, 22 L. R., Ir. 443—C. A.

—— Cubicle.]—A cubicle in a room, which structurally is not completely separate from the rest of the room, is not part of a house "separately occupied as a dwelling" within the meaning of s. 5 of the Parliamentary and Municipal Registration Act, 1878, so as to entitle the occupier to a vote. Stribling v. Halse (16 Q. B. D. 246) discussed. Barnett v. Hickmott, Fox, 412; 64 L. J., Q. B. 407; [1895] 1 Q. B. 691; 15 R. 256; 72 L. T. 236; 43 W. R. 284; 59 J. P. 230.

The appellant, a police constable, had, during the whole of the qualifying period, the exclusive occupation, by virtue of his service, of a cubicle which, with others occupied by other constables, was contained in a dormitory at a police-station. The cubicle was separated from the rest of the dormitory by a partition seven feet high, but there was a space of two or three feet between the top of the partition and the ceiling of the room. The constables occupying the several cubicles shared the air and light of the whole dormitory in common. The deputy chief-constable, who resided in a house adjoining the police-station, had absolute control over the use by the constables of their cubicles, and might impose conditions as to their use inconsistent with the substantial rights of a householder in his own house. No regulations had, however, been made as to, nor had the constables been in fact interfered with in, their use of the cubicles, and the appellant had, during the whole of the qualifying period, the key of his cubicle, and closed and locked it at pleasure:—Held (Rigby, L.J., dissenting), that the cubicle was not "part of a house separately occupied as a dwelling," within the meaning of s. 5 of the Parliamentary and Municipal Registration Act, 1878, and that the appellant was not entitled to the franchise in respect of it. Barnett v. Hickmott, supra, approved. Clutterbuck v. Taylor, 1 Smith, 59; 65 L. J., Q. B. 314; [1896] 1 Q. B. 395; 74 L. T. 177; 44 W. R. 531; 60 J. P. 278—C. A.

—— Employer, who is—What amounts to Habitation by.]—The industrial trainer of a workhouse occupied two rooms in the workhouse building. The master of the workhouse resided in other rooms, and another room was set apart for the use of the guardians who transacted business therein. It was part of the master's duty to lock the workhouse gates at a certain hour, and to report to the guardians if the industrial trainer was out after that time:—Held, that the master of the workhouse was not a person under whom the trainer served, within the meaning of 48 Vict. c. 3, s. 3; that the guardians could not be said to reside in the workhouse; and that the trainer was entitled to the franchise. Adams v. Ford or Fox, Colt. 403; 55 L. J., Q. B. 13; 16 Q. B. D. 239; 53 L. T. 666; 34 W. R. 64; 49 J. P. 711. See Holly v. Burke, and Crossan v. Chambers, col. 19.

—— Soldier occupying Quarters in Barracks.]—A non-commissioned officer in the service of the Crown claimed the parliamentary franchise as the inhabitant occupier of a dwelling-house in respect of rooms occupied by him as his quarters in barracks. He had inhabited the rooms, which consisted of a bedroom and sitting-room, during the qualifying period, subject, however, to certain regulations and powers of superior officers incident to military service, such, for instance, as the power of entry by the commanding officer at any time, and by other superior officers for the purpose of preserving order, and by certain officers at stated times for the purpose of inspection of the rooms, the power of the commanding officer to forbid any person to enter or leave the barracks at any time, and the obligation to be in his quarters at a stated hour every evening. The Crown supplied certain necessary articles of furniture for the rooms, the rest of the furniture being the claimant's own. The rooms formed part of one of the blocks of buildings situate within the barrack enclosure the remaining rooms in the block being occupied by other non-commissioned officers, some of whom were superior in rank to the claimant, and the senior of whom was bound to preserve order in the block, and would be entitled to enter the claimant's rooms for that purpose. The colonel commanding lived in a house situate within the walls of the barracks:—Held, that the claimant was entitled to the franchise under the 3rd section of the Representation of the People Act, 1884, on the ground that he had inhabited a dwelling-house within the meaning of that section, and that no person under whom he served had inhabited such dwelling-house. Atkinson v. Collard, Colt. 375; 55 L. "House."]—The word "house," as used in 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 27, is not restricted in meaning to a dwelling-house. Daniel v. Coulsting, 7 Man. & G. 122; 8 Scott (N.R.) 949; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 230; Barr. & Arn. 380; 14 L. J., C. P. 70; 9 Jur. 258.

A building consisting of apartments once used as kitchens, shop, sitting-rooms, and bedrooms, and which possessed the usual conveniences to fit it for a dwelling-house, although the voter occupied the greater portion for warehousing goods and as a sale-room, and let off another portion as workshops, is properly stated in the qualification in the list of voters as a house. Ib.

A building, the lower part of which is used as a cowhouse and a stable, and the upper part, consisting of a chamber, used as a dwelling-place, is properly described as a house. Munn v. Denton, 7 Man. & G. 66; 8 Scott (N.R.) 794; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 178; Barr. & Arn. 324; 14 L. J., C. P. 43; 8 Jur. 1102.

The occupation of part of a house may confer a right to vote for a city or borough, under 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 27 (repealed), if there is an independent occupation and actual severance from the rest. Henrette v. Booth, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 500; 1 H. & P. 23; 33 L. J., C. P. 61; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1293; 9 L. T. 392; 12 W. R. 173.

A person occupied, as tenant, the whole of the upper floor of a house. The floor consisted of an inner and outer room opening into each other, and were together of the requisite value to confer a vote. He resided in one room, and used the other as a shop. The outer room communicated with the landing on the staircase by an outer door, over which he had absolute control. The other floors of the house were occupied by other tenants in the same manner, and all the tenants had access to their several holdings from the street, through a door which was generally open in the day, but was allowed to swing to at night:—Held, that he occupied a house. Ib.

An occupant of a first floor, being part of a house, but which part is neither shop, warehouse, nor counting-house, nor building analogous to those mentioned in s. 27 of the 2 Will. 4, c. 45, there being no actual severance of it from the rest of the house, is not entitled to vote for a city or a borough. Wilson v. Roberts, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 50; K. & G. 430; 31 L. J., C. P. 78; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 719; 5 L. T. 838; 10 W. R. 429, n.

Part of a house used for residence does not confer a qualification for a borough vote as being included under the words "house, warehouse, counting-house, shop, or other building" within 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 27. Cook v. Humber, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 733; K. & G. 413; 31 L. J., C. P. 73; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 698; 5 L. T. 838; 10 W. R. 427.

In order that part of a house may be a house within the meaning of that enactment there must be an actual severance of the part from the rest of the house. Ib.

An occupier of part of a house may be qualified by reason of his occupation, although he may not have a key of the outer door, or may not have uncontrolled access to the tenement, or be free from any servitude or rights of entry reserved by the landlord, which affect only the value of the tenement, if from other circumstances it appears that the party claiming the qualification is substantially tenant of a separate dwelling, and not merely of apartments in the house of another; the true question being, not what is the nature of the occupation, but what is the nature of that which is occupied. Ib.

Where A. rented and resided in one side of a house, the side consisting of rooms on the ground-floor, having doors into the house passage or hall, which was shut off from the street by an outer door, kept closed night and day; and also of rooms on the upper floor, approached by a staircase used exclusively by him, between which and the room on the other side of the passage (occupied by his landlord, the owner of the whole house, who resided on the premises with his family), there was no communication—A. had a lock and key to each of his rooms, and both he and his landlord had keys of the street-door:—Held, that A.'s residence was not a house, but part of a house, without any actual severance from the rest, and that he was therefore not qualified, in respect of the subject of occupation, to be registered as a borough voter. Ib.

The tenant for business purposes of a separate room forming part of a set of chambers in the Temple, is not entitled to be registered as the occupier of a tenement, within 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 27 (repealed). Cuthbertson v. Butterworth, 1 Hopw. & C. 188; 38 L. See Edwards v. Lang, Brown's Case, col. 20; Cuthbertson v. Hains, col. 25; and Friend v. Towers, col. 96.

"Dwelling-house."]—When a house of ordinary construction, free from structural severance, is wholly let out to several tenants, who are the exclusively rated tenants, either of one room or of two rooms communicating by the common staircase, with the joint user of the passages and staircases, and equal control over the outer door, fastened or not, and with or without the joint user of conveniences outside such house:—Held, per Bovill, C.J., and Keating, J., that the tenements of such tenants are, and per Willes, J., and Brett, J., that they are not dwelling-houses within the 3rd section of the Representation of the People Act, 1867, 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102. Ellis v. Burch, Thomson v. Ward, 1 Hopw. & C. 530, 537; 40 L. J., C. P. 169; L. R. 6 C. P. 327; 24 L. T. 679.

The premises in respect of the occupation of which as a dwelling-house a borough franchise was claimed, consisted of two rooms, which were not structurally separated from the rest of the house of which they formed part, and were connected by a staircase and passages used by the voter in common with the tenants of the other rooms of the house, which were let out in a similar manner, the landlord not living in the house, and the outer door being under the sole control of the several tenants. These two rooms and the voter in respect of them were rated separately to the relief of the poor in all the rates made during the qualifying year, but until the first rate made after the commencement of the qualifying year, these rooms had not been separately rated from the rest of the house, and there was therefore a part of the qualifying year during which the rooms were not separately rated. The revising barrister found as a fact that the two rooms were occupied by the voter as a separate dwelling, and were separately rated to the relief of the poor:—Held, by Keating, J., and Denman, J., that the rooms constituted a "dwelling-house" within the 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 3; and by Brett, J., and Honyman, J., that they were not "a dwelling-house" within the meaning of that section. Boon v. Howard, 2 Hopw. & C. 208; 43 L. J., C. P. 115; L. R. 9 C. P. 277; 30 L. T. 382; 22 W. R. 535.

See Friend v. Towers, col. 96; Edwards v. Lang, Brown's Case, col. 20; Cuthbertson v. Hains, col. 25; and Owens v. Hanrahan, col. 30.

Rooms in House, whether Lodgings or Dwelling-house.]—See Hogan v. Sterrett, and Campbell v. Chambers, col. 20. And see cases, ante, A. 1, a. i. (col. 3).

"Counting-house."]—To entitle an occupier to a vote in respect of a counting-house under 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 27 (repealed), it need not consist of an entire building, or be structurally severed from the rest of the house of which it forms a part. Piercy v. Maclean, 1 Hopw. & C. 371; 39 L. J., C. P. 115; L. R. 5 C. P. 252; 22 L. T. 213; 18 W. R. 732.

Therefore a room let to and occupied as a counting-house by a tenant who has a key to the outer door of the house, and who has also, and to the exclusion of the landlord, the key of the door which separates such room from the landing of the staircase, which gives access to that and the other rooms of the house, is sufficiently constituted a counting-house. Ib.

See Downing v. Lockett, col. 5; and Barton v. Birmingham Town Clerk, col. 27.

Buildings.]—A cowhouse or a stable, substantially built of stone, the roof of which is tiled, having a door with a lock and key, and being suitable for the purpose for which it is used, and also conveniently placed for the occupation of the claimant's land, is a building, within the meaning of that word in 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 27. Whitmore v. Wenlock Town Clerk, 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 10; 7 Scott (N.R.) 489; 5 Man. & G. 9; 13 L. J., C. P. 55; 7 Jur. 1064.

A room in a factory, being a distinct or a separate portion thereof, of which the tenant has the exclusive use, and also the key of the door, is a building. Wright v. Stockport Town Clerk, 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 32; 5 Man. & G. 33; 7 Scott (N.R.) 561; Barr. & Arn. 39; 13 L. J., C. P. 50; 7 Jur. 1112.

A shed, described as standing against a wooden paling, but not fastened thereto; six posts put into the ground support a tarpaulin which forms the roof; one of the sides is boarded up with boards nailed to the posts: the shed is used to put barrows, posts, &c., into, and wharfage is paid for the use of it—is a warehouse or other building. Watson v. Cotton, 5 C. B. 51; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 53; 17 L. J., C. P. 68; 11 Jur. 1106.

A claimant occupied a farm within a borough of the clear annual value of 10*l.* At the time of the demise of the farm there was no building on the land. An electioneering agent, having no interest in the land, caused a shed, made of boards, nailed to posts let into the ground, to be erected on the land, and the claimant occupied the shed, in which he kept agricultural implements:—Held, that the shed was not a building and that the claimant's occupation was not in the capacity of tenant. Powell v. Boraston, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 175; 1 H. & P. 179; 34 L. J., C. P. 73; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 160; 11 L. T. 734; 13 W. R. 465.

A claimant was a market gardener, and occupied a piece of land in a borough. At the time of the demise to the claimant there was no building on the land, but the claimant afterwards erected on the land at his own expense, a wooden structure, supported by wooden posts let into the ground, having boarded sides and a thatched roof. This shed was used by the claimant for storing potatoes, and other things connected with his business:—Held, that this structure was a building. Powell v. Farmer, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 168; 1 H. & P. 172; 34 L. J., C. P. 71; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 162; 11 L. T. 736; 13 W. R. 467. See Norrish v. Harris, infra.

Joinder of Buildings so as to Constitute one entire Qualification.]—A party occupied a house and shop separated from each other by a yard inclosed all round, save but for an open passage, communicating with the street:—Held, that such house and shop were not without the same curtilage, and therefore could not be joined together so as to constitute one entire qualification within 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 27 (repealed). Powell v. Price or Pace, 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 586; 4 C. B. 105; 16 L. J., C. P. 139; 11 Jur. 475.

A. occupied a stable and a coach-house, which adjoined one another, and were under the same roof, the stable standing at the back of the coach-house, and there being two grated windows looking from one into the other, but no internal communication by which a person could pass from one to the other. The door of the coach-house was under a covered gateway, leading from the street into a yard, in which yard was the stable door. Neither the stable nor the coach-house, separately, was of the yearly value of 10*l.*, but the two together were:—Held, that they formed but one building within 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 27, in respect of his occupation of which A. was entitled to be registered as a voter. Joliffe v. Rice, 6 C. B. 1; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 90; 18 L. J., C. P. 25; 13 Jur. 39.

Certain premises consisted of a two-stalled stable built of brick, to which was annexed another brick building, of lower elevation; to which again was annexed an irregular wooden building. Each of the buildings had an opening into a common yard, but there was no internal communication between them. All three buildings were occupied under one landlord, and used by the claimant for the purpose of his trade:—Held, that the three buildings constituted but one building. Pownall v. Dawson, 11 C. B. 9; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 177; 21 L. J., C. P. 14; 16 Jur. 549.

Two distinct buildings cannot be joined together, in order to constitute a right to be registered as a borough or a city voter. Dewhurst v. Fielden or Fielder, 7 Man. & G. 182; 8 Scott (N.R.) 1013; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 274; 14 L. J., C. P. 126; 9 Jur. 376.

Joinder of Buildings and Land.]—A. occupied a house and a garden within a borough, taken by him of the same landlord at the same time, and at one entire rent. The house alone was not of the annual value of 10*l.*, but the house and garden together were of that value; but they were entirely separated by waste land and a row of buildings:—Held, that A. had a good qualification for a borough voter within 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 27, for in the words "land occupied therewith," "therewith" referred to time and not to locality. Collins v. Tewkesbury Town Clerk, 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 219; 22 L. J., C. P. 38; 17 Jur. 52.

The building referred to in 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 27, must be a building of some permanence, some utility, and of real value; but when held with land, although the value of the holding may be trifling, it will be sufficient to qualify if it adds to the bonâ fide value of the whole. Norrish v. Harris, 1 H. & R. 358; 1 H. & P. 305; 35 L. J., C. P. 101; L. R. 1 C. P. 155; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 627; 13 L. T. 762; 14 W. R. 479.

A substantial building used by a farmer for agricultural purposes connected with his own farm, is a sufficient building; and it is not necessary that it should be used for a strictly commercial purpose. Ib.

When the amount required for a borough qualification is made up partly by building and partly by land, there is nothing to define the proportion which the building must bear to the value of the land; and it is therefore sufficient to give such qualification, so far as the value of the building is concerned, if the building bonâ fide adds to the land's annual value to be let, though in a small degree. Ib.

So a stone building consisting of four walls and a roof standing on land occupied by a farmer at a yearly rent of more than 10*l.*, and used by him for the purpose of storing guano in, is a building. Ib.

The building had three stone walls and a roof, and was open in front. The land was used for grazing the voter's cattle, and the building was useful as affording shade and shelter to them, and the building was worth about 5*s.* a year to the tenant:—Held, a building. Ib.

Premises Destroyed by Fire.]—A party rated as occupier of houses and yard, does not lose his right to appear on the list of voters by reason of the houses being destroyed by fire, he still continuing to hold the site on which they stood. Whitley v. M'Cleane. 14 L. T. 899.

Rooms in College.] — The 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 78 (repealed), which forbids any person to vote for the boroughs of Oxford or Cambridge in respect of the occupation of chambers or premises in any college, applies to the new franchises created by 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102. Barnes v. Peters, 1 Hopw. & C. 251; 38 L. J., C. P. 266; L. R. 4 C. P. 539; 17 W. R. 970. And see same case, col. 21.

Service Franchise — Whether Employer and Servant in same Dwelling-house — Bedroom over Coach-house.]—Where W.'s gardener, during the qualifying period, exclusively occupied a bedroom over W.'s coach-house, in which bedroom he took his meals, which were prepared by W.'s cook, and sent to him from W.'s house, the coach-house containing W.'s carriages, and being situate in a detached walled yard, separated from his house by an avenue, but included in the grounds surrounding it:— Held, that the gardener was entitled to the franchise. Holly v. Burke, 22 L. R., Ir. 463—C. A.

—— Room over Stable.]—C. as his employer's coachman occupied a room over the stable and was treated as a domestic servant. The stable was in the employer's yard and was a part of the curtilage of the dwelling-house—the house and yard being all included under the separate number in the poor-rate book; there was a separate gateway and gate from the yard into a back lane, and also a wicket leading from the yard into the lane. The gate and wicket formed the only access to the yard except by going through the employer's house, and were under her control. Another of the servants cleared out C.'s rooms:—Held, that C. was not entitled to the franchise. Crossan v. Chambers, 18 L. R., Ir. 68.

See Hasson v. Chambers, and Stribling v. Halse, col. 12.

iii. Lodgers.

Part of House Let by Resident Landlord, Lodgings, not Separate Dwelling-house.]—The fact that the landlord of a house let out in separate tenements lives in the house is a vital element to be considered in determining whether or not the occupiers of such tenements are lodgers, or qualified as inhabitant householders under the Representation of the People Act, 1884, and, as an all but universal rule, will prevent their successfully claiming the franchise in respect of such occupation otherwise than as lodger. The decision of such cases depends upon the effect of evidence given to establish a matter of fact; but it is a question of law whether any given matter of fact is conclusive upon the law, or whether there is any evidence to sustain any given findings of fact. In order to constitute lodgings which will qualify for the franchise, the part of the house occupied by the claimant must be part of one "dwelling-house"; and in the case of an inhabitant occupier of part of a house, claiming as such, it must be shewn that the part which he occupies is in itself one separate "dwelling-house," and not merely part of one. Hogan v. Sterrett, 20 L. R., Ir. 344—C. A.

Where the claimant, his landlord, and a third person were each occupiers of a separate flat of the house rented by the landlord, and all three used the stairs, hall-door, and yard in common, the revising barrister having decided that the claimant was not an inhabitant occupier but a lodger:—Held, that on the facts, the onus lay on the claimant of shewing that he was an inhabitant occupier and not a lodger, and that he had failed to do so. Held also, that the manner in which other houses in the street were occupied was not material to the question, as each claimant's case must be decided upon its own facts. Campbell v. Chambers, 20 L. R., Ir. 355—C. A. See Bradley v. Baylis, col. 3; Hill's Case, col. 4; and Pitts v. Smedley, col. 5.

Control of Landlord over House.]—A person proved that he had occupied, for twelve months before the 20th of July, lodgings in 39, Tighe Street, of the clear value of over 10*l.*, if let unfurnished; that the entirety of the house was let out in tenements; that the landlord did not reside on the premises, and had not retained any portion of them in his own hands; that no caretaker, or any representative of the landlord, resided in the house; and that the landlord had no key of the outer door, or any means, independently of the will of the tenants, of admitting himself into the house if the outer door was closed. There was an ashpit at the rear of the house common to all the tenants, which was cleaned periodically by a person employed and paid by the landlord for the purpose. The revising barrister decided, that in order to constitute the claimant a lodger, the landlord should have retained a control over the outer door of the house, entitling him to enter therein as of right, and independently of the consent of the tenants, and rejected the claim:—Held (dissentiente, Fitzgerald, B.), that the decision of the barrister was wrong, and that the claimant was entitled to be registered as a lodger. Edwards v. Lang, Brown's Case, Ir. R. 3 C. L. 394.

Per George and O'Brien, JJ.—The fact that a claimant may be liable to be rated as occupier for the premises in respect of which he claims as a lodger will not disentitle him to the lodger franchise, if he is not actually rated. Ib.

Per O'Hagan and O'Brien, JJ.—That the case shewed no such severance as to render the premises in a legal sense separate houses. Ib.

Per Fitzgerald, B.—That the opinion of the revising barrister was right, and that to prevent the premises constituting in a legal sense distinct dwelling-houses, the landlord should retain such control over the house as would give him the constructive occupation of it as a dwelling-house. Ib.

Occupier of Part of House where Landlord no Control, not a Lodger.] — See Anchetill v. Baylis, col. 4; and Score v. Huggett, col. 5.

What Sufficient Residence.] — A person occupied lodgings in a borough in London, separately and as sole tenant, for the requisite twelve months. He had also a house in Dorsetshire, where he kept an establishment of servants all the year round. When in London, he resided at the lodgings, and had done so at intervals for two months out of the twelve:—Held, a sufficient residence to entitle him to vote as lodger for the borough. Bond v. St. George, Hanover Square, Overseers, 1 Hopw. & C. 427; 40 L. J., C. P. 47; L. R. 6 C. P. 312; 23 L. T. 494; 19 W. R. 101.

A person occupying a bedroom of sufficient value in a hotel by the year is not disentitled to the franchise, because he allows the landlord to let the room when he is away in the vacation, if he can return at any time. Kelly v. Chambers, M'Connell's Case, 28 L. R., Ir. 292.

The circumstance that the voter, for the convenience of his business, slept at a different place from the lodgings occupied by his wife and family during the twelve months immediately preceding the last day of July in any year, does not prevent his having a sufficient residence in such lodgings to qualify him for the lodger franchise, if he was not deprived by contract or otherwise of the power of returning to such lodgings when he chose to do so. Taylor v. St. Mary Abbotts, Kensington, Overseers, 1 Hopw. & C. 421; 40 L. J., C. P. 45; L. R. 6 C. P. 309; 23 L. T. 493; 19 W. R. 100.

Rooms in College.]—A set of rooms in a college at Oxford or Cambridge is a dwelling-house within 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, and the occupier is therefore not entitled to vote for the borough as a lodger in respect of such rooms. Barnes v. Peters, 1 Hopw. & C. 251; 38 L. J., C. P. 266; L. R. 4 C. P. 539; 17 W. R. 970.

The occupier of a set of rooms in Trinity College, Dublin, is entitled to vote as a lodger in respect of them (Fitzgerald, J., diss.). Barnes v. Peters (supra) not followed. Byrne v. M'Donogh, Ir. R. 1 Reg. Ap. 175.

Separate Bedroom and Share in Sitting-room.]—To establish the lodger franchise, a claimant must occupy separately and as sole tenant. Harris v. O'Connor, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 64.

But where the claimant and his brother took a furnished sitting-room and two bedrooms at an annual rent of 45*l.*, occupying the sitting-room in common, and each his own bedroom separately, he was entitled to the franchise, although each bedroom was not of the clear letting value of 10*l.* Ib. But see Gallagher v. Hay, infra.

If a lodger has a separate bedroom of sufficient value, he will not be disqualified by reason only of being entitled to the joint use of a sitting-room. Kelly v. Chambers, Gilliland's Case, 28 L. R., Ir. 289—C. A.

A lodger with the exclusive use of one room under the annual value of 10*l.* cannot qualify himself for the franchise by adding thereto any portion of the annual value of another room he occupies jointly with other lodgers in the same house. Gallagher v. Hay, 32 L. R., Ir. 166—C. A.

Permitting other Persons to use Room.]—A claimant used one of the rooms mentioned in his claim as a workroom, and four men, not in his employment, worked at their trade in the same room. They occupied, at night, two beds in that room, and each paid to the claimant 2*s.* 6*d.* a week for permission to work and sleep there, but the claimant did not let the room to them. The other room was not of itself of sufficient value to confer the franchise on the claimant:—Held (O'Brien, J., and Fitzgerald, B., dissentientibus), that the claimant was entitled to the franchise. Edwards v. Lang, Hackett's Case (I.), Ir. R. 3 C. L. 459.

Shop and Parlour.]—A claimant occupied a shop and a parlour, and resided there as sole and separate tenant. The shop opened on the street, and communicated with the parlour, which communicated internally with a hall and staircase leading through the house. The premises, in respect of which the claim was made, were not exclusively of the shop, of the value of 10*l.* unfurnished:—Held, that he was entitled to the lodger franchise. Lang v. Edwards, Ir. R. 3 C. L. 155.

Room in Employer's House.]—A clerk who separately occupies a furnished bedroom of sufficient value, in the house of his employer, but is not bound to do so, and could discharge his duties equally well if he resided elsewhere, is entitled to be registered as a lodger, although, if he had to reside out of the house, he would receive an increase of salary as an equivalent for the loss of the bedroom, and would be obliged to give up possession of it at once, if he ceased to do business for, or was dismissed by, his employers. Parker v. Campion, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 75.

An assistant occupying a room in the house of his employer under an agreement to pay rent, and not as part of his duty as servant, is entitled to be registered as a lodger. Bennett v. Evans, Fox, 291; 5 R. 100; 68 L. T. 765.

Yearly Value.] — See McCrea v. Buchanan, col. 24.

Declaration accompanying Claim is Primâ facie Evidence.]—Sect. 23 of the Parliamentary and Municipal Registration Act, 1878, which enacts that in the case of a person claiming to vote as a lodger the declaration annexed to his notice of claim shall, for the purposes of revision, be primâ facie evidence of his qualification, is general, and applies to lodgers claiming for the first time under s. 4 of the Representation of the People Act, 1867, as well as to claims under s. 22 of the Parliamentary and Municipal Registration Act, 1878, by lodgers retaining the same lodgings in successive years. Nuth or North v. Tamplin, Colt. 249; 51 L. J., Q. B. 177; 8 Q. B. D. 247; 30 W. R. 346; 46 J. P. 692—C. A. Affirming 45 L. T. 652.

Claim must be as Lodger.]—A person qualified as a lodger, who has claimed as a householder, is not entitled to be registered as a lodger. Cullen v. Patterson, 18 L. R., Ir. 274.

Fresh Claim each Year Essential.]—The claim to be registered is an essential part of the qualification for the lodger franchise. The voter was on the old lodgers' list of voters for a borough for 1885. He made no claim to be registered for 1886; but the overseers, instead of causing the old lodgers' list for that year to be printed de novo from the claims served upon them, caused it to be printed from a copy of the old lodgers' list in the current register, from which they intended to erase the names in respect of which no claims had been received. They had, however, omitted to erase the name of the voter, and failed to discover the mistake before the list had been signed and published:—Held, that the voter was not entitled to have his name retained in the list for 1886. Hermant v. Halse, Fox, 12; 56 L. J., Q. B. 44; 18 Q. B. D. 412; 56 L. T. 337; 35 W. R. 503; 51 J. P. 135.

Old Lodger Claim — Omission of Part of Declaration — Mistake — Power to Amend.]—Where an old lodger, whose name is on the existing register, sends in, within the proper time for old lodger claims, a claim in respect of the same lodgings, but by mistake omits to state in the declaration of the claim that he is on the register of electors in respect of the same lodgings and desires to have his name inserted on the old lodger list, the revising barrister has power to correct the mistake by inserting the omitted statement. Francis v. Metcalfe, 1 Smith, 90; 75 L. T. 380; 45 W. R. 174; 61 J. P. 355.

—— Notice of Claim dated before Expiration of Qualifying Period.]—A person entered in respect of lodgings on a register of voters for the time being in force, and desirous of being entered on the next register in respect of the same lodgings, sent to the overseers within the time prescribed for that purpose a notice of his claim in Form H, No. 2, schedule 3, of the Registration Act, 1885, in which the declaration and attestation of his residence during the qualifying period were both dated six days before its expiration, and the overseers entered his name on the old lodger list:—Held, that the notice of claim was bad, and that the claimant's name must be erased from the list. Jones v. Kent, Fox, 109; 58 L. J., Q. B. 106; 22 Q. B. D. 204; 60 L. T. 320; 37 W. R. 303.

When a notice of claim was itself dated, but the attestation clause was not dated, both dates being required by the form:—Held, that there was no power to amend. Smith v. Chandler, Fox, 129; 58 L. J., Q. B. 103; 22 Q. B. D. 208; 60 L. T. 327; 37 W. R. 351; 53 J. P. 199.

A lodger claim sent in without the express authority of the lodger is bad, although he subsequently ratifies it. Jones v. Beveridge, 20 L. R., Ir. 383.

iv. Yearly Value.

The proper criterion of clear yearly value within 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 27 (repealed), is the fair annual rent, without making any deduction on account of repairs or insurance. Colvill v. Wood, Chatham Overseers, 2 C. B. 210; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 483; 15 L. J., C. P. 160; 10 Jur. 336.

Of Lodgings.] — The clear yearly value or market value of lodgings is to be ascertained by what they will really bring—that is, as much as the lessor can obtain by open competition. McCrea v. Buchanan, 26 L. R., Ir. 129—C. A.

Occupier of Part of House not Separately Rented.]—To entitle the occupier of part of a house to the franchise, under ss. 3, 61, of 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, he must, notwithstanding the proviso in s. 19 of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, be separately rated to the relief of the poor, unless the case is brought within s. 3 or s. 4 of the last-mentioned act. Cross v. Alsop, 1 Hopw. & C. 444; 40 L. J.,

The 32 & 23 Vict. c. 41, s. 19, applies only where there has been an agreement in writing under s. 3, between the overseers and the owner of the premises, to receive the rates from him, or where there has been an order by the vestry for rating the owner instead of the occupiers, under s. 4. Ib.

H. occupied, exclusively and as sole tenant, for his dwelling rooms not so structurally severed from the rest of the building as to constitute of themselves a house. Having claimed to be rated, his name was inserted by the overseers in the rate-book bracketed with those of the other occupiers in the house, no sum being separately assessed against H., but the rental, ratable value, and rate in the pound of the whole house only, appearing in the appropriate columns. No sum had been paid or tendered by him in respect of poor-rates:—Held, that, whether or not he was the occupier of a dwelling-house within the meaning of 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 61, he was not "separately rated to the relief of the poor" within that section, nor had he done enough to entitle him to be "deemed to have been rated" within 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 30. Cuthbertson v. Hains, 1 Hopw. & C. 184; 38 L. J., C. P. 109; L. R. 4 C. P. 525; 17 W. R. 465.

Ratable Occupier, not rated, claiming as Lodger.]—See Edwards v. Lang, Brown's Case, col. 20.

Tenant's Name inserted in Rate-book beneath Landlord's—No Separate Assessment.]—A tenant and occupier of a house being omitted from the rate by the overseer, sent in a claim to be rated in respect thereof. His name was thereupon inserted, as an interlineation, upon the rate, between the name of his landlord (who had always hitherto been rated in respect of the premises) and that of another party, who was rated for other premises, but without any bracket or other connecting mark, and without any particular premises or amount of rating being carried out in the several columns referring to such particulars:—Held, that he was duly rated in respect of the premises he occupied. Pariente v. Luckett, 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 441; 2 C. B. 177; 15 L. J., C. P. 83; 10 Jur. 115.

Where a person's name had been inserted in all the requisite rates under that of his landlord, but nothing was carried out against the person's name, nor was it connected with that of the landlord by bracket or otherwise in the rate-book:—Held, that such person was sufficiently rated. Judson v. Luckett, 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 490; 2 C. B. 197; 15 L. J., C. P. 163; 10 Jur. 252.

Landlord Compounding for Poor-rates—Tenant thereby paying less than other Occupiers.]—By an agreement between a landlord and tenant, the poor-rates were to be paid by the former and included in the rent. The landlord compounded with the overseers for the poor-rates, and accordingly the premises occupied by the tenant were assessed to a composition of 4*s.* 8*d.* in respect of a poor-rate, instead of to the amount of 6*s.* 8*d.*; as they would have been had they been assessed to an equal amount in the pound to that payable by other occupiers in respect of such rate. The landlord duly paid such 4*s.* 8*d.*, and he afterwards paid two shillings so as to make up the full rate of 6*s.* 8*d.*:—Held, that there had not been such a payment of an equal amount in the pound to that payable by other occupiers in respect of the poor-rate as is required by 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 3, sub-s. 4, to qualify the occupier to the borough occupation franchise. Durant v. Withers, 2 Hopw. & C. 202; L. R. 9 C. P. 257; 43 L. J., C. P. 113; 22 W. R. 156.

Composition for Rates—House Rated at same Amount after agreed Period.]—A. was owner and occupier of a house of the clear annual value of 10*l.*, and was also the owner of the two adjoining houses. Under the provisions of a local act he entered into a composition in respect of rates for all three houses for one year, and after the expiration of the year the overseers continued to assess the house occupied by him at the sum compounded for, viz. 3*l.* 5*s.*, being much less than the ratable value, which sum he had paid:—Held, that he was rated in respect of the house he occupied. Powell v. Jones, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 83; 1 H. & P. 165; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 17; 11 L. T. 600; 13 W. R. 273.

Occupier's Name not in Rate when Made.]—A. occupied a dwelling-house for the requisite year. There had been two rates for the parish in the course of the year, and in each rate the name of A.'s landlord only appeared. A. paid to his landlord an increased weekly rent in consideration of the landlord paying the rates, and had paid all the rent due. The owners had written A.'s name in both rates without any claim on his part, and at a time subsequent to the making of the second rate:—Held, that he could not be said to have been rated to all rates made within the year, and that he was not entitled to be on the list of voters. Norris v. Hastings Town Clerk, Andrew's Case, L. R. 4 C. P. 498.

Where Reduction of Rates improperly Allowed.]—It is a condition precedent to the allowance of a reduction from the rates under 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, s. 4, sub-s. 2, that the owner should give notice in writing to the overseers that he is willing to be rated whether the tenements of which he is owner shall be occupied or not. Where such written notice had not been given, but the reduction had nevertheless been allowed:—Held, that the occupier was disqualified from being placed on the list of voters, as not having paid the amount payable by other ordinary occupiers in respect of poor-rates under s. 3, sub-s. 4, of 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102. Bennett v. Atkins, 48 L. J., C. P. 95; 4 C. P. D. 80; 40 L. T. 66; 27 W. R. 231.

Held, also, that the overseers, being public officers, could not waive such notice in writing. Ib.

Omission of one Joint Occupier from the Rate.]—A. occupied jointly with B. In the poor-rate B. alone was assessed as occupier. A. bonâ fide paid the rates with his own hand, but without being called upon:—Held, that A. was not rated, and that the omission of his name was not cured by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 75. Moss v. St. Mary, Lichfield, Overseers, 7 Man. & G. 72; 8 Scott (N.R.) 832; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 184; 14 L. J., C. P. 56; 8 Jur. 1075.

Existing Partners rated under Firm Name.]—A., who had been solely rated in respect of the premises occupied by him in his business, got the overseers to alter the rating to A. & Sons on the occasion of his taking his two sons into partnership, and carrying on business with them on the same premises under the partnership name of A. & Sons. When A. retired from the business, which he did some time afterwards, the two sons continued the business under the same name of A. & Sons, and paid the rates when called for:—Held, that the sons were rated within 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 6, being described on the rate, though inaccurately, by the partnership name, and that such inaccuracy was cured by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 75. Little v. Penrith Overseers, 2 Hopw. & C. 26; 42 L. J., C. P. 28; L. R. 8 C. P. 259; 27 L. T. 552; 21 W. R. 122.

Omission of Name, not a Misnomer.]—The omission of a person's name in a rate is not a misnomer or an inaccurate description within 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 75. Rogers v. Lewis, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 29; K. & G. 279; 29 L. J., C. P. 85; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 612; 1 L. T. 68; 8 W. R. 279.

Omission of Name from Rate-book.]—Sect. 19 of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, provides that—"any occupier whose name has been omitted shall, notwithstanding such omission and that no claim to be rated has been made by him, be entitled to every qualification and franchise depending upon rating, in the same manner as if his name had not been so omitted." H. had, during the qualifying period, resided within the borough, and had occupied, as yearly tenant, a set of rooms as a "counting-house" within the meaning of 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 27 (repealed). This set of rooms was one of several separate sets in the same house which were similarly occupied. The landlord, who himself occupied part of the premises but did not sleep there, paid all rates for the whole house, and his name appeared on the rate-book as occupier. H. had not claimed to be rated or tendered payment of any rates; nor was his name entered in the book. The rent paid by H. was more than it otherwise would have been, in consideration of the landlord paying the rates:—Held, that the landlord was "liable to the payment of the rate instead of the occupier" within the first part of s. 19, and that H. was entitled to the franchise by virtue of the proviso at the end of the section. Barton v. Birmingham Town Clerk, 48 L. J., C. P. 87; 39 L. T. 352.

What are sufficient Particulars in the Rate.]—Where a rate bears upon its face the name of the occupier, the premises for which he is rated, the ratable value thereof, and the amount of the rate, such rating is sufficient. Wright v. Stockport Town Clerk, 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 32; 5 Man. & G. 33; 7 Scott (N.R.) 561; 13 L. J., C. P. 50; 7 Jur. 1112.

Where Claim is as Occupier of Premises in Succession.]—A claim to be registered as a parliamentary voter for a borough, under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, ss. 3, 26, as an inhabitant occupier of two houses in succession, is good, although, as respects the second house, the landlord is the person rated, and by his agreement with the claimant has paid the rates. Moyer v. Escott, 1 Hopw. & C. 645; 41 L. J., C. P. 86; L. R. 7 C. P. 158; 26 L. T. 99; 20 W. R. 368.

A claimant to vote for a borough in respect of different premises occupied in immediate succession, need not shew that he has been rated by name on the rate-books for the premises for which he claims a vote; provided he has paid all the rates, he is entitled to vote. Rogers v. Lewis, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 29; K. & G. 279; 29 L. J., C. P. 85; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 612; 1 L. T. 68; 8 W. R. 279.

A. was an occupier of premises B. previously to the 20th July, 1888, and up to the 6th May, 1889, on which date he became an occupier, in immediate succession, of premises C., and so continued during the remainder of the qualifying year. He was rated for the premises B. in the rate for the year 1888, the rate having been made for that year in March, 1888, and duly paid by him. Premises C. consisted of a new house, which was not included in the rate for the year 1889, made on the 4th March in that year, not having been then valued for the purpose of being rated:—Held, that A. was entitled to the franchise. Criglington v. Anderson, 26 L. R., Ir. 131—C. A.

A. was an inhabitant occupier of a rated dwelling-house previously to the 20th July, 1889, up to a date in the qualifying period, subsequent to the striking of the only rate made during the qualifying period, when he went into occupation in immediate succession of another house, in which he continued to reside during the remainder of the qualifying period. The second house had formerly been rated, but having fallen into ruin was omitted from the rate-book for several years, before and in the qualifying year. Subsequently to the striking of the rate in the qualifying period the house was repaired and became liable to be rated:—Held, that A. was entitled to the franchise. McGaffigan v. Riddall, 28 L. R., Ir. 257—C. A.

What constitutes making Rate during Qualifying Period.]—A poor-rate is not made during the qualifying twelve months within 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 3, unless it has been both signed by the parish officers and allowed by the justices during those twelve months. Jones v. Bubb, 1 Hopw. & C. 128; 38 L. J., C. P. 57; L. R. 4 C. P. 468; 19 L. T. 483; 17 W. R. 205.

Where no Rate had been made.]—The condition imposed by the Boundary Act, 1868, s. 14, on an occupier to entitle him to be registered under that section, viz. that he has been duly rated as an ordinary occupier to all poor-rates in respect of the premises, made after the passing of this act, does not apply to a case where, at the time of the registration, no poor-rate had been made since the passing of the act. Clark v. Brown, 1 Hopw. & C. 181; L. R. 4 C. P. 500.

Old Rate in force, till New Rate allowed and published.]—A rate was made on the 28th September, 1844, and to be made for thirteen weeks, from the 16th September to the 16th December. A new rate was made on the 23rd December, 1844, allowed on the 3rd January, 1845, and published on the 5th:—Held, that a claim under the 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 30, made on the 27th December, to be put upon the rate for the time being, was a claim to be put on the rate made in September. Bushell v. Luckett, 2 C. B. 111; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 398; 15 L. J., C. P. 89; 10 Jur. 113.

Rate, when made—Tenant's Name inserted subsequently without any Claim by Tenant.]—A poor-rate for a parish in a borough, dated April, 1867, was not in fact signed by the parish officers till August, 1867, in which month it was also duly allowed by two justices, and published. A. occupied a dwelling-house in the parish for the twelve months preceding the 31st of July, 1868, but his name was not included in the rate when it was signed, allowed and published. A.'s landlord had for some years paid the rates of A. and of his other tenants in full, they paying a higher rent in consequence. After the publication of the rate, and without any communication with A., his landlord requested the overseer to put the names of his tenants on the rate, and the overseer accordingly inserted A.'s name amongst those of the other tenants on the rate. The landlord subsequently gave a cheque for the amount of all his tenants' rates. A.'s name, having been inserted in the list of voters, was objected to, and he appeared before the revising barrister to support his vote:—Held, that the rate was "made" during the twelve months preceding the 31st of July, 1868, within 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 3; and was therefore a rate to which A. ought to have been rated. Held, also, that his landlord had not any implied authority from A. to make a claim to have his name inserted on the rate; and that, if there could be a ratification, A.'s conduct in appearing before the revising barrister was too late to be a ratification; and that therefore A. had not claimed to be rated within 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 30, and that he was not entitled to have his name retained on the list of voters. Ainsworth v. Creeke, 1 Hopw. & C. 141; 38 L. J., C. P. 58; L. R. 4 C. P. 476; 19 L. T. 824; 17 W. R. 229.

Claim to be Rated.]—Under 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 30, a claim to be rated to the poor-rate was limited to the rate for the time being. Wansey v. Perkins (Lockey's Case), 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 249; 8 Scott (N.R.) 970; 7 Man. & G. 145; 14 L. J., C. P. 59; 9 Jur. 115.

—— To whom Sent.]—A. was duly appointed, in 1859, an assistant overseer, at a salary, and his appointment was confirmed by warrant of two justices, under 59 Geo. 3, c. 12. In 1861 he gave notice of an intention to resign, but withdrew it. Shortly afterwards a resolution was passed by the vestry, increasing his salary. He remained in the continuous discharge of his duties and received the increased salary, but no new appointment or confirmation was made by the justices:—Held, that he was an overseer within 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 30, to whom a claim to be rated in respect of premises could be made. Gunter v. Addams, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 512; 1 H. & P. 50; 33 L. J., C. P. 68; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1295; 9 L. T. 391; 12 W. R. 1105.

Claim to be Rated after 31st of July of Qualifying Year, too late.]—The occupier of a dwelling-house situate and being in a borough, who had not been rated, had before the 20th of July, 1868, paid all poor-rates, which had become payable for the house previously to the 5th of January. A rate was made on the 15th of January, 1868, in which the occupier was not rated; and on the 24th of August he claimed to be rated "to all rates made since the 31st of July, 1867":—Held, that inasmuch as the qualification under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 3, must be complete by the 31st of July of the qualifying year, the claim was too late. Medwin v. Streeter, 1 Hopw. & C. 157; 38 L. J., C. P. 180; L. R. 4 C. P. 488; 19 L. T. 827; 17 W. R. 380.

Occupation of New unrated Premises.]—Where a person removes to a newly-built house which has not been rated, nor any application made during the qualifying period to have it or the site rated, he is not entitled by reason of his occupation to either the parliamentary or municipal franchise. McGaffigan v. Riddall (28 L. R., Ir. 257) followed. Palmer v. Wade, [1894] 1 Q. B. 268; Fox, 323; 10 R. 416; 70 L. T. 407; 58 J. P. 511.

Where a person claiming to be entitled to vote under the 10*l.* occupation franchise, removes into new premises which have not been rated, nor any application made during the qualifying period to have them rated, he is not entitled by reason of such occupation to either the parliamentary or municipal franchise. Wade v. Perkins, Fox, 338. And see Criglington v. Anderson, col. 28.

Unrated Valueless Dwelling-house.]—The inhabitant occupier of a dwelling-house, which the official valuer having found to be of no value, was so entered in the valuation-book, and in respect of which accordingly no rate was struck:—Held, not entitled to the franchise. Owens v. Hanrahan, 26 L. R., Ir. 418—C. A.

Premises not rated during part of Qualifying Year.]—M. was an occupier of premises in a borough from the 20th July, 1887, during the whole of the qualifying year. The first occasion on which any person was rated in respect of the said premises was in March, 1888, when M. was rated as occupier thereof:—Held, that M. was entitled to the franchise. McCartney v. Black, 22 L. R., Ir. 591—C. A.

Premises marked exempt in Rate-book.]—B. was an inhabitant occupier of a dwelling-house which was marked in the rate-book as "exempt" under the provisions of 48 Vict. c. 3, s. 9 (9), and was not rated. The revising barrister decided that the house was not by law exempt, and should have been rated to the rate made during the qualifying period, and expunged B.'s name from the register of voters:—Held, that even if the house was not, by law, exempt, it was not the function of the revising barrister to revise the rate-book or the valuation roll, and that B. was entitled to the franchise. McGaffigan v. Riddall, 28 L. R., Ir. 257.

Non-payment of Rate previous to Qualifying Year Disqualifies, though Payment excused by Justices.]—The provision in s. 3, sub-s. 4, of the 30 & 31 Vict. 102, requiring the payment of poor-rates in order to qualify a person for the borough franchise, applies to arrears of rates made before the commencement of the qualifying year. Abel v. Lee, 40 L. J., C. P. 154; L. R. 6 C. P. 365; 23 L. T. 844; 19 W. R. 625.

A person claimed in 1870, to be placed on the list of inhabitant occupiers. His landlord was rated to the poor in respect of the qualifying premises to all the rates made within the year. A previous rate, in which the claimant was rated, had been made in June, 1869, from payment of which he was, in October, 1869, excused by the justices, under 54 Geo. 3, c. 170, s. 11:—Held, that he had not bonâ fide paid "an equal amount in the pound with that payable by other ordinary occupiers, in respect of all poor rates that had become payable by him in respect of the qualifying premises up to the preceding 5th of January," and was therefore not entitled to be registered. Ib.

Owner Paying Rates by Agreement with Occupier.]—Sect. 19 of 32 & 33 Vict. c. 41, enacts that—"The overseers in making out the poor-rate shall, in every case, whether the rate is collected from the owner or occupier, or the owner is liable to the payment of the rate instead of the occupier, enter into the occupier's column of the rate-book the name of the occupier of every ratable hereditament, and such occupier shall be deemed to be duly rated for any qualification or franchise as aforesaid":—Held, that this clause applies not only to cases where the owner is "liable" by agreement with the overseers under s. 3, or by order of the vestry under s. 4 of the same act, but also to cases where the owner is liable by agreement with the occupier to pay the rates. Barton v. Birmingham Town Clerk, 48 L. J., C. P. 87; 39 L. T. 352.

Non-payment by Owner Disfranchises Occupier.]—A claimant is not entitled to the franchise as a rated occupier where the rates, payable in respect of the qualifying premises have not been paid, though the owner, and not the occupier, is the person liable to pay the rates, and though no notice of the rate being in arrear was given to the occupier, as required by the 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 28. Clarke v. Buchanan, 20 L. R., Ir. 244—C. A.

Tenant's Name in Rate-book—Payment by Landlord by Agreement.]—A., the occupier of a house, No. 3, in G. lane, was rated in respect of No. 4, by mistake. He occupied the premises No. 3 under an agreement with his landlord that the latter should pay the rates. His landlord had called upon him to pay, and he had paid all the rent due in respect of the said house, and the landlord had been called upon to pay and had paid all poor-rates due in respect thereof:—Held, that A. had been rated, and had paid the rates in respect of No. 3. Cook v. Luckett, 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 432; Barr. & Arn. 647; 2 C. B. 168; 15 L. J., C. P. 78; 10 Jur. 116.

The insertion of a party's name in a rate, in respect of premises, is a sufficient calling upon him to pay such rate, within 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 75. Ib.

Non-payment of Void Rate.]—A poor-rate not duly allowed and confirmed by two justices, pursuant to 43 Eliz. c. 2, s. 1, is void, and not merely irregular. The non-payment, therefore, of such rate does not disqualify a party from being placed upon a borough register. Fox v. Davies, 6 C. B. 11; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 97; 18 L. J., C. P. 48; 13 Jur. 155.

Rate Good on Face of it.]—In a parish there were two churchwardens and four overseers, and an assistant overseer, who was appointed to assist the overseers of the poor of the parish in the performance of all the duties incident to the office of overseer of the parish except the collection of rates. A rate was made by the two churchwardens, one overseer, and the assistant overseer, and was allowed by two justices, and duly published, and not appealed against:—Held, that the rate being apparently good upon the face of it, the non-payment of it disqualified a party from being placed upon the borough list of voters. Baker v. Locke, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 52; 1 H. & P. 137; 34 L. J., C. P. 49; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 65; 11 L. T. 567; 13 W. R. 258.

Rate made before Claimant coming into Possession.]—A. came into occupation of the qualifying premises in August. A poor-rate had been made in April, and another was made in September following. A. had paid the last-mentioned rate, but no demand had been made upon him for (nor had he paid or tendered) his proportion of the April rate, under 17 Geo. 2, c. 38, s. 12, although it had not been paid by the outgoing tenant, whose name appeared upon that rate:—Held, that A. had paid all the poor-rates which had become payable from him in respect of the premises, the liability to pay the proportion of the April rate being only a liability subject to the contingency of the outgoing tenant having made default, and of the overseers demanding his proportion of the rate from A. Flatcher v. Boodle, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 152; 1 H. & P. 238; 34 L. J., C. P. 77; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 67; 11 L. T. 630; 13 W. R. 340.

Payment by Claimant's Employer, Payment by Claimant.]—B. was rated to the poor-rates and assessed taxes in respect of a house, and they were paid for him by the commissioners of the Admiralty, as part remuneration for his services:—Held, that this was a payment of rates and taxes by B., and that he was entitled to be registered as a voter for the borough in respect of his occupation of the house. Hughes v. Chatham Overseers, 7 Scott (N.R.) 581; 5 Man. & G. 54; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 51; Barr. & Arn. 61; 13 L. J., C. P. 44; 7 Jur. 1136.

Payment by One Joint Occupier, Payment by all.]—Payment of an entire rate by any one of the parties jointly rated is a payment by each of the joint occupiers of his respective rate. Wright v. Stockport Town Clerk, 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 32; 5 Man. & G. 33; 7 Scott (N.R.) 561; Barr. & Arn. 39; 13 L. J., C. P. 50; 7 Jur. 1112.

Payment Necessary for Franchise though Excused.]—The rates which, under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 3, and the prior and subsequent enactments which are to be construed with it, it is necessary that an inhabitant occupier should have paid before the 20th of July of the qualifying year are only the rates made and allowed after the 5th of January of the year preceding the qualifying year, and payable up to the 5th of January of the qualifying year; and the excusal of such rates, whether made before or after the commencement of the qualifying year, does not prevent a disqualification arising from their not having been paid or tendered before the 20th of July of the qualifying year. Cull v. Austin, Austin v. Cull, 1 Hopw. & C. 741; 41 L. J., C. P. 173; L. R. 7 C. P. 227; 26 L. T. 767; 20 W. R. 863.

What Amounts to a Tender.]—An occupier, claiming to be rated, called upon the overseer, and asked him whether there were any rates due, and said, "If there are, I am prepared to pay them." The overseer replied, "I will see to it." The occupier never made any further inquiry, and never heard again upon the subject. At the time of his calling he had money in his pocket sufficient to pay the rates:—Held, that this did not amount to a tendering of the rates, within 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 30. Bishop v. Smedley, 1 Lutw.

Reg. Cas. 384; 2 C. B. 90; 15 L. J., C. P. 73; 10 Jur. 269.

Premises Ratable but not Rated—Tender of Amount.]—The inhabitant occupier, during the whole or part of the qualifying period, of a dwelling-house which was ratable, and ought to have been rated, but was not rated for the relief of the poor to a rate which was made during the qualifying period, and during his occupation, is not entitled to the franchise. A dwelling-house which ought to have been rated, but was not, was subsequently valued, and the amount which the rate ought to have been was tendered, and a claim to be rated was served on the guardians under the provisions of 13 & 14 Vict. c. 69, s. 110:—Held, that the tender and claim had no effect. McGaffigan v. Riddall, 28 L. R., Ir. 257—C. A.

Arrears Accrued previously to Qualifying Year.]—A person claiming the county franchise as a rated occupier is not entitled to be registered unless he has paid on or before the next previous 1st July, all poor rates due by him in respect of the qualifying premises and not merely the rates assessed during the preceding calendar year. Clarke v. Torish, 18 L. R., Ir. 60—C. A.

Statute-barred Arrears.]—The occupier of premises is not disqualified by the nonpayment of arrears of rates due in respect of the premises, the recovery of which has become barred by statute, as against him, previously to the 31st December in the qualifying year. McGrath v. Buchanan, 26 L. R., Ir. 124—C. A.

Recovering Status of Voter by Payment of Arrears.]—In a borough, where before 2 Will. 4, c. 45, the right of voting according to the usages and customs thereof was in inhabitants paying scot and lot, B., being such inhabitant, had been omitted from the register in 1845, in consequence of the rates due from him on the 31st July in that year not having been paid. At the registration in the following year, the whole of the rates then due having been paid, B. claimed to be registered, and the barrister allowed the claim:—Held, that such decision was right. Nicks v. Field, 4 C. B. 63; 16 L. J., C. P. 61; 10 Jur. 1088.

Inhabited House Duty.]—The occupier of a house within 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 27 (repealed), who would, under that section, be disqualified by nonpayment of the inhabited house duty, is not the less disqualified because he occupied the ground floor as a shop and his qualification is so described in the list. Lee v. Bradford Town Clerk, 1 Hopw. & C. 733.

House-tax must be Paid Quarterly, although no Demand.]—By 43 Geo. 3, c. 161, s. 23 (repealed), the assessed taxes are payable and are to be paid quarterly, viz., on the 20th June, the 20th September, the 20th December, and the 20th March. By 43 Geo. 3, c. 141, assessed taxes are to be collected in equal moieties within twenty-one days after the 10th October and the 5th April, but it is provided that nothing in the act shall be construed to alter the times when the duties were payable under previous acts. The quarter's house-tax due from a party on the 20th December was not demanded until the 11th April, and he did not pay it until the 30th July:—Held, that a demand is unnecessary except previously to a levy in default of payment, and that as the taxes are payable quarterly, though collected half-yearly, he was not entitled to be registered. Ford v. Smedley, 12 C. B. 622; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 203; 22 L. J., C. P. 35; 16 Jur. 1159; 1 W. R. 67.

On a Scrutiny there can be no Inquiry as to whether Voters, put on the Register without Objection, have been Rated.]—See Salisbury Election Petition. In re, Ryder v. Hamilton, col. 136.

See also B. 1, b. (col. 154).

Landlords of Furnished Houses.]—By 41 Vict. c. 3, s. 2, every man shall be entitled to be registered and to vote under the provisions of s. 3 of the Representation of the People Act, 1867, notwithstanding that during a part of the qualifying period, not exceeding four months in the whole, he shall, by letting or otherwise, have permitted the qualifying premises to be occupied as a furnished house by some other person.

What Sufficient.]—The residence required to entitle a person to be registered as a voter for a borough, under s. 33 (repealed) of the Reform Act, 2 Will. 4, c. 45, need not be an occupation as owner or tenant; but any actual residence for the prescribed period within the borough, or within seven miles thereof is sufficient. Beal v. Ford, 2 Hopw. & C. 374; 47 L. J., C. P. 56; 3 C. P. D. 73; 37 L. T. 408; 26 W. R. 146.

For a portion of the six months previously to the last day of July in the qualifying year, viz. from the 29th of March to the 29th of May, A. lived and slept with his wife and child in a room in a cottage allotted to the wife's mother by the trustees of the charity, the rules of which prohibited the inmates from allowing any stranger to reside with them:—Held that this was a sufficient residence to satisfy s. 33; and that the continuity of residence was not broken by A.'s absenting himself for one night, when sent to London upon his employer's business. Ib.

The residence must be either an actual occupation of a place of residence for some part of the time by the party himself, or an occupation by his family or servants, there being an animus revertendi on his part. Whithorn v. Thomas, 7 Man. & G. 1; 8 Scott (N.R.) 783; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 125; Barr. & Arn. 259; 14 L. J., C. P. 38; 8 Jur. 1008.

A., a freeman of a borough, resided with a family, and carried on his business of wine merchant at G., more than seven miles from the borough. He paid 9*d.* a week for the use of a bedroom and a dark closet in the house of a friend at T., A. keeping the key of the closet, in which he deposited wine samples. He slept in the bedroom twelve times in the six months next before the 31st July:—Held that A. did not reside in T. for six months before the 31st July. Ib.

Occupation of Business Premises.]—Occupation of qualifying premises without actual residence within the borough or within seven miles thereof is not sufficient to confer a vote under s. 27 of 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 45:—Semble, "residence" within this section is where a man sleeps and has his home. Barlow v. Smith, Fox, 293.

Clergyman exchanging Livings.—A clergyman claimed to be qualified to vote for a borough in respect of the occupation of a dwelling-house above the value of 10*l.* in which he usually resided. He entered into an arrangement with another clergyman by which they agreed to exchange duties and residences for a certain period for the purpose of obtaining relaxation and a change of scene. In pursuance of this arrangement the claimant left his house and resided for two months, which included the last month of the qualifying year, at a distance of more than seven miles from the borough, in the house of the other clergyman, who came and resided during the same period in the claimant's house:—Held, that there was a break of residence which prevented the claimant from being duly qualified. Ford v. Pye, 2 Hopw. & C. 157; 43 L. J., C. P. 21; L. R. 9 C. P. 269; 29 L. T. 684; 22 W. R. 159.

Clergyman going Abroad.]—A rector of a parish lying within a parliamentary borough obtained a licence of non-residence, and was absent from October, 1872, to June, 1873, remaining during that period abroad; during his absence the glebe-house, which he usually inhabited, was occupied by a curate pursuant to the directions of the bishop:—Held, that he was not entitled to vote either under 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 27 (repealed), or under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 3. Durant v. Carter, 2 Hopw. & C. 142; 43 L. J., C. P. 17; L. R. 9 C. P. 261; 29 L. T. 681; 22 W. R. 158.

When Absent during Service under Articles to a Solicitor.]—By 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 31, which makes provision for freeholders voting for a city being a county of itself, no freeholder shall be registered in any year "unless he shall have resided for six calendar months next previous" to a certain day in such year, within such city. During part of the prescribed period of six months, a freeholder who had a bedroom kept for his exclusive use in his father's house within such a city, was absent, serving under articles to a solicitor in London:—Held, that, being bound by the articles, he could not be deemed to have had either the liberty or intention to return to the room whenever he liked, and therefore had not "resided" within the city for the required time within the meaning of the act. Ford v. Drew, Colt. 1; 49 L. J., C. P. 172; 5 C. P. D. 59; 41 L. T. 478; 28 W. R. 137; 44 J. P. 58.

Constructive Residence.]—The appellant, who claimed to be registered as a voter for the city of Exeter, had a bedroom kept for his exclusive use in his father's house in Exeter. During the qualifying period he went to London in quest of employment, and having obtained a temporary situation in London he remained there for two months and then returned to his father's house in Exeter. He remained in Exeter three weeks and then went back to London, and obtaining employment there did not return to Exeter during the rest of the qualifying period:—Held, that the facts did not shew a constructive residence in Exeter during the qualifying period within the meaning of the Reform Act, 1832 (2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 45), s. 31. Beal v. Exeter Town Clerk, Fox, 31; 57 L. J., Q. B. 128; 20 Q. B. D. 300; 58 L. T. 407; 36 W. R. 507; 52 J. P. 501.

Temporary Absence from House during Repairs.]—See Turish v. Henderson, col. 50.

Lodgers—Bedroom in Hotel taken for Year—Permission to let room during Lodger's absence.]—M. occupied a bedroom in an hotel by the year, and had the use of a sitting-room. The lodgings were of the requisite value. He gave leave to the hotel proprietor to let the room while he was absent on vacation, and the money paid by such persons was received by the proprietor of the hotel:—Held, that M. was entitled to the franchise. McConnell's Case, 28 L. R., Ir. 292—C. A.

What sufficient Residence as Lodger.]—See Bond v. St. George, Hanover Square, Overseers, and Taylor v. St. Mary Abbott's, Kensington, Overseers, col. 21.

Temporary Absence in Performance of Duty during Qualifying Period.]—See 54 Vict. c. 11.

Compulsory Absence — Imprisonment.]—M. was fined for being drunk and disorderly, and in default of payment he was sentenced to be imprisoned. The fine was not paid at the rising of the court, and M. was taken to the waiting-room of the gaol before being placed in a cell. After being in the waiting-room twenty minutes the fine was paid, and he was discharged:—Held, that M., who was otherwise entitled to the franchise, was not disqualified by such detention. M'Curron v. Chambers, 28 L. R., Ir. 294—C. A.

D., who was convicted of a criminal offence and sentenced to fourteen days' imprisonment with the option of paying a fine, not having availed himself of the alternative, underwent his term in gaol during the qualifying year:—Held, that he was not entitled to be registered as a voter in respect of the inhabitant household franchise. Donnelly v. Graham, 24 L. R., Ir. 127—C. A.

C., who was charged before justices with a criminal offence, was, during the qualifying year, remanded to gaol for a week in consequence of his refusal to give bail for his re-appearance before them at the end of that period. On the expiration of the week he was brought before them again, when the charge against him was dismissed, and he was discharged:—Held, that having been ultimately proved innocent, C.'s detention in gaol did not operate as a break in his inhabitant occupancy of his dwelling-house, and that he was entitled to be registered as a voter in respect of the inhabitant household franchise. Connolly v. Riddall, 24 L. R., Ir. 127—C. A.

M. was brought before justices on a criminal charge, and remanded to gaol for two days during the qualifying year. Upon being brought up again on the expiration of the two days, he either pleaded guilty or was convicted (it did not clearly appear which), but, in the exercise of the bench's discretion, was discharged:—Held, that having been lawfully (as his guilt proved) detained in gaol during a portion of the qualifying year, there was a break in his inhabitant occupancy of his dwelling-house, and he was not entitled to be registered as a voter in respect of the inhabitant household franchise. Martin v. Hanrahan, 24 L. R., Ir. 127—C. A.

A man has not resided in a borough for six calendar months next previously to the last day of July, when he has for a portion of that time been detained in a gaol situate more than seven miles distant therefrom, under a sentence of imprisonment for an assault, without the option of paying a fine. Powell v. Guest, 18 C. B. (N. S.) 72; H. & P. 149; 34 L. J., C. P. 69; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1238; 11 L. T. 599; 13 W. R. 274.

G. was arrested, during the qualifying year and lodged in the police office on the charge of being drunk and disorderly in a public street. On the day of his arrest, and after a custody of some hours, he was admitted to bail. He appeared before the magistrates at the petty sessions court on the next day, was convicted and fined 5*s.* and costs, which he thereupon paid:—Held, that G.'s detention in the police office did not operate as a break in his inhabitant occupancy of his dwelling-house, and that he was entitled to the franchise, Criglington v. Gallagher, 26 L. R., Ir. 134—C. A.

A person who was otherwise entitled to the franchise as an inhabitant occupier was committed for trial on a criminal charge. His trial had not taken place at the time the revising barrister held his court:—Held, that he was not to be deprived of the franchise by his compulsory absence until his guilt was proved. Charlton v. Morris, [1895] 2 Ir. R. 541—C. A.

A voter was arrested and imprisoned, and, on being brought before a magistrate next day, was sentenced to imprisonment, with the option of a fine. He paid the fine and was discharged. The period of his detention did not extend over the whole of any one day:—Held, that as the law will not take notice of fractions of a day, the voter was not to be deprived of the franchise by reason of his compulsory absence for portions only of two successive days. Holland v. Hagan, [1895] 2 Ir. R. 551—C. A.

—— Sailor.]—A sailor engaged in the cross-channel or coasting trade who has entered into an agreement under the Merchant Shipping Act, under which he agreed to serve for a period of six months during the qualifying period, and who at any time during the said six months could be compelled to serve on board his ship, is compulsorily absent from his dwelling-house for the time during which he is engaged in his duty, and if so engaged in his duty at intervals during the qualifying period is thereby disqualified for the inhabitant occupier franchise. Duffy v. Chambers, 26 L. R., Ir. 100—C. A.

A sailor who is compulsorily absent from his dwelling-house (although leaving his wife and family in occupation) during part of the qualifying year, in pursuance of an agreement entered into by him under the Merchant Shipping Act, under which he could be seized and compelled to embark if he attempted to desert his ship, is thereby disqualified for the inhabitant occupier franchise. Hussan v. Chambers, 24 L. R., Ir. 139—C. A.

—— Militiaman.] — A non-commissioned officer on the staff of a militia regiment resided with his family in a house within a borough. During the annual training of the regiment he was absent from the borough twenty-six days of the qualifying year, but while so absent his house continued to be occupied by his wife, family and furniture. With the leave of his superior officer he returned at intervals during the annual training to his house in the borough, and could have returned there every night had the distance been less, as his duties did not require his attendance:—Held, following Ford v. Barnes (16 Q. B. D. 254) and Spittall v. Brook (18 Q. B. D. 426), that occupation under the circumstances was broken. Donoghue v. Brook, Fox, 100; 57 L. J., Q. B. 122; 58 L. T. 411.

A private in a militia regiment was compulsorily absent from his residence for training during part of the qualifying year. While at training he could not leave the regiment without breach of military discipline:—Held, that he was not entitled to the parliamentary franchise as an inhabitant occupier. Martin v. Hanrahan, 22 L. R., Ir. 452—C. A.

—— Officers in the Army.]—Where votes were claimed by persons in military service, the claimants, non-commissioned officers, had been absent for twenty-one days during the qualifying period from their quarters on duty elsewhere, and could not return without leave, but during such absence, in one case the claimant's wife and family, and in the other his furniture, remained in the quarters which were retained for him:—Held, that it not sufficiently appearing in those cases that there had been any constructive inhabitancy of the rooms by the claimants during the twenty-one days when they were in fact absent, they were not qualified under s. 3 of 48 Vict. c. 3. Ford v. Barnes, Colt. 396; 55 L. J., Q. B. 24; 16 Q. B. D. 254; 53 L. T. 675; 34 W. R. 78; 50 J. P. 37.

The appellant, a non-commissioned officer, resided with his family in barracks, situate within a borough, in separate rooms allotted to him by the quartermaster-general. During twenty-seven days of the qualifying year he was compulsorily absent from the borough, but while so absent his name was retained on the strength of the regimental depôt in the monthly returns to the War Office, and the rooms continued to be occupied by his furniture and his family; but he himself could not (unless by leave, which he had obtained for one or two days) return to the borough without being guilty of a breach of duty:—Held, following Ford v. Barnes (16 Q. B. D. 254), that the appellant had not occupied the rooms in the barracks during the qualifying period, and that he was not entitled to be registered as a voter for the borough. Spittall v. Brook, Fox, 22; 56 L. J., Q. B. 48; 18 Q. B. D. 426; 56 L. T. 364; 35 W. R. 520.

A freeman of a borough was an officer in the army serving with his regiment. When he obtained leave of absence, which he usually did for three months in the year, he used to reside at the house of his mother, within seven miles of the borough, occupying apartments there, which were always reserved for his use. He was unmarried, and had no other home than his mother's house:—Held, that in the case of an officer subject to the will and pleasure of the Queen, and who was therefore not sui juris, there could not be such an intention of returning as to constitute a constructive residence, and consequently that he was not qualified. Ford v. Hart, 2 Hopw. & C. 167; 43 L. J., C. P. 24; L. R. 9 C. P. 273; 29 L. T. 685; 22 W. R. 159.

—— Servant at Hotel.]—The claimant was tenant of a house in which his family resided, but by the terms of his employment, as a servant of an hotel, the claimant was obliged to remain in the hotel for six days and six nights in each week, the remaining day and night in each week being spent by him in his own house:—Held, that the claimant was entitled to the franchise in respect of the house. M'Kendrick v. Buchanan, 20 L. R., Ir. 206—C. A.

—— Undergraduates at Universities.]—The undergraduates of Oxford and Cambridge are not permitted to reside in their rooms during the vacations, which comprise nearly six months of the year, without special leave from the college authorities, who are accustomed to let and otherwise make use of their rooms during their absence:—Held, that such compulsory absence amounted to a break of residence disqualifying them for the exercise of the franchise. Tanner v. Carter, Colt. 435; 55 L. J., Q. B. 27; 16 Q. B. D. 231; 53 L. T. 663; 34 W. R. 41.

In detached part of Parish that has ceased to be part of Borough.]—Before 1832, the election of a member of parliament for the borough of Bewdley was vested in the bailiff, burgesses and twelve capital burgesses, who were required to be resident within the borough, including the Far Forest, and who appointed the bailiff and burgesses. Far Forest is a detached part of a parish, and situate within the old borough. By 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 64, s. 37, the detached part of a parish shall not be included within a borough, if, by reason of including it, the boundary of such borough would not be continuous, unless such detached part heretofore formed part of the borough, for the purpose of the election of members of parliament:—Held, that the proviso in 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 64, s. 37, was inserted to preserve existing personal rights of voting, none of which depended upon the retention of Far Forest, and therefore it was not included within the present borough. Palmer v. Allen, 6 C. B. 51; 18 L. J., C. P. 265; 13 Jur. 708.

viii. Freemen and Liverymen.

See Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 50), s. 209.

What Rights Preserved by 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 32.]—A qualification to vote in a borough election as an inhabitant householder is not preserved by the 2 Will. 4, c. 45, unless it has been retained continuously from the passing of that act. Jeffrey v. Kitchener, 7 Man. & G. 99; 8 Scott (N.R.) 923; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 210; Barr. & Arn. 359; 14 L. J., C. P. 75; 9 Jur. 138. S. P., Stanton v. Jeffrey, 7 Man. & G. 109, n.; 8 Scott (N.R.) 933; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 219, n.; 14 L. J., C. P. 79, n.; 9 Jur. 140.

In a borough every person who has been an inhabitant householder for six months next before the day of election was, at the time of the passing of 2 Will. 4, c. 45, entitled to vote. K. was thus entitled; but in the beginning of October, 1832, ceased to be an inhabitant householder for fourteen weeks:—Held, that he could not afterwards regain this franchise by becoming an inhabitant householder. Ib.

A freeman of the borough of Shrewsbury paying scot and lot, for upwards of two years last past, and down to the 25th March, 1851, occupied and resided in a house on the Wyle Cop, within the ancient and present limits of the borough, and since the 25th March, down to and on the 31st July, occupied and resided in a house at Coton hill, without the ancient but within the present limits of the borough. The revising barrister, holding him to be disqualified by 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 32, expunged his name from the list of freemen voters:—The court, without hearing any argument (the counsel for the respondent admitting that he could not support it), reversed the decision. Jarvis v. Peele, 11 C. B. 15; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 182.

In a borough in which freemen by birth were entitled to vote prior to 2 Will. 4, c. 45, the right is preserved by s. 32, not only to those whose fathers were entitled to their freedom previously to the 31st March, 1831, but to the lineal descendants of all persons entitled to their freedom before that day. Guydon v. Bencraft, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 11; H. & P. 97; 34 L. J., C. P. 53; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1206; 11 L. T. 483; 13 W. R. 267.

The right of voting in a borough was in the capital burgesses. In the corporation of the borough there were four classes, viz. first, capital burgesses; secondly, assistant burgesses; thirdly, landowners; and fourthly, free burgesses or commoners. The process by which a party became a capital burgess was as follows:—The senior free burgess becomes a landowner upon a vacancy occurring, and in like manner a landowner becomes an assistant burgess; but where a vacancy occurs amongst the capital burgesses, the majority of such body elect one of the assistant burgesses, without regard to seniority. Where, under such circumstances, A. was elected a capital burgess, he having been originally admitted a free burgess in respect of birth:—Held, that his right to vote was not taken away by the proviso in the 32nd section of the act, which enacts, that no person who shall have been elected, made or admitted a burgess or freeman since the 1st March, 1861, otherwise than in respect of birth or servitude, or who shall hereafter be elected, made or admitted a freeman otherwise than in respect of birth or servitude, shall be entitled to vote. Gale v. Chubb, 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 544; 4 C. B. 41; 16 L. J., C. P. 54; 11 Jur. 22.

Of London.]—The proviso in 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 32, and 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, ss. 4, 5 (repealed), which excludes freemen and liverymen from voting in certain cases, does not apply to freemen and liverymen of the city of London. Croucher v. Browne, 2 C. B. 97; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 388; 15 L. J., C. P. 74; 10 Jur. 184.

Freemen's Allotments.]—By a local act, resident freemen of a borough were empowered to elect from their body deputies to act for them in the management of the freemen's allotments, and the deputies were empowered to divide certain of the lands "into small allotments among the resident freemen desirous to become occupiers thereof, at a small annual rent, the allotments to be held by each resident freeman desiring to become the occupier, obtaining possession thereof, so long as he shall be willing to hold the same, and shall pay the annual rent, and conform to the regulations to be made from time to time by the deputies." The lands were vested absolutely in the deputies for the time being, in trust for the resident freemen, with power to sell the same, with the consent of a major part of the freemen assembled at a meeting convened for that purpose; and a power of re-entry was reserved to the deputies, in case any freeman should be in arrear of rent for his allotment for fourteen days, or should fail to conform to the provisions of the act or the rules of the deputies:—Held, that each allottee had a freehold estate of an uncertain duration in his allotment, which entitled him to vote in the election of members for the borough. Beeson v. Burton, 12 C. B. 647; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 225; 22 L. J., C. P. 33.

Non-payment of Rates.]—A party entitled before 2 Will. 4, c. 45, to vote as an inhabitant householder paying scot and lot, does not by s. 33 lose his qualification by having omitted for one year to pay his rates before the last day of July. Nicks v. Field, 4 C. B. 63; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 566; 16 L. J., C. P. 61; 10 Jur. 1088.

Change of Residence—Notice of Claim.]—It is not necessary for a freeman who, during the qualifying period, has changed his place of abode from a residence within one division of a borough to another within the borough or the seven miles limit, to serve a fresh notice of claim. In the case of a divided borough, if the revising barrister finds that the place of abode of a freeman is wrongly stated on the list, he is bound, on proof of the true place of abode and that the same is within the qualifying radius, in the case of a duly qualified freeman, to correct the place of abode as stated in the list, and to assign the freeman to the right division for the purpose of voting. Nagle v. Campbell, [1896] 2 Ir. R. 326—C. A.

b. County Voters.

i. 40*s. Freeholders.*

a. Estates of Inheritance.

When Tenure will be Presumed to be Freehold.]—Where A. was in possession of lands situate in an ancient borough, in respect of which parties had voted as freeholders at several elections, and nothing appeared in the case from which it could be inferred that such lands were holden at the will of any lord; but it appeared that the modes of alienation were not by way of feoffment and livery of seisin, but by grant, as also that the customs with reference to femes covert and to dower were different from those prevailing at common law with respect to freehold estates:—Held, that there was not sufficient to rebut the presumption that A. was seised in fee of such lands; and, therefore (such lands being of the value of 40*s.* by the year), that he had a right to be registered in respect thereof. Busher v. Thompson, 4 C. B. 48; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 551; 16 L. J., C. P. 57; 11 Jur. 45.

Land Held of the Lord of the Manor that may be freely Alienated, Freehold.]—Persons who are seised in fee of land situate in a manor, having acknowledged that they hold of the lord by free deed, fealty, suit of court and a nominal yearly rent—the custom being that the land may be conveyed by any common assurance, there being no necessity for any licence from the lord to alien, nor for the enrolment of the assurance on the court-rolls, nor for any surrender, the lord having the right to compel by distress the new tenants to come in and acknowledge free tenure—are freeholders, and entitled to vote as such for a county. Passingham v. Pitty, 17 C. B. 299; 25 L. J., C. P. 4; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 837; 4 W. R. 122. See Spencer v. Harrison, col. 56.

Rent-charge.]—See Druitt v. Christchurch Overseers, Ashcroft v. Hopper, and Lowcock v. Broughton Overseers, cols. 51, 52.

A grant of a rent-charge in fee of 40*s.* a year, issuing out of land of sufficient value to pay the same, confers a county qualification as a freehold tenement under 8 Hen. 6, c. 7, though there is no power of distress contained in the deed granting the rent-charge. Dodds v. Thompson, 1 H. & R. 319; H. & P. 285; 35 L. J., C. P. 97; L. R. 1 C. P. 133; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 625; 14 W. R. 476.

A person possessed of two several rent-charges in fee issuing out of two several pieces of freehold land in the same county, neither of which rent-charges alone is of the yearly value of 40*s.*, but which together are of the clear yearly value of 40*s.*, has a free tenement within 8 Hen. 6, c. 7, and is entitled to a county vote. Wood v. Hopper, 45 L. J., C. P. 108; 1 C. P. D. 192; 33 L. T. 531; 24 W. R. 187.

By an indenture of September, 1874, the reversion in fee in certain lands was conveyed to C., subject to certain terms of 1,000 years created by an indenture of demise of July, 1864, which reserved a ground-rent and a power of re-entry in default. C., by an indenture of January, 1875, granted to D. and to four other persons a rent-charge of 2*l.* 10*s.* each charged upon the lands, with a power of distress in default of payment, and the grantees were in the actual receipt of the same. The value of the reversion was sufficient to bear the charges:—Held, that the grantees of the rent-charges had "free land or tenement to the value of 40*s.* by the year," within 8 Hen. 6, c. 7, although the power of distress was nugatory. Dawson v. Robins, 2 Hopw. & C. 317; 46 L. J., C. P. 62; 2 C. P. D. 38; 35 L. T. 599; 25 W. R. 212.

Equitable Freehold—Lands vested in Trustees—Voluntary Association.]—Where an association of persons has purchased land for the purposes of an undertaking, and vested it by deed in trustees and managers upon such terms and conditions that, while the trusts of such deed subsist, the individual members of the association are respectively entitled only to a share in the net profits of the undertaking carried on upon the land, such members have not an equitable freehold in the land so as to acquire the county franchise, although the association is not incorporated or registered as a joint-stock company, but is a mere voluntary association without statutory powers or restrictions. Baxter v. Brown (7 Man. & G. 198) discussed and distinguished. Watson v. Black, Colt. 418; 55 L. What Amounts to an Estate for Life.]—By a private inclosure act, allotments of land, belonging to the resident freemen of a borough, were vested in deputies elected by the freemen in trust for them. The deputies had power to dispose of the whole or any part of these allotments, discharged from the right of the freemen, upon obtaining the consent of the major part of the freemen assembled in public meeting for that purpose; but subject to this power, the freemen obtaining possession of allotments were entitled to hold them, so long as they were willing to hold them, and paid the annual rent, and conformed to the orders and regulations made by the deputies:—Held, that the allottees had estates of freehold, qualifying them to vote for members for the county, as their estate might continue for life, and was not determinable at the mere will of the deputies. Beeson v. Burton, 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 225; 12 C. B. 647; 22 L. J., C. P. 33.

By 39 Eliz. c. 5, hospitals for the poor might be incorporated. Previously to that act they could be founded by royal licence or letters-patent. Before the act, A. founded a hospital for certain bedesmen, and made rules for its regulation. The bedesmen were appointed for life:—Held, that the hospital might be presumed to have been founded by licence; and therefore, that the bedesmen were entitled to be registered as freeholders. Simpson v. Wilkinson, 7 Man. & G. 50; 8 Scott (N.R.) 814; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 168; 14 L. J., C. P. 49; 8 Jur. 1126.

Trustees of an almshouse were empowered by letters patent of incorporation to appoint and remove twenty-four inmates, "toties quoties sibi conveniens fore videbitur":—Held, that the inmates appointed under this power did not take an estate for life in the property enjoyed by them as such inmates, and were, therefore, not entitled to be registered as freeholders. Davis v. Waddington, 7 Man. & G. 37; 8 Scott (N.R.) 807; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 159; 14 L. J., C. P. 45; 8 Jur. 1142.

A minister of a congregation of Particular Baptists, occupying, in virtue of his function, premises vested in trustees, to permit the minister to occupy them for the time being, and having been appointed by a call (given verbally) from the congregation to become their minister, which he had complied with, and having resided ever since in the premises, and there being no proof that the appointment was for life, except the minister's statement that he so considered it, and the opinion of an old deacon that it was so, is not entitled to vote as a freeholder. Collier v. King, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 14; K. & G. 385; 31 L. J., C. P. 80; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 676; 5 L. T. 674; 10 W. R. 131. See Burton v. Brooks, col. 105.

Incumbent — Equitable Interest.] — The incumbent of a vicarage as perpetual curate claimed to vote in respect of land of the value of 40*s.* per annum which had been conveyed in exchange to his predecessor "and his successors, vicars of the vicarage for the time being, for ever":—Held, that even if the incumbent was not a perpetual curate or corporation sole, he had at least a sufficient equitable freehold interest in the land to entitle him to vote for the county. Wallis v. Birks, 1 Hopw. & C. 365; 39 L. J., C. P. 106; L. R. 5 C. P. 222; 22 L. T. 268; 18 W. R. 734.

Actual and bonâ fide Occupation.]—The bailiff and bailiff burgesses of a town possessed land divided into portions called acres, which they had held from time immemorial, and by immemorial custom, as each acre became vacant, they invested some inhabitant of the town with the possession of it, to hold for his life, if he should continue to reside in the town, subject to all the rules and orders of the bailiff and bailiff burgesses. The holder of each acre manured and mowed it; but, by the custom, the bailiff and burgesses granted the after-grass of the acres, at a meeting held each year for the purpose, to other inhabitants, who were thereby entitled to depasture one cow each for five weeks from the 10th of September, after which the whole were thrown open to all the inhabitants to depasture sheep and cattle therein till the 15th of December. The holder of each acre was separately rated to the poor and church rates. Each acre was of an annual value above 40*s.* and under 5*l.*:—Held, that the holder of each acre had an equitable freehold estate, and was in actual and bonâ fide occupation, within 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 18, and was therefore entitled to vote in respect of it. Trenfield v. Lowe, 1 Hopw. & C. 237; 38 L. J., C. P. 191; L. R. 4 C. P. 454; 20 L. T. 394; 17 W. R. 673.

Variable annual Payments issuing out of Land.]—A hospital, consisting of a master and three ancient brethren, was incorporated, and by the terms of its constitution, as afterwards regulated by statute, its revenues, derived from lands vested in the corporation, were received by the master, who annually, after paying thereout taxes and other outgoings and reserving one-third to himself, was to pay 25*l.* to each of the three ancient brethren, 70*l.* to the chaplain, and after reserving a balance, not exceeding 60*l.*, to meet current expenses, was to divide the residue between certain other brethren called younger brethren, who were added to the number of the brethren from time to time, as the revenues of the charity increased, but no younger brother was to take under such division more than 25*l.*, and the surplus, if any, was left to accumulate until further additional brethren were appointed:—Held, that the younger brethren had no equitable estate in the lands of the hospital, and that, the annual payment to which they were entitled not being a rent-charge nor a free tenement within 8 Hen. 6, c. 7, they were not entitled to the county franchise. Simey v. Marshall, 2 Hopw. & C. 1; 42 L. J., C. P. 49; L. R. 8 C. P. 269; 27 L. T. 581; 21 W. R. 123.

Eleemosynary Occupation.]—Members of an eleemosynary foundation called the Shrewsbury Hospital were required by the constitutions to be widowers or bachelors of threescore years or upwards; each had to himself a set of chambers, which he held for life, subject to removal for certain offences, but he could not let the chambers, or take in any one to lodge with him therein. They received also a weekly dole or stipend, a gown, yearly, and other benefits; and they were to be chosen from poor and indigent people:—

Held, not entitled to vote for the county, not having an equitable estate of freehold in the chambers. Freeman v. Gainsford, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 68; K. & G. 448; 31 L. J., C. P. 33; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 717; 5 L. T. 611.

In 1692 the Earl of Rutland founded a hospital at Bottesford for fourteen poor men; and by a deed of 1762 the lands belonging thereto were vested in trustees, to permit the rectors for the time being of two parishes named to receive the rents and profits, and thereout pay to each of the fourteen inmates certain periodical sums (in the whole, amounting to 6*l*. 12*s*. 8*d*. per annum), and to expend upon them certain other sums in clothing, coals, medical and other attendance. Since 1778 the trustees had been in the habit of allowing the surplus revenue to be distributed amongst the inmates of the hospital, so that each had, down to 1864, been in the receipt of 9*s*. 3*d*. per week, exclusive of the allowance for clothing, &c.; but there appeared nothing in the deed of 1762 to warrant this increased allowance:—Held, that the inmates had not any equitable freehold estate or interest in the lands belonging to the hospital, so as to entitle them to be registered for the county. Steele v. Bosworth, H. & P. 106; 18 C. B. (N.S.) 22; 34 L. J., C. P. 57; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1239; 11 L. T. 507; 13 W. R. 260.

Where Occupation only Partly Eleemosynary.]—In an institution called Lord Conyngsby's Hospital, founded A.D. 1614, the claimant occupied a house and garden to which he was appointed for his life, and from which he could not be disturbed, except for felony. He had let the garden. He and the other inmates were called servitors, but rendered no service, though they were bound to observe certain rules, under penalty of a fine. The gate was locked at 9 p.m., and none, without special leave, could after that hour enter or go out. No one could be absent more than three days without leave; attendance at chapel was required; misconduct was prohibited; clothes and coals were supplied to the servitors from the funds of the hospital:—Held, that the claimant possessed a freehold interest, and was entitled to vote as occupying as owner within 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 3. Fryer v. Bodenham, 1 Hopw. & C. 204; 38 L. J., C. P. 185; L. R. 4 C. P. 529; 19 L. T. 645; 17 W. R. 294.

Rooms for Life in Hospital controlled by Inmates.]—A hospital was founded, after 35 Eliz. c. 7, and before 39 Eliz. c. 5, for the accommodation and maintenance of certain persons; the property consisting of lands conveyed originally to feoffees, and this being for the benefit of such persons. Ordinances and rules of the hospital referred to the feoffees, but none were now known; and by the rules, the inmates were removable for certain irregularities, but no case of removal had occurred. There was no deed of endowment extant; but by the rules, the inmates were allotted rooms for their lives; they kept the keys of their respective rooms, and each room was worth 4*l*. a year. The inmates had the whole management of the property; they let a portion of the premises, and part of the property had been sold by them:—Held, that the inmates were entitled to be registered, under 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 18, being possessed of equitable freeholds in their rooms, and jointly interested in the other portion of the hospital. Roberts v. Percival, H. & P. 121; 18 C. B. (N.S.) 36; 34 L. J., C. P. 84; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 40; 11 L. T. 603; 13 W. R. 265.

Land Held by Poor Burgess at Will of Corporation.]—A corporation, being possessed of lands, made a by-law that the lands should be occupied by poor and necessitous burgesses at a rent to be fixed and named by the corporation at its pleasure. The by-law provided that only such persons were poor and necessitous burgesses as were declared so by a majority of the council of the borough. A person, who claimed to be entitled to a vote as a 40*s*. freeholder, had been declared a poor and necessitous burgess, and had been allotted one acre at a rent of 5*s*. per annum until further notice:—Held, that he had no freehold or equitable interest sufficient to entitle him to a vote; that the estate was held at the will of the council, and at the most his interest was not greater than that of a tenant from year to year. Fernie v. Scott, 1 Hopw. & C. 718; 41 L. J., C. P. 20; L. R. 7 C. P. 202; 25 L. T. 836; 20 W. R. 236.

Fees of Incumbent of Church.]—See Kirton v. Dear, col. 57; and Beswick v. Alker, col. 62.

Receipt of Rents of Land by Virtue of Office—Members of Chapter.]—The canons residentiary of a cathedral who are entitled under 4 & 5 Vict. c. 39, s. 25, to a fixed share in the corporate revenues, have no freehold qualification in respect of shares in the freehold lands of the corporation. Harris v. Phillips, [1891] 1 Q. B. 267; Fox, 223; 55 J. P. 281.

—— Bedesmen.]—Land was conveyed, in 1726, on trust to divide a portion of the rents amongst the bedesmen of D. Persons had been appointed such bedesmen by a corporation from very early times, and the appointment was for life, but such persons were not liable to perform, nor did they perform, any duties. Under the trusts they each received more than 40*s*. a year:—Held, that they were not entitled to vote in respect of any estate in land which had come to them by promotion to any office within 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 18, as the term "bedesmen" does not necessarily import such office. Faulkner v. Buddington Overseers, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 413; 27 L. J., C. P. 20; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 692; 6 W. R. 101.

—— Parish Clerk.]—A parish clerk, by virtue of his appointment, entitled to a twelfth share of twenty-six acres of freehold land in the parish (of sufficient value to confer a vote for the county) so long as he continues clerk, and his predecessors in the office having always enjoyed the same, has a freehold interest in his share, in respect of which he is entitled to be registered. Roberts v. Drewitt, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 48; H. & P. 132.

A claimant to a county vote, holding an appointment as parish clerk, and receiving as of right certain fees on burials in the parish churchyard, amounting to more than 40*s*. a year, the actual duties of opening the graves, &c., being wholly performed by the sexton, who had separate fees in consideration thereof, is not entitled to vote either as a holder of a freehold office, or of a freehold interest in land to the value of 40*s*. a year. Bushell v. Eustes, K. & G. 484; 11 C. B. (N.S.) 106; 31 L. J., C. P. 44; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 645; 5 L. T. 580; 10 W. R. 153.

Salaries derived from Land.] — The six preachers, lay clerks, bellringers, and other functionaries of the cathedral of Canterbury, being paid salaries out of the chapter revenues, found to be "derived wholly or in part from lands and tenements situate in the parish of Christchurch Ville and other parishes," in the same division of the county, which were vested in the dean and chapter, have no such equitable estate in freehold land as entitle them to vote for a county. Hall v. Lewis, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 114; K. & G. 499; 31 L. J., C. P. 45; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 646; 5 L. T. 491; 10 W. R. 151.

Lease for Lives of Part of Waste of Manor.]—S. claimed to be entitled, as a freeholder, to vote for the county in respect of a lease of part of the waste of the manor. The burgesses of the borough had from time immemorial exercised rights of common of pasture over the manor, and at courts-leet holden for the borough, it had been the practice for 100 years past and upwards for the mayor and burgesses of the borough to present to the lord of the manor individual burgesses for occupation of pieces of waste land of the manor; in all such cases the person so presented took possession of the apportioned pieces of waste, and paid rent to the lord. About one-tenth of the wastes had been thus inclosed, but a sufficiency of such land was left for the use by the commoners of their rights of pasture. S. being duly presented for occupation of a piece of the waste land in accordance with the custom, entered into occupation, and in 1861 was granted a lease by the lord, similar to leases which, since 1838, had been granted in like cases, namely, a lease for three lives, with a covenant for renewal. S. continued to occupy under this lease, and paid rent to the lord:—Held, that he had such a freehold interest as would entitle him to be registered as a voter for the county. Phillips v. Salmon, 2 Hopw. & C. 339; 47 L. J., C. P. 53; 3 C. P. D. 97; 37 L. T. 579. And see cases post, A. 1, b. vii. (col. 51).

ii. Customary, Copyhold and other Tenants.

A tenant who holds his lands by customary tenure, although not strictly a copyhold, provided he has a permanent interest therein of the value of not less than 10*l.* (now 5*l.*) per annum, free of all charges, is entitled to be registered under 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 19 (repealed). Garbutt v. Trevor, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 550; H. & P. 69; 33 L. J., C. P. 73; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 131; 9 L. T. 535; 12 W. R. 471.

iii. Lessees of Terms of Years.

Chattel Rent-charge.] — By 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 5, a county vote is conferred upon every man who is entitled either as lessee or assignee to any lands or tenements of freehold, or of any other tenure whatever, for the unexpired residue, whatever it may be, of any term originally created for a period of not less than sixty years, of the clear yearly value of not less than 5*l.*:—Held, that a person, to be entitled to a vote under this provision, must be lessee of a corporeal hereditament, which could be the subject of occupation, or assignee of a lease of such an hereditament, and that a chattel rent-charge, though originally created for more than sixty years, does not confer a vote. Warburton v. Denton Overseers, 1 Hopw. & C. 432; 40 L. J., C. P. 49; L. R. 6 C. P. 267; 23 L. T. 729; 19 W. R. 210.

Term vested in Trustees—Person in Receipt of Rents.]—A testator devised a term of 999 years to trustees, to pay the rents and annual produce to the claimant for life, and the residue after his decease to the children of the claimant:—Held, that the claimant was not possessed of the residue of a term originally created for not less than sixty years, and was, consequently, not entitled to the county franchise, under 2 Will. 4. c. 45, s. 20, and 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 74. Gainsford v. Freeman, 1 H. & R. 353; H. & P. 329; 35 L. J., C. P. 92; L. R. 1 C. P. 129; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 192; 13 L. T. 595; 14 W. R. 203.

Conditional Agreement for Lease.] — By an agreement made between the owners of an estate, the trustees of a building society, and C., the land was to be security for the advance by C. of moneys to be expended in building cottages thereon, and the owners were to grant to the occupiers of the cottages leases for ninety-nine years on the request of C., with the consent of the trustees. By a subsequent agreement between the trustees and the claimant, who occupied one of the cottages so built, it was agreed that on his paying certain moneys by instalments, and satisfying all the terms of the agreement and the rules of the society, the trustees should procure him a conveyance for ninety-nine years. Only a part of the money had been paid; no request for a lease had been made by C., and none had ever been granted:—Held, that the claimant was not entitled to the county franchise given by 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 5, as lessee or assignee for the unexpired residue of a term originally created for not less than sixty years. Trotter v. Watson, 1 Hopw. & C. 216; 38 L. J., C. P. 100; L. R. 4 C. P. 434; 19 L. T. 785; 17 W. R. 330.

Sub-lessees.]—A sub-lessee is a lessee within 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 5; but it is doubtful whether he must be in occupation as a sub-lessee under 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 20. Charlton v. Stretford Overseers, 1 Hopw. & C. 712; 41 L. J., C. P. 37; L. R. 7 C. P. 198; 25 L. T. 810; 20 W. R. 236.

Interest in Lease Divisible.]—A lease for a term of ninety-nine years, of which three years had expired, comprised several houses within a borough, one of them worth more than 10*l.* a year, and capable of conferring a borough vote; the residue individually worth less, but collectively more, than 10*l.* a year. Each house was occupied by a distinct tenant:—Held, that the interest in the lease was divisible, and that the lessee was entitled to a vote for the county, in respect of the residue of the houses. Webb v. Birmingham Overseers, 5 Man. & G. 14; 7 Scott (N.R.) 559; 13 L. J., C. P. 57; 7 Jur. 1090.

Occupying as Tenant.]—A., subsequently to the date of letters-patent, whereby was granted to him the custody of all the estate, real and personal, of a lunatic, entered upon the occupation of the farms of the lunatic as they were quitted by the former tenants, and received the produce to his own use and benefit. In his annual account, passed before the master in chancery in July, 1847, he entered himself in the column of the tenants; and in the column of rent due at Lady-day, 1846, he inserted opposite his name the sum of 393*l.*, and in the column of rent he entered this sum as received:—Held, that he did not occupy the land as tenant, so as to be entitled to vote, under 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 20. Burton v. Langham, 5 C. B. 92; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 78; 17 L. J., C. P. 253; 12 Jur. 631.

iv. Occupiers at 50l. Rent, or of 12l. (now 10l.) Value.

See 48 & 49 Vict. c. 3, sched. 2, part 1, abolishing 50*l.* rental qualification, saving existing rights.

Aggregate Value—Of Lands under different Landlords.]—The county franchise conferred by the occupation of lands of 12*l.* ratable value is not restricted to lands held under one landlord, nor is it any objection that being detached they are separately rated. Huckle v. Piper, 1 Hopw. & C. 680; 41 L. J., C. P. 42; L. R. 7 C. P. 193; 25 L. T. 809; 20 W. R. 235.

A man who occupies several pieces of land under different landlords, and is separately rated for them, may add their ratable values together for the purposes of a qualification under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 6 (repealed). Ib.

A tenant who holds, under two different landlords, two different sets of premises, the rent of each being less than 50*l.* a year, though together they amount to more than that sum, is not entitled to a vote at a county election, under 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 20, and 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 73 (repealed). Gadsby v. Barrow, Barr. & Arn. 283; 7 Man. & G. 21; 8 Scott (N.R.) 799; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 142; 14 L. J., C. P. 51; 8 Jur. 1031.

—— Of Joint and Sole Holdings.]—A. occupied solely as tenant a house and land at a yearly rent of 40*l.* He also jointly with his father rented and occupied other lands at a yearly rent of 64*l.* Both occupations were under the same landlord:—Held, that A.'s proportion of the joint rent could not be added to his separate rent, so as to constitute a qualification to vote for a county, under 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 20. Smith v. Foreman, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 144; H. & P. 231; 34 L. J., C. P. 93; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 42; 11 L. T. 673; 13 W. R. 291.

Rate-book not Binding.]—In regard to a claim to a county vote as a 12*l.* occupier, the revising barrister is not bound by the rated value appearing on the rate-book, but may take evidence and judge for himself as to whether the ratable value of the premises, in respect of which the claim is made, is 12*l.* or not. Cooke v. Butler, 2 Hopw. & C. 22; 42 L. J., C. P. 25; L. R. 8 C. P. 256; 27 L. T. 548; 21 W. R. 73.

Temporary Absence from House during Repairs.]—H.'s name appeared on the register of voters in a county, and was duly objected to. It was proved that he worked for an employer, by whom he was given, in addition to his wages, a house at a shilling a week. During the qualifying period he had lived in two houses, living in one from July 2 to August 22, while alterations were being effected in the other. He only paid rent for one house during this period. No succession claim was made:—Held, that he was not entitled to the franchise. Torish v. Henderson, [1894] 2 Ir. R. 155—C. A.

Right of Another to reside in Qualifying Premises.]—The mere fact that another person has an incorporeal right to reside in the house of an otherwise qualified tenant does not disqualify such tenant for the franchise as inhabitant householder. Torish v. Love, [1894] 2 Ir. R. 372—C. A.

Tenant holding over after Expiration of Notice to quit—New Tenancy created—Relation back.]—To compel them to pay off arrears of rent, several weekly tenants of dwelling-houses were served with notices to quit, which expired during the qualifying period. Each of the tenants continued in possession after the expiration of the notice for a substantial period. While so holding over each tenant was served with a summons for possession. In some of these cases before, and in others after, a decree for possession was obtained, a new contract of tenancy was made, whereby it was arranged that the several tenants should continue to hold upon the old terms, and that the new tenancy was to be deemed to have commenced in each case on the expiration of the old one. It was further agreed that each tenant should pay off arrears of rent:—Held, that the new contract was not capable of relating back for the purpose of the franchise, and that therefore none of the weekly tenants were entitled to the franchise. Holland v. Chambers, Devine's Case, [1894] 2 Ir. R. 442—C. A.

Occupation as Tenant—Tenant dying Intestate—Sole Next of Kin in Occupation—Letters of Administration.]—On the death intestate of the tenant of a house who had left Ireland, his father, who was his sole next of kin, and had been residing in the house, continued in occupation during the qualifying year, and paid the rent, without taking out letters of administration:—Held, that the father was entitled to be registered as an inhabitant householder. After the expiration of the qualifying period the father took out letters of administration to his son :—Held, that the letters did not relate back for the purposes of the franchise. Holland v. Chambers, Doherty's Case, [1894] 2 Ir. R. 285—C. A.

Rent-charge below Value of £5.—Occupation.]—By s. 18 of the Reform Act, 1832, no person shall be entitled to a county vote in respect of any freehold lands or tenements of which he may be seised for a life or lives, except he shall be "in the actual and bonâ fide occupation of such lands or tenements," or except the same shall be of the clear yearly value of not less than 10*l.* (reduced to 5*l.* by a subsequent act) :—Held, that a rent-charge for life below the yearly value of 5*l.*, being incapable of occupation, was not within the exception in s. 18, and therefore did not confer a county vote. Druitt v. Christchurch Overseers, Colt. 328 ; 53 L. J., Q. B. 177 ; 12 Q. B. D. 365 ; 32 W. R. 371.

Rent-charge in Actual Possession.]—A rent-charge was granted to A., B. and C. to hold to the said A., B. and C. to the use of the said A., B. and C., their heirs and assigns for ever as tenants in common :—Held, that such grant took effect at common law and not by operation of the Statute of Uses, 27 Hen. 8, c. 10, and that therefore neither A., B. nor C. had the rental possession of such rent-charge as required by 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 26, to entitle him to be registered as a voter in respect of his interest in the same, until he had actually received such rent or some part thereof. Webster v. Ashton-under-Lyne Overseers, Orme's Case, 2 Hopw. & C. 60 ; 42 L. J., C. P. 38 ; L. R. 8 C. P. 281 ; 27 L. T. 652 ; 21 W. R. 171.

When a conveyance granting a rent-charge operates under the Statute of Uses, 27 Hen. 8, c. 10, the person to whose use the rent-charge is granted is, by force of the statute, in the actual possession of such rent-charge, within 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 26, as soon as the grant is executed. Webster v. Ashton-under-Lyne Overseers, Hadfield's Case, 2 Hopw. & C. 89 ; 42 L. J., C. P. 146 ; L. R. 8 C. P. 306 ; 28 L. T. 901 ; 21 W. R. 637.

Where a rent-charge is created by means of a conveyance to uses, the grantee immediately acquires actual seisin by the words of the 27 Hen. 8, c. 10, s. 1, and is entitled to be registered in respect thereof, notwithstanding he may not have actually received any part of the rent. Heelis v. Blain, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 90 ; H. & P. 189 ; 34 L. J., C. P. 88 ; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 18 ; 11 L. T. 480 ; 13 W. R. 262.

Aliter, where the rent-charge is created by an ordinary grant at common law. Ib.

On 29th January, 1864, A. conveyed a rent-charge of 50*l.* to B., to the use of the five sons of A. No rent had been paid till June, 1864 :—Held, that the five sons of A. had been in actual possession of the rent-charge for six months previously to the 31st July, 1864, and were therefore entitled to be placed on the register. Ib.

A. being possessed of a rent-charge issuing out of freehold lands, granted it unto B., C. and D., and their heirs, to hold the same unto B., C. and D., and their heirs, to the use of A., B., C. and D., their heirs and assigns for ever, in equal one-fourth shares as tenants in common :—Held, that all the grantees took under the Statute of Uses, and that by force of the statute, and on the authority of Heelis v. Blain (18 C. B. (N.S.) 90), they were from the date of the deed in actual possession of their shares of the rent-charge, within s. 26 of 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 45. Lowcock v. Broughton Overseers, Colt. 335 ; 53 L. J., Q. B. 144 ; 12 Q. B. D. 369 ; 51 L. T. 399 ; 32 W. R. 247.

The words "actual possession" in 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 26, mean a possession in fact as contra-distinguished from a possession in law. Murray v. Thornley, 2 C. B. 217 ; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 496 ; Barr. & Arn. 742 ; 15 L. J., C. P. 155 ; 10 Jur. 270.

A rent-charge which had been originally created in 1838, payable quarterly, and which had been regularly paid to the grantee up to the 29th September, 1845, was by him assigned on the 19th January, 1846, to A., B. and C., in trust for themselves, D. and others. The first payment of the rent after the assignment was on the 29th April following :—Held, that D. was not entitled to be registered in respect of his having been six months in actual possession of the rent-charge, within 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 26. Hayden v. Tiverton Overseers, 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 510 ; 4 C. B. 1 ; 16 L. J., C. P. 88 ; 10 Jur. 950.

Freehold Interest in Rent-charge.]—Certain persons, who were seised in fee of a rent-charge of 120*l.* a year, subdivided it into fifty-four parts, and sold thirty-four of such parts, and by a deed in consideration of 52*l.* 5*s.*, paid by each of the purchasers, therein called "beneficiaries," the vendors, therein called "trustees," declared that they stood seised of one fifty-fourth part of the rent-charge in trust for each of the beneficiaries, his heirs and assigns absolutely, and that they stood seised of the remaining parts in trust for themselves, the trustees in fee. There was a covenant by each of the beneficiaries that in the event of his wishing to sell his share, he should first offer it to the trustees at a price to be ascertained, in case of dispute, by arbitration, and there was a clause declaring that the trustees, or other the trustees or trustee, for the time being of the deed, should "respectively have absolute power of sale over the rent and premises, exercisable at their or his discretion, without any further consent on the part of any person" :—Held, that the power of sale vested in the trustees by this deed was not one which they could exercise for their own benefit so as to enable them to forfeit the shares of the beneficiaries, and that, therefore, until such power of sale was exercised, each beneficiary had a freehold interest in the rent-charge, which (being of sufficient value for that purpose) entitled him to the county franchise. Ashworth v. Hopper, 45 L. J., C. P. 99 ; 1 C. P. D. 178 ; 33 L. T. 667 ; 24 W. R. 187.

Apportionment of Rent-charge.]—Owners of a piece of land, which was held by them subject to a rent-charge of 14*l.* 1*s.* 7*d.* per annum, conveyed a portion of it to eight persons as tenants in common in fee, subject to the payment of 4*l.* 5*s.* per annum as their proportion of the rent-charge; the grantors covenanting to pay the remainder themselves, or to indemnify the grantees therefrom, and reserving to them the power to distrain upon the rest of the land for any excess of rent-charge which they might be compelled to pay. It was admitted that the residue of the land was of sufficient value to satisfy the portion of the rent-charge so agreed to be paid thereout:—Held, that although in point of law the land so conveyed was liable to the whole rent-charge of 14*l.* 1*s.* 7*d.*, yet, for the purpose of the elective franchise, the interest of the eight grantees was to be taken to be the value of the land conveyed to them, after deducting the proportion only of the rent-charge covenanted to be paid by them. Barrow v. Buckmaster, 12 C. B. 664; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 235; 22 L. J., C. P. 65; 17 Jur. 117; 1 W. R. 68.

A rent-charge of 5*l.* a year issued out of an estate. The owner of the rent-charge was in actual occupation of a small part of the land; but if the rent-charge was apportioned between such part and the whole estate, he would not have 40*s.* a year issuing out of land occupied by him:—Held, that he could not apportion 40*s.* a year of the rent-charge on the land in his occupation, so as to gain the county franchise. Mills v. Cobb, 36 L. J., C. P. 75; L. R. 2 C. P. 95; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 1007; 15 L. T. 469; 15 W. R. 224. See West v. Robson, infra.

Owner of Rent-charge on Lands in Two Counties.]—A claimant of the county franchise in county N. was the owner of a life rent-charge of 100*l.* per annum, charged upon lands in counties N. and L. The annual value of the land in county N. was considerably above 5*l.*, but if the rent-charge were apportioned ratably to the quantity and annual value of the land in each county, the proportion issuing out of the land in county N. would be below 5*l.*:—Held, that the value of the rent-charge in county N. was insufficient to confer the franchise. Bearn v. Watson, Colt. 268.

Lands in two counties, A. and B., were devised to trustees in fee, out of the rents and profits, to pay certain annual sums to certain persons, and the yearly sum of 10*l.* apiece to each of the fellows of a college. Less than 10*l.*, but more than 40*s.* per annum, would be realised from the lands in county A. if all the annual payments under the will were made out of the county; but if the lands in both counties were apportioned ratably to the amounts received from the lands in each for making such annual payments, a less sum than 40*s.* a year would be apportioned for the lands in county A. to the payment of the 10*l.* a year to each fellow:—Held, that such fellows were not owners of a rent-charge within 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 18, as there was no power of distress. West v. Robson, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 422; K. & G. 141; 27 L. J., C. P. 262; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 666; 6 W. R. 659.

Held, also, that they had not an estate by devise, nor an office within s. 18. Ib.

Held, also, that the lands in the two counties must be deemed to be ratably apportioned for the payment of the annual sums under the will; and that therefore the fellows had not freeholds of the value of 40*s.* a year in county A. Ib.

Annuity Payable out of Real and Personal Property of Benefit Society.]—A member of a benefit society was entitled to an annuity of more than 10*l.* a year out of the funds of the society if the property was sufficient to admit of it. The income of the society arose partly from real property vested in trustees, and partly from contributions and fines paid by the members. The funds of the society were sufficient to pay all the annuities in the current year, and if each annuity was apportioned between the income derived from the real property and from other sources, the part payable out of income derived from real property would be more than 5*l.*:—Held, that he had no direct interest, legal or equitable, in the lands belonging to the society, and was not entitled to a county vote as a freeholder for life under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 5, sub-s. 1. Robinson v. Ainge, 1 Hopw. & C. 193; L. R. 4 C. P. 429; 19 L. T. 644; 17 W. R. 317.

Mortgaged Land.]—A mortgagor, in actual possession of a freehold estate of inheritance, has no right to vote for a county, unless the premises are of the annual value of 40*s.* above all charges, including interest on the mortgage. Copland v. Bartlett, 6 C. B. 18; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 102; 18 L. J., C. P. 50; 13 Jur. 127.

A mortgagor of freehold premises, in possession of the rents and profits, is not entitled to be registered as a county voter, unless he receives therefrom 40*s.* by the year, after deducting money paid annually by him by way of interest on a sum secured by a mortgage which contains no mention of interest, the time for repayment of the principal mentioned in such mortgage having expired, such annual payment being in fact a consideration for remaining in possession. Lee v. Hutchinson, 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 159; 8 C. B. 16; 20 L. J., C. P. 4.

An allottee of three shares in a building society, in October, 1850, purchased freehold land, of the value of 6*l.* per annum. The amount of the purchase-money and expenses was advanced to him by the society upon mortgage of the land so purchased. By the rules of the society each member was required to pay 1*s.* 6*d.* weekly for each share, and to execute to the trustees a mortgage to secure to them the sum in which the member might be indebted to the society, "with a premium for prior advance equal to 5*l.* per cent. per annum upon the amount advanced until repaid, and such sum, not exceeding 2*s.* 6*d.* per share per annum for incidental expenses, as the committee should think fit"; such mortgage reserving to the trustees a power of sale, in case the member should fail for twenty-six weekly meetings to pay, observe and perform all or any of the subscriptions, payments, covenants, agreements and regulations on his part to be paid, observed and performed. No default had been made in the payment of the contributions required by the rules; and the mortgagor had always been, and still remained, in actual possession of the property. The amount of principal money due to the society on the 30th of January, 1851, was 47*l.* 10*s.* 3*d.* The weekly contributions of 1*s.* 6*d.* per share (amounting to 11*l.* 14*s.* per annum) were appropriated by the society thus: 8*l.* 18*s.* in part liquidation of the principal mortgage debt, 2*l.* 10*s.* for premium or interest, and 6*s.* for incidental expenses:—Held, that these contributions constituted a charge upon the land, within 8 Hen. 6, c. 7, and consequently that the mortgagor was not possessed of an estate of the clear yearly value of 40*s.* at the least above all charges. Beamish v. Stoke Overseers, 11 C. B. 29; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 189; 21 L. J., C. P. 9; 16 Jur. 597.

A. purchased land of the annual value of 3*l.*, and mortgaged it to a building society for 73*l.*, to secure the monthly payments due on his share, amounting annually to 4*l.*; power to enter was reserved in case of failure to pay instalments. He was entitled to redeem by payment of the monthly instalments, and had, without default, paid off 71*l.*, up to the 31st January, 1863, between which time and holding of the revision court the balance, 2*l.*, had become due and been paid:—Held, that he acquired a freehold interest in the land of the annual value of 40*s.* above all charges, and was therefore qualified to vote for the county. Robinson v. Dunkley, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 478; H. & P. 1; 33 L. J., C. P. 57; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1342; 9 L. T. 481; 12 W. R. 202.

Mortgage interest may be apportioned for the purpose of ascertaining whether the freehold is of the annual value of 40*s.* above all charges; and therefore a freeholder is entitled to be registered as a voter for a county in respect of freehold land in the county of the annual value of 5*l.*, although such land is, with other land of the annual value of 50*l.*, subject to a mortgage for 300*l.*, the interest of which is 15*l.* a year. Moore v. Carisbrooke Overseers, 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 233; 12 C. B. 661; 22 L. J., C. P. 64; 17 Jur. 116; 1 W. R. 67.

The claimant to a county vote borrowed 300*l.* of a building society in which he held three shares, and mortgaged freehold tenements of which he was the owner in fee to such society for securing to it "the subscriptions, payments, redemption-moneys and fines in relation to the sum of 300*l.* by monthly instalments of 3*l.* 9*s.*," extending over ten years. The annual value of the tenements was 31*l.* 4*s.*, and the annual payment to the society was 41*l.* 8*s.*, two-thirds of which were in discharge of principal and one-third of interest. The claimant had only two years more of such payments to make, and he might redeem the property for 73*l.* 1*s.*:—Held, that he had an interest in the property of the value of 40*s.* by the year, within 8 Hen. 6, c. 7, and was therefore entitled to a vote for the county. Rolleston v. Cope, 1 Hopw. & C. 488; 40 L. J., C. P. 160; L. R. 6 C. P. 292; 24 L. T. 390; 19 W. R. 927.

Beneficial Interest in Lands subject to Trust for Sale.]—A testator devised copyhold cottages to trustees upon trust to sell and to stand possessed of the proceeds and pay the interest, dividends, &c., to his wife during her widowhood, and, after her decease or marriage, upon trust for his children who should be living at the time of his decease; the share of a son or sons to be vested and payable to him or them on attaining twenty-one, and the share of a daughter to be vested at twenty-one or marriage, and to be to her sole and separate use. The wife predeceased the testator; and the surviving trustees were admitted as customary tenants of the cottages. The testator left three sons and a daughter. The latter married and had issue, who were infants. Pursuant to a verbal arrangement amongst themselves (in which agreement the daughter's husband had concurred, but to which the trustees were no parties), the cestuis que trustent agreed to keep the cottages unconverted; and the rents (about 50*l.* per annum) were received by the trustees and divided amongst them:—Held, that, inasmuch as one of the cestuis que trustent was a married woman and had issue who were infants, no election could be made to take the cottages in their actual state, and so determine and extinguish the converting trust; and consequently that the testator's sons had not such an estate (legal or equitable) in the copyhold cottages as entitled them to be registered as voters for the county under 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 26, and 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 5. Spencer v. Harrison, Colt. 61; 49 L. J., C. P. 188; 5 C. P. D. 97; 41 L. T. 676; 28 W. R. 985; 44 J. P. 235.

Lands and Mill vested in Trustees for Benefit of all Partners in Business, and to be deemed to be Personalty.]—Several persons formed a co-partnership, to build and carry on their trade in a mill. For this purpose money was subscribed by all of them, and freehold lands purchased, which were conveyed to the use of trustees absolutely. By a partnership deed subsequently executed, "the trustees were to be seised and possessed of the estates, &c., upon trust for the benefit of themselves and their partners in the joint concern"; and it was agreed that "the lands and mill to be built, &c., shall be deemed and considered as or in the nature of personal estate, and not real estate." The mill was afterwards built, and the fulling trade carried on therein, and the profits distributed among the partners. The amount of interest possessed by each partner was sufficient to confer a vote, provided the interest acquired by such shares could be considered as an interest in real property:—Held, that such partners had an equitable seisin in a sufficient estate to enable them to vote for the county. Baxter v. Newman, 7 Man. & G. 198; 8 Scott (N.R.) 1019; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 120, n.; 14 L. J., C. P. 193; 9 Jur. 829.

Pews.]—By a statute trustees were empowered to take down a chapel and build another on or near its site, and appropriate the pews or seats to the persons who subscribed towards the building, and who were to be deemed proprietors of such pews or seats, which should be vested in them in fee-simple; it was not known in whom the freehold of the soil was before the statute:—Held, that such proprietors had not any freehold in the soil covered by these pews or any profit arising thereout. Greenway v. Hockin, 1 Hopw. & C. 403; 39 L. J., C. P. 103; L. R. 5 C. P. 235; 22 L. T. 304.

Under a private act a church was built by certain subscribers and proprietors, in whom the freehold was vested. By the act the trustees were empowered "to let or sell and transfer and convey, for the purpose only of attending divine service," certain of the pews and seats to the inhabitants of certain parishes, subject to the payments of rents and assessments, and with a power of entry for non-payment. By a subsequent private act, reciting that doubts had arisen as to the estate and interest which the subscribers and proprietors of the church took in the pews, it was enacted that the fee-simple and inheritance of and in the pews should be vested in the subscribers or the proprietors for the time being of the pews, their heirs and assigns for ever:—Held, that the proprietor of a pew did not under either of these acts acquire such a freehold interest in any portion of the soil of the church as to entitle him to a vote for the county, but merely an easement, or a qualified right to the occupation and enjoyment of the pew for the purpose of attending the services of the church. Brumfitt v. Roberts, 1 Hopw. & C. 387; 39 L. J., C. P. 95; L. R. 5 C. P. 224; 22 L. T. 301; 18 W. R. 678.

By a local act a church was to be taken down and rebuilt. Trustees were appointed by the act, the materials of the old church and those of the new being vested in them. The rights of the rector and his successors were reserved. The trustees were to allot pews in the new church to the former holders of pews in the old church, and were authorised to lease for three years, or sell the fee-simple of other pews, unto any persons being inhabitants of or residents within the district. The proprietor of any such pew might dispose of it to any purchaser, provided the latter was an inhabitant of or a resident within the district, but to no one else. If any proprietor died, and the pew did not descend to any person who was an inhabitant of or a resident within the district, the pew was to revert to the trustees. A pew had been bought in pursuance of the act, and re-sold to a proprietor, an inhabitant of the district; he did not occupy it himself, but let it, receiving by way of rent more than 40*s.* annually. The proprietor claimed to vote in respect of the pew, as having a freehold tenement of 40*s.* by the year:—Held, that he was not entitled to vote, as the effect of the purchase from the trustees was not to create a freehold tenement, under 8 Hen. 6. c. 7, but only a right to sit in the pew during divine service. Hinde v. Chorlton, 36 L. J., C. P. 79; L. R. 2 C. P. 104; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 1008; 15 L. T. 472; 15 W. R. 226.

Occupation of Premises as Minister for Life.]—See Burton v. Brooks, col. 105.

Fees of Incumbent of Church.]—An incumbent of a district church was, as such, entitled—(1) To the freehold of the church (not found by the revising barrister to be of any annual value); (2) To two sums of 150*l.* and 50*l.*, paid annually under orders in council by the ecclesiastical commissioners and the governors of Queen Anne's Bounty to the incumbent for the time being of the church; (3) To fees for marriages, baptisms and churchings performed within the church; (4) To fees under a local act in respect of the burial in a cemetery out of the parish of persons who had died within the district (items (3) and (4) each amounting to more than 40*s.* a year):—Held, that he was not shewn to have 40*s.* a year from land within the parish, so as to entitle him to the county franchise, the marriage, &c., fees (though received for ceremonies in part necessarily performed within the church) being paid for the personal services of the incumbent. Kirton v. Dear, 1 Hopw. & C. 349; 39 L. J., C. P. 36; L. R. 5 C. P. 217; 21 L. T. 532; 18 W. R. 144.

Purchaser who has not taken Possession or received Conveyance.]—A purchaser of land who has not received a conveyance, and who has allowed the vendor to remain in actual possession, is not entitled to vote for the county in respect of such land, although the same is sufficient in value and other respects to confer a vote, and although he is a purchaser for value by a binding contract capable of being enforced in equity. Awlay v. Lewis, K. & G. 36; 17 C. B. 316; 25 L. J., C. P. 121; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 164; 4 W. R. 286.

Shareholders in Company.]—Where a company duly registered holds freehold lands, the shareholders have no interest in the lands entitling them, or any of them, to vote for the county wherein the lands lie. Bulmer v. Norris, K. & G. 321; 9 C. B. (N.S.) 19; 30 L. J., C. P. 25; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 342; 3 L. T. 470; 9 W. R. 122.

The proprietors of a music-hall possessed of real estate, by deed vested the same in trustees, who were to deal with and manage it for the general body of shareholders, who were to have an interest in the net profits in proportion to the amount of their respective shares:—Held, that such shareholders had not any equitable interest in the realty, so as to entitle them to be registered for the county. Freeman v. Gainsford, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 185; H. & P. 255; 34 L. J., C. P. 95; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 116; 11 L. T. 675; 13 W. R. 343.

A claimant was possessed of a share in a corn exchange company. The land on which the corn exchange was built was freehold, and was vested in trustees. The income was derived from letting offices and cellars beneath, and stands and stalls in the exchange. The claimant's interest was of the clear yearly value of 40*s.* The company was registered under 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110, s. 58 (repealed):—Held, that the claimant had not a freehold interest in land in respect of his share in the company. Bennett v. Blain, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 518; H. & P. 35; 33 L. J., C. P. 63; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 130; 9 L. T. 506; 12 W. R. 175.

Shareholders entitled to Tolls but not to Soil of Bridge.]—Before the Thames Navigation Act, 1870, the shareholders in Putney Bridge had only a right to the toll for the passage over the bridge, but not to any land belonging to the bridge (the toll being vested in trustees, for the shareholders, and the land in trustees, for certain other persons), and therefore such shareholders were not qualified to be on the list of county voters as having, in respect of their shares, any estate in land. By the Thames Navigation Act, 1870, the bridge and lands belonging, as well as the tolls, were vested in a committee of management appointed from the shareholders of the bridge, but they were so vested, "subject to the trusts" on which the same were held at the passing of that act:—Held, therefore, that such shareholders were no more qualified as such to be on the list of county voters, than they had been before the passing of that act. Wadmore v. Putney Overseers, 41 L. J., C. P. 49; L. R. 7 C. P. 212; 26 L. T. 28; 20 W. R. 239.

By a local act commissioners were appointed for the purpose of building a bridge. By a subsequent act the commissioners were empowered to convey the tolls and profits to persons contracting to build the bridge. The commissioners granted the bridge, materials, tolls, and profits, with all the ground and soil adjacent vested in them, to trustees, for the shareholders in the bridge:—Held, that the commissioners had no power to convey the land to the trustees, and that therefore the shareholders of the tolls and profits had no estate in the land, and therefore no qualification for a claim to vote. Tepper v. Nichols, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 121; H. & P. 202; 34 L. J., C. P. 61; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 18; 11 L. T. 509; 13 W. R. 270.

Members of Corporation.]—The members of a corporation, which is seised in fee-simple of freehold lands, have no such estate, legal or equitable, in the lands of the corporation as gives them the franchise for the county, although their individual shares in the profits realised from such lands by the corporation exceed 40*s.* a year each. Acland v. Lewis, K. & G. 334; 9 C. B. (N.S.) 32; 30 L. J., C. P. 29; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 421; 3 L. T. 470; 9 W. R. 123.

And see cases, ante, A. 1, a. i. (col. 3).

viii. Value.

Yearly Value.]—The criterion of value under 8 Hen. 6, c. 7, is not what the land actually produces, but what in its existing state it reasonably may produce. Astbury v. Henderson, 15 C. B. 251; 3 C. L. R. 164; 24 L. J., C. P. 20; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 258; 3 W. R. 67.

A. bought a piece of freehold land intending it for building purposes, for which it was suitable. If let upon a building lease, the land would be worth a ground-rent of 15*l.* a year, and A. had received a bonâ fide offer for that sum, but had refused it as insufficient:—Held, that although the land was unbuilt upon, and unlet, and consequently unproductive, A. was nevertheless entitled to be registered as the owner of a freehold estate of the clear yearly value of 40*s.* Ib.

Where freehold premises are let at a certain rent, and the landlord does the repairs, in estimating the clear yearly value above all charges, with reference to a county franchise, the average annual cost of the repairs (though not a charge) must be deducted from the annual rent, if such repairs are necessary, in order to obtain that amount of rent. Hamilton v. Bass, 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 213; 12 C. B. 631; 22 L. J., C. P. 29; 17 Jur. 115.

An owner of freehold land let it at a yearly rent of 40*s.*, part of the terms of the letting being that he should pay the tenants' rates; if he had not so agreed, the rent to have been obtained would have been less by the amount of the rates:—Held, that he had not an estate of the clear yearly value of 40*s.* so as to entitle him to a vote for a county; and that the 18 Geo. 2, c. 18, s. 6, did not apply. Moorhouse v. Gilbertson, 14 C. B. 70; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 260; 2 C. L. R. 38; 23 L. J., C. P. 19; 17 Jur. 1184; 2 W. R. 58.

The owner of freehold land, on which was a rent-charge, granted a part of it in fee, subject to a proportion of the rent-charge. The conveyance contained covenants by the grantor to pay, and to indemnify the grantee against the remainder; there was a power of distress to the grantee over the residue of the land in case he was compelled to pay more than his proportion. The rent-charge was thus fairly apportioned, and the residue of the land was sufficient to meet its proportion:—Held, that in estimating the value of the grantee's land with reference to the county franchise, the apportioned part only of the rent-charge was to be deducted from the annual value; for that the charges to be deducted under 8 Hen. 6, c. 7, and the subsequent statutes, were such as were ultimately payable out of the land, and not primarily charged upon it. Barrow v. Buckmaster, 12 C. B. 664; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 235; 22 L. J., C. P. 65; 17 Jur. 117.

A., and several other persons, claimed to be registered for a county, as the owners each of an undivided thirty-fifth share of freehold property, producing a net rental sufficient to give to each of them 2*l.* 0*s.* 6*d.* per annum. This was reduced to less than 40*s.* to each owner, by the allowance of a commission of 5*l.* a year to one of the thirty-five, who undertook the management of the property, and the transmission to each of the others of his share. The barrister having found that "the allowance of such commission was, from the nature of the property, necessary for the collection of the rents":—Held, that the court was bound by his finding, and therefore could not say that the claimants had freeholds of the clear yearly value of 40*s.* Sherlock v. Steward, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 21; K. & G. 286; 29 L. J., C. P. 87; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 611; 1 L. T. 100; 8 W. R. 89.

Lands of the annual value of 3,627*l.* were granted to six trustees to pay themselves 5*l.* apiece yearly, and apply the residue towards charitable purposes. The trustees were in the actual occupation of a portion of the lands of the annual value of 54*l.*, in respect of which they claim to be entitled to vote, as being in the receipt of 40*s.* a year for life issuing out of lands in their actual occupation:—Held, that they had no power to pay themselves their 5*l.* apiece out of that portion of the lands in their actual occupation, but that it must be apportioned over the whole of the trust estate, and that they therefore had not 40*s.* a year issuing out of lands in their actual occupation. Mills v. Cobb, 36 L. J., C. P. 75; L. R. 2 C. P. 95; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 1007; 15 L. T. 469; 15 W. R. 224.

Rate-book not binding as to Ratable Value.]—See Cooke v. Butler, col. 49.

Deduction of Charges.]—A sum of money voluntarily laid out by landlords in improving their property is not a charge to be deducted in ascertaining the net annual value for the purpose of the county franchise, within 8 Hen. 6, c. 7. Buckley v. Wrigley, 1 Hopw. & C. 661; L. R. 7 C. P. 185; 25 L. T. 835.

Tenants in common in fee of houses and land, expended of their own accord 21*l.* 19*s.* 1*d.* in laying on a supply of water for the convenience of their tenants. For this expenditure an additional rent was charged, but if the whole outlay was deducted in the year of qualification, the annual value would not have been sufficient for each landlord to have a freehold of 40*s.*:—Held, that such deduction should not be made. Ib.

Variable Pensions.]—A hospital was founded in 1673, by a duke, and real property was conveyed to trustees, for the benefit of poor pensioners residing in it. One of the ordinances regulating the hospital declared that whenever more than 100*l.* remained in the treasury, the surplus should be equally distributable among the pensioners. A private act of parliament, regulating the hospital, enacted that, instead of having the surplus revenue divided among the original number of pensioners, additional pensioners were to be chosen, and the trustees were directed, from time to time, to add as many more pensioners as the revenues of the hospital would allow; and the trustees were to pay the pensioners such fixed stipends as they should think fit, and to lessen, increase, vary, change and alter such weekly stipends as they should find requisite, so that the stipend should at no time be reduced below 3*s.* 6*d.* a week. The pensioners were also entitled to receive coals and certain clothing; but the case found, that the 3*s.* 6*d.* a week, and the coals and clothing, would be insufficient to confer the franchise; the pensioners were actually in the receipt of 10*s.* besides the coals and clothing:—Held, that the pensioners were not absolutely entitled to more than 3*s.* 6*d.* a week besides the coal and clothing, and therefore, were not entitled to the franchise. Ashmore v. Lees, 2 C. B. 31; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 337; 15 L. J., C. P. 65; 9 Jur. 1109.

Claim by Succession.]—C., previously to his death, which occurred on the 6th of April, 1879, held a house as yearly tenant. The claimant married C.'s daughter, and in 1868 with his wife went to reside in C.'s house, and continued there subsequently. The business of a publican was conducted in the house by the claimant's wife, who supported the establishment, paid the rent and rates out of profits, and took out the annual spirit licence in C.'s name up to his death. After C.'s death the claimant and his wife carried on the business, and paid the rent and rates, the receipts for rent being given to the "representatives of C.," and the receipts for rates to the claimant in his own name. The spirit licence was duly transferred to the claimant. C. had two sons who survived him, and no other next of kin. They consented to the claimant residing in the house after C.'s death. No administration was taken out to C., who died intestate:—Held, that the claimant was not entitled to be registered as a voter under 13 & 14 Vict. c. 69, s. 14 (Ireland), as a person to whom lands, tenements, or hereditaments had come by succession (similar in terms to 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 26). Topham v. Kelleher, 6 L. R. Ir. 235—C. A.

"Succession," within the meaning of the above section, is the legitimate devolution of property upon the death of one person to another, legally ascertained as successive, in the place and stead of the former voter.—Ib.

x. Property in Boroughs.

Unity of Occupation—2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 24.]—A minister of a church was stated to have, as minister, such a freehold interest in the rents received from the letting of pews in the church as entitled him to a vote for the county. He occupied as such minister the parsonage-house, and in respect of such occupation acquired a right to a vote for the borough:—Held, that there was no such unity of occupation as would, according to 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 24, disentitle him to the county vote. Berwick v. Alker, 2 Hopw. & C. 36; 42 L. J., C. P. 26; L. R. 8 C. P. 265; 27 L. T. 422; 21 W. R. 72.

Occupation of Land in Fee-Simple, together with a House in Borough.]—Where a voter claimed as owner in fee-simple of a piece of land one mile distant from a house in the borough, of which he was owner and occupier, and in respect of which he had a vote for the borough; it was held that the revising barrister was right in deciding that he was entitled to have his name inserted in the list of voters for the county. Saunders v. Searson; Saunders v. Smith, Colt. 150; 50 L. J., C. P. 117; 43 L. T. 438; 29 W. R. 289; 45 J. P. 22.

Two Distinct Qualifying Properties in a Borough—No Right to Vote for County in respect of Either.]—The respondent's name appeared twice on the list of borough voters for the borough of T., in respect of a freehold house, and also of a dwelling-house, both occupied by him within the borough. In revising the list for the borough, the revising barrister had placed against the entry of the respondent's name in respect of the freehold house a note to the effect that the respondent was not entitled to vote in respect of that qualification for the borough, he being on the same list of voters in respect of another qualification, in accordance with the directions of 41 & 42 Vict. c. 26, s. 28, sub-s. 14. On the revision of the county list an objection was made to the respondent's name being retained on the list of voters for the county in respect of the same freehold house, on the ground that the qualifying property was of such value as would confer on him the right of voting at parliamentary elections for the borough of T. (2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 24). The revising barrister held that the effect of the note opposite the respondent's name was to place him in the position, so far as that property was concerned, of a person having no qualifying property in the borough, and retained his name on the county list:—Held, on appeal, that the revising barrister was wrong; that the effect of 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 24, was not altered by 41 & 42 Vict. c. 26, s. 28, sub-s. 14; and that the respondent was not entitled to be retained on the list of county voters in respect of that qualification. Chilcot v. Bullen, Colt. 282; 46 L. T. 63; 45 J. P. 815.

Owner of House in Borough Let in Separate Tenements.]—An owner of a copyhold house within a borough, who does not occupy, but lets it out in separate tenements, is disqualified, in respect of such house, for a county vote, the house being of sufficient value to give him a borough vote, although the separate tenements are each not of a value to qualify for a borough vote. Proctor v. Annison, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 48; K. & G. 297; 29 L. J., C. P. 90; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 656; 1 L. T. 187; 8 W. R. 140.

Since 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102.]—A person who was, at the time of the passing of the 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, properly on the list of voters for a county in respect of a qualification situate within a borough has no right to have his name retained on that list in a case where that act has rendered the qualification sufficient to confer a vote for the borough. Bunting's Case, Charlton v. Johnson, 1 Hopw. & C. 49; 38 L. J., C. P. 37; L. R. 4 C. P. 426; 19 L. T. 560; 17 W. R. 141.

Recipients of Alms.]—Land was devised to trustees to distribute a portion of the rents unto the poorest inhabitants of a tything as the trustees should think fit. The portion generally amounted to 40*l.* a year, and was annually distributed amongst about eighty of the labouring population of the tything, according to the discretion of the trustees, in sums varying from 2*s.* 6*d.* to 12*s.* 6*d.*, according to the necessities of the recipient and the number of his family. A. and B., who were agricultural labourers and inhabitants of the tything, and on the list of voters for the borough, received each during the electoral year, 12*s.* 6*d.* of the money so distributed under the trust. Neither of them had during such period received parochial relief, but A. had frequently in previous years received parochial relief, and B. had two years before applied for parochial relief, but had been refused on the ground that it was considered he did not need it:—Held, that both persons had received alms within s. 36 of 2 Will. 4, c. 45, and were therefore disqualified from voting. Harrison v. Carter, Cook's Case and Port's Case, 2 Hopw. & C. 324; 46 L. J., C. P. 57; 2 C. P. D. 26; 35 L. T. 511; 25 W. R. 182.

The appellant during the qualifying period was an alms-person in a certain hospital, where he occupied gratuitously and resided in a room assigned to him by the trustees of the charity; he also received a weekly allowance of 10*s.* in addition to washing, and half-a-ton of coals at Christmas, and he occupied a separate plot of ground assigned to him. The alms-persons were elected from poor deserving men of good character, and they could be removed from the hospital by the trustees for certain causes:—Held, that the appellant had received disqualifying alms within the meaning of s. 36 of the Reform Act, 1832, and that he was not entitled to be registered as a voter. Dix v. Kent, Fox, 186; 63 L. T. 641; 39 W. R. 173; 55 J. P. 213.

By the provisions of a charity, regulated by a scheme of the charity commissioners, a certain number of the poor inhabitants of a borough, who had not been for two years in the receipt of parish relief, were received into an almshouse, where certain weekly payments and other benefits were bestowed upon them. They were liable to be removed for misconduct and other causes:—Held, that they had received alms within s. 36 of 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 45, and were therefore disqualified from voting. Baker v. Monmouth Town Council, 53 L. T. 668; 34 W. R. 64; 49 J. P. 776.

The claimants during the qualifying period occupied almshouses in a borough and received out of a charitable fund for the sustenance of the inmates allowances of 6*s.* a week. The charity was regulated by an act of parliament, which provided that the inmates of the almshouses were to be persons "who from age, ill-health, accident, or infirmity should be unable to maintain themselves":—Held, that the facts shewed a receipt of "alms which by the law of parliament disqualify from voting" under the Reform Act, 1832 (2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 45), s. 36, and that the claimants were not entitled to be registered as voters. Edwards v. Lloyd, Fox, 54; 57 L. J., Q. B. 121; 20 Q. B. D. 302; 58 L. T. 409; 52 J. P. 519.

The Licensed Victuallers' Asylum is an institution incorporated under royal charter. The design of the institution is to receive and maintain decayed aged licensed victuallers and their wives and widows. Only those who have contributed to the funds of the institution as subscribers or donors are eligible to be elected as inmates of the asylum. The funds of the institution are largely augmented by private benevolence. The inmates are subject to various rules of discipline, which may be altered from time to time by the board of management. No person having an income exceeding a certain amount is qualified to be elected or to remain an inmate of the asylum. The funds of the institution are applied, among other things, in augmentation of the incomes of the inmates up to a limit fixed from time to time by the board:—Held, that the rules of the institution do not necessarily shew that the inmates are in receipt of alms such as to disqualify them from the franchise under the provisions of 2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 36. Daniels v. Allard, Fox, 70.

Brethren of a charterhouse founded, under letters patent in 1384, who, during the qualifying period, live in houses of which they are for the time being legal owners, and have a legal right to participate in the funds of the institution until removal for good cause shewn, upon which they have a right to be heard, and who have voted at parliamentary elections for a great number of years without objection, are not in receipt of alms within s. 36 of the Reform Act, 1832, so as to be disqualified from being put on the register of voters for the election of a member of parliament. Cowen v. Kingston-upon-Hull Town Clerk, 1 Smith, 96; 66 L. J., Q. B. 185; [1897] 1 Q. B. 273; 75 L. T. 593; 45 W. R. 413; 61 J. P. 356.

To take the benefits of an incorporated charity, as one entitled permanently to share in its revenues, resources and advantages, is not a receiving of alms, so as to disqualify from voting. Smith v. Hall, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 485; H. & P. 11;

33 L. J., C. P. 59; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1340; 9 L. T. 413; 12 W. R. 172.

Freemen of a borough entitled to be registered as voters for members of parliament were brethren of hospitals which were corporations possessing landed estates. The income was divisible annually among the brethren in equal proportions, and each brother had a house assigned to him, which he was bound to repair. The right of appointing brethren was vested in trustees. No instance of removal of a brother was known. A candidate for appointment must be fifty-six years old, "except lame, blind or impotent persons, and unfit for husbandry, and should be an inhabitant or a child of one having no competent means of living":—Held, that freemen of the borough were not disqualified by reason of being brethren of the hospitals. Ib.

The mere fact that occupation was originally conferred from charitable motives, and is still enjoyed with restrictions, will not, if the interest of the occupier amounts to freehold, preclude him from the franchise. Fryer v. Bodenham, 38 L. J., C. P. 185; L. R. 4 C. P. 529; 19 L. T. 645; 17 W. R. 294; 1 Hopw. & C. 204.

Recipients of Parochial Relief.]—A freeman who has within the year been excused from paying a poor-rate, under 54 Geo. 3, c. 170, s. 11, upon proof before the justices of inability through poverty to pay such rate, is not disqualified from being registered, as having received parochial relief within 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 36. Mashiter v. Dunn, 6 C. B. 30; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 112; 18 L. J., C. P. 13.

Quære, whether obtaining medical attendance and medicine on loan from guardians of a union, under 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 58, was, before 48 & 49 Vict. c. 46, a receiving of parochial relief. Devenish v. Digby, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 28.

A son of a pauper was summoned before justices (his name being on the list of voters for a borough), and he consented to pay 1*s.* 6*d.* a week towards his father's maintenance; which offer was accepted by the guardians, and he continued to pay this sum each week that his father remained within the union, the residue of the sum necessary for his father's complete maintenance being defrayed out of the funds of the union. On an objection to the son's qualification as an elector, on the ground of his receiving parochial relief:—Held, not a receipt of alms. Trotter v. Trevor, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 48; K. & G. 531; 32 L. J., C. P. 59; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 443; 7 L. T. 678; 11 W. R. 92.

The wife of the appellant, being near her confinement, applied to the relieving officer of the union for an order for the attendance of a medical man. The guardians authorised the relieving officer to give her an order for such attendance, but she was in fact attended during her confinement by an uncertificated midwife, who was sent to her and paid by the relieving officer:—Held, that the relief afforded to the wife was "medical assistance" within 48 & 49 Vict. c. 46, s. 2, and that the appellant was not disqualified from being registered as a parliamentary voter. Honeybone v. Hambridge, 56 L. J., Q. B. 46; 18 Q. B. D. 418; 56 L. T. 365; 35 W. R. 520; Fox, 26; 51 J. P. 103.

The appellant and others had, during a portion of the qualifying period, and at a time when great distress prevailed, been employed by the board of guardians of the union in which they resided to break stones, and had received payment for their work. The payments received had not been in any way commensurate with the amount of work done, but with the wants of each person employed; and had varied according to the number of children belonging to such person:—Held, that the payments so made constituted relief given to the persons employed; and that they were therefore disqualified from being registered by reason of their having been in receipt of parochial relief within s. 36 of the Representation of the People Act, 1832. Magarrill v. Whitehaven Overseers, 55 L. J., Q. B. 38; 16 Q. B. D. 242; 53 L. T. 667; 34 W. R. 275; Colt. 448; 49 J. P. 743.

Application for a receipt of provision under 29 & 30 Vict. c. 38, for the interment of a deceased member of his family during the qualifying year is sufficient to disqualify the recipient, though otherwise entitled to the franchise, from being registered as a parliamentary voter. Kerr v. Chambers, 20 L. R., Ir. 207—C. A.

See Hayward v. Scott, col. 103.

Police Constables.]—By 10 Geo. 4, c. 44, s. 18, a constable of the metropolitan police force is disqualified from voting at the election of a member of parliament for certain counties or for any city or borough within the metropolitan police district:—Held, that such a constable is a person "incapacitated by law or statute from voting," within 41 & 42 Vict. c. 26, s. 28, sub-s. 7, and consequently is not entitled to be retained on the list of voters under the Representation of the People Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 102). Doulon v. Halse, 56 L. J., Q. B. 41; 18 Q. B. D. 421; 56 L. T. 340; 35 W. R. 502; Fox, 1; 51 J. P. 183. See 50 Vict. c. 9, s. 1, and Schedule.

Serjeants-at-mace, appointed by a corporation, under the provisions of its charter, with a salary paid by the treasury, out of the fund of the corporation, are not constables appointed for the borough under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76 (repealed), so as to be prohibited from voting in the election of members of parliament by 19 & 20 Vict. c. 69, s. 9, although their original appointment takes place subsequently to 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76. De Boinville v. Arnold, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 3; 26 L. J., C. P. 65; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 642; 5 W. R. 21.

Aliens.]—Persons born in Hanover before 1837, resident in this country and not naturalised; persons born in Hanover since 1837, resident in this country and not naturalised; and persons born in Prussia of Hanoverian parents born before 1837, and now resident in this country and not naturalised, are all aliens and not entitled to the franchise. Isaacson v. Durant, 55 L. J., Q. B. 331; 17 Q. B. D. 54; 54 L. T. 684; 34 W. R. 547. See Finsbury Case, 4 O'M. & H. 172.

Minors.]—To entitle a voter to be registered in respect of the 12*l.* occupation franchise under the Representation of the People Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 102), s. 6, he must have been of full age on the last day of July in the qualifying year. Hargreaves v. Hopper, 45 L. J., C. P. 105; 1 C. P. D. 195; 33 L. T. 530; 24 W. R. 186.

To entitle a party to be registered under 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 27 (repealed), in respect of the occupation of premises, it is not necessary that he should have been of full age during the whole of the prescribed period of occupation. Powell v. Bradley, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 65; H. & P. 159

Prisoner.]—See Jones, In re, col. 121.

Peers.]—A peer of parliament is incapacitated from voting at an election for members of the house of commons; and is therefore not entitled to be placed on the register of voters. The revising barrister ought to strike out the name from any list on it being proved to be that of a peer of parliament, although no notice of objection has been given. Beauchamp (Earl) v. Madresfield Overseers, 42 L. J., C. P. 32; L. R. 8 C. P. 245; 27 L. T. 606; 21 W. R. 124; 2 Hopw. & C. 41.

An Irish peer, who at the time of registration is not a member of the house of commons, is incapacitated by law from voting at parliamentary elections, and therefore is not entitled to have his name inserted on the register of parliamentary election. Rendlesham v. Haward, 43 L. J., C. P. 33; L. R. 9 C. P. 252; 29 L. T. 679; 22 W. R. 157; 2 Hopw. & C. 175.

Letter-carrier.]—A letter-carrier to a post-office, who had resigned his situation within twelve months before the 31st July, being disqualified from voting until after twelve months from the resignation of such situation by 22 Geo. 3, c. 41, s. 1 (repealed), was not entitled to be registered. Austin's Case, 7 Man. & G. 97; 8 Scott (N.R.) 921; 14 L. J., C. P. 72; 9 Jur. 163.

Clerk to Inspector of Taxes.]—A clerk to a receiving inspector of taxes is not disqualified from being registered. Clonishaw's Case, 8 Scott (N.R.) 947; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 228, n.; 7 Man. & G. 97, n.

Tide-waiter.] — By 22 Geo. 3, c. 41, s. 1 (repealed), no commissioner or other officer or person whatsoever concerned or employed in charging, collecting, levying or managing the customs, or any branch thereof, is to have a vote:—Held, that a glut tide-waiter, being a person whose name is on a list, confirmed by the commissioners of customs, of persons ready to act as tide-waiters, and liable to be called on to act whenever there may be occasion, was both within the mischief and the words of the act, and was, therefore, disqualified from voting. Pownall v. Hood, 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 170; 11 C. B. 1; 21 L. J., C. P. 12; 16 Jur. 618.

Women.]—Women are subject to legal incapacity to vote at an election either for a borough or for a county, though possessed of the proper qualification. Charlton v. Lings, 38 L. J., C. P. 25; L. R. 4 C. P. 374; 19 L. T. 534; 17 W. R. 284; 1 Hopw. & C. 1. Charlton v. Kessler, L. R. 4 C. P. 397; 1 Hopw. & C. 42.

Clerk to Election Agent.]—See Buckrose Case, col. 136.

Persons making Payments not included in Expenses.]—Payments made by the secretary of a political association and also by a member of a local branch thereof were not included in the return of election expenses:—Held, that the votes of both persons must be struck off. Buckrose Case, 4 O'M. & H. 110.

Candidates reported as guilty of Bribery.]—In order to disqualify a candidate from being registered as a voter, by reason of personal bribery, or bribery by an agent with his knowledge and consent, under 31 & 32 Vict. c. 125, s. 43 (repealed), he must be found by the report of the election judge under s. 11, sub-s. 14, to have been so guilty. It is not enough that the judge states facts from which personal bribery or other corrupt practice might be inferred. Grant v. Pugham Overseers, 47 L. J., C. P. 59; 3 C. P. D. 80; 37 L. T. 404; 26 W. R. 169; 2 Hopw. & C. 384.

Conveyances to Multiply Votes.]—A conveyance is not void within 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 25, s. 7, unless the vendor is party or privy to the illegal object. Marshall v. Bown, 7 Man. & G. 188; 8 Scott (N.R.) 899; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 278; 14 L. J., C. P. 129; 9 Jur. 164.

Where the object which the vendees of an estate had in view by their purchase was to acquire for themselves votes, for the purpose of multiplying votes for the election of members of parliament, and such object was known and acquiesced in by the vendor's solicitor, but it did not appear that the vendor knew what was the object of the vendees or that he had any intention, by the sale of the estate, so to multiply votes:—Held, that the case did not fall within 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 25, s. 7. Hoyland v. Bremner, 2 C. B. 84; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 381; 15 L. J., C. P. 133; 10 Jur. 36; Barr. & Arn. 611.

A conveyance made for a bonâ fide consideration, in trust, as to one-tenth, for the grantor himself, and, as to the other nine-tenths, for certain other parties, who amongst themselves contributed nine-tenths of the purchase-money, is not within 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 25, s. 7, notwithstanding the avowed object of the grantor is to multiply, and of the other parties to acquire, the right of voting. Thornley v. Aspland, 2 C. B. 160; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 423.

A bonâ fide grant of a rent-charge by a man to his son and his son-in law, expressed to be made for a nominal consideration only, is not within 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 25, s. 7, though all the parties contemplated the creation of votes. Newton v. Crowley Overseers, 2 C. B. 207.

A conveyance of land by one vendor to several vendees, for a bonâ fide consideration, is valid, although the avowed object of the vendor is to multiply, and that of the vendees to acquire, the right of voting. Alexander v. Newman, 2 C. B. 122; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 404; 15 L. J., C. P. 134; 10 Jur. 313; Barr. & Arn. 657.

A conveyance made to carry into effect a real bonâ fide contract of sale, where the purchase-money is paid and the possession taken, without any secret reservation or trust whatever for the benefit of the seller, is not within 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 25, s. 7, notwithstanding it is made with a view to the multiplying of votes, or the splitting of freeholds; the intention of the statute being to avoid such conveyances only, made with that view, as are in themselves fraudulent and collusive. Riley v. Crossley, 2 C. B. 146; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 420; 15 L. J., C. P. 144; 10 Jur. 316; Barr. & Arn. 682.

A conveyance made by a father to his two sons, in consideration of natural love and affection, and with the object of multiplying votes, is not void, if fraud in fact is not found by the revising barrister. Newton v. Hargreaves, 2 C. B. 163; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 424; 15 L. J., C. P. 154; 10 Jur. 317; Barr. & Arn. 690.

A conveyance of property by a father to his son to give him a qualification to vote, is not invalid, but is a bounty. May v. May, 33 Beav. 81.

The question, whether the circumstances attending a conveyance or a grant amount to fraud or not, is a question of fact for the revising barrister to determine, and is not one which the court can entertain upon appeal. Newton v. Mobberley Overseers, 2 C. B. 203; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 427; 15 L. J., C. P. 154; 10 Jur. 318; Barr. & Arn. 695.

Under 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 25, s. 7, and 10 Ann. c. 23, s. 1, a fraudulent conveyance executed for the mere purpose of conferring a vote is void only to the extent of preventing the right of voting from being acquired, but is valid and effectual as between the parties to it to pass the interest. Phillpotts v. Phillpotts, 10 C. Whether Occupation Joint or Several.]—In the list of borough voters made out by the over-seers, pursuant to 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 13, it is not necessary that it should appear whether the occupation is joint or sole. Daniel v. Camplin, 8 Scott (N.R.) 999; 7 Man. & G. 167; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 264; 14 L. J., C. P. 121; 9 Jur. 403; Barr. & Arn. 425.

Parish Partly in Two Parliamentary Divisions — Constitution of Parish for Poor-law Purposes—Deeping Fen Drainage Act, 1856.]—The effect of the Deeping Fen Drainage Act, 1856, was to constitute Deeping St. Nicholas a separate parish for poor-law purposes only, so that the name of a voter who had a qualification in respect of premises occupied by him in that part of such parish locally in Kesteven, and in the petty sessional division of Bourne, was rightly retained on division 1 of the occupiers' list for the South Kesteven or Stamford parliamentary division of Lincolnshire. Sect. 9 and schedule 17 of the Redistribution of Seats Act, 1885, control and override the general provisions of s. 18 of the same act. Skinn v. Phillips, Fox, 386.

Description of Voter's Place of Abode.]—In a register of county voters, the place of abode of a voter is only required to be stated where he has one in the United Kingdom. Walther v. Payne, 2 C. B. 12; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 324; 15 L. J., C. P. 38; 9 Jur. 1014; Barr. & Arn. 541.

Travelling abroad is a sufficient description in the column marked "Place of Abode." Ib.

Description of Qualification in Case of Successive Occupation.] — See Burton v. Gery, col. 10.

As to Misdescriptions of Qualifying Property and of Nature of Qualification, and other Errors in Preparation of Lists.] — See cases, post, A. 1, g. (col. 93).

Indictment against Overseer—Wilful Breach of Duty.]—An indictment will not lie against an overseer for wilful breaches of the duties imposed upon him by the Registration Act of 1843, in preparing and publishing voters' lists, inasmuch as for every such breach of duty—the duties being new duties created or re-created by the statute—a special tribunal is created by s. 51 of the act, and a penal action given by s. 97, which excludes the remedy by indictment. Reg. v. Hall, 60 L. J., M. C. 124; [1891] 1 Q. B. 747; 64 L. T. 394; 17 Cox, C. C. 278.

Wilfully Inserting Unqualified Persons in List of Voters.]—In an action against an overseer for a penalty under 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 76, for wilfully inserting in the list of voters the names of persons not entitled to vote, it is not essential that he should have acted from any corrupt motive; it is sufficient if he has acted wilfully. Turr v. McGahey, 7 Car. & P. 380.

Signature of List by Overseers.]—The 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 13, which enacts, that the overseers of every parish in a borough shall make out certain lists of voters, and shall sign such lists, is, as to the signing, directory only; and therefore a list made out by the overseers is valid, though unsigned. Morgan v. Parry, 17 C. B. 334; 25 L. J., C. P. 141; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 285; 4 W. R. 286.

Publication—What Sufficient.]—C. was entitled to be and was placed by the overseers upon the list of persons qualified to vote for the county by reason of the occupation of lands or tenements of the rateable value of 12*l*. or upwards per annum. This list, which was headed "Voters as occupiers of rateable value of 12*l*. or upwards," was printed alphabetically after the list of persons entitled to vote in respect of property in the parish, and was signed at the end by the overseers: but the printer by mistake, on the sheet which commenced with C.'s name, inserted the heading applicable to the preceding list, viz., "List of persons entitled to vote in respect of property." The overseers published the list as printed. There was no evidence that any person had in fact been misled. The revising barrister decided that there had not been a publication of the list as a 12*l*. list; and that the interpolated heading was not "a misnomer of a thing so denominated as to be commonly understood," within 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 101; and he therefore expunged the name of C. and all the names which followed his upon the list. The court, on appeal, reversed his decision; and held that there had been a sufficient publication of this part of the list as a 12*l*. list. Mather v. Allendale Overseers, 40 L. J., C. P. 76; L. R. 6 C. P. 272; 23 L. T. 539; 19 W. R. 284; 1 Hopw. & C. 461.

Parish Church — Duty of Overseer where Parishes have been united for Ecclesiastical Purposes.]—Notices and lists under the Registration Act, 1843, must, by s. 23, where there is no parish church, be published in some public and conspicuous place within the parish. Where, in the city of London, the church of parish A. has been pulled down, and the benefice united for ecclesiastical purposes alone with that of parish B., whilst the respective parishes continue to exist as separate and distinct, with separate parish officers, the overseer of parish A. is not bound or entitled under the section to affix such notices relating exclusively to his parish to the door of the church of parish B., but must find some public and conspicuous place for their publication in parish A. The removal of such notices by the incumbent of the united benefice from the door of the church of parish B. is not an offence within s. 25. Hildred v. Ingram, 64 L. J., M. C. 57.

Overseers ought to Publish List as Received from Clerk of the Peace.]—See Nosewortlhy v. Buckland-in-the-Moor, col. 91.

Late Publication of Claims by Overseer.]—An overseer received claims in due times from occupiers and from lodgers not already on the register, but published a list of them some days after the time specified in the 2nd schedule, part 2 of the Registration Act, 1885: —Held, that this did not invalidate the lists, and that the revising barrister was right in accepting and revising them. Wells v. Stanforth, 55 L. J., Q. B. 12; 16 Q. B. D. 244; 54 L. T. 183; 50 J. P. 631; Colt. 451.

Declaration as to Misdescription in List.]—A declaration by a person entered on a list of voters as to a misdescription in such list cannot be received as evidence by a revising barrister, unless it has been sent within the statutory times to the town clerk or clerk of the peace. Duking v. Fraser, Colt. 455; 55 L. J., Q. B. 11; 16 Q. B. D. 252; 34 W. R. 366—D.

Notice of Lodger's Claim to be on List not sent in in Time.]—See Whitwell v. North Riding, col. 76.

Expenses.]—By 54 Vict. c. 18, half the registration expenses in respect of a parish in a parliamentary borough, not also municipal, are to be paid out of the county fund, and half out of the parish poor-rate.

By 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 55, all expenses incurred by the town clerk of a borough in carrying into effect the provisions of the act shall be defrayed out of the poor-rate in the several parishes. On a mandamus to the guardians of the poor of a parish to pay the sum certified by the town council as the contribution of their parish towards defraying the expenses so incurred:—Held, that the town clerk was not entitled to remuneration for personal attendance and trouble in the performance of the duties imposed upon him by the act. Reg. v. St. Mary, Kingston-on-Hull Governors, 2 El. & Bl. 182; 22 L. J., Q. B. 324; 17 Jur. 914.

The town clerk of a borough is not entitled under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 55, to be paid out of the poor-rates for copying and arranging the lists of voters for the parish in a borough; and if he employs and pays another to do this work when it might be done by himself and his usual staff of clerks, he is not entitled to be reimbursed; and the officers of any parish making such payment to the town clerk are liable to be surcharged the amount by the auditor. Reg. v. Allday, 7 El. & Bl. 799; 26 L. J., Q. B. 292; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 961; 5 W. R. 625.

But see 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 31.

The London County Council is the proper authority to certify under 6 Vict. c. 18, s. 55, for the costs of the returning officer who prepares the register of parliamentary voters for the parliamentary borough of Deptford (transferred by s. 40 of the Local Government Act, 1888, to London), notwithstanding s. 92 of the latter act, which retains it in the county of Kent for county parliamentary purposes. "Occupation voters" in sub-s. 2 of s. 92, means county occupation voters and not those for a parliamentary borough. Weller v. Collins, 54 J. P. 441.

Register not Final until Signed and Delivered to Sheriff.]—The alphabetical printed lists of voters for a county do not constitute the final and true register of persons entitled to vote, until they have been signed and delivered by the clerk of the peace to the sheriff. Brumfitt v. Brenner, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 1; K. & G. 352; 30 L. J., C. P. 33; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 371; 3 L. T. 375; 9 W. R. 144.

There may be cases in which the clerk of the peace is authorised to make correction of a mistake in the printed lists before signing and delivering them, and the document, when so corrected and signed and delivered, will be the final and true register. Ib.

The 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 47, so far as it requires the delivery to the sheriff to be made before the 30th November, is directory only, and failure to comply with it does not avoid the register. Ib.

In revising the lists of voters for a county, the barrister, by inadvertence, drew his pen through the name of A., which he did not intend to strike out. Discovering his error, he partially effaced the obliterating mark, and did not place his initials against the line in the margin, which by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 41, he should have done, if he had intended an alteration. In printing the lists to form the register for the ensuing year, the clerk of the peace, assuming that A.'s name had been expunged by the revising barrister, omitted it, and a few copies of the printed book were sold before the error was discovered. Having his attention called to the blunder, the clerk of the peace corrected it by causing a fresh leaf to be printed, inserting A.'s name in the proper place, with the consecutive number prefixed to it, with the addition of the letter A., thus: "5638 A." and sent copies of the newly-printed leaf to the purchasers of the before-mentioned so-called copies, requesting them to substitute it for the corresponding leaf in the book so sold to them. The clerk of the peace afterwards signed and delivered to the sheriff the book as corrected:—Held, that the book so signed and delivered to the sheriff was the register for the year, and consequently that a notice of objection signed by A. was a good notice. Ib.

Examined Copy of Register Admissible in Evidence.]—The register of voters at a parliamentary election is a document of such a public nature as to be admissible in evidence upon its mere production by the returning officer, and therefore an examined or a certified copy of it is also admissible. Reed v. Lamb, 6 H. & N. 75; 29 L. J., Ex. 452; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 828.

Jurisdiction of High Court over List.]—The court has no general jurisdiction to interfere with the lists of voters in cases in which no appeal lies under the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18. Allen, In re, 6 C. B. (N.S.) 234; K. & G. 258; 28 L. J., C. P. 256; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1011; 7 W. R. 397.

The name of a voter appeared in the list of voters for a borough, and also in the list for the county. His qualification in respect of the latter being objected to, and he not appearing to support his vote, the revising barrister, intending to strike his name out of the county list, by mistake expunged it from the borough list:—Held, that the court had no power to give him relief, or to make any order under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 67. Ib.

See also B. 1, g. post (col. 162).

Description of Nature of Qualification.]—A claimant to a borough vote in a borough in which there existed both occupation and freehold qualifications, described the nature of his qualification in his notice of claim to the overseers, as "house":—Held, a sufficient description of a qualification in respect of the occupation of a house of the annual value of 10*l.*, but that if necessary for more clearly describing it, the revising barrister had power to amend it by inserting the correct description in the list of voters. Ford v. Boon, 41 L. J., C. P. 28; L. R. 7 C. P. 150; 25 L. T. 830; 20 W. R. 251; 1 Hopw. & C. 668.

The description of the nature of a qualification to vote for a borough as part of a house, is sufficient. Judson v. Luckett, 2 C. B. 197; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 490; 15 L. J., C. P. 163; 10 Jur. 252; Barr. & Arn. 707.

"On the register of voters for the township of M." is sufficient, although, in the form given in 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, schedule (A.), No. 5 (repealed), the word "parish" only is used. Gudsby v. Warburton, 7 Man. & G. 11; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 136; 8 Scott (N.R.) 775; 14 L. J., C. P. 41; 9 Jur. 17; Barr. & Arn. 272.

A 12*l.* occupier served upon the overseers on the 25th of August, a notice of a claim as follows:—"I claim to be inserted on the list of voters for the division of East Devonshire"; and in the third column "the nature of qualification" was stated to be "Land, as occupier":—Held, a good notice under 31 & 32 Vict. c. 58, s. 17 (repealed), and 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 15. Firth v. Widdicombe-in-the-Moor Overseers, 41 L. J., C. P. 38; L. R. 7 C. P. 172; 25 L. T. 833; 20 W. R. 234; 1 Hopw. & C. 653.

In a notice of claim to be inserted in a list of voters for a city or borough, pursuant to 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 15, schedule (B.), No. 6, it is enough to describe the nature of the qualification in the third column of the form as a house, notwithstanding the qualification in reality consists in the occupation of two houses in immediate succession, provided the whole qualification is accurately described in the fourth column. Hitchins or Hutchins v. Brown, 2 C. B. 25; 15 L. J., C. P. 38; 9 Jur. 1058.

In the statement of a claim to vote, on the list of claimants for a county, it is sufficient for a party, claiming in respect of occupancy of a farm as tenant liable to a 50*l.* rent, to fill up the third column with "Farm as occupier," and the fourth with "Cambridge-road," the farm being there situate. Howitt v. Stephens, K. & G. 183; 5 C. B. (N.S.) 30; 28 L. J., C. P. 105; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 123; 7 W. R. 55.

In a claim for a county vote in respect of an undivided fifty-first part of a freehold fee-farm rent, arising from an assignment of land-tax, it is sufficient if the nature of the qualification be stated as "freehold fee-farm"; or at any rate it is competent for the barrister to amend, by prefixing the words "one undivided fifty-first part of and in," as he does not thereby alter the qualification. Cooper v. Ashfield, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 16; K. & G. 200; 28 L. J., C. P. 35; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 293.

Description of Qualifying Property.]—If the rent-charge is charged upon two properties, out of one of which, by itself, enough issues to give the claimant the franchise in point of amount, but out of the other not enough, it is sufficient to state, in the fourth column of claim, the name of the owner of the first-mentioned property only. Ib.

The directions given at the head of the form of notice of claim in schedule (A.) (repealed), of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, intend, that, if the qualifying property is a house, &c., in a street or lane, or other like place in a parish, the street or lane shall be mentioned, and if the houses are numbered, the number also shall be given; but that, if the house, &c., is not in a street or lane, or other like place, but in a road, or upon a common or the like, then the name of the property shall be given, if known by any, or the name of the occupying tenant. Eckersley v. Barker, 8 Scott (N.R.) 899; 7 Man. & G. 76; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 287; 14 L. J., C. P. 65; Barr. & Arn. 334; 9 Jur. 331.

See Hitchins v. Brown, and Howitt v. Stephens, supra.

As to Power of Revising Barrister to amend Claim.]—See cases, post, A. 1, g. (col. 98).

Agent Authorised to Sign Notice of Claim—Power to Delegate Authority.]—The appellant had signed a printed authority to an agent to claim a vote for him and to sign his, the appellant's, name, and to appear and support the claim. The agent delegated his authority to a clerk in his employment to sign the claim. Objection was taken, and the revising barrister expunged the claimant's name, on the grounds that the agent had no power to delegate the authority, and that he was not satisfied that the claimant had given due notice of his claim or proved it, as under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 15, s. 38:—Held, that the claim was good, and the signature by the clerk of the agent under his instruction was the same as though the agent himself had signed it. Brown v. Tombs, 60 L. J., Q. B. 38; [1891] 1 Q. B. 253; 64 L. T. 114; Fox, 196; 55 J. P. 359.

Notice of Claim—To whom to be Directed.] A parish was divided into four districts, popularly known as, though not legally, townships; one of the overseers of such parish, together with an assistant overseer, undertaking the exclusive management of one of these so-called townships. In that capacity, each of such overseers respectively published a separate notice, requiring persons entitled to vote in respect of property situate within his so-called township to send in their claims to him and the assistant overseer. A notice of claim directed "To the overseers of the township of A." is sufficient, as being a description which must have been commonly understood to apply to the overseers of the parish in which such township was situated. Elliott v. St. Mary Within Overseers, 4 C. B. 76; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 575; 16 L. J., C. P. 101; 11 Jur. 69.

Lodger's Claim dated before Expiration of Qualifying Period.]—A person entered in respect of lodgings on a register of voters for the time being in force, and desirous of being entered on the next register in respect of the same lodgings, sent to the overseers within the time prescribed for that purpose a notice of his claim in form H. No. 2, schedule 3, of the Registration Act, 1885, in which the declaration and attestation of his residence during the qualifying period were both dated six days before its expiration, and the overseers entered his name on the "old lodger" list without adding the words "objected to":—Held, that the notice of claim was bad, and that the claimant's name must be erased from the list. Jones v. Kent, 58 L. J., Q. B. 106; 22 Q. B. D. 204; 60 L. T. 320; 37 W. R. 303; Fox, 109.

Lodger's Claim not Signed by Claimant.]—A lodger's claim to be admitted to the parliamentary franchise must (if he can write) be signed or marked by his own hand; and in such case, if his name be subscribed to the claim by another person, at the request and in presence of the claimant, it is insufficient. Hanbidge v. Beveridge, 26 L. R., Ir. 423—C. A.

Lodger Claim—Attesting Witness not present at time of Signature.]—Under the Parliamentary and Municipal Registration Act, 1878, schedule H. (2), a form of declaration is required to be signed and dated each year by a claimant for registration on the old lodger list of voters. To this form is attached an attestation clause running as follows: "I, the undersigned, hereby declare that I have witnessed the above signature of the above-named [claimant], at the date stated above, and that I believe the claim to be correct.—Dated the day of . (Signed) C. D.":—Held, that under this form of attestation the witness must himself see the claimant sign, and must attest the claim in his presence, so that attestation subsequent to the signing, even though made at the claimant's request and upon an acknowledgment by him of his signature, is insufficient. Body v. Halse, 61 L. J., Q. B. 57; [1892] 1 Q. B. 203; 66 L. T. 499; 40 W. R. 206; Fox, 240.

Attestation Clause not Dated—Power to Amend.]—When a notice of claim was dated at the foot of the notice only, but was not also dated in the attestation clause, such double dating being required by schedule 3, form H. Registration Act, 1878 (48 Vict. c. 15), s. 18:—Held, that the mistake was such as the revising barrister had no power to amend under the Registration Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. 26), s. 28, sub-s. 2. Smith v. Chandler, 58 L. J., Q. B. 103; 22 Q. B. D. 208; 60 L. T. 327; 37 W. R. 351; 53 J. P. 199; Fox, 129.

Description of Witness to Lodger Claim.]—Where the witness to a claim for the lodger franchise described himself therein as "agent," he being, in fact, a registration agent, and the revising barrister amended accordingly, although holding the original description sufficient:—Held, that the description of "agent" was sufficient. Campbell v. Chambers, 22 L. R., Ir. 460—C. A.

Alteration of Claim without Claimant's Authority.]—A lodger claim and declaration cannot without the knowledge and authority of the claimant be altered after it is duly signed and attested. Gallagher v. Hay, 32 L. R., Ir. 166—C. A.

Service of, by Post.]—The production of a stamped duplicate notice of claim duly delivered to the postmaster, and directed to the overseers, is sufficient evidence of the notice of claim having been given to the overseers, at the place mentioned in such duplicate, on the day on which such notice would, in the ordinary course of post, have been delivered at such place, notwithstanding its actual delivery to the overseer is delayed until after the time limited by the act in consequence of pressure of business at the post-office. Bayley v. Nantwich Overseers, 2 C. B. 118; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 363.

Service on Sunday.]—Where the 20th of July falls on a Sunday, service of a notice of claim, by leaving it at the overseer's place of abode on that day, is good service. Rawlins v. West Derby Overseers, 2 C. B. 72; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 373; 15 L. J., C. P. 70; 10 Jur. 268; Barr. & Arn. 599.

Notice of Claim delivered out of time.]—Where the notice of a claim to be placed on the old lodgers' list has not been sent in to the overseers on or before the date prescribed by s. 22 of the Municipal and Parliamentary Registration Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. 26), the revising barrister has no jurisdiction to entertain such claim. Whitwell v. North Riding Clerk of the Peace, 59 L. J., Q. B. 96; 61 L. T. 811; Fox, 152; 54 J. P. 263.

Late Publication of Claim by Overseer.]—See Wells v. Stanforth, col. 71.

Signature of Claimant—Jurisdiction of Revising Barrister to inquire as to.]—If a notice of claim be received by the town clerk of a borough, and the claimant's name is duly inserted in the list of claimants, it is not competent to the revising barrister to inquire into the circumstances under which the claimant's signature was attached to the notice of claim. M'Gregor v. Chambers, Brown's Case, [1894] 2 Ir. R. 129—C. A.

See Leonard v. Alloways, and Davis v. Hopkins, col. 102.

New Claim where Change of Occupation.]—See Burton v. Gery, col. 10.

No new Claim where Change of Residence.] See Nagle v. Campbell, col. 41.

f. Notice of Objections.

See also B. 1, h. post (col. 162).

i. Form of.

Must Specify Grounds.]—A notice of objection sent to a voter on the list of 12*l.* occupiers for a county must specify the grounds of objection according to the provisions of 28 & 29 Vict. c. 36, s. 6. Bennett v. Brunyate, Alderson's Case, 38 L. J., C. P. 65; L. R. 4 C. P. 407; 19 L. T. 283; 17 W. R. 202; 1 Hopw. & C. 80.

On Ground of Poor-law Relief.]—A notice of objection stating that the objection is grounded on any of the columns of the register is insufficient, where the ground of objection is that the person objected to had received poor-law relief during the qualifying period. Quinlan v. M'Carthy, 28 L. R., Ir. 246—C. A.

Where Objection is for Non-residence—Power of Amendment.]—By the Reform Act, 1832 (2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 45), s. 32, no freeman of a city or borough is entitled to be registered as a parliamentary voter in any year unless "he shall have resided for six calendar months next previous to the last day of July (now by the Parliamentary and Municipal Registration Act (41 & 42 Vict. c. 26), s. 7, 15th of July), in such year within such city or borough or within seven statute miles from the place where the poll for such city or borough shall heretofore have been taken." A notice of objection was served on a freeman of Norwich dated August 12, and containing as the ground of objection the statement "That you do not reside at 12, Clifton Street, Norwich." The revising barrister held that the notice was sufficient, but amended it by substituting in it the words "That you have not resided at 12, Clifton Street, Norwich, for six calendar months next preceding the 15th day of July last, and that you have not throughout that period resided within the city of Norwich or seven miles thereof":—Held, that the notice was bad, that the defect in it was not a "mistake" within the meaning of the Parliamentary and Municipal Registration Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. 26), s. 28, sub-s. 2, and that the revising barrister had no power to amend. Bridges v. Miller, 57 L. J., Q. B. 125; 20 Q. B. D. 287; 58 L. T. 405; 36 W. R. 509; Fox, 47; 52 J. P. 518.

Where Objection is that Voter is on County List for a Borough Qualification.]—A notice of objection to a voter on the register of county voters, stated that the objection was grounded on the third column, and that it related to the nature of his interest in the qualifying property. The objection sought to be proved was, that the qualifying property, being situate within a parliamentary borough, was such and so occupied as to give the right of voting for the borough:—Held, a sufficient notice of objection within the terms of 28 Vict. c. 36, s. 6. Simey v. Dixon, 41 L. J., C. P. 18; L. R. 7 C. P. 190; 25 L. T. 811; 20 W. R. 238; 1 Hopw. & C. 626.

Where the Notice is of an Objection as to Nature of Qualification, an Objection that Qualifying Property is misdescribed should not be entertained.]—See Smith v. Woolston, col. 102.

No Objection to be entertained without Notice that does not appear on the face of the Register.] — See Smith v. James and Warren v. Maule, col. 102.

Date.]—Where a notice of objection to a person on the list of voters for any county is delivered to overseers and is defective under the Parliamentary Registration Act, 1843, s. 7, the defect is not cured by the publication by the overseers, under s. 18, of the name of the person objected to. The omission of a part of the date from such a notice is a defect which invalidates it, and cannot be amended. Freeman v. Newman, 53 L. J., Q. B. 108; 12 Q. B. D. 373; 51 L. T. 396; 32 W. R. 246; Colt. 342.

A notice of objection, dated of the day and month without the year, is insufficient. Beenlen v. Huckin, 4 C. B. 19; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 526; 16 L. J., C. P. 49; 10 Jur. 1059. See Jones v. Jones, post, col. 86.

Direction of Notice.]—A person on the list of voters for the city of Rochester, in the county of Kent, was described therein as of Canal-road, Frindsbury. A notice of objection sent to him, directed as above, with the addition of the words "Rochester, Kent," is properly directed. Cotton v. Prall, Akenhead's Case, 36 L. J., C. P. 67; L. R. 2 C. P. 86; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 1018; 15 L. T. 468; 15 W. R. 223; H. & P. 335.

So a person on the list of voters for the city of Rochester, in the county of Kent, was described therein as of St. Margaret, Rochester, and a notice of objection sent to him, directed "Cazeneuve-street, St. Margaret, Rochester, Kent," is properly directed. Cotton v. Prall, Frankenstein's Case, 12 Jur. (N.S.) 1019; 15 L. T. 468.

Description of Voter objected to.]—A notice of objection, under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 17, was in the following form: "To Mr. Sidney Rice Force. I hereby give you notice, that I object to the name of Force Sidney Rice being retained," &c.:—Held, that the voter objected to was sufficiently described, and, if not, that the inaccuracy was cured by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 101. Force v. Flood, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 543; H. & P. 56; 33 L. J., C. P. 71; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 134; 9 L. T. 508; 12 W. R. 174.

In a borough which had been divided into polling districts a notice of objection served on a voter omitted to state the particular polling district to which such voter belonged:—Held, that the notice of objection was bad. Kenny v. Keneally, [1895] 2 Ir. R. 544—C. A.

A notice of objection specified the voter objected to by name and by his number on a specified list, but omitted to state the voter's parish as required by the statutory form:—Held, that the omission having been found to be a bonâ fide mistake and not misleading, the revising barrister was entitled to amend the notice by putting in the name of the parish, and had rightly done so. Sandford v. Beal, 65 L. J., Q. B. 73; 73 L. T. 406; 1 Smith, 1.

"Take notice, that I object to your name being retained in the list of voters for the parish of St. Thomas, New Sarum, in the southern division of the county of Wilts," is a sufficient notice, to the person addressed, of objection to his vote for the county, being either to the like effect as the form given, within s. 7, or "so as to be commonly understood," within 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 101. Lambert v. St. Thomas, New Sarum, Overseers, 12 C. B. 643; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 222; 22 L. J., C. P. 31; 17 Jur. 3.

Abode of Voter.]—A notice of objection to a borough voter, sent by post, need not, on the face of it, show the voter's place of abode. Barclay v. Parrott, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 49; 26 L. J., C. P. 77; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 672; 5 W. R. 75.

Whether List of Voters, in which Name objected to appears, sufficiently specified—

Power to Amend.]—A notice of objection given to overseers was to the names "in the Blockhouse List," "division 1." There are three lists of parliamentary voters for the Blockhouse:—firstly, householders and occupiers; secondly, freemen; and, thirdly, lodgers; but the only one of these which is divided is the first:—Held, that the notice did, at all events, sufficiently specify the list, to which the objection referred, to authorise an amendment by the revising barrister under s. 28, sub-s. 2 of 41 & 42 Vict. c. 26. Bollen v. Southall, 54 L. J., Q. B. 589; 15 Q. B. D. 461; 34 W. R. 45; Colt. 368; 49 J. P. 119.

The notice of objection to a county voter sent to the overseers and the voter, respectively, need not state whether the name of the voter is on the list of voters entitled to vote in respect of the franchises existing before 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, or on the list of 12*l.* occupiers made out by the overseers under the provisions of that act. Chorlton v. Johnson, Ree's Case, 38 L. J., C. P. 39; L. R. 4 C. P. 400; 19 L. T. 530; 17 W. R. 119; 1 Hopw. & C. 54.

A.'s name appeared on the list of persons entitled to vote for a borough in respect of property occupied within it. There was another list of persons entitled to vote in respect of rights other than those conferred by the Reform Act, amongst whom were "potwallers." A notice of objection served upon A., under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 17, following the form (11), schedule (B.), except that, after the words "entitled to vote," which occur there, were inserted the words "as householder," was not vitiated thereby. Allen v. House, 7 Man. & G. 157; 8 Scott (N.R.) 987; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 255; 14 L. J., C. P. 79; 9 Jur. 230.

The note at the foot of the form No. 10, in schedule (B.), to 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18 (the form of notice of objection to be given to overseers in cities and boroughs), states, "If more than one list of voters, the notice of objection should specify the list to which the objection refers":—Held, that this note applies only to those cases where the overseers make out more than one list, and, therefore, is not applicable to the city of London, where the overseers make out only the list of householders, the list of freemen being made out by the secondary. Quigley's Case, 8 Scott (N.R.) 954; 7 Man. & G. 127; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 235; 14 L. J., C. P. 60; 9 Jur. 113; Barr. & Arn. 386.

There being two lists of voters for a city, prepared by the overseers of the parish of C., viz. the list of 10*l.* occupiers and the list of voters under the reserved rights, the following notice to the overseers sufficiently specifies the former list:—"To the overseers of C. I give you notice that I object to the name of J. A. being retained on the list of persons entitled under the Reform Act to vote for the city of W." Huggett v. Lewis, 15 C. B. 245; 24 L. J., C. P. 38; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 19; 3 W. R. 109.

Notices of objection given in the forms of the Parliamentary and Municipal Registration Act, 1878 (41 & 42 Vict. c. 26), schedule form I., satisfy the requirements of the note to those forms that they "should specify the list to which the objection refers," by specifying such list with regard to the various kinds of franchise, e.g. the list of freeholders, occupiers or lodgers, and need not specify the particular parochial list to which the objection refers. Mordlock v. Farrer, Hall v. Grapper, 49 L. J., C. P. 160; 5 C. P. D. 73; 41 L. T. 470; 28 W. R. 395.

Description of Objector's Place of Abode.]—A notice of objection, giving the true place of abode of the objector, that being another and different place from that inserted against his name on the list of voters, is sufficient. Knowles v. Brooking, 2 C. B. 226; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 461; 15 L. J., C. P. 197; 10 Jur. 289.

A notice of objection describing the place of abode of the objector in the same way as it was described upon the register of voters, thus: "Poplar-grove, Didsbury"; adding "on the register of voters for the township of Manchester," is sufficient. Gadsby v. Warburton, 7 Man. & G. 11; 8 Scott (N.R.) 775; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 136; 14 L. J., C. P. 41; 9 Jur. 17; Barr. & Arn. 272.

In a notice of objection to a county voter, the objector described himself as "J. B., of 'The Oaks,' on the register of voters for the parish of S. W." In the fourth column of the list of voters for that parish the objector's name appeared, and the description of his qualification was then stated as "The Oaks":—Held, that such notice of objection and list of voters could not be coupled together for the purpose of ascertaining the objector's place of abode; and that the description as of "The Oaks," without stating any parish or other known locality, was insufficient, and the notice of objection, therefore, bad. Woollett v. Davis, 4 C. B. 115; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 607; 16 L. J., C. P. 185; 11 Jur. 477.

The notice of objection served upon the appellant omitted to state the place of residence of the objector, but described him as "on the list of parliamentary voters for the borough of H." There was no other person of the same name on that list, and the objector was well known, being both clerk to the magistrates and coroner. It was found as a fact that no one had been misled by the omission to state the place of residence, and the revising barrister amended the notice by inserting it:—Held, that the omission was a mistake within the meaning of 41 & 42 Vict. c. 26, s. 28, sub-s. 2, and that he was justified in amending it. Adams v. Bostock, 51 L. J., Q. B. 175; 8 Q. B. D. 259; 45 L. T. 443; 30 W. R. 460; Colt. 275; 46 J. P. 136.

Where notices of objection to certain county voters were signed "John Badgery, Burnard's-terrace, on the register of electors for the township of Bodmin borough," without stating that Burnard's-terrace was situated in Bodmin, the revising barrister finding as a fact that nobody had been misled by the omission:—Held, that the description of the objector's place of abode was sufficient to satisfy the Registration Order, 1889, forms 5 (A.) and (B.) Hicks v. Stokes, [1893] 1 Q. B. 124; 5 R. 96; 41 W. R. 123; Fox, 303; 57 J. P. 678.

A notice of objection to a county vote was signed: "G. C., of Churchyard, on the list of parliamentary voters for the parish of Petersfield":—Held, that the place of abode of the objector was insufficiently described under the Registration Act, 1885 (48 Vict. c. 15), s. 18 schedule 2 form I. No. 2. Humphrey v. Earle, 57 L. J., Q. B. 124; 20 Q. B. D. 294; 58 L. T. 403; 36 W. R. 510; Fox, 39; 52 J. P. 518.

A notice of objection was signed:—"F. N. (place of abode as described on the register): 22, Southampton-street, Bloomsbury, London, W.C. (present place of abode): 110, Guildford-street, Russell-street, W.C." There is only one Guildford-street in the Western Central Postal District of London, and the objector lived there, but there is no Russell-street near it:—Held, that "London" might be supplied in the second address from the preceding one, and "Russell-street" rejected as surplusage, and that the notice was therefore sufficient. Norris v. Pilcher, 38 L. J., C. P. 69; L. R. 4 C. P. 417; 19 L. T. 563; 17 W. R. 225; 1 Hopw. & C. 173.

A notice of objection to a voter for a borough was in the following form:—"To Mr. C. S., 1, Olney-place. Take notice, I object to your name being retained on the list of voters for the parish of Cheltenham. (Signed) J. F., of No. 5, Sherbourne-street, on the list of voters for the parish of Cheltenham:"—Held, that the description of the objector's place of abode, No. 5, Sherbourne-street, meant Sherborne-street, Cheltenham, and was sufficient. Sheldon v. Flutcher, 5 C. B. 14; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 11; 17 L. J., C. P. 34; 11 Jur. 949.

Whether a notice of objection designates on the face of it an objector's place of abode, is a question of law. Ib.

Whether such designation is sufficiently particular, is a question of fact. Ib.

In a notice of objection, the objector describing himself as of "No. 398, High-street, Cheltenham, on the register of voters for the parish of Cirencester," and on the register so referred to the objector was described as of Cheltenham only, the notice is sufficient. Prwen v. Cox, 2 C. B. 1; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 304; 15 L. J., C. P. 17; 9 Jur. 994; Barr. & Arn. 514.

The person objecting to a vote ought, under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 7, to give or send the notice of objection, signed with his name, and having annexed his true place of abode at the time of signing. Courtis v. Blight, K. & G. 475; 11 C. B. (N.S.) 95; 31 L. J., C. P. 48; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 619; 5 L. T. 450; 10 W. R. 172.

What is his true place of abode is a question of fact rather than of law. Ib.

If he has bonâ fide two places of abode, he may state either in such notice. Ib.

In the notice of objection to a borough voter, as not being entitled to have his name retained on the list of voters, the objector must give his place of abode. Thackway v. Pilcher, 36 L. J., C. P. 73; L. R. 2 C. P. 100; 15 L. T. 443; 15 W. R. 223.

Where the description of the place of abode was that given in the list of voters, and by which the objector might easily be found, though he might be found more easily by a fuller one, it is sufficient. Ib.

An objector described as his place of abode, a place where he had lived, but from which he had recently removed. It was the same as appeared on the register against his name. His new abode was very near to the old one, and being well known in the locality he could easily be found:—Held, that the actual place of abode should have been described, and that the notice was, therefore, insufficient. Culver v. Roberts, 1 Hopw. & C. 616; 25 L. T. 751; 20 W. R. 147.

A party whose name was on the list of voters for the parish of F. A., his place of abode being there described as "F.-street," there being no other person of the same name on the list, served a notice of objection, in which he signed himself as of the parish of F. A., on the list of voters for the parish of F. A.:—Held, sufficient. Wills v. Adey, 2 C. B. 246; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 481; 15 L. J., C. P. 205; Barr. & Arn. 782.

If an objector to a voter for a county has changed his place of abode since the last publication of the register of voters, it is not a sufficient compliance with 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 7, schedule (A.) (repealed), form 5, that he inserts in his notice of objection his place of abode as described on such register; he must state his place of abode at the time of giving the notice. Melbourne v. Greenfield, 7 C. B. (N.S.) 1; K. & G. 261; 29 L. J., C. P. 81; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 510: 1 L. T. 93; 8 W. R. 67.

A misdescription in that respect is not cured by s. 101, that section only applying where there is an inaccuracy or a mistake in the mode of describing that which the party intended to describe. Ib.

The sufficiency of the description of an objector's place of abode in a notice of objection to a county voter, is a question of fact for the revising barrister, to be decided after hearing evidence if necessary. Jones v. Pritchard, 38 L. J., C. P. 67; L. R. 4 C. P. 414; 19 L. T. 563; 17 W. R. 175; 1 Hopw. & C. 91.

An objector in his notice of objection, described his place of abode as Bronygraig (without other description):—Held, that such a description is not bad in law on its face, but that it is matter of evidence for the revising barrister whether it in fact gives the requisite information. Ib.

Whether such place of abode is sufficiently described is a question of fact, on which the finding of the barrister is conclusive. Thackway v. Pilcher, supra.

Whether List of Voters on which Objector's Name appears sufficiently specified—Power to Amend.]—In a notice of objection to a claim to be placed on a list of parliamentary voters, the objector described both the claimant and himself as "on the occupiers' list of parliamentary voters (and county electors or burgesses) for the parish of St. Pancras (southern division)." In consequence of the passing of the County Electors Act (51 & 52 Vict. c. 10), the said occupiers' list was for the first time sub-divided, each sub-list being made out in three divisions, the first containing the names of persons qualified both as parliamentary voters and as county electors, the second of those qualified as parliamentary voters only, and the third of those qualified as county electors only. It being contended that the notice of objection was invalid, inasmuch as it omitted to specify which of the last-mention sub-divisions the objection referred to, the revising barrister held that he had power to amend the notice of objection:—Held, that the revising barrister was right in so holding. Hartley v. Halse, 58 L. J., Q. B. 100; 22 Q. B. D. 200; 60 L. T. 322; 37 W. R. 302; Fox, 118.

A notice of objection was signed: "R. B. on the list of parliamentary voters for the parliamentary borough of Battersea and Clapham." The borough of Battersea and Clapham consists of two divisions, those of Battersea and Clapham, and contains two parishes, those of St. Mary, Battersea, and Clapham. The Battersea division is wholly in the parish of St. Mary, Battersea, the Clapham division is partly in that parish and partly in that of Clapham. The name of the objector was in the list of occupiers for the parish of Clapham in the Clapham division:—Held, that the notice was insufficient, as it did not state the parish on the list of voters for which the objector's name was to be found. Wood v. Chandler, 57 L. J., Q. B. 126; 20 Q. B. D. 297; 36 W. R. 522; Fox, 61; 52 J. P. 520.

A notice of objection to a voter for the city of B., signed by W. T., describing himself as "on the list of voters for the parish of C.," and the objector's name was not on the householders' or freeholders' list for the parish of C., but was upon the general list of freemen of the city, where he was stated to be "of the parish of C.," is insufficient. Tedhall v. Bristol Town Clerk, 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 7; 7 Scott (N.R.) 486; 5 Man. & G. 5; 13 L. J., C. P. 49; 7 Jur. 1041; Barr. & Arn. 8.

The parliamentary borough of Liskeard consists, first, of the municipal borough which is part of the parish of Liskeard; secondly, of so much of the parish of Liskeard as is not within the municipal borough; and thirdly, of the parish of St. Cleer. Each of these places has separate parochial officers and rates, and for the purpose of distinction the first is known as "the borough of Liskeard," and the second is known as "the parish of Liskeard." In a notice of objection to a person on the list of parliamentary voters for the borough, and given under 41 & 42 Vict. c. 26, the objector was described as being "on the list of parliamentary voters for the parish of the borough of Liskeard, Division 1":—Held, that such notice of objection was sufficient, as the borough of Liskeard was a parish as defined by s. 4 of 41 & 42 Vict. c. 26, and the notice followed the words of the form (I.) No. 2, in the schedule to such act. Sargent v. Rodd, 49 L. J., C. P. 195; Colr. 14; 44 J. P. 299.

The borough of Warrington consists of three townships, one being Warrington, each having a separate overseer, and a separate list of voters, the register being composed of the three lists. A notice of objection was signed "S. D. on the list of voters for Golborne-street in the borough of Warrington." The barrister found that there was only one Golborne-street in the borough, and that it was wholly in the township of Warrington; and that the description of the abode given would be commonly understood as designating the list for the township of Warrington:—Held, that the notice was sufficient. Allen v. Warrington Town Clerk, 30 L. J., C. P. 113; L. R. 5 C. P. 291; 22 L. T. 169; 18 W. R. 317; 1 Hopw. & C. 413.

A notice of objection was signed "H. J., of 36, New King-street, on the list of voters for the parish of W." There are two lists of parliamentary voters for the parish of W., viz. List No. 1, Division 1, being the list of persons entitled under the Reform Act, 1832, or by s. 3 of the Representation of the People Act, 1867, and List No. 3, being the list of lodgers under 41 & 42 Vict. c. 26, s. 22. There are also two lists of burgesses for the parish of W. The name of H. J. was on the parliamentary list, No. 1, Division 1. The revising barrister held the notice to be invalid for omitting to state that the objector was on the "parliamentary" list, and also for omitting to define on which of the several lists his name appeared; and that he had no power to amend:—Held, that the objector was not bound to state upon which of the several lists his name appeared; but that it was enough if he followed the words of the note appended to the form (I.) No. 2, in the schedule to 41 & 42 Vict. c. 26. But, semble, that the omission to state that the objector was on one of the "parliamentary" lists was fatal, but was a mistake which the revising barrister had power to amend, and ought to have amended, under s. 28, sub-s. 2. James v. Howarth, 49 L. J., C. P. 169; 5 C. P. D. 225; 28 W. R. 923; Colr. 87; 44 J. P. 554.

When part of a parish is included in one of the polling districts of a county and the other part is in another of such districts, a note of objection to a county voter which describes the objector as on the register of voters for the parish is sufficient, notwithstanding 31 & 32 Vict. c. 58, s. 22, enacts that where a parish forms part of more than one polling district, the part of such parish in each district "shall be deemed to be a separate parish for the purposes of the revision of voters, and the list and register of voters." Charlton v. Tonge Overseers, 41 L. J., C. P. 33; L. R. 7 C. P. 178; 26 L. T. 25; 20 W. R. 338; 1 Hopw. & C. 632.

A county objector described himself as on the register of voters for the township of S. (S. having its own overseers, and being divided into two polling districts):—Held, a sufficient description of the register on which the objector's name was to be found. Ib.

Where there are two lists of voters for a borough, a notice of objection should distinctly state on which list the objector's name appears. Crowther v. Bradney, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 536; H. & P. 63; 33 L. J., C. P. 70; 9 L. T. 444; 12 W. R. 176. S. P., Barton v. Ashley, 2 C. B. 4; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 307; 15 L. J., C. P. 36; Barr. & Arn. 318.

In the borough of Lancaster the register is composed of four separate lists of names, comprising one list for each of the three townships into which the borough is divided, made out by the respective overseers, and a list of freemen made out by the town clerk. A notice of objection, describing the objector, who was on the list of freemen, as being on the list of voters for the borough of Lancaster, is insufficient. Farrer v. Edsworth, 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 517; 4 C. B. 9; 16 L. J., C. P. 132; 10 Jur. 1012.

Held, also, that the defect in the notice was not an inaccurate description, and therefore was not cured by s. 101 of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18. Ib.

In a notice of objection the objector described himself as being "on the list of freemen for the city of C." There were two classes of lists in the city; the one included the list of freemen under the Municipal Corporations Act; the other the list of freemen entitled to vote in the election of members of parliament:—Held, that the notice of objection sufficiently shewed that the objector was a voter on the latter list. Feddon v. Sawyers, 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 246; 12 C. B. 680; 22 L. J., C. P. 15; 17 Jur. 141.

A borough, D., consisted of parishes S. and E. There were two separate lists, one of persons entitled to vote in respect of property in S., and another of persons entitled to vote in respect of property in E. A notice of objection, signed "E. W. C., 69, Durnford-street, in the list of voters for the borough of D. and township of E.," is sufficient. Oram v. Cole, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 1; H. & P. 87; 34 L. J., C. P. 52; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1206; 11 L. T. 451; 13 W. R. 268.

In the parish of St. Paul, Bedford, there are two lists of voters for the borough, called "the ten pound list, or new qualification list," and "the reserved right list." A notice of objection describing the objector, who was on the new qualification list, as being "on the list of voters for the parish of St. Paul," is sufficient. Samuel v. Hitchmough, K. & G. 522; 13 C. B. (N.S.) 3; 32 L. J., C. P. 55; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 414; 7 L. T. 360; 11 W. R. 92.

In the borough of Maldon there are five lists of voters, one of freemen and four of occupiers in different parishes. The name of W. D., the objector, was included in the freemen's list as "W. D., St. Peter's, Maldon," but it was not in the occupiers' list for that parish. Beneath the signature of W. D. was added "Full Bridge-street, St. Peter's, Maldon," and at the foot of the notice, "on the list of voters for the parish of St. Peter, in the borough." It was objected that the notice did not state W. D. was upon the freemen's list:—Held, that the notice was insufficient. Bright v. Dereniah, 36 L. J., C. P. 71; L. R. 2 C. P. 102; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 1019; 15 L. T. 471; 15 W. R. 225.

The parliamentary borough of Penryn consists of six several places, having separate overseers and lists of voters, one of such places being called "the borough of Penryn"; the objector, being on the list for that place, sent a notice of objection to a voter in which he described himself as "on the list of voters for the borough of Penryn":—Held, that the notice of objection sufficiently indicated on which of the six lists the objector was. Moon v. Andrew, 38 L. J., C. P. 97; L. R. 4 C. P. 431; 19 L. T. 452; 1 Hopw. & C. 75.

In a borough there were two lists of voters, one of rated occupiers and the other of voters under the reserved rights, but the latter list contained only one name, which was that of the objector. A notice of objection sent to the overseers omitted to state on which list the name of the person objected to appeared. The overseers knew to which list the notice applied, and were not misled or delayed by the omission. The revising barrister held that the notice was sufficient:—Held, that, under the peculiar circumstances of the case, the court could not say that he was wrong. Aldridge v. Medwin, 38 L. J., C. P. 45; L. R. 4 C. P. 464; 19 L. T. 452; 1 Hopw. & C. 67.

Objector's Signature.]—In a notice of objection in respect of the occupation franchise delivered by the objector to the overseers, it is a sufficient compliance with form I. No. 1 of schedule 2 to the Registration Act, 1885, if the signature of the objector precedes the list of names of persons objected to, instead of following them and appearing at the foot of the list. Sutton v. Wade, 60 L. J., Q. B. 28; [1891] 1 Q. B. 269; 63 L. T. 588; 39 W. R. 223; Fox, 169; 55 J. P. 342.

The notice of objections under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 17, must be signed by the objector himself, and not by his agent. Toms v. Cuming, 8 Scott (N.R.) 910; 7 Man. & G. 88; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 200; 14 L. J., C. P. 67; 9 Jur. 90; Barr. & Arn. 347.

The question, whether or not a notice of objection signed by a party whose name is spelt incorrectly on the list of voters is sufficient, is one of fact only, and therefore, not one upon which a case can be submitted to the court. Hinton v. Hinton, 8 Scott (N.R.) 995; 7 Man. & G. 163; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 259; 14 L. J., C. P. 58; 9 Jur. 91; Barr. & Arn. 421.

Leonard Sedgwick being on a county register of voters for a parish, where the entry stood thus:—"Sedgwick, Leonard, M.A.—Fenecote Hall, freehold house and land, the hall," in his usual mode of signature, signed a notice of objection to a claimant to vote in such a way, that though the christian name Leonard was legible the surname was nearly illegible, being found by the revising barrister not to be decipherable by a person unacquainted with the objector's mode of signing his name, by ordinary diligence, and without recourse to the entry on the register of the objector's name, or other extraneous assistance:—Held, that whether the object of the statute, in requiring a signature to a notice of objection was merely to authenticate the document, or whether it was to give information to the objectee and to the revising barrister, the signature was sufficient. Sedgwick v. Trevor, K. & G. 534; 13 C. B. (N.S.) 30; 32 L. J., C. P. 60; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 603.

The usual signature of the objector was engraved upon a stamp, and this stamp was impressed by the objector himself upon the notice of objection:—Held, that the notice of objection was properly signed by the person objecting, under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 17. Bennett v. Brumfitt, 37 L. J., C. P. 25; L. R. 3 C. P. 28; 17 L. T. 213; 16 W. R. 131; H. & P. 407.

To prove that the notice of objection, retained by the postmaster under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 100, in order to be sent to a claimant, was signed by the hand of the objector, it is enough to produce the duplicate notice of objection signed by the objector, and stamped by the postmaster. Lewis v. Roberts, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 23; K. & G. 402; 31 L. J., C. P. 51; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 485; 5 L. T. 351; 10 W. R. 80.

A notice of objection served on the overseers, dated the 12th August, but signed on the 18th August, is a good notice. Jones v. Jones, 1 H. & R. 341; H. & P. 320; 35 L. J., C. P. 94; L. R. 1 C. P. 140; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 123; 13 L. T. 633; 14 W. R. 204. Contra, Parkinson v. Brophy, 15 Ir. C. L. R. 346.

It is not necessary that it should be signed by an objector on the day it bears date so long as it is signed by him on any day on which it is qualified to object. Ib.

The objector could not swear that he signed several notices of objection on the day they purported to bear date, but the notices were duly signed by him before they were served, and they were duly served within the limits of time for giving notice:—Held, that the general prima facie presumption that all documents are made at the day they bear date applies to notices of objection. Kenny v. Keneally, [1895] 2 Ir. R. 544.

Notice not Bad because Objector's Name Struck Out on Revision.]—A notice of objection is good that is given by a person whose name at the time of serving the notice was on the list prepared by the overseers, though his name was subsequently erased from the list by the revising barrister before his objection came on for hearing. Pease v. Middlesbrough Town Clerk, 62 L. J., Q. B. 94; [1893] 1 Q. B. 127; 5 R. 99; 68 L. T. 766; Fox, 286; 57 J. P. 759.

One Notice to Overseers for all Names Objected to in the Parish.]—In the notice to overseers, under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 7, it is competent to a person to insert all the names on the list of voters in the parish objected to by him, a separate notice for each not being necessary. Smith v. Holloway, 1 H. & R. 315; H. & P. 281; 35 L. J., C. P. 100; L. R. 1 C. P. 143; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 164; 13 L. T. 468; 14 W. R. 202.

(a) Personal.

By leaving Notice at Address on List.]—Notice of objection to a vote was put into the letter-box of the house described on the list of voters as the place of abode of the voter whose vote was the subject of the objection. The voter had not lived at that address for two years, and there was no evidence that he had received the notice:—Held, that this was not a sufficient service of the notice within 6 Vict. c. 18, s. 17. Gifford v. St. Luke's, Chelsea, 59 L. J., Q. B. 98; 24 Q. B. D. 141; 61 L. T. 810; Fox, 139; 54 J. P. 230.

An objector purported to serve a notice of objection to the retention of a name upon the list of voters, by putting the notice under the door of the house which was described in the list as the place of abode of the voter. The objector knew that the voter did not reside there; he knew where he resided, and he knew there was no probability of the voter getting the notice:—Held, that the notice of objection had not been duly served. Magee v. Mortimer, 28 L. R., Ir. 251—C. A.

Where the agent of the objector went to the house mentioned in the list of voters as the place of abode of the person objected to, between nine and ten o'clock in the evening, and after knocking several times and receiving no answer, put the notice of objection inside the usual entrance-door of the house, and there left it; and the barrister decided that the time and mode of service were unreasonable:—Held, that the service was not sufficient. Watson v. Pitt, 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 73; 5 C. B. 77; 17 L. J., C. P. 143; 12 Jur. 121.

The place of abode of a voter for a borough was in the hamlet of A., but his qualifying property, consisting of a wharf, was situate in the hamlet of B. In the list of voters his place of abode was stated to be in B., but in point of fact he never did reside in B.:—Held, that a notice of objection left at the wharf was improperly served. Allen v. Greensill, 4 C. B. 100; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 592; 16 L. J., C. P. 142; 11 Jur. 476.

On Overseers.]—See Freeman v. Newman, A. 1, f. i.

On Assistant Overseer.]—A service of notice of objection upon an assistant overseer appointed to perform all the duties of an overseer pursuant to 59 Geo. 3, c. 12, s. 7, is a sufficient service, although he has not made out or signed the list of voters objected to. Points v. Atwood, 6 C. B. 38; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 117; 18 L. J., C. P. 19; 13 Jur. 83.

On Collector of Poor-rates, acting for Overseers, at his Office.]—Notice of objection to the name of the appellant being retained on the list of voters for the borough of Bedford, was sent to the office of the collector of poor-rates, appointed by the guardians of the poor of five parishes, constituting the borough of Bedford. The collector was in the habit of discharging all the ordinary overseer's duties, including that of making up the lists. He transacted the whole of the business connected with the poor-rates and the preparation of the list of voters at his said office, which was within the borough, where all the parish books were kept, and all notices of claims and objections were sent. The collector produced such notices to any voter requiring to see them, and also attended to produce them at the revising barrister's court. The overseers did nothing whatever besides receiving notice of claims and objections if sent to them, and signing the lists which the collector produced to them, and there was no other office in the borough where any parish business was transacted:—Held, that the collector's office was "the place for transacting parochial business" within 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 101, and that the notice was duly served. Green v. Mepham, 48 L. J., C. P. 92; 39 L. T. 450.

And, semble, that the collector was a person executing the duties of overseers of the poor within that section. Ib.

On Churchwarden who has not signed List.]—The list of voters was signed by three of the overseers and one of the churchwardens, and the service of the notice of objection was upon another churchwarden, who had not signed the list:—Held, that the notice was well served. Beenlen v. Hockin, 4 C. B. 19; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 526; 16 L. J., C. P. 49; 10 Jur. 1059.

(b) By Post.

Sending a notice of objection to the party objected to by the post is a sufficient substitute for giving the notice to the party, or leaving it at his place of abode as required by s. 7 of 6 Vict. c. 18. Bishop v. Helps, 2 C. B. 45; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 353; 15 L. J., C. P. 43; Barr. & Arn. 572. S. P., Hickton v. Antrobus, 2 C. B. 82; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 363.

A notice of objection sent by post is not vitiated by the fact of the postmaster receiving it out of the usual hours of business prescribed by the postmaster-general. Hannaford v. Whiteway, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 53; 26 L. J., C. P. 76; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 673; 5 W. R. 75. S. P., Paddon v. Whiteway, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 62.

The duties of a postmaster in receiving and forwarding notices of objection are merely ministerial, and may, in his absence, be performed by a clerk. Allan v. Waterhouse, 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 92; 8 Scott (N.R.) 68; 13 L. J., C. P. 129; 8 Jur. 426. S. C., sub nom. Cooper v. Coates, 5 Man. & G. 98; Barr. & Arn. 229.

A notice of objection was delivered open, and in duplicate, to a postmaster's managing clerk, who compared the notice with the duplicate, and stamped and returned the latter to the party bringing the same:—Held, that the clerk could act for the postmaster, and that the production of such stamped duplicate before the revising barrister, was evidence of the due service of the notice of objection. Ib.

Under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 100, a notice of objection may be posted by an agent for the objector. Cuming v. Toms or Jones, 7 M. & G. 29; 8 Scott (N.R.) 827; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 151; 14 L. J., C. P. 54; 8 Jur. 1052.

The notice of objection sent by post should have an address on the outside as well as in. Birch v. Edwards, 5 C. B. 45; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 37; 17 L. J., C. P. 32; 12 Jur. 18. See Barclay v. Parrott, col. 78.

Notices of objection were posted by the objector at L. on the 19th of August, the 20th being the last day for giving notice of objection. They were delivered separately to the postmaster at L., and were by him tied up in a parcel and so sent through the post to T., the person to whom the outside one was addressed; and, with the exception of that addressed to T., they never reached the persons objected to. In other instances where the notices were similarly dealt with, there was no evidence whether any of the notices reached any of the persons objected to or not. The address indorsed on the notices of objection in no case included the polling district or any post-town or the name of the county, but merely the rural townland in which the qualifying property was situated; but it was in every case the same as that given in the list of voters. In proof of the service of the notices the objector produced duplicates of the notices, duly stamped by the postmaster as of the 19th August:—Held, affirming the decision of the revising barrister, that the notices were sufficiently addressed, and (Deasy, L.J., diss.) that, having been duly posted pursuant to the provisions of the 113th section of the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 69—identical with s. 100 of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18—the service was not rendered invalid by non-delivery through the mistake or default of the post-office officials. Moore v. Forrest, 6 L. R., Ir. 142—C. A.

Per Deasy, L.J.—The stamped duplicate is only primâ facie evidence of service under the 113th section, and is liable to be, and in this instance was, rebutted. Ib.

If an objector, in order to prove service of his notice of objection, produces a duplicate stamped at the post-office, and the person objected to then produces the notice actually served to prove the duplicate incorrect, the objector may rely on this notice actually served. Norris v. Pilcher, 38 L. J., C. P. 69; L. R. 4 C. P. 417; 19 L. T. 563; 17 W. R. 225; 1 Hopw. & C. 173.

The objector, in proof of the service of a notice of objection on P., produced an alleged duplicate, stamped by a postmaster. P., in answer, produced the notice he had actually received, which he admitted he had received in due time, but which differed from the alleged duplicate:—Held, that the objector might rely on the notice so produced by P. and his admission as proof of due service of a notice of objection. Ib.

Delivery "in the Ordinary Course of Post."]—Where a notice of objection, properly directed, is posted, the production of the stamped duplicate is sufficient evidence of the due service of the notice, although, in consequence of a delay (however caused) in the post-office, it does not reach the hands of the person objected to until after the time prescribed by the statute. Hornsby v. Robson, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 63; 26 L. J., C. P. 55; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 674. See Moore v. Forrest, supra; and Bayley v. Nantwich Township, col. 76.

By 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 100, the production by a person, who has posted a notice of objection to a name on the list of parliamentary voters, of a duplicate notice stamped with the post-office stamp, shall be evidence of the notice having been given to the person objected to at the place mentioned in such duplicate on the day on which such notice would "in the ordinary course of post" have been delivered at such place. Where a notice of objection is posted at such time and place that it would be delivered, supposing the general rules of the post-office as to the delivery in the district to be followed, on or before the last day for serving notices of objection, that is a good service, within the above section, upon a soldier in barracks, notwithstanding that, by reason of special arrangements made between the military authorities and the post-office, letters for soldiers in barracks are not delivered by the post-office but are called for by an orderly, and that the notice is not in fact delivered to the soldier till after the last day for serving such notices. Childs v. Cox (20 Q. B. D. 290) overruled. Kemp v. Wanklyn, 63 L. J., Q. B. 520; [1894] 1 Q. B. 583; 9 R. 325; 70 L. T. 478; 42 W. R. 369; Fox, 360; 58 J. P. 605—C. A.

See Hornsby v. Robson, and Moore v. Forrest, supra.

Notices of objection to borough voters under 6 Vict. c. 18, s. 17, were addressed to barracks in which the voters resided, and were posted in time to have been delivered on August 20 by postmen in the ordinary course of post at places within the borough elsewhere than at the barracks. Letters addressed to the barracks were never delivered at the barracks by postmen, but were taken from the post-office by orderlies. On the evening of August 20 the letters addressed to the barracks were taken from the post-office by orderlies. Some of such letters were distributed at the barracks on August 20, others on August 21, while with respect to others there was no evidence as to the time of distribution:—Held, that the facts did not shew that there was any "ordinary course of post" to the barracks within the meaning of s. 100, and that therefore there was no evidence that the notices had been served on August 20. Childs v. Cox, 20 Q. B. D. 290; 58 L. T. 338; 36 W. R. 505; Fox, 84.

Notice of objection to the retention of his name on the supplemental list of inhabitant occupiers in their polling district, was addressed to each of a number of persons to the townland in which he resided, and was posted on the 19th August, at D., from which town the notice would in ordinary course have reached the local post-office (situate within a short distance of the townland in each case) at mid-day on the 20th, and would have remained there till called for. There was no postal delivery at any of the townlands, and the notice could not have reached the person objected to unless he went or sent to his local post-office, or unless by some accidental delivery or conveyance. At the revision a stamped duplicate copy of the notice in each case was produced to prove service, but no other evidence of service was given or tendered, or any proof that any person objected to was aware of the posting of the notice, or had sent to his post-office on the 19th or 20th, or received the notice on or before the 20th:—Held, that the notices had been duly served. Adams v. Buchanan, 18 L. R., Ir. 292—C. A.

Where, by the ordinary course of post, a notice of objection would reach the voter in time, the production of the stamped duplicate of such notice is sufficient to entitle the objector to call upon the voter to prove his right to be registered, although, in fact, the notice of objection was not delivered, until after the 25th August. Bishop v. Cox, 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 363; 10 Jur. 16.

Objection to the name of C. being retained on the supplemental list of parliamentary voters. The "place of abode" of C., as described in the list, was "Regeens, Lusk"; the notice of objection was directed to "C., Regeens, Lusk," was stamped at the post-office, Dublin, as of the 18th of August, and would have, in the ordinary course of post, reached Lusk, which is very near Regeens, on the morning of the 19th of August; the 20th was the last day for giving notice of objection; there was no postal delivery at Lusk, and the notice might remain in the office till called for:—Held (Deasy, L.J., diss.), that there was evidence, under the 113th section of the 13 & 14 Vict. c. 69 (Ireland),—identical with s. 100 of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18,—of the notice having been given to C. at Regeens, Lusk, on or before the 20th of August, in the ordinary course of post. Hudson v. Louth, 6 L. R., Ir. 69—C. A.

Notice of objection was sent by post addressed to W., the place of abode of the person objected to, and the objector fulfilled all the requirements of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 100. The notice was posted on August 18th, and would reach the post-office nearest to W., in the morning of the 19th. There was no delivery of letters thence to W., and the notice could only reach the person to whom it was addressed at W., by some private accidental conveyance:—Held, that these facts were no evidence that the notice would be delivered on or before August the 20th, and that, therefore, the statute was not complied with, and the requisite notice of objection had not been given to entitle the objector to raise his objection before the revising barrister. Lewis v. Evans, 44 L. J., C. P. 41; L. R. 10 C. P. 297; 31 L. T. 487; 23 W. R. 244; 2 Hopw. & C. 279.

Sufficiency of Address.]—Upon the revision of the list of parliamentary voters for the county of Down, it appeared that notices of objection were posted at Belfast, which is situated partly in the county of Down and partly in the county of Antrim, and which notices, though addressed to the places of abode of the persons objected to as appearing on the list of voters, did not apparently contain the name of either post-town or county. In one case the address was "Church Ballee," which is a townland in the county of Down. The revising barrister held that the notices of objection were insufficiently addressed, and therefore bad ex facie:—Held, on appeal, that the notices were not necessarily or as matter of law insufficiently addressed, and that the decision of the revising barrister should therefore be reversed. Finnegan v. Cavan, 6 L. R., Ir. 137—C. A. See Moore v. Forrest, 6 L. R., Ir. 142, ante, col. 89.

A notice of objection to a county vote sent by post, addressed to the voter at his place of abode, as described in the list of voters, is sufficient; and it is neither necessary nor proper to add the name of the parish or township contained in the heading of the list. Flint v. Sharp, 17 C. B. 281; 25 L. J., C. P. 36; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1141; 4 W. R. 24.

Unauthorised Correction of Address on List—Notice sent to Corrected Address.]—The list of voters mentioned in 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 100, is, as regards county voters, the copy of the register sent to the overseers by the clerk of the peace of the county, and the overseers ought to publish it as they receive it, without alteration. Noseworthy v. Buckland-in-the-Moor Overseers, 43 L. J., C. P. 27; L. R. 9 C. P. 233; 29 L. T. 675; 22 W. R. 155; 2 Hopw. & C. 127.

When, therefore, the overseers altered the copy of the register by changing the description of the residence of one of the voters thereon from what it had ceased to be, to what was then the real address, and published the list as so altered, and the voter being objected to, the objector, in order to prove service of the notice of objection, proved posting such notice, addressed to the voter according to the altered address published by the overseers:—Held, that the notice was insufficient, not being in compliance with 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 100, which requires the notice to be directed to the voter "at his place of abode, as described in the said list of voters." Ib.

Delivery on Sunday.]—A notice of objection sent by post, so that it would, in the ordinary course of the post, be delivered on a Sunday, is nevertheless well served. Colville v. Lewis or Rochester Town Clerk, 2 C. B. 60; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 380. See Rawlins v. West Derby, col. 76.

Duplicate Notice.]—The duplicate notice of objection, stamped by the postmaster, and produced by the objector, must be precisely the same as the one sent, and, therefore, if it is not signed by the objector himself, the service is bad. Toms v. Cuming, 8 Scott (N.R.) 910; 7 Man. & G. 88; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 200; 14 L. J., C. P. 67; 9 Jur. 90; Barr. & Arn. 347.

A notice of objection sent by the post, having the address of the voter to whom it was to be sent written on the outside, and the paper produced as the duplicate containing only in the inside the address of the voter, but omitting the external direction, is not a duplicate within 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 100. Birch v. Edwards, 5 C. B. 45; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 37; 17 L. J., C. P. 32; 12 Jur. 18.

The duplicate notice of objection stamped by the postmaster, produced before the revising barrister, had written at the top of it the word "Copy":—Held, that (assuming that the word "copy" was not on the notice transmitted by the postmaster to the person objected to) the notice was well served. Benesh v. Booth, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 111; H. & P. 223; 34 L. J., C. P. 99; 11 L. T. 479; 13 W. R. 271.

Service of notice of objection was held to be sufficiently proved, although the address on the duplicate notice produced was only to A. B. at a particular street without mentioning any town, where the name of the town appeared on the stamp of the post-office with which such duplicate was stamped. M'Niffe v. Wilson, 1 Ir. R. (Reg. and Land App.) 10. See Lewis v. Roberts, col. 86.

On Overseers.] — Notices of objection to borough votes were inclosed by the objector in an envelope, directed "To the overseers of the parish of St. Anne, Westminster"; it was sent by post, and was delivered to, and received by, the overseers in due time, and the notices were included in the printed list, but no duplicate notice, stamped according to 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 100, was produced in proof of service:—Held, that the service was sufficiently proved. Smith v. Huggett, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 55; K. & G. 434; 31 L. J., C. P. 38; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 617; 5 L. T. 425; 10 W. R. 131.

The same of notices of objection to county votes under s. 7. Ib.

Notices of objection to a voter for the county of Middlesex were sent to the overseers, by post, inclosed in one envelope, addressed "To the overseers of the parish of Acton, in the county of Middlesex," and were duly received and published by them:—Held, that this was a sufficient service; and that the objector was not bound to show that he had complied with all the requirements as to posting in s. 100 of 6 Vict. c. 18. Smith v. James, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 62; 5 L. T. 525; 10 W. R. 131.

A notice of objection to a county vote was addressed "To the overseers of the parish or township of B." without adding the county. The notice, however, having been found to have reached the hands of the overseers before the 25th August:—Held, that the notice and service were sufficient. Jones v. Innous, 17 C. B. 290; 25 L. J., C. P. 78; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1112; 4 W. R. 84.

A notice of objection to a county vote was addressed "To the overseers of the parish or township of B.," without adding the county. The overseers having acted upon the notice, although it did not appear when it reached their hands:—Held, that the notice and service were sufficient; for, that, in the absence of any finding to the contrary, the court would assume that the overseers had done their duty. Godsell v. Innous, 17 C. B. 295; 25 L. J., C. P. 79; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1112; 4 W. R. 85.

iii. Consequences of giving Notice.

Power to Withdraw.]—Giving notice of an objection to a claim to vote is the exercise of a public duty; and therefore the objector has no power to withdraw an objection once made. Proudfoot v. Barnes, 36 L. J., C. P. 68; L. R. 2 C. P. 88; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 1017; 15 L. T. 439; 15 W. R. 223.

Claims for Compensation.]—The Bath court of requests had no jurisdiction over a claim made by a voter against an objector, for compensation for loss of time in attending the revising barrister's court, on a notice of objection. Roberts v. Hunby, 3 M. & W. 120; 6 D. P. C. 82; 7 L. J., Ex. 45.

An unfounded objection to a voter's name in the list, pursuant to 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 47 (repealed), by which he was prejudiced, having to attend the revising barrister, did not give such a legal or equitable claim for compensation for loss of time as enabled him to sue under the Westminster Court of Requests Act, and where the commissioners proceeded on the claim, they were restrained by prohibition. Soames v. Rawlings, 2 C. M. & R. 744; 4 D. P. C. 501; 1 Tyr. & G. 46; 1 Gale, 299; 5 L. J., Ex. 55.

i. Power to Amend.

Nature of Qualification.]—The revising barrister has no power to amend a claim for a borough parliamentary vote where the effect of such amendment would be to change the nature of the qualification on which the claim is based. Bartlett v. Gibbs (5 Man. & G. 81); Foskett v. Kaufman (16 Q. B. D. 279); and Plant v. Potts ([1891] 1 Q. B. 256) followed. Harcum v. West Ham Town Clerk, 63 L. J., Q. B. 306; [1894] 1 Q. B. 579; 9 R. 271; 70 L. T. 505; 42 W. R. 321; Fox, 345; 58 J. P. 510—C. A.

The revising barrister in revising the ownership list in a parliamentary county under the Registration Act, 1885, which incorporates s. 28 of the Parliamentary and Municipal Registration Act, 1878, amended the list in the third column headed "Nature of qualification," by substituting "leasehold" house for "freehold" house:—Held, that the barrister had no power to make the amendment, inasmuch as it altered the nature of the qualification. Foskett v. Kaufman (16 Q. B. D. 279) followed. Plant v. Potts, 60 L. J., Q. B. 33; [1891] 1 Q. B. 256; 63 L. T. 730; Fox, 206; 55 J. P. 277—C. A.

In a list of voters, the nature of the appellant's qualification was described in the third column as "dwelling-house," and in the fourth column the name and situation of the qualifying property were described as "5, Victoria Cottages." The respondent objected to the appellant's name being retained on the list, whereupon the appellant asked the revising barrister to amend the third column of the list by altering "dwelling-house" to "dwelling-houses in succession," and the fourth column by altering "5, Victoria Cottages" to "High-street, Wapping, and 5, Victoria Cottages." The appellant had not sent in a declaration under s. 24 of the Parliamentary and Municipal Registration Act, 1878. The barrister refused to amend:—Held, that the barrister was right, as the amendment would alter the nature of the qualification; and the effect of s. 28, sub-s. 13 of the act of 1878, on sub-s. 1 of that section, is to limit the power of making such an amendment to cases in which a declaration has been duly sent in under s. 24 of that act. Porrett v. Lord (5 C. P. D. 65) disapproved. Foskett v. Kaufman, 55 L. J., Q. B. 1; 16 Q. B. D. 279; 54 L. T. 64; 34 W. R. 90; Colt. 466; 50 J. P. 484—C. A.

The appellant's qualification being described on a list of voters as a house "8, Birley-place," he made and sent in a "declaration for amending misdescription," under 41 & 42 Vict. c. 26, s. 24, schedule form M. that the correct description was "houses in succession," "8, Birley-place, and 9, Birley-place:"—Held, that the revising barrister was right in expunging the appellant's name from the list, for there had been an alteration in the nature of the qualification, and to substitute "houses in succession" for "house" would be such a change in the description of the qualifying property as was not authorised by s. 28 of the act. Porrett v. Lord, 49 L. J., C. P. 176; 5 C. P. D. 65; 42 L. T. 28; 28 W. R. 393; Colt. 46; 44 J. P. 186.

A party claiming a borough vote in respect of the occupation of two houses in immediate succession, in his notice to the overseers (sent in pursuant to 6 Vict. c. 18, schedule B. form No. 6), described under column 3 his "nature of qualification" as "dwelling-house," and under column 4 ("description of qualifying property") specified the two houses in respect of which he claimed:—Held, that having regard to the Registration Order, 1895, schedule 2, part 1, s. 19, sub-s. 1 (b), the qualification was not sufficiently described. Soutter v. Roderick, 65 L. J., Q. B. 145; [1896] 1 Q. B. 91; 73 L. T. 576; 44 W. R. 205; 1 Smith, 22, 36.

Held further (Vaughan Williams, J., doubting), that giving to the qualification stated a reasonable construction, it must be taken to be for successive occupation, and that the revising barrister had power, under s. 28, sub-s. 13 of the Registration Act, 1878, to amend the description of the qualification "for the purpose of more clearly and accurately describing the same." Ib.

The qualification of a voter was stated in the third column of the list to be "offices, successive occupation," and in the fourth column "High Street and Charles Street," whereas it was proved that during the whole of the qualifying period he had occupied one office only, namely, in High Street, and would have had by reason of such occupation a good and sufficient qualification. The misdescription was an error of the overseers:—Held, that the revising barrister had power under 41 & 42 Vict. c. 26, s. 28, to correct the mistake, and should have amended the list by striking out the words "successive occupation" and "Charles Street." Lynch or Blosse v. Wheatley, 54 L. J., Q. B. 289; 14 Q. B. D. 504; 53 L. T. 49; Colt. 364.

The claimant's name appeared in the list of voters twice in succession, first, as the rated occupier of a house and small garden, South Main Street, and, immediately beneath, as the rated occupier of a house and yard in Mall Lane. It was proved that during the qualifying year he had moved from the one premises to the other:—Held (diss. Fitzgerald, B.), that the revising barrister was wrong in holding that he could not amend by placing the claimant's name on the list as the occupier of premises held in immediate succession. Kelleher v. Tarrant, Ir. R. 3 C. L. 130.

The statement of facts on a claim to be admitted to the parliamentary franchise must be sufficient to constitute a legal franchise of some defined character, and then, if the proved facts turn out to be insufficient to establish a legal franchise of that character, but one sufficient to establish a legal franchise of another character, the claimant may be registered. If the legal nature of the qualification derived from premises mentioned in the claim is not sufficiently stated, the claim can be amended; but no qualifying property which is not mentioned can be added. Melaugh v. Chambers, 20 L. R., Ir. 286—C. A.

See Hitchins v. Brown, col. 73.

The 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 40 (repealed), empowers the revising barrister to insert the qualification of a voter in the list, where it has been wholly omitted, or to amend the description where it is insufficiently stated, but it does not authorise him to amend a qualification imperfectly stated, by adding a new qualification. Onions v. Bowdler, 5 C. B. 65; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 59; 17 L. J., C. P. 70; 11 Jur. 1041.

In the overseers' list of occupiers entitled to vote for a division of a county, the "nature of the qualification" of a voter was described as "tenement and garden," and the "description of the qualifying property" was stated to be "part bailiff's tenement." An objection was taken that the nature of the qualification was wrongly described. It was proved before the revising barrister that the voter was an inhabitant occupier of a part of a dwelling-house, and the barrister amended the list by adding the word "dwelling-house" before "tenement":—Held, that, looking at the whole entry, the words "tenement and garden" might fairly be read as intended to be used in the vulgar but inaccurate sense of a small house, and to describe the qualification arising from the occupation of a dwelling-house, and consequently that the barrister had power to amend the entry as he had done for the purpose of more accurately defining the qualification:—But held, that the proper alteration would have been to strike out the words "tenement and garden," and substitute the word "dwelling-house." Dashwood v. Ayles, 55 L. J., Q. B. 8; 16 Q. B. D. 295; 53 L. T. 58; 34 W. R. 53; Colt. 486; 50 J. P. 132; 49 J. P. 776—C. A.

In the overseers' list of occupiers entitled to vote for a division of a county, the "nature of the qualification" of a voter was described as "tenement and garden" and the "description of the qualifying property" was stated to be "School Yard." The "nature of the qualification" of thirty-three other voters was described in the same way. As to two of the thirty-three the "description of the qualifying property" was stated to be "School Yard," as to five "Cat Lane," as to three "High Street," as to five "Bridge." In each case the voter occupied a dwelling-house and garden of a less annual value than 10*l.*:—Held, that looking at all the cases together, the revising barrister might fairly consider that the words "tenement and garden" were intended to describe a dwelling-house, and that he had power to amend the description by striking out the words "and garden," and inserting the word "dwelling-house" before "tenement," though it would have been better to strike out "tenement" also. Minifie v. Banger, 55 L. J., Q. B. 10; 16 Q. B. D. 302; 53 L. T. 590; Colt. 493; 50 J. P. 131—C. A.

The respondent had a sufficient qualification for the borough franchise as the occupier of a dwelling-house under the Representation of the People Act, 1867, s. 3, but not under the Reform Act, 1832, s. 27, the yearly value of the house being under 10*l.* The respondent's qualification was described in the list as "house." The respondent being objected to, the revising barrister was of opinion that such description was sufficient, but he amended it by adding the word "dwelling" to the word "house," and retained the respondent's name on the list:—Held (without determining whether the description as it originally stood was sufficient), that the case came within the provisions of the Parliamentary and Municipal Registration Act, 1878, s. 28, sub-s. 12, and the revising barrister had power to make the amendment, and his decision was therefore correct. Friend v. Towers, 52 L. J., Q. B. 109; 10 Q. B. D. 87; 48 L. T. 973; 31 W. R. 247; Colt. 310; 47 J. P. 197.

One who occupied a farm of sufficient value to confer the franchise for a county was described in the third column of the register as tenant. This description being objected to, the revising barrister held it to be "commonly understood as designating a tenant occupying at a rent, and therefore sufficient; but that, at all events, for the purpose of more clearly and accurately defining the qualification, he had power to amend by changing tenant into "farm, as occupying tenant," and he amended accordingly:—The court upheld his decision. Birks v. Allison, 32 L. J., C. P. 51; 13 C. B. (N.S.) 24; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 692; 7 L. T. 786; 11 W. R. 90.

In a claim to vote for a county the qualification was stated to be "rent-charge on freehold house":—Held, that inasmuch as there is but one kind of rent-charge, namely, a freehold rent-charge, which can confer a vote, the qualification was sufficiently stated; but that if it was inaccurate, it could be amended by inserting the word "freehold" before the word "rent-charge." Sherwin v. Whyman, 43 L. J., C. P. 36; L. R. 9 C. P. 243; 29 L. T. 680; 22 W. R. 127; 2 Hopw. & C. 185.

The qualification in respect of which a county franchise was claimed was described on the list as "freehold rent-charge of 16*l.* per annum issuing out of freehold houses." In support of this the claimant proved that he was seised in fee of the land on which the houses referred to were built, and that he had let the same out on a long building lease at a yearly rent of 16*l.*:—Held, that the qualification proved was a different one from that described, and that the revising barrister had no power to amend the description, as the amendment which would be required would alter the qualification described, instead of more clearly and accurately defining it, to which the power of amendment is limited. Nichols v. Bulwer, 1 Hopw. & C. 472; 40 L. J., C. P. 82; L. R. 6 C. P. 281; 23 L. T. 542; 19 W. R. 282.

See Cooper v. Ashfield, col. 74, and Ford v. Boon, col. 73.

Description of Qualifying Property.]—Where a party claiming to vote for a borough has occupied different premises in immediate succession, during the twelve calendar months next previously to the last day of July, they ought all to be set forth in the description of his qualification in the list of voters. Bartlett v. Gibbs, Barr. & Arn. 98; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 73; 7 Scott (N.R.) 609; 5 Man. & G. 81; 13 L. J., C. P. 40.

An omission in the list of any of such premises amounts to a misdescription of his qualification, which the barrister has no power to amend under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 40 (repealed). Ib. See Hurcum v. West Ham Town Clerk, ante, col. 93.

The nature of the qualification of a voter was described on the parliamentary list as "dwelling-houses in succession," and the name and situation of the qualifying property were described in the fourth column of the list "as 44, Oxford Street and 34, Prospect Place, Cowick Street." He had, in fact, occupied three houses in succession during the qualifying period, but the overseer by mistake omitted to specify the third house, viz. 31, Prospect Place, and the occupation of the two only as they appeared on the list was insufficient to give the vote. These facts were proved before the revising barrister, and he was asked to amend the fourth column, and did so by striking out the figures "44" and "34":—Held by Stephen and Cave, JJ. (Lord Coleridge, C.J., dissenting), that under 41 & 42 Vict. c. 26, s. 28, the revising barrister had power to correct the mistake, although it should not have been corrected by striking out the numbers, and that the list should be amended by inserting "and 31" after the words "Oxford Street" in the fourth column of the list. Ford v. Hoar, Colt. 351; 54 L. J., Q. B. 286; 14 Q. B. D. 507; 53 L. T. 44; 33 W. R. 566; 49 J. P. 103.

Where a person's right to be admitted to the parliamentary franchise depends upon his occupation of different premises in immediate succession, his claim must set forth and describe the several qualifying premises, and if it omit to do so, the revising barrister has power, under s. 4 of the Parliamentary Registration (Ireland) Act, 1885 (48 Vict. c. 17), to amend or correct it. Dempsey v. Keegan, 18 L. R., Ir. 280—C. A.

M. claimed to be registered as an inhabitant "occupier" in respect of the premises, 1, Cottage-row, in the borough of Londonderry. The claim described the qualifying premises as "dwelling-house, 1, Cottage-row, in immediate succession from dwelling-house, Corbett-street, Londonderry." It was proved that M. had gone to reside at No. 1 in September, 1885, from No. 8, Cottage-row, which latter premises he had occupied for about three weeks immediately after the house in Corbett-street, where he had resided since before the previous 20th July, and that the premises so immediately occupied had been omitted from the claim, owing to the claimant's considering it unnecessary to mention them:—Held, that the claim was defective in not setting out all the qualifying premises, and that the revising barrister had no power to amend it in this respect. Melaugh v. Chambers, 20 L. R., Ir. 286. See Burton v. Gery, col. 10

Where a voter's qualification appears in the list to consist of a successive occupation of houses, the numbers of each, if each has a number, must be stated. But, if evidence is given to supply the omission of a number, the revising barrister may amend. Flounders v. Donner, Barr. & Arn. 588; 2 C. B. 63; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 365; 15 L. J., C. P. 81; 10 Jur. 207.

The description of a qualification which is "insufficient" by reason of being erroneous, may be amended, provided the qualification described is not a different qualification from that proved. Bendle v. Watson, 1 Hopw. & C. 591; 41 L. J., C. P. 15; L. R. 7 C. P. 163; 25 L. T. 806; 20 W. R. 145.

A house was described on the register as No. 4. It had formerly been so numbered, but some years back it was changed by the local authorities to No. 9. The person objected to had been in occupation when it was No. 4, and continuously since:—Held, that the barrister had power, and ought to have amended. Ib.

A person sent in a claim to vote for a borough, but omitted, in stating the locality of his qualification, to insert the number of his house, which was situate in a street. On objection being made, the barrister amended the claim, and inserted the claimant's name in the list of voters:—Held, that the barrister was right in making the amendment, and inserting the claimant's name in the list of voters. Barlow v. Mumford, 36 L. J., C. P. 65; L. R. 2 C. P. 81; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 964; 15 L. T. 441; 15 W. R. 221.

The nature of the interest of a county voter was described in the 3rd column of the register as "freehold land," and the description of his qualification in the 4th column was "Plots, 166," &c. (specifying fifteen numbers), "Victoria Estate."—The voter having parted with all the plots specified, except one, which was freehold land of sufficient qualifying value, notice of objection grounded on the 3rd column, and relating to the voter's interest, was given, and objection taken before the revising barrister that the qualification was misdescribed. He, so deciding, expunged the voter's name:—Held, first that the barrister ought not to have entertained any other objection than the one of which notice was duly given; secondly, that as the identity of the property was not changed by the diminution of it he had power to amend, and should, under the circumstances, have amended the description in the 4th column by striking out the numbers of the plots which the voter had ceased to own. Smith v. Woolston, 48 L. J., C. P. 84; 4 C. P. D. 73; 40 L. T. 198; 27 W. R. 535.

See Foskett v. Kaufman; Porrett v. Lord, col. 94; and Lynch v. Wheatley, col. 95.

Old Lodger's List—Name of Borough omitted on Claim.]—A revising barrister has power to examine an old lodger claim though no objection has been made to it, and if it contains a mistake of a technical but not misleading character, has a discretion, which he should exercise, to amend it, in order to prevent a bonâ fide claim being defeated. Treadgold v. Grantham Town Clerk, Fox, 402; 64 L. J., Q. B. 29; [1895] 1 Q. B. 163; 15 R. 55; 71 L. T. 729; 58 J. P. 787.

Lodger Claim — Amount of Rent.]—It is essential that every lodger claimant should state whether he pays rent for his lodgings or not, what is the specific amount of any rent he pays, and to whom he pays it; and in the event of his occupying lodgings without paying rent, he must specifically show that he is exonerated by agreement from doing so without their losing the essential character of lodgings. A claim by a lodger under 31 & 32 Vict. c. 49, s. 4 (as extended by 48 Vict. c. 3, s. 7, sub-s. 3), in the form No. 31 in schedule 1 to the Parliamentary Registration (Ireland) Act. 1885 (48 Vict. c. 17), stated the "amount of rent paid" at "10*l.* and upwards, including the salary," and another like claim by another lodger stated such rent as "10*l.* and upwards" only. The revising barrister was called upon by the claimants to amend the claims (as having been so filled in by "mistake") by inserting specific amounts for the rents payable, but he was of opinion that he had no power to do so, and rejected the claim:—Held, that the revising barrister had power, if necessary, to amend the claims by inserting a specific sum for the rent payable. if he had sufficient materials before him for the purpose. Clarke v. Torish, Aiken's Case, 18 L. R. Ir. 207—C. A.

Discretion as to amending new Lodger Claim —Amount of Rent—Address of Landlord.]—A claim by a lodger under 41 & 42 Vict. c. 26, s. 22, in the form in the schedule (H.), No. 2, for the first time to have his name inserted in the list of persons entitled to vote for a borough, omitted to state the amount of rent and the address of his landlord. These particulars were supplied at the revision; but the revising barrister declined to amend under s. 28, sub-s. 2:—Held, that this being the case of a mistake, not in a "list of voters," but in a list or a catalogue of claims, it was not obligatory on the revising barrister to correct or amend it, but discretionary only; and, he having exercised his discretion for reasons which the court thought satisfactory, his decision was affirmed. Pickard v. Baylis, Colt. 98; 49 L. J., C. P. 182; 5 C. P. D. 235; 41 L. T. 509; 28 W. R. 256; 44 J. P. 89.

Lodger Declaration.]—The declarations in certain claims made by lodger claimants contained words (describing the nature of the interests of the claimants) which ought to have been erased; the declarations in other claims contained words (also describing the nature of the interest of the claimants) which were erased, but ought to have been left standing; in other declarations there were mistakes of a similar character. The revising barrister was asked to amend the declarations, but refused to do so on the ground that the declarations being insufficient he had no power to amend them:—Held, that the revising barrister was wrong, and that, as the declaration was an integral part of the claim, and he had power to amend mistakes in a claim under 41 & 42 Vict. c. 26, s. 28, sub-s. 2, he had jurisdiction and ought to have amended the declarations. Ainsley v. Nicholson, Fox, 146; 59 L. J., Q. B. 102; 24 Q. B. D. 144; 61 L. T. 809; 54 J. P. 166—D.

Lodger Declaration—Description of Qualification.]—The declaration annexed to the notice of claim for a lodger vote for a parliamentary borough stated that the applicant occupied partly as joint tenant and partly as sole tenant, and that the lodgings were of a clear yearly value, if let unfurnished, of 10*l.* or upwards. Upon objection being taken to the vote on the ground that the declaration was not in the form required inasmuch as it should have stated the value to be 20*l.*, where the occupation was as joint tenant, the revising barrister having found as a fact that the occupation was sole, amended the declaration by striking out all mention of the joint tenancy and allowed the vote:—Held, that this was a "mistake" which the revising barrister had power to amend under s. 28, sub-s. 2, of the Parliamentary and Municipal Registration Act, 1878, and not a change in the description of the qualification within the meaning of sub-s. 13. Reg. v. McKellar, Baker, Ex parte, Fox, 275; 62 L. J., Q. B. 97; [1893] 1 Q. B. 121; 5 R. 64; 67 L. T. 527; 41 W. R. 142; 57 J. P. 41. See Francis v. Metcalfe, and Smith v. Chandler, col. 23.

Voter's Place of Abode.]—The place of abode of a voter is no part of his qualification. Luckett v. Knowles, Barr. & Arn. 730; 2 C. B. 187; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 451; 15 L. J., C. P. 87; 10 Jur. 99.

A voter's place of abode was described in the list of voters for the city of London, as Greenwich, whereas his true place of abode was Queen-square, Bloomsbury; both of these places are within seven miles of the city of London:—Held, that this statement of the place of abode was an inaccurate description, which the revising barrister had power to correct. Ib. See Nagle v. Campbell, col. 41.

Power to Transfer Name from one List to another.]—Sect. 15 of the Parliamentary and Municipal Registration Act, 1878, enacts that where the whole or part of the area of a municipal borough is co-extensive with or included in the area of a parliamentary borough, the lists of parliamentary voters shall, so far as practicable, be made out and revised together; and specifies the mode in which overseers of parishes shall make out the lists. By sub-s. 2, where the parish is situate wholly or partly both in the parliamentary borough and the municipal borough, the lists shall be made out in three divisions: Division 1 shall comprise the names of the persons entitled both to be registered as parliamentary voters and to be enrolled as burgesses; division 2 shall comprise the names of the persons entitled to be registered as parliamentary voters, but not to be enrolled as burgesses; division 3 shall comprise the names of the persons entitled to be enrolled as burgesses, but not to be registered as parliamentary voters. By s. 28, sub-s. 15, where a list is made out in divisions the revising barrister shall place the name of any person in the division in which it should appear according to the result of the revision, regard being had to the title of the person to be on the list both as a parliamentary voter and a burgess, or only in one of those capacities, and shall expunge the name from the other division (if any), in which it appears. An objection in respect only of a voter's qualification for the parliamentary franchise having been taken to the retention of his name in division 1, the revising barrister struck the name off division 1; and was thereupon asked to place it in division 3, but refused so to do unless proof was given of a qualification entitling the voter to be on the burgess roll:—Held, that the decision of the revising barrister was right, and that he was not bound, under

s. 28, sub-s. 15, to place the name in division 3. Greenway v. Bachelor, Colt. 322; 53 L. J., Q. B. 179; 12 Q. B. D. 376; 50 L. T. 270; 32 W. R. 320.

A revising barrister has no power to transfer the name of an elector from division 3 of the occupiers' list to division 1, the elector having made no claim to be put on division 1. Lord v. Fox, Fox, 266; 61 L. J., Q. B. 60; [1892] 1 Q. B. 199; 65 L. T. 617.

On the register of voters for a parish in a county, the name of a voter appeared under the heading "Voters in respect of property, including occupiers of 50*l.* and upwards." His true qualification was as a 12*l.* occupier, but his name had been omitted by the overseers from the list of 12*l.* occupiers made out by them, and he had made no claim to be placed thereon, as provided by 31 & 32 Vict. c. 58, s. 17 (repealed):—Held, that there had been a mistake in a list, within 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 40 (repealed), which should have been amended by the insertion of the voter's name in the list of 12*l.* occupiers. Ballard v. Robins, 2 Hopw. & C. 384; 47 L. J., C. P. 50; 3 C. P. D. 92; 37 L. T. 436; 26 W. R. 80.

Should amend inaccurate Heading of List.]—See Mather v. Allendale, col. 70.

Sufficiently accurate Claim ought not to be amended.]—If the revising barrister is of opinion that the description in the notice of claim given to the overseers, though not strictly accurate, is sufficient to notify the real nature of the claim, he ought not to amend the claim, but to treat it as if the description had been strictly accurate. Eaden v. Cooper, 11 C. B. 18; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 183; 21 L. J., C. P. 32; 16 Jur. 549.

Declaration to amend Misdescription—Evidence to Contradict.]—Notwithstanding a declaration by a person objected to, made under s. 24 of 41 and 42 Vict. c. 26, evidence is admissible in support of the objection, and to contradict the declaration. Tranior v. Starbuck, Fox, 340.

Declaration as to Misdescription in List not Evidence unless sent to Clerk of Peace within statutory Time.]—See Daking v. Fraser, col. 71.

Whether Nature of Qualification proved as described in List.]—When the nature of a person's right to vote for a borough is inserted in the list as "dwelling-house," he is not bound to prove a qualification under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 3, but may shew that he is qualified to vote in respect of a house under 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 27 (repealed). Townshend v. St. Marylebone Overseers, 1 Hopw. & C. 606; 41 L. J., C. P. 25; L. R. 7 C. P. 143; 25 L. T. 749; 20 W. R. 148.

The nature of the qualification of a voter was stated, in the list of persons entitled to vote for a county, as "leasehold house and garden." He was the owner of a house and garden held on lease for lives:—Held, that the description of his qualification was sufficient. Jones v. Jones, 1 Hopw. & C. 95; 38 L. J., C. P. 43; L. R. 4 C. P. 422; 19 L. T. 561; 17 W. R. 204.

Proof of Notice of Claim.]—The revising barrister is entitled, under ss. 37 and 38 of 6 and 7 Vict. c. 18, to require proof that a person, who claims in consequence of the omission of his name from the 12*l.* occupiers' list, gave due notice of his claim to be inserted in such list. The fact that the overseers have inserted his name in the list of claimants for that franchise is not sufficient proof that he has given due notice of claim. Sale, In re, Colt. 152; 50 L. J., Q. B. 113; 43 L. T. 635; 45 J. P. 207.

The giving notice of a claim to the overseers to be placed on the list of voters for a county, is a matter entirely between the claimant and the overseers; and if the name of such claimant is placed on the list by the overseers, the revising barrister has no power to put such claimant to proof of his notice of claim. Davies v. Hopkins, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 376; 27 L. J., C. P. 6; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 690; 6 W. R. 68. S. P., Meade v. Cooper, Ir. R. 3 Ch. 125.

Where the name of a person inserted in the list of claimants for a county is objected to, the revising barrister has only to consider whether the claimant is entitled to be on the list "in respect of his qualification described on such list;" he is not to require proof of due notice of the claim, for that is a matter between the claimant and the overseers. Davies v. Hopkins (27 L. J., C. P. 6) followed. Leonard v. Alloways, 48 L. J., C. P. 81; 40 L. T. 197.

Cannot go behind Notice of Claim purporting to be duly signed.]—See M'Grory v. Chambers, Brown's Case, col. 76.

Can go behind Rate-Book.]—See Cooke v. Butler, col. 49.

What Objections should be Entertained.]—The revising barrister should not entertain any other objection than the one of which notice was duly given. Smith v. Woolston, 48 L. J., C. P. 84; 4 C. P. D. 73; 40 L. T. 198; 27 W. R. 535.

If the qualification of a voter is good on the face of the register, the revising barrister has no power to strike out such voter's name, on the ground that the qualification is insufficient in law, unless the retention of the name on the list has been duly objected to. Smith v. James, 1 H. & R. 338; H. & P. 317; L. R. 1 C. P. 138; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 125; 13 L. T. 69; 14 W. R. 201.

Two Persons on List for same Qualifying Property—Notice of Objection to one only.]—A person, to whose name being retained on the list of voters objection has been made on the sole ground that he is not tenant of the qualifying property, is entitled, on showing that he is duly qualified as such tenant, to have his name retained on the list, although another person (to whom no objection has been made) is also on the list of voters in respect of the same property. Warren v. Maule, Fox, 400; 15 R. 53; 71 L. T. 731.

Duty to expunge Name of Incapacitated Person whether objected to or not—Temporary Disqualification.]—The revising barrister is required by sub-s. 7 of 41 and 42 Vict. c. 26, s. 28, to expunge the name of every person, whether objected to or not, where it is proved before him that such person was on the last day of July then next preceding, incapacitated by any law or statute from voting at an election for the parliamentary borough, or an election for the municipal borough, as the case may be, to which the list relates:—Held, that the "incapacity" here referred to means such incapacities as those mentioned in Stow v. Jolliffe (L. R. 9 C. P. 734), not a mere temporary disqualification by reason of the receipt of parochial relief during the qualifying period; consequently, that, in absence of a notice of objection, the revising barrister was not bound to expunge the name of a person who had been in the receipt of such relief. Hayward v. Scott, Colt. 76; 49 L. J., C. P. 167; 5 C. P. D. 231; 28 W. R. 988; 44 J. P. 122.

Ought to strike out Peers, although not objected to.]—See Beauchamp v. Madresfield, col. 67.

Agent's Authority to represent Voter at Revision.]—At the hearing of an objection to a name being retained on a list of parliamentary voters, B. stated that he appeared on behalf of the voter; and he refused to answer a question put to him by the objector, whether or not he had been requested by the voter to appear on his behalf. The revising barrister declined to order him to answer the question, and allowed him to give evidence in support of the voter's qualification:—Held, that sub-s. 11 of 41 and 42 Vict. c. 26, s. 28, does not require that a person appearing on behalf of a voter, against whom objection is made, should have been authorised by the voter to do so. Ford v. Smerdon, 49 J. P. 760.

Barrister appearing at Revision Court as Agent for Association.]—A barrister who appears on behalf of a party or other person, though not as counsel, is within s. 41 of 6 Vict. c. 18. An association is a "party" within that section. O'Connor v. Nicholson, Fox, 250.

Right to Expel Person from Court.]—By 28 Vict. c. 36 (the County Voters Registration Act, 1865), s. 16, "it shall be lawful for any revising barrister . . . to order any person to be removed from his court who shall interrupt the business of the court, or refuse to obey his lawful orders in respect of the same." A revising barrister ordered the plaintiff to be removed from his court, which he was then holding for the revision of the lists of voters for a county; the ground of the order was that, in the previous year, whilst the defendant was sitting as revising barrister, the plaintiff had wrongfully withheld certain documents, and had thereby caused W., a claimant to be registered as voter, to be deprived of his vote. The plaintiff having sued in a county court for wrongful expulsion from the defendant's court, the latter, by way of special defence, relied upon the provisions of 28 Vict. c. 36, s. 16, and the judge nonsuited the plaintiff on the ground that the question of interruption having been decided by a revising barrister, his discretion could not be reviewed before another tribunal:—Held, that the special defence was not proved, and that the nonsuit was wrong. Willis v. Maclachlan, 45 L. J., Q. B. 689; 1 Ex. D. 376; 35 L. T. 218.

Revision Court not a Court of Law—Taxation of Solicitor's Bill.]—The court of a revising barrister is not a court of law within 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 37, so as to exclude the jurisdiction of a court of equity to order the taxation of a bill containing items for business done in that court. Andrew, In re, 17 Beav. 510; 23 L. J., Ch. 129; 17 Jur. 1145; 2 W. R. 46.

Power of Revising Barrister to close Lists—Refusal to reopen Claim or Objection during subsequent formal Business.]—A revising barrister appointed four sittings for the revision of the lists of parliamentary and municipal electors for a division of a borough, and public notice was given that the lists would be closed at the end of the fourth sitting. At the end of that sitting the revising barrister asked whether there were any more persons present who desired to be heard, and upon being satisfied that there were not, declared the lists closed. The next day, when the revising barrister sat to take the objection list for the purpose of striking out the names of persons who, having been duly objected to, had not appeared, he allowed evidence to be given of the due service of a notice of objection to a voter and of the nature of the objection, but refused to hear the evidence of the voter, on the ground that the lists were closed on the previous day, and expunged his name from the list of parliamentary voters:—Held, that the voter was not entitled to be heard, and that the revising barrister was justified in expunging his name from the list. Reg. v. Soden, 1 Smith, 115; 66 L. J., Q. B. 183; [1897] 1 Q. B. 188; 76 L. T. 161; 45 W. R. 234; 61 J. P. 150.

A revising barrister appointed two days for the revision of the lists of parliamentary and municipal electors for a particular division of a borough, and public notice was given that at the end of the second day the lists would be closed. At the end of the second day, there being no more persons present who desired to be heard, the revising barrister declared the lists closed, and disallowed the claims of all persons who had not appeared or whose claims had not been otherwise established. On the following day, when the revising barrister was sitting in court performing the work of calling out, expunging, and initialling the names of all claimants whose claims had been disallowed, two claimants, who had not appeared or been represented on the days fixed for the revision of the lists, appeared before the revising barrister and required to be heard in support of their claims:—Held, that the claimants had no right to be heard, although at the time their names had not in fact been expunged from the lists. Reg. v. Soden, 1 Smith, 77; 65 L. J., Q. B. 501; [1896] 1 Q. B. 634; 74 L. T. 520; 44 W. R. 449; 60 J. P. 390—C. A.

Where two for one Place, one cannot rehear Case decided by the other.]—When two revising barristers are appointed for the same county, city, or borough, under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 29, it is not competent for one barrister to rehear and decide upon a case which has been heard and finally determined by his colleague. Blain v. Pilkington Overseers, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 6; H. & P. 92; 34 L. J., C. P. 55; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 1237; 11 L. T. 452; 13 W. R. 269.

On Questions of Evidence.]—The minister of a dissenting congregation occupied premises, worth more than 40*s.* per annum, under the trusts of a deed, one of which was, "to permit and suffer him, for and during his life, if he should so long continue minister of the congregation, to occupy the premises rent free." The revising barrister found, upon the minister's own statement, that the appointment was for life:—Held, that, there being no appeal on questions of evidence, it must be taken on the finding that the minister had an equitable estate for life, which entitled him to vote. Burton v. Brooks, 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 197; 11 C. B. 41; 21 L. J., C. P. 7; 16 Jur. 569.

Qualification in different Divisions—Selection for Voting—Marking Name in Division not selected.]—The right to appeal from a revising barrister's decision in respect of claims to vote is still governed by s. 42 of the Parliamentary Registration Act, 1843. Objections made against a claim must relate to the right of the claimant to have his name inserted in a list of voters; and where a person already entered as a voter in more than one division of a parliamentary borough has elected the division in which he will vote, no appeal will lie from a decision directing his name to be marked as not entitled to vote in another division under s. 28, sub-s. 14 of the Parliamentary and Municipal Registration Act, 1878. Reg. v. Liverpool Revising Barrister, Fox, 375; 64 L. J., Q. B. 131; [1895] 1 Q. B. 155; 15 R. 123; 71 L. T. 636; 43 W. R. 220.

From Refusal to hear Person.]—The refusal of a revising barrister to hear a person appearing before him is not a matter of appeal within s. 42 of 6 Vict. c. 18. O'Connor v. Nicholson, Fox, 250. And see Reg. v. Soden, col. 104.

As to Sufficiency of Description of Qualifying Property.]—A party, whose name appeared on the register for a county, was objected to, on the ground that the property was not sufficiently described therein for the purpose of being identified. The barrister having decided that the description was sufficient, the court declined to interfere. Wood v. Willesden Overseers, Barr. & Arn. 527; 2 C. B. 15; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 314; 15 L. J., C. P. 41; 9 Jur. 1100.

Women cannot appeal.]—See Wilson v. Salford, col. 107.

Stating a Second Case after Point once decided.—Although the decisions of the court upon cases stated by revising barristers are by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 66, declared to be final and conclusive in the case upon the point of law adjudicated upon, it is nevertheless competent to a revising barrister, upon a future occasion, and between other parties, again to raise the question, even in relation to the same property qualification. Roberts v. Percival, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 36; H & P. 121; 34 L. J., C. P. 84; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 40; 11 L. T. 603; 13 W. R. 265. See Webster v. Ashton-under-Lyne, Hadfield's Case, post, col. 112.

No Grievance, No Appeal.]—The revising barrister being of opinion that a notice of objection was bad, allowed the objector to appeal. Proceeding, however, to inquire into the validity of the votes he held them bad also, and thereupon struck them off (thus giving effect to the notice of objection), and he directed that the names should be reinstated if the court held the notice to be bad. The objector having appealed:—Held, that the appeal could not be heard (the votes being struck off); that the objector was an appellant without a grievance, and the parties off had not appealed. Jones v. Marshall, 1 Hopw. & C. 738.

Court will not interfere with Decision as to Value of Premises.]—See Coogan v. Luckett, col. 24, and Sherlock v. Steward, col. 60.

Notice of, to Revising Barrister.]—Notice of appeal must be given in strict accordance with the provisions of s. 42 of 6 Vict. c. 18. A verbal notice given in proper time, that is supplemented by a written notice delivered after the proper time, is, therefore, an invalid notice. Guise v. Dilke, Fox, 283.

No Appeal on Question of Sufficiency of Signature to Notice of Objection.]—See Hinton v. Hinton, col. 85.

Consolidating Appeals.]—The revising barrister has no power to consolidate appeals that do not depend upon the same state of facts, and upon the same decision in point of law. Prior v. Waring, 5 C. B. 56; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 45; 17 L. J., C. P. 73; 11 Jur. 1086.

Where the barrister found that the consolidated cases depended upon the same point of law as that decided in the principal case, the court refused to remit the case, in order that the qualifications of the parties, whose cases were consolidated, might be stated. Hutchins v. Brown, Bar. & Arn. 545.

Appeals cannot be consolidated unless they depend upon the same precise point of law, to be decided on the same facts. Robson v. Brown, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 34; 26 L. J., C. P. 81; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 674.

If appeals have been consolidated which do not depend upon the same point of law, the court will dismiss the consolidated appeals. Ashcroft's Case, 1 Hopw. & C. 48; 38 L. J., C. P. 72; 19 L. T. 452; 17 W. R. 142.

Where an appeal, which the revising barrister had intended to consolidate (indorsing on the case the words "Consolidated appeal"), was defective by reason of the person, whose name the revising barrister had indorsed as respondent, not having consented to answer the appeal on behalf of himself and the other persons whose names appeared in the schedule:—Held, that such defect, although fatal to the consolidation of the appeal under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 44, did not affect its vitality as a single appeal under s. 42. Druitt v. Lane, Colt. 307.

It is not necessary that the indorsement on the back of the case in a consolidated appeal should set forth the names of all the appellants; it is sufficient if it give the name of the person who appeals on behalf of himself and the other appellants, the names, &c., of the other appellants appearing in the body of the case. Sherwin v. Whyman, 2 Hopw. & C. 185; 43 L. J., C. P. 36; L. R. 9 C. P. 243; 29 L. T. 680; 22 W. R. 127. See Wanklyn v. Woollett, infra, and Brown v. Tamplin, col. 109.

Consolidated Appeal—Some of Respondents Women.]—A woman, not being a person within the meaning of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 42, cannot appeal from the decision of a revising barrister. Where appeals had been consolidated, in which some of the respondents were women, the court dismissed the appeals as improperly consolidated. Wilson v. Salford Town Clerk, 1 Hopw. & C. 44; 38 L. J., C. P. 35; L. R. 4 C. P. 398; 19 L. T. 483; 17 W. R. 161. See Bennett v. Brumfitt, Ashcroft's Case, 1 Hopw. & C. 48; 38 L. J., C. P. 72; L. R. 4 C. P. 399, n.; 19 L. T. 452; 17 W. R. 142.

Death of Revising Barrister before Case finally settled.]—Where a revising barrister assented to the substance of a special case agreed upon between the parties thereto, but died without having finally settled the terms in which the statement should be made, the court refused to allow the case to be entered. Nettleton v. Burrell, Barr. & Arn. 297; 7 Man. & G. 35; 2 D. & L. 598; 8 Scott (N.R.) 738; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 157; 14 L. J., C. P. 37; 8 Jur. 1033.

Case not signed by Respondent—Agreement to waive Formalities.]—The court cannot entertain an appeal against a decision of a revising barrister, unless the requirements of the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 42, have been duly complied with, or there is a clear and unequivocal consent to waive the performance of them. Scott v. Durant, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 205; H. & P. 269; 34 L. J., C. P. 81; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 115; 11 L. T. 676; 13 W. R. 316.

The revising barrister for a borough, at his court, holden on the 28th October, decided against an appellant's claim to be on the register, and assented to a case being stated for the opinion of the court; and it was agreed that all formalities should be waived. No case was agreed on till the 4th November, when the appellant's solicitor submitted a draft case to the respondent's solicitor. The respondent refused to sign it. On the 5th November the barrister signed the case, and it was transmitted to the court:—Held, that the appeal was not complete. Ib.

Signature and Indorsement of Case by Barrister.]—In the absence of the indorsement the master has no authority to enter, nor the court jurisdiction to hear, the appeal. Wanklyn v. Woollett, 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 597; 4 C. B. 86; 16 L. J., C. P. 144; 11 Jur. 129.

The same rule is applicable to consolidated appeals. Ib.

Where the case transmitted to the master is not signed, as well as endorsed, the court will not hear the appeal, where the respondent does not appear. Burton v. Blake, 11 C. B. 47.

An appeal tendered within the proper time having been rejected by the officer, because the indorsement had not been signed by the revising barrister, the court allowed it to be entered de bene esse, on the fifth day of the term, due diligence appearing to have been used to obtain the signature within the first four days. Pring v. Estcourt, 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 505; 4 C. B. 71; 16 L. J., C. P. 10; 10 Jur. 928.

Where a case transmitted is not signed by the revising barrister at the end of it the court cannot entertain the appeal. But the respondent consenting, the court allowed the case to be signed nunc pro tunc. Burton v. Brooks, 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 197; 11 C. B. 41; 21 L. J., C. P. 7; 16 Jur. 569.

The provision in the 58th section of the 13 & 14 Vict. c 69 (Ireland), which corresponds to the 42nd section of the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, as to the signature and indorsement of appeals from the revising barrister, is directory and not mandatory; and the time for such signature and indorsement may be effectually extended by consent of the parties beyond the termination of the revision sessions. When the time had been so extended by consent, the appeal was entertained though the case was signed and endorsed by the revising barrister after the sessions had terminated, the decision having been pronounced and notice of intention to appeal having been given during such sessions. Topham v. Kelleher, 6 L. R., Ir. 285—C. A.

Notice of, to Court.]—The notice of an appellant's intention to prosecute his appeal must be signed by the appellant himself; the signature of an agent will not suffice. Petherbridge v. Ash, 4 C. B. 74; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 507; 10 Jur. 950.

Where an appeal was tendered within the first four days of the term, with a notice imperfectly signed, the court refused to allow the appeal to be entered (the defect being cured) on the fifth day. Ib.

Where a notice has not been given within the first four days of the term, the court has no jurisdiction to order the master to enter the appeal. Autey v. Topham, Barr. & Arn. 1; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 1; 5 Man. & G. 1; 7 Scott (N.R.) 402; 1 D. & L. 785; 13 L. J., C. P. 39; 7 Jur. 995.

When the statement in writing by the revising barrister is duly transmitted to the masters, but the notice of intention to prosecute the appeal is not sent in time, the appeal cannot be entered. Simpson v. Wilkinson, 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 5; 5 Man. & G. 3; 7 Scott (N.R.) 406; 1 D. & L. 786; 13 L. J., C. P. 39.

An affidavit by the clerk of the attorney to the appellant, stating that the notice, which is required to be signed by the appellant, had, by mistake, not been sent, cannot be received as a substitute for such notice. Ib.

Notice of, to Respondent.]—The decision of the revising barrister took place on the 16th October. The appellant's attorney was taken ill in the last week of that month, and died on the 7th November:—Held, that this was no excuse for the absence of the notice to the respondent required by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 62; and that the court has no power to aid the appellant by postponing the hearing. Pring v. Estcourt, 4 C. B. 73.

The day appointed for hearing registration appeals is the first day appointed for that purpose by the court within 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 64, which requires ten days' notice at least to be given to the respondent of the appellant's intention to prosecute the appeal. Norton v. Salisbury Town Clerk, 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 538; 4 C. B. 32; 16 L. J., C. P. 9; 10 Jur. 970.

An application by a respondent for leave to deliver paper books after the proper time, does not dispense with the notice required to be served upon him by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 62. Grocer v. Buntemps, 4 C. B. 70; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 544, n.; 16 L. J., C. P. 63; 10 Jur. 971.

A waiver by the respondent of the notice to him required by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 64, will not enable the court to entertain the appeal in his absence. Newton v. Mobberly Overseers, Barr. & Arn. 695; 2 C. B. 203; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 427; 15 L. J., C. P. 154; 9 Jur. 995.

The court has no power to entertain an appeal (where the respondent fails to appear), unless the appellant has served upon the respondent a notice of his intention to prosecute the appeal ten clear days before the first day appointed by the court for hearing appeals, exclusive both of the day of service of the notice and of the day so appointed. Clarke v. Beaton, 5 C. B. 76.

A consolidated case of appeal, naming the returning officer of a borough as respondent, was signed on the 31st of October; notice of appeal was not given to him till the 4th of November; the first day appointed for hearing appeals was the 13th of November; the respondent not appearing:—Held, that the appeal could not be heard. Brown v. Tamplin, 2 Hopw. & C. 17; 42 L. J., C. P. 37; L. R. 8 C. P. 241; 27 L. T. 610; 21 W. R. 125.

Semble, that where the respondent appears, he is precluded from objecting to the form of the service of the notice of appeal. Rawlins v. West Derby Overseers, Barr. & Arn. 599; 2 C. B. 72; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 373; 15 L. J., C. P. 70.

The decision of the revising barrister was not given until Saturday, the 30th October. The notice to the respondent was served on Tuesday, the 2nd November, the first day appointed for hearing the appeals being the 11th:—Held, that the case was within the proviso in s. 64 of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, empowering the court to postpone the hearing where there has not been reasonable time to give the notice. Palmer v. Allen, 5 C. B. 5; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 42; 18 L. J., C. P. 265.

When an appellant gave his notice of intention to prosecute his appeal to the respondent at the same time that he gave it to the masters of the court, but not so as to leave ten days at least, as required by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 64, between the date of giving such notice and the day appointed for hearing these appeals, the court would not postpone the hearing. Luckett v. Voller, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 1; K. & G. 371; 31 L. J., C. P. 43; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 676; 5 L. T. 312; 10 W. R. 105.

The court adjourned the hearing of an appeal, in order to give the appellant time to give the notice, the case not having been settled and delivered to the appellant until the eighth day of term. Burton v. Blake, 11 C. B. 47.

The court will not postpone the hearing of an appeal in order to afford time to give the necessary notice, upon a suggestion that the difficulty has arisen from the circumstance of the appointment of an unusually early day for the hearing of appeals, there having been ample time to give the notice between the day appointed and the day on which the decision of the revising barrister was pronounced. Adey v. Hill, 4 C. B. 38; 16 L. J., C. P. 63; 10 Jur. 971.

Delivery of Paper Books to the Court.]—The 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 60, enacts, that all appeals from the revising barristers shall be presented according to the ordinary rules and practice of the court, with respect to special cases, so far as the same may be applicable; and the appellant, therefore, ought to deliver paper books to the chief justice and the senior puisne judge, and the respondent to the two junior puisne judges of the court. Allan v. Waterhouse, 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 93; 7 Scott (N.R.) 485; 1 D. & L. 787; S. C., sub nom. Cooper v. Coates, 5 Man. & G. 98.

The court, under particular circumstances, allowed the paper books to be delivered by the respondents nunc pro tunc. Colville v. Rochester Town Clerk, 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 380.

Where the paper books have not been delivered four days before the first day for hearing, application must be made to the court to allow the paper books to be delivered. Croucher v. Browne, 9 Jur. 976.

If one party neglects to deliver his paper books, the other must do so for him, or when the case is reached it will be struck out. Shedden v. Butt, 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 188; 11 C. B. 27.

If the paper books are not delivered to the judges four days before the day for hearing, the court will not afterwards allow them to be delivered nunc pro tunc, without some sufficient reason being given to excuse the neglect. Palmer v. Allen, 5 C. B. 1; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 1; 17 L. J., C. P. 65; 11 Jur. 977.

The delivery of paper books is a matter quite within the discretion of the court, and where they had not been delivered to the judges' clerks four clear days before the first day appointed for hearing appeals, the court permitted their delivery nunc pro tunc, there appearing to be sufficient time to enable the judges to peruse them. Elliot v. St. Mary Within Overseers, 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 508.

Respondent not Appearing.]—The revising barrister not only made the overseers of a parish respondents in a case for the opinion of the court, but inserted specific names; it turned out that some of those named were not overseers, and some not named were; notice was given to all those persons who were named, and also to all the overseers; no one appeared as respondent:—Held, that the court had jurisdiction to hear the case. Brumfitt v. Roberts, 1 Hopw. & C. 387; 39 L. J., C. P. 95; L. R. 5 C. P. 224; 22 L. T. 301; 18 W. R. 678.

Where the appellant appears, and the respondent does not, the court will adhere to its former practice of hearing the appellant's case argued before it will reverse the decision of the revising barrister. Pownall v. Hood, 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 170; 11 C. B. 1; 21 L. J., C. P. 12; 16 Jur. 618.

On proof that he has served notice of appeal the appellant will be heard, though the respondent does not appear. Ib.

The court will require the case of the appellant to be argued if he appears, though no one appears for the respondent. Cooper v. Harris, 7 Man. & G. 97 ; 8 Scott (N.R.) 921 ; 14 L. J., C. P. 72.

The court cannot entertain an appeal in the absence of the respondent, unless there is an affidavit of service upon him of notice of the appellant's intention to prosecute the appeal. Colville v. Rochester Town Clerk, 2 C. B. 60 ; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 380.

A respondent not appearing upon an appeal being called on, the appeal will be dismissed, unless the appellant is prepared with an affidavit of the due service of the notice to the respondent, required by the 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 62, or with a special affidavit of circumstances to bring him within the proviso in s. 64. Aldworth or Allworth v. Dore, 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 67 ; 5 C. B. 87 ; 17 L. J., C. P. 142.

Appellant not Appearing.]—Where the respondent appears, but the appellant does not, the decision of the revising barrister will be affirmed with costs, unless it appears that a similar point is involved in another case standing for argument. Bage v. Perkins, Barr. & Arn. 414 ; 7 Man. & G. 156 ; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 255 ; 8 Scott (N.R.) 983. S. P., Crocker v. St. Mary, Lambeth, 7 Man. & G. 156, n. ; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 255, n. ; 8 Scott (N.R.) 985 ; White v. Pring, 8 C. B. 13.

Absence of Both Parties.] — Where neither party appears the case will be struck out, and the court will not, without sufficient reason being shewn, restore it to the paper. Wansey v. St. Peter le Poor Overseers, 7 Man. & G. 162 ; 8 Scott (N.R.) 992.

Practice on the Hearing.]—The court will hear only one counsel on each side. Gadsby v. Warburton, Barr. & Arn. 426 ; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 136 ; 7 Man. & G. 11 ; 8 Scott (N.R.) 775 ; 14 L. J., C. P. 41 ; 9 Jur. 113.

The appellant has the right to begin. Webb v. Birmingham Overseers, 5 Man. & G. 14 ; 7 Scott (N.R.) 435 ; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 6 ; 13 L. J., C. P. 57.

The court, on the motion of the appellant's counsel, reversed the revising barrister's decision without argument, the respondent's counsel stating that he could not support the decision. Jarvies v. Shrewsbury Town Clerk, 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 182.

Decisions of election committees of the House of Commons are not receivable as authorities upon the argument. Whithorn v. Thomas, Barr. & Arn. 259 ; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 125 ; 7 Man. & G. 1 ; 8 Scott (N.R.) 783 ; 14 L. J., C. P. 38.

Whether Facts Sufficiently Stated.]—Semble, that a statement in a case, that A. had slept in T. "about twelve times," was uncertain and insufficient ; but the revising barrister being present in court, the court permitted the case to be altered by him instanter. Ib.

Where a case found that a claimant "stated" certain matters, it was remitted, upon the ground that it set forth evidence, and not facts. Pitts v. Smedley, Barr. & Arn. 344 ; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 196 ; 7 Man. & G. 85 ; 8 Scott (N.R.) 907 ; 14 L. J., C. P. 73 ; 9 Jur. 69.

The court will not remit a case for the insertion of a fact which the barrister considered to be immaterial. Hinton v. Wenlock Town Clerk, Barr. & Arn. 257 ; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 123 ; 7 Man. & G. 166, n. ; 2 D. & L. 598 ; 14 L. J., C. P. 37 ; 8 Jur. 988.

Or allow a material omission in the case to be waived by consent, but will send it to be restated. Webb v. Birmingham, Barr. & Arn. 5 ; 5 Man. & G. 14 ; 7 Scott (N.R.) 435 ; 13 L. J., C. P. 57.

Appellant must Rely on Facts stated in, and Questions raised by, Case.]—The decision of the barrister will be affirmed, if it does not appear from the facts stated that his decision was wrong. Watson v. Cotton, 5 C. B. 51 ; 2 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 53 ; 17 L. J., C. P. 68.

The court will not allow any objections to be taken upon the argument of the appeal which are not raised in the case. Simpson v. Wilkinson, Barr. & Arn. 308 ; 7 Man. & G. 50 ; 8 Scott (N.R.) 814 ; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 168 ; 14 L. J., C. P. 49. S. P., Nunn v. Denton, Barr. & Arn. 324 ; 7 Man. & G. 66 ; 8 Scott (N.R.) 794 ; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 178 ; 14 L. J., C. P. 43.

When the statements of fact by the barrister involve the construction by him of a deed, the court cannot look at the deed to see if he has stated the effect of it correctly. Hillgrove v. O'Shea, Ir. R. 3 C. L. 119.

Previous Decision of Court not Conclusive.]—The application of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 66, which enacts that a decision shall be final and conclusive, is limited to the case in which the decision is given. Webster v. Ashton-under-Lyne Overseers, Hadfield's Case, 2 Hopw. & C. 89 ; 42 L. J., C. P. 146 ; L. R. 8 C. P. 306 ; 28 L. T. 901 ; 21 W. R. 637.

Practice where Case Remitted to Barrister.]—Where a case is remitted, the practice is that the case is handed by the master to the attorney for the appellant, by whom it is transmitted to the barrister, who returns it to the attorney, and he returns it to the master. Coogan v. Luckett, Barr. & Arn. 716.

Costs.]—Where only one side is heard, the successful party is entitled to costs. Allen v. House, Barr. & Arn. 415 ; 7 Man. & G. 157 ; 8 Scott (N.R.) 987 ; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 255 ; 14 L. J., C. P. 79.

But it is not a general rule that the successful party is entitled to costs, where the court hears only one side. Walker v. Payne, Barr. & Arn. 541 ; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 324 ; 15 L. J., C. P. 38.

The court will not give costs though only one side is heard, where a question of law, the fair subject of a doubt, is involved. Croucher v. Browne, 2 C. B. 97 ; 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 388 ; 15 L. J., C. P. 74.

Where the decision of the barrister is affirmed without hearing the respondent, the practice is to grant costs. Passingham v. Pitty, 17 C. B. 299 ; 25 L. J., C. P. 4 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 837.

Where the decision upon an appeal is adverse to the claim of franchise, semble, that the court will grant or withhold costs according as it sees that there was reasonable ground for the appeal ; but that, where the decision against the appellant supports the franchise, costs will be given as a matter of course. Clark v. St. Mary, Bury St. Edmunds Overseers, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 23 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 645.

A respondent will not be allowed costs where the case is a reasonably fit one for argument. Collier v. King, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 478.

The general rule as to costs, even when the court decides adversely to the claim for the franchise, is to give the respondent his costs, unless the court is of opinion that there was reasonable ground for the appeal upon the legal construction of the statutes. Harris v. O'Connor, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 64.

The court made an order under s. 38 of 41 & 42 Vict. c. 26, for payment of the costs of a successful appeal by the town clerk, who had been named as respondent. Nuth v. Tamplin, 8 Q. B. D. 258, n.—C. A.

When the court sends a case back to the revising barrister to decide a matter of fact which he has referred to the decision of the court instead of deciding it himself, and the appellant then drops the appeal, the respondent is not entitled to costs. Lawe v. Maillard, 38 L. J., C. P. 179; L. R. 4 C. P. 547.

Disqualification.]—To incapacitate a person from being elected as a member of the house of commons, as "executing, holding or enjoying" a contract made for the public service within 22 Geo. 3, c. 45, s. 1, such contract must at the time of the election be an executory one. Manchester Election Petition, In re, Royse v. Birley, 38 L. J., C. P. 203; L. R. 4 C. P. 296; 20 L. T. 786; 17 W. R. 827.

Where, therefore, under a contract for the supply of goods, the goods had been delivered to and accepted by the government before the election, and at the time of the election nothing remained to be done under the contract except for the government to pay the price which previously had become ascertained and was payable, the contractor was held not to be disqualified, since the contract at the time of the election was executed, and not within the statute. Ib.

The 22 Geo. 3, c. 45, s. 1, applies only to cases where the person contracting with the government knew, or ought reasonably to have known, that he was so dealing with the government. Ib.

An army clothier, who contracts with a colonel of a regiment or his agents to furnish clothing for such regiment, is not within 22 Geo. 3, c. 45, which renders all persons holding contracts for the public service incapable of being elected or sitting in the house of commons. Thompson v. Pearse, 1 Br. & B. 25; 3 Moore, 260.

In 1848 Mitchell was convicted in Ireland of treason-felony, and sentenced to transportation for fourteen years. He escaped within that time, and did not afterwards undergo the rest of the sentence or obtain a pardon. In 1853 he was naturalised as a citizen of the United States, and was at the time of his election, 1875, a natural-born British subject who had become an alien:—Held, that he was on both these grounds disqualified from being elected a member of the house of commons. Tipperary Election Petition, In re, Morton v. Scully, Moore v. Scully, Ir. R. 9 C. L. 217.

The election of a candidate for another constituency is not a disqualification. Belfast Case, 4 O'M. & H. 105.

Conveyances for Qualification.]—The court will not assist a party in recovering an estate conveyed by him for an illegal purpose, such as to enable the grantee to vote at an election, or sit in parliament. Groves v. Groves, 3 Y. & J. 163.

Injunction granted to restrain the defendant from suing for a rent-charge, granted to qualify him to sit in parliament, the purpose never having been answered. Platamone v. Staple, Coop. 250.

Bill for re-conveyance of qualification to sit in parliament, given by father to his son, dismissed with costs. Curtis v. Perry, 6 Ves. 747; 6 R. R. 28.

Where a father assigned property to a son for the purpose of giving a qualification, and by a letter the son promised to pay the father a rent-charge out of the lands equivalent to the rents, the court refused to enforce the arrears of the rent-charge, holding the transaction to be only colourable. Johnstone, In re, 2 Jo. & Lat. 222; 9 Ir. Eq. R. 227.

P. being seised of an estate in a lease of lives renewable for ever, subject to a head-rent equal in amount to a rent which a sub-tenant of a moiety thereof held at, executed an agreement in writing to let the other moiety thereof, which was in his own possession, to D., his brother, for the lives of D. and two others, and the life of the survivor, free from rent and assessments during D.'s life, and after that to be subject to a yearly rent of 350*l.*; leases to be executed at the request of either party. There was evidence that the object of this gift was to enable D. to qualify as member of parliament for the city of Cork, where the lands lay. P. died intestate, in possession, and without having executed the lease:—Held, that this agreement could not be enforced against the heir of P., the object of it being to give D. a qualification for parliament, and that there was no agreement for valuable consideration, and that as an imperfect gift the court of equity could not enforce it. Callaghan v. Callaghan, 8 Cl. & F. 374. And see 4 Ir. iv. Agents.

Evidence to Establish Agency.]—The funds of a political association of 200 members were chiefly supplied to the secretary by the respondent, and these funds were mainly spent in treating at meetings held to promote the respondent's election:—Held, that the secretary of the association was the agent of the respondent. Truscott v. Bevan, 44 L. Member of Candidate's Committee.]—A member of a committee which conducts an election for a candidate, is such an agent as will bind his principal by his acts. Honeywood v. Geary, 6 Esp. 119.

Action against Member of Committee for Price of Refreshments Supplied to Voters.]—In an action by an innkeeper against one of the committee of a candidate at a contested election, for refreshments supplied to voters, which were, in fact, ordered through a third party, M.:—Held, that the innkeeper was bound, in order to recover in the action, to prove that M. was employed by the defendant and others to give the order, and that the defendant, in so employing M., was not acting as agent for any other person; or else that M. was a principal jointly with the defendant, or with the defendant and others; and that it would make no difference, that the innkeeper, at the time, considered M. as authorised to contract on behalf of the candidate, if in fact he was not so authorised. Thomas v. Edwards, 2 M. & W. 215; 1 Tyr. & Gr. 872.

Person Ordering Refreshments for Voters Liable to Pay unless known to be an Agent.]—If a person who was not himself a candidate, and who was not known to the party who supplied refreshments to be an agent of a candidate, opened a public-house at an election and ordered supplies for the voters, he was personally liable to pay, and the 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 24 (repealed), afforded him no defence, if the goods were supplied entirely on his credit. Thomas v. Harries, 6 Car. & P. 615.

Payments by Agents, other than Expense Agent, to Canvassers—Not Recoverable from Candidate.]—It is unlawful for any election agent or sub-agent, except the expense agent, to make payments on behalf of the candidate even for current disbursements, and such payments cannot be recovered from the candidate. An election sub-agent, who was a solicitor, employed canvassers for the work of the election, and paid them out of his own moneys. The expense agent having disallowed these payments, the sub-agent brought an action against the candidate in the district registry for the money expended. The candidate obtained the common order to tax the plaintiff's account as a solicitor's bill of costs, and then obtained an order to stay further proceedings in the action pending the taxation. On the taxation the candidate objected to the payments as illegal under the second section of the Corrupt Practices Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 29):—Held, that the payments were illegal; that although the sub-agent had an implied authority to employ canvassers, he had no implied authority to pay them, and therefore he could not recover the amount expended from the candidate. Parker, In re, 52 L. J., Ch. 159; 21 Ch. D. 408; 47 L. T. 633; 31 W. R. 212; 47 J. P., 36, 516—C. A.

Held, also, that the candidate could take the objection of illegality on the taxation of the bill of costs. Ib.

Personal Liability of, to Canvassers.]—An election agent is not liable to be sued for the services of persons employed by him in canvassing voters, without proof of an undertaking on the part of such agent to make himself personally liable for those services. Longbottom v. Rodgers, 2 Man. & G. 427.

But slight evidence is sufficient to shew that the credit was given to the agent. Ib.

Action by, for Remuneration for Services.]—In an action for work and labour, the plaintiff, who was an attorney, proved that he had rendered professional services for the defendant as his agent at a contested election for a seat in parliament. It also appeared on the plaintiff's evidence, that the plaintiff voted at the election for the defendant, although by law a paid agent is forbidden to vote. The defendant gave evidence to shew that the plaintiff agreed to render his services gratuitously. The judge directed the jury that the plaintiff was entitled to a verdict, unless the defendant made out to their satisfaction that the services were to be gratuitous:—Held a misdirection, and that the true question for the jury should have been, whether, taking all the evidence together, the plaintiff had made out he was to be paid for the services. Hingeston v. Kelly, 18 L. J., Ex. 360.

Taxation of Bill, where Agent a Solicitor.]—The charges of solicitors, employed as electioneering agents, are taxable under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 73, s. 37. Osborne, In re, 25 Beav. 353; 27 L. J., Ch. 532; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 296; 6 W. R. 401.

But a solicitor who has been employed as an electioneering agent will not be allowed to have his costs taxed. Oliver, In re, 36 L. J., Ch. 261; L. R. 2 Eq. 3; 15 W. R. 331.

Refusal to Nominate, unless Expenses Prepaid.]—The expenses of carrying into effect the provisions of the Ballot Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 33), are to be borne in the first instance by the returning officer, and to be apportioned between and recovered by him from the several candidates. Davis v. Kensington (Lord), 43 L. J., C. P. 370; L. R. 9 C. P. 720; 30 L. T. 610; 22 W. R. 707.

The prepayment of or security for the estimated amount of such expenses cannot be insisted upon by the returning officer as a condition precedent to his putting the candidate in nomination. Ib.

When, therefore, the returning officer refused to nominate one of two candidates on the ground that he declined to submit to such a demand, the return of the other candidate was declared void. Ib.

Persons Disturbing the Proceedings—Powers of Sheriff.]—If, at a county court held for the election of knights of the shire, a freeholder interrupts the proceedings, by making a great noise and disturbance, the sheriff may order him to be taken into custody, and carried before a justice of the peace. Spilsbury v. Micklethwaite, 1 Taunt. 146; 9 R. Returning Officer—Duty of, as to Annual Appointment of Election Auditor.]—The 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, s. 15 (repealed), enacting that, once in every year, in August, the returning officer of every county shall appoint an election auditor for and during the year then next ensuing, and until another appointment of election auditor shall be made, is directory, and an appointment in March, 1857, by the sheriff, who came into office in that month, was valid, and superseded an appointment made in 1854. Reg. v. Griffiths, 7 El. & Bl. 952; 26 L. J., Q. B. 313; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 618.

—— Action against, for Refusing to Receive or Count Vote.]—Any person who has a right to vote at an election for members of parliament may maintain an action against the returning officer for maliciously refusing to admit his vote, and may recover damages for the injury, though the persons for whom he offered to vote were elected. Ashby v. White, 2 Lord Raymond, 938; 3 Id. 320; 1 Smith L. C., 10th ed., 231; 14 Howell, St. Tr. 695.

A person was on the register of voters for a borough, and tendered his vote for one of the candidates at a contested election for a member to serve in parliament for that borough; the returning officer mistaking the duty required of him by 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 81, allowed a scrutiny upon, and finally refused to receive and record, the vote. He had ceased to reside in the borough, or within seven miles thereof, for some time before the election, and was, therefore, not entitled to vote. In an action against the returning officer:—Held, that a person on the register of voters, but having lost his right to vote by the provisions of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 79, cannot recover damages against a returning officer (no malice existing) for refusing to receive his vote at the poll. Pryce v. Belchers, 4 C. B. 867; 16 L. J., C. P. 264.

If a returning officer, without malice or any improper motive, but exercising his judgment honestly, refuses to receive the vote of a person entitled to vote at an election, no action will lie against him at the suit of such person. Tozer v. Child, 7 El. & Bl. 377; 26 L. J., Q. B. 151; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 774; 5 W. R. 287—Ex. Ch.

Upon the election of a member of parliament, A.'s vote, having been objected to, was rejected by the returning officer's deputy, as being the vote of a paid agent of the candidate for whom it was tendered, and a note to that effect was entered by the deputy in the poll-book:—Held, that this substantially amounted to a recording of the vote by the deputy, whereby it became the duty of the returning officer, on the inspection of the poll-book, to cast up that vote with the other votes recorded for the same candidate; and for breach of which duty the returning officer was liable in an action. M'Gowan v. Sedley, 8 Ir. C. L. R. 342—Ex. Ch.

In an action against a returning officer, for refusing the vote of an inhabitant on the election of a member of parliament, the malice of the defendant is an essential ingredient to support such action. Cullen v. Morris, 2 Stark. 577; 20 R. R. 742.

And malice must be proved as well as laid. Drewe v. Coulton, 1 East, 563, n.; 6 R. R. 346, n. S. P., Milward v. Sargeant, 1 East, 577, n.; 6 R. R. 350.

—— Liability of, for Refusing Copy of Poll.]—An action lies against a returning officer at an election, for 500*l.* penalty, under 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 25, s. 6, for not delivering a copy of the poll to a candidate, on being required. Smith v. Phillips, 1 Bro. P. C. 69.

—— Cannot Return Himself.]—See Reg. v. Owens, 2 E. & E. 86; 28 L. J., Q. B. 316; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 764; 7 W. R. 566.

—— Charges of—Taxation.]—At a parliamentary election the high sheriff was the returning officer, the duties being performed on his behalf by a firm of solicitors, one of whom was under-sheriff. The returning officer's charges included a charge for professional assistance rendered to him by the under-sheriff's firm, which was disallowed on taxation, on the ground that no detailed account was sent in to the returning officer within fourteen days of the return, as required by s. 5 of the Returning Officers Act, 1875:—Held, that the charge was wrongly disallowed on the above ground, the section not being applicable as between the returning officer and the candidates to charges made for work done for the returning officer by his own agents. Essex Election (South-Eastern Division), In re, 56 L. J., Q. B. 356; 19 Q. B. D. 252; 57 L. T. 104; 36 W. R. 44.

The right of a returning officer under s. 2 of the same act to be paid his reasonable charges and expenses is not limited to such charges only as have been vouched under ss. 4 and 5 of the act, nor is a charge made by him to be disallowed merely because in the account sent in by him to the candidates it appears under a wrong heading. A returning officer is not limited to charging for such services and expenses as come verbatim et literatim within the description in the schedule to the act, if they are services and expenses of one of the kinds mentioned in the schedule. Ib.

A charge for storing ballot-boxes from one election to another in order to avoid the expense of procuring fresh ones was therefore allowed, although no such charge is expressly provided for in the schedule to the act. Ib.

A returning officer at a parliamentary election is not entitled to remuneration for personal services rendered by him in the conduct of the election, under the heading of professional or other assistance, which he has not as a matter of fact employed. Shoreditch (Hoxton Division) Election, In re, Walker, Ex parte, 56 L. T. 529.

By s. 4 of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 84, it is enacted that an application to tax the returning officer's charges at a parliamentary election may be made, within fourteen days from the delivery of the account, to the county court having jurisdiction at the place of nomination for the election:—Held, that an application made within the time specified to the registrar of the county court when the judge was not sitting was properly made. Reg. v. Bloomsbury County Court Judge, 56 L. T. 321; 51 J. P. 212—C. A. Affirming 55 L. J., Q. B. 443; 17 Q. B. D. 778.

Where the accounts of a returning officer have been taxed by the registrar of a county court under the Parliamentary Elections (Returning Officers) Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 84), s. 4, the county court judge has no jurisdiction to review the registrar's taxation. Reg. v. Lambeth County Court Judge, 17 Q. B. D. 96. See 49 & 50 Vict. c. 57.

A candidate at a parliamentary election may take the benefit of a taxation of the returning officer's charges made at the instance of another candidate. The fact that he has agreed to pay the full charges, and was not a party to the taxation, does not deprive him of that right. Martin v. Tomkinson, 62 L. J., Q. B. 400; [1893] 2 Q. B. 121; 5 R. 411; 69 L. T. 285; 57 J. P. 725.

Presiding Officer—Appointment of.]—Semble, the appointment of a presiding officer need not be in writing. Reg. v. Garvey, 16 Cox, C. C. 252.

—— Duty of, at Polling Station—Right of Action of Defeated Candidate for Neglect.]—Under the Ballot Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 33), it is the duty of the presiding officer at a polling station, or a clerk deputed by him, whichever of them in fact undertakes it, to deliver to the voters ballot papers bearing the official mark, and to be present, so that each voter, before placing his ballot paper in the box, can shew to him the official mark on its back; but primâ facie, and in the absence of it appearing that a clerk has been deputed by such presiding officer to fulfil it, the duty lies on such officer. Pickering v. James, 42 L. J., C. P. 217; L. R. 8 C. P. 489; 29 L. T. 210; 21 W. R. 786.

But it is doubtful whether there is a similar duty as to ascertaining, before the voters put their ballot papers in the box, whether they are properly marked with the official mark. Ib.

When the presiding officer or clerk commits a breach of duty, he is liable to an action for damages by the party aggrieved, though the breach may not be wilful or malicious. Ib.

When a declaration sufficiently states the duty, and a breach thereof by the defendant, and after stating facts not sufficiently shewing the plaintiff is aggrieved, alleges that "by reason of such neglect of duty, the plaintiff was prevented from being elected," such allegation is one of fact, and sufficient to shew the plaintiff is aggrieved. Ib.

Election Auditor—Fee of.]—A. was proposed and seconded with his own consent, as a candidate at an election for a county, but withdrew before the shew of hands. No bills of charges or claims against him were sent to the election auditor:—Held, that he was nevertheless liable under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, and 21 & 22 Vict. c. 87 (repealed), to pay the election auditor the fee of 10*l.* Edwards v. Whitehurst, 5 H. & N. 131; 29 L. Right of Candidate to be Present in Polling Stations.]—A candidate at a parliamentary or municipal election has a general right to be present in a polling station at the election, and not merely a qualified right to be present for the purpose of undertaking the duties of an agent, or of assisting his agent. Clementson v. Mason, 44 L. J., C. P. 171; L. R. 10 C. P. 209; 32 L. T. 325; 23 W. R. 620.

Ballot Paper—Absence of Official Mark.]—A ballot paper which conforms in other respects to the requirements of the Ballot Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 33), is not void because it has not on the face of it the official mark directed by s. 2 of that act to be marked on both sides of the ballot paper. Pickering v. James (L. R. 8 C. P. 489 : ante, col. 120) considered. Akers v. Howard, 55 L. J., Q. B. 273 ; 16 Q. B. D. 739 ; 54 L. T. 651 ; 34 W. R. 609 ; 50 J. P. 519.

Voter's Mark on Ballot Paper, Sufficiency of.]—The enactment in the Ballot Act, 1872, s. 2, as to the ballot paper being secretly marked by the voter, is an absolute enactment, and must therefore be obeyed strictly, but the manner in which the voter is to mark such paper is enacted only in the directory part of the statute, and therefore it is sufficient if it is obeyed substantially. Woodward v. Sarsons, 44 L. J., C. P. 293 ; L. R. 10 C. P. 733 ; 32 L. T. 867.

A ballot paper may be well marked, although the mark does not discolour the paper, or appear to have been made with a pencil, if from any circumstances the court can infer that the marks were intentionally made. A ballot paper may be well marked for one candidate, although a great portion of the cross is opposite the name of another candidate, if the point of intersection of the crossing lines is opposite the name of the former. A ballot paper marked only with a cross on the back of the paper is bad. McLaren v. Milne Home, 50 L. J., Q. B. 658 ; 7 Q. B. D. 477 ; 45 L. T. 350 ; 30 W. R. 85.

And it has been held, that a ballot paper ought not to be rejected because the voter's mark, placed on the right hand side, after the candidate's name, is placed on the left of the vertical line delineated on the ballot paper. Sheil v. Ennis, Ir. R. 8 C. L. 240.

Voter cannot be excluded by a Resolution of the House of Commons.]—A resolution of the House of Commons has no effect to exclude from the enjoyment of the franchise of voting any person or class in whom the right is already vested by statute. Bulmer v. Norris, K. & G. 321 ; 9 C. B. (N.S.) 19 ; 30 L. J., C. P. 25 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 342 ; 3 L. T. 470 ; 9 W. R. 122.

Voting Twice, Effect of—Personation.]—It was proved that a vote had been given by some unknown person in the name of a voter, W., for the respondent. W. afterwards voted for the petitioner :—Held, that a vote must be added to the petitioner's number and a vote deducted from the respondent. St. Andrews Election, 4 O'M. & H. 32.

A voter, whose name appeared twice in the register, voted twice for the petitioner under a mistaken notion that he was entitled to do so :—Held, that the first vote was good and the second bad. Ib.

S. B. having voted in the Stepney Division and then in Whitechapel :—Held, that the first vote was good, and that the second did not, unless given with a corrupt intention, involve the offence of personation. Change of Qualifying Premises between the Registration and the Election.]—A voter in a borough, who is registered as a 10*l.* householder, in respect of a house in E. Place, loses his vote, if, after the registration, and before the election, he removes to another house of equal value in E. Place, although the house to which he removes is in every respect within the description contained in the register. Reg. v. Ellis, Car. & M. 565.

If A., who is registered as an elector for a borough as a 10*l.* householder, gives up the house in respect of which he is registered, and takes another of superior value within the same borough, after the registration and before the election, he loses his vote ; and if, before and at the time of the election, a new tenant has taken possession of the house that A. has left, and is paying rent for it, the fact that a few articles of A.'s furniture remain in the house, and that A. retains one of the two keys of it, will make no difference. Reg. v. Bowler, Car. & M. 559.

A. was indicted for giving a false answer to the question, whether he had the same qualification to vote as that for which he was registered. He had occupied a house at the time of the registration, for which he was on the register as a voter, but he had left it before the election, and the landlord's agent had, before the election, given the key of it to B., who had put horses into the stable and beer into the cellar ; but B.'s rent did not commence till after the election :—Held, that in the absence of evidence of the determination of the tenancy of A., the indictment could not be supported. Rex v. Harris, 7 Car. & P. 253.

Ballot Paper not handed to Presiding Officer.]—A voter who had been personated went to the poll and claimed to vote; he answered the usual questions and took the oath, and thereupon received a ballot paper; instead of returning it to the presiding officer, he put it into the ballot box:—Held, that the vote was bad. Buckrose Case, 4 O'M. & H. 110.

Marked Register not Conclusive that Voter has voted.]—When the marked register shews that a voter has already voted, it is primâ facie sufficient for adding his subsequently-tendered vote to the poll that he swears he did not previously vote, and that the marked register is wrong. When the marked register shews that a voter did not vote, it is not conclusive on a scrutiny, but it may be proved that the voter did vote, and his vote, on a paper bearing the number of another elector, will be valid. Sheil v. Ennis, Ir. R. 8 C. L. 240.

When Votes Null and Void, so as to Entitle Opposing Candidate to Seat.]—A vote given for a disqualified candidate is not a mere nullity, unless the voter had notice of the disqualification; and, therefore, where a disqualified candidate has, under such circumstances, a majority of votes, the defeated candidate cannot claim a scrutiny. Reg. v. Franklin, Ir. R. 6 C. L. 239.

A candidate in a minority, declared entitled to the seat, where the rival candidate had been unseated for disqualification (arising from intimidation and undue influence by himself and his agents), which existed previously to the election, and, in the opinion of the majority of the court, had been brought to the knowledge of the electors before they voted for him. Trench v. Nolan, Ir. R. 6 C. L. 464; 27 L. T. 69; 20 W. R. 833.

When notice of the disqualification of a candidate is brought home to the electors, who vote for him, their votes are simply thrown away. Tipperary Election Petition, In re, Morton v. Scully, Moore v. Scully, Ir. R. 9 C. L. 217.

See Drinkwater v. Deakin, col. 144.

If Ballot Act substantially complied with, and Result not affected by Mistake in Form, Election Good.]—Although a parliamentary or municipal election will be void by the common law of parliament, if it is so conducted that either there is no real electing by the constituency at all, or it is not really conducted under the subsisting election law, which is now an election by ballot, yet if there is no reasonable ground to believe that a majority of the electors may have been prevented from voting in favour of the candidate they preferred, and if the election is substantially an election by ballot, the election will not be void by the common law of parliament, notwithstanding there may have been mistake or misconduct in the use of the machinery of the Ballot Act. Woodward v. Sarsons, 44 L. J., C. P. 293; L. R. 10 C. P. 733; 32 L. T. 867.

The Ballot Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 33), s. 13, is only declaratory of what would have been the law applicable to elections under that act if that section had not existed, and therefore to render an election invalid for non-observance of the rules or forms of the Ballot Act, the non-observance must be so great as to amount to a conducting of the election contrary to the principle of an election by ballot, and be such that it either did or might have affected the result of the election. Ib.

Vote of Alien—Whether Voter a Person on the Register.]—Whether the vote of an alien on the register will be struck off on a scrutiny, considered. Where, on a scrutiny, one person claims to be the person on the register, and it is alleged that another person who does not himself claim the vote, is the person on the register, the nature of the qualification may be inquired into for the purpose of deciding who is the voter. Sheil v. Ennis, Ir. R. 8 C. L. 240.

viii. Counting the Votes.

Ballot Papers—Validity.]—A ballot paper marked with a cross in the corner above the line is void for uncertainty. Buckrose Case, 4 O'M. & H. 110.

A ballot paper marked on the back with the figures 33 was in the absence of evidence showing that the voter could be identified by the writing allowed. Buckrose Case, supra.

A ballot paper was rejected which had been marked with a cross on the back opposite one of the names and could be seen through the paper, and a ballot paper marked on the front in the usual way was allowed though there was a cross on the back opposite the other candidate's name. Buckrose Case, supra.

Ballot papers with a cross opposite one name and a line opposite the other name were rejected on the ground of uncertainty. Buckrose Case, supra.

The fact that a ballot paper is marked with a circle instead of a cross does not invalidate the vote. Buckrose Case, supra.

A vote was disallowed where the ballot paper was marked with a cross immediately upon the name of a candidate. Buckrose Case, supra.

indorsed thereon reaches the hands of the clerk of the crown in chancery so that he may act upon it. Poole Election Petition, In re, Hurdle v. Waring, 43 L. J., C. P. 209; L. R. 9 C. P. 435; 30 L. T. 329; 22 W. R. 735.

Double Return.]—At an election when there were two candidates for one seat, the returning officer, by rejecting several votes given for the petitioner, reduced the numbers to equality, and was accordingly obliged, under the circumstances, to make a double return. The court having decided that those votes had been illegally rejected, certified that the petitioner ought to have been returned. Sheil v. Ennis, Ir. R. 8 C. L. 240.

Return where Candidate in whose favour Show of Hands was, withdraws before Poll.]—At a nomination, the show of hands being in favour of A., a poll was demanded for B., and a day fixed for the poll. Afterwards A. gave out that he withdrew from the contest, and the returning officer declared B. to be duly elected. On a petition against his election, and claiming the seat for A.:—Held, that neither A. nor B. was elected, but that the election was void. Wexford Election Petition, Ir. R. 3 C. L. 612. xi. Election Expenses.

What are—Meetings Preliminary to Candidature.]—Where a meeting is held or other expenses are incurred with the object of inducing a person to become a candidate at an election, the question whether the costs of the meeting and other expenses are "election expenses" is one which must be answered in relation to the particular circumstances of the case. Birkbeck v. Bullard, 4 O'M. & H. 84; 54 L. T. 625.

—— Persons Paid to Keep Order.]—Money paid by an agent of a candidate for the employment of persons to keep order at meetings connected with the election is an expense connected with the management and conduct of an election, within the meaning of s. 28 of the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883. Packard v. Collings, 4 O'M. & H. 70; 54 L. T. 619.

—— Subscription to Registration Expenses—Starting a Newspaper.]—Expenses incurred by a candidate as a subscription to registration expenses need not be returned as election expenses. A candidate at the general election of 1885 established a newspaper in Aug., 1885, which ceased to appear in Jan., 1886:—Held, that losses incurred in connection there with need not be returned as election expenses. Crossman v. Gent-Davis, 4 O'M. & H. 93; 54 L. T. 628.

Prepayment of Expenses of Poll cannot be required from Candidate.]—See Davies v. Kensington, A. 2, a. v.

Cost of erecting Polling Booths.]—By 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 68, at every contested election the returning officer shall, if required thereto by or on behalf of any candidate, on the day fixed for the election, and if not so required may, if it shall appear to him expedient, cause to be erected, for taking the poll at such election, different booths. And by s. 71, all booths erected for the convenience of taking polls shall be erected at the joint and equal expense of the several candidates:—Held, that the "contested election" referred to in s. 68 is the poll, and the candidates referred to in s. 71 are candidates who go to or demand a poll. Muntz v. Sturge, 8 M. & W. 302.

Extra Expense caused by Riot—Action against Hundred.]—Where hustings, erected at the expense of the candidates at a contested election, were damaged by a riotous assembly, and were afterwards repaired at their expense:—Held, that no action could be maintained by the returning officer against the hundred, the hustings not being a building within 57 Geo. 3, c. 19, and the property in them not being in the mayor, who was the returning officer. Allen v. Ayre, 3 D. & R. 96; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 204.

Candidate's Liability for—Hustings.]—A person who was nominated and elected to serve in parliament for the city of Westminster, without being present at, or in any way interfering himself or by his agents with the election, or holding himself out, or authorising any one else to hold him out, as a candidate, but afterwards took his seat in the House of Commons, was not chargeable with the expenses under 51 Geo. 3, c. 126. Morris v. Burdett, 2 M. & S. 212; 14 R. R. 639; overruling S. C., 1 Camp. 221; 10 R. R. 667.

A candidate is only liable for such expenses as are imposed by positive statute, or by his own consent, express, or implied, notwithstanding there may have been a long usage for the expenses being rateably defrayed by the candidates. Ib.

A candidate for the representation of a city or a borough is not liable for hustings erected without his own consent or that of his agent. Ib.

But if he makes use of such hustings for the accommodation of himself or of his agents, a promise to contribute to the expense of erecting them will be inferred. Ib.

By 51 Geo. 3, c. 126 (repealed) one of two candidates for the city of Westminster was only liable to the bailiffs for a moiety of the expenses of the hustings. Morris v. Cochrane (Lord), 1 M. & S. 283.

—— Things expressly ordered—When Candidates jointly Liable.]—If the candidates at a county election jointly desired the sheriff to erect hustings, provide poll clerks, and retain an assessor, promising to defray the expense so incurred, they were jointly liable to him, notwithstanding 18 Geo. 2, c. 18, s. 7 (repealed). Wathen v. Sandys, 2 Camp. 640.

But if they had not jointly promised they must have been separately sued under 18 Geo. 2, c. 18, s. 7. Ib.

A sheriff is not entitled to charge the candidates with any part of the expense necessarily incurred by him in executing the writ and making the return; and for those things expressly ordered by the candidates they are only bound to make him a fair remuneration, although he himself may have paid more in submitting to exorbitant charges usually made on such occasions. Ib. See also Davies v. Kensington (Lord), ante, col. 117.

Goods ordered by Candidate personally.]—The fact that all orders for election expenses are to be given by agents of the candidate appointed in writing, and all payments are to be made through the election auditor, does not prevent the candidate himself being liable for goods supplied for election purposes in pursuance of an order given by him personally. Norton v. Dickson, 5 H. & N. 637; 29 L. J., Ex. 337; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 708; 8 W. R. 530.

No Action for Illegal Expenses.]—Where a statute prohibits, under a penalty, any person from agreeing to pay certain expenses, an agreement to pay such expenses is invalid, and no action is maintainable upon it, although the statute does not expressly prohibit the other party to the agreement from receiving such expenses, or impose a penalty on him for so doing. O'Brien v. Dillon, 9 Ir. C. L. R. 318.

Price of Rosettes for Voters innocently supplied.]—A mercer furnishing ribbons to a person who was a candidate for the representation of a city, the ribbons being partly used as presents for voters, and the mercer being himself a voter, and receiving orders for some of the ribbons from the candidate himself, in his committee-room, but not being told for what purpose they were wanted, was entitled to recover the price of the ribbons from the candidate notwithstanding 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 4. Richardson v. Webster, 3 Car. & P. 128.

Action for Refreshments supplied to Voters.]—See Ward v. Nunney, Ribbans v. Crickett, and Hughes v. Marshall, col. 148.

Personal Liability of Agent.]—See Longbottom v. Rodgers, col. 116.

Liability of Member of Committee for Price of Refreshments supplied to Voters.]—See Thomas v. Edwards, col. 115.

Person ordering Refreshments for Voters liable to pay unless known to be an Agent.]—See Thomas v. Harries, col. 115.

Payment of Canvassers by Agent other than Expense Agent.]—See Parker, In re, col. 116.

Taxation of Bill, where Agent a Solicitor.]—See Osborne, In re, and Oliver, In re, col. 116.

Taxation of Returning Officer's Charges available for Candidate not Party to Taxation.]—See Martin v. Tomkinson, col. 119.

Candidate's Personal Expenses.]—Personal expenses of a candidate, such as hotel bills, railway fares and the like, were not within 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, s. 116 (repealed). Grant v. Guinness, 17 C. B. 190; 25 L. J., C. P. 66; 1 Jur (N.S.) 1217; 4 W. R. 198.

Trivial unauthorised Expenses.]—A trivial expense, not authorised by the schedule to the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883, and returned amongst "election expenses" is not necessarily illegal. Isaacson v. Durant, 4 O'M. & H. 34; 54 L. T. 684.

Insufficient Return of—Relief.]—See Buckrose Case, col. 138.

—— Costs of Recriminatory Case caused by.]—See Buckrose Case, col. 139.

—— Votes of Persons making Payments not included in Return struck off.]—See Buckrose Case, col. 68.

Disputed Claims, Payment of—Notice of Application for Leave.]—An application on behalf of a candidate at a parliamentary election for an order of the high court for leave to pay a disputed claim within s. 29, sub-s. 7, of the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883, will not be granted without due notice to the candidate on the other side, the returning officer, and the constituency at large, by advertisement or otherwise. South Shropshire Election, In re, 54 L. T. 129; 34 W. R. 352.

b. Petition.

See also B. 2, k., post, col. 207.

i. Parties.

Petition presented after Death of Candidate Returned.]—At a parliamentary election, where there were two candidates for one seat, the candidate who had the majority of votes was returned and died, and after his death an elector, who then knew of his death, presented in due time a petition complaining of the return, and praying the seat for the other candidate. The court, on a motion for that purpose by an elector who had been admitted as a respondent, refused to set aside the petition. Tipperary Election Petition, In re, Morton v. Galway, Ir. R. 9 C. L. 173.

ii. Abatement.

Dissolution of Parliament after Petition presented.]—The effect of a dissolution of parliament while an election petition is pending, before the hearing of such petition, is that the petition drops, and the court will order the sum deposited by the petitioner, by way of security for costs to be returned to him. Carter v. Mills, 43 L. J., C. P. 111; L. R. 9 C. P. 117; 22 W. R. 318.

iii. Grounds of.

Personation.]—An election cannot at common law be avoided on the ground of widely spread personation irrespective of agency. Belfast Case, 4 O'M. & H. 105.

Bribery.]—See Beale v. Smith, infra.

That Successful Candidate Disqualified.]—See Reg. v. Franklin; Trench v. Nolan; and Tipperary Election Petition, In re, Morton v. Scully, col. 123.

iv. Form of.

Bribery alleged Generally.]—In a petition against the return of a member, it is sufficient to allege that the respondent by himself and his agents has been guilty of bribery. Beale v. Smith, 38 L. J., C. P. 145; L. R. 4 C. P. 145; 19 L. T. 565; 17 W. R. 317.

Objection not Specifically Raised.]—One class of voters objected to were non-resident freemen. The objection was not raised specifically in the petition, but the facts relied on were included in the particulars:—Held, that the petitioner was not limited to the class of voters specifically objected to in the petition, and evidence upon the matter was permitted to be given. Londonderry Case, 4 O'M. & H. 96.

Amendment of, by alleging Illegal Payments and Employment.]—See Buckrose Case, col. 131.

v. Time for Filing.

Twenty-one Days for, how reckoned.] — The election of a member for Poole took place on the 3rd of February. On the morning of the 4th, the returning officer indorsed on the writ a certificate of the return of W., and delivered it to the postmaster at Poole, who forwarded it by the 12.30 p.m. mail, properly addressed and indorsed, to the General Post-office in London, where it arrived about 6 p.m. It was sent thence by special messenger to the office of the clerk of the Crown at Westminster, where it arrived between 8 and 9 the same evening. The office being closed, the document was left with a servant of the housekeeper, and consequently did not reach the clerk of the Crown or anyone connected with the office until the morning of the 5th:—Held, that the twenty-one days for the filing of a petition were to be reckoned from the 5th. Poole Election Petition, In re, Hurdle v. Waring, 43 L. J., C. P. 209; L. R. 9 C. P. 435; 30 L. T. 329; 22 W. R. 735.

The expression twenty-one days in clause 2 of 31 & 32 Vict. c. 125, s. 6, means twenty-one days exclusive of all Sundays. Pegler v. Gurney and Hoare, L. R., 4 C. P. 239; 19 L. T. 647; 17 W. R. 316.

vi. Security for Costs.

One Surety sufficient.] — Sect. 6, sub-s. 5, of the Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 125), states that the security for costs to the amount of 1,000*l.* which is to be given at the time of presenting an election petition under that act, "shall be given either by recognizance to be entered into by any number of sureties not exceeding four, or by a deposit of money," &c. It is a sufficient compliance with this enactment that the recognizance be entered into by one surety only. Hereford (City) Election Petition, In re, Preece v. Pulley, 49 L. J., C. P. 686.

For same Amount, whether one or two Respondents.]—On a petition presented against the return or election of two or more members who are made respondents to the same petition, it is not necessary to give, on behalf of the petitioner, a separate security for costs in respect of each respondent, but one security for 1,000*l.* is sufficient, notwithstanding s. 22 of 31 & 32 Vict. c. 125, states that for all the purposes of the act such petition shall be deemed to be a separate petition against each respondent. Hull Election Petition, In re, Pease v. Norwood, 38 L. J., C. P. 161; L. R. 4 C. P. 235; 19 L. T. 648; 17 W. R. 320.

Petitioner must not be Surety.] — Where such security is given by recognizance, the latter must be entered into by other persons than the petitioner, in order to be a recognizance within the meaning of the act. Ib.

Insufficient Security amendable.] — An objection to the recognizance that some of the petitioners signed it as sureties is an objection to the sufficiency and not to the validity of the security, and is therefore amendable by a deposit of money. Ib.

Security returned, if Parliament dissolved before Petition heard.] — See Carter v. Mills, col. 128.

vii. Service.

See Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868, s. 8.

Service of Notice of Recriminatory Case against Petitioner.]—The notice served by a respondent of his intention to enter into a recriminatory case against the petitioner must be served six clear days prior to the trial of the election petition, exclusive of Sunday, and exclusive of the day of the trial and of the day of service of the list of objections. Galway Borough Election Petition, In re, Joyce v. O'Donnell, 22 W. R. 654.

viii. Particulars.

How far allowed.]—An order having been made by a judge for the delivery of particulars by the petitioner to the respondent, stating by whom, when and where persons alleged to have been bribed and treated had been so bribed and treated, and by whom, when and where canvassers had been employed and moneys paid for the conveyance of voters to the poll, the order was allowed by the court, with the addition of the words "so far as known." Maude v. Lowley, 43 L. J., C. P. 103; L. R. 9 C. P. 165; 30 L. T. 168; 22 W. R. 649.

Where a judge has ordered particulars to be given of the persons bribed, but refused to order particulars to be given of those who have bribed, the court will not interfere, unless the judge is manifestly wrong, as it is a matter of discretion. Beale v. Smith, 38 L. J., C. P. 145; L. R. 4 C. P. 145; 19 L. T. 565; 17 W. R. 317.

Scrutiny—Seat claimed.]—The respondent in a parliamentary election petition, in which the petitioner claims the seat upon a scrutiny, is not entitled to obtain particulars under rule 6 of the Parliamentary Election Petition Rules, 1868. Rule 7 applies exclusively to such a case. Munro v. Balfour, [1893] 1 Q. B. 113; 5 R. 23; 67 L. T. 526; 41 W. R. 143; 57 J. P. 789.

Extension of Time for Delivery of.]—The general rule of practice in election petitions, that particulars of corrupt and illegal practices will be ordered to be delivered seven days before trial of the petition, is not a hard-and-fast rule, and, in determining whether there are special circumstances upon which it will act in extending the time, the court will take into consideration the size and nature of the constituency, the population, and the number of voters, and also the number of witnesses whom it is proposed to call. Lenham v. Barber (10 Q. B. D. 293) distinguished. Rushmere v. Isaacson, [1893] 1 Q. B. 118; 5 R. 88; 41 W. R. 124; 57 J. P. 790.

Offences committed after Petition.] — An election petition charged that the respondent had, by himself or his agents, been guilty of bribery, treating, undue influence, "and of other corrupt and illegal practices before, during and after the said election" :—Held, that the petitioner was not entitled to give particulars of charges of alleged illegal practices committed after the date of the presentation of the petition. Haggerston Election Petition, In re, Cremer v. Lowles, 65 L. J., Q. B. 289 ; [1896] 1 Q. B. 504 ; 74 L. T. 42 ; 44 W. R. 629 ; 60 J. P. 100—C. A.

Cases of Treating, Personation and Bribery not mentioned in.]—See Spencer v. Harrison, col. 135 ; and Belfast Case, col. 134.

Amendment of.]—See Heywood v. Dodson, 44 L. T. 285 ; and Tomline v. Tyler, 44 L. T. 187.

Evidence leading up to Facts stated in.]—See Collins v. Price, col. 134.

Where Facts stated in, but Objection founded on them not raised in, Petition.]—See Londonderry Case, col. 129.

See Manchester Case, 4 O'M. & H. 121.

ix. Amendment.

What allowed.]—A petitioner was allowed to amend his petition by adding allegations of illegal payment, employment and hiring when committed by persons other than the candidate or his agent. Buckrose Case, 4 O'M. & H. 110.

The court will not amend an election petition by striking out, after the lapse of the time limited by the act for presenting it, that part of the prayer of the petition which claims the seat for the petitioner (an unsuccessful candidate) and the allegations applying to a scrutiny which would be dependent thereon, inasmuch as this would affect the rights of the constituency. Aldridge v. Hurst, 45 L. J., C. P. 431 ; 1 C. P. D. 410 ; 35 L. T. 156 ; 24 W. R. 708.

Practice of election committees in this respect followed. Ib.

Semble, that it is competent to the court to amend an election petition at any time by striking out allegations therein, where it is satisfied no injurious result, or a beneficial one, will follow ; or by adding matters discovered after the filing of the petition. Ib.

Leave, by whom and how given.]—A judge who is not on the rota for the trial of election petitions has no jurisdiction to make an order under s. 40, sub-s. 2 of the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883, giving leave to amend an election petition. Such an order ought not to be made ex parte. Shaw v. Reckitt, [1893] 1 Q. B. 779 ; 5 R. 384 ; 68 L. T. 688 ; 41 W. R. 497—D.

Appeal to Court of Appeal from Order settin aside Leave.]—An order under s. 40, sub-s. of the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883, was made by a judge not on the rota for the trial of election petitions ; this order was discharged by a divisional court, the members of which were upon the rota, on the ground that the judge had no jurisdiction to make the order :—Held, that the question was one of law within s. 14 of the Judicature Act, 1881, and, therefore, no appeal lay to the Court of Appeal without leave. Shaw v. Reckitt, 62 L. J., Q. B. 375 ; [1893] 2 Q. B. 59 ; 4 R. 425 ; 69 L. T. 327 ; 41 W. R. 497 ; 57 J. P. 805—C. A.

Of Particulars.]—Amendment of particulars at the trial of election petitions, under what circumstances allowed. Heywood v. Dodson, 44 L. T. 285 ; and Tomline v. Tyler, 44 L. T. 187.

See Manchester Case, 4 O'M. & H. 120.

x. Discovery.

See also B. 2, i., post, col. 207.

Jurisdiction as to.]—In a parliamentary election petition the court or a judge at chambers has no jurisdiction to make orders against a sitting member for inspection and discovery of documents. Moore v. Kennard, 52 L. J., Q. B. 285 ; 10 Q. B. D. 290 ; 48 L. T. 236 ; 31 W. R. 610 ; 47 J. P. 343.

Inspection of Ballot Papers.]—Liberty was given to the clerk of the Crown and hanaper to open the packet of rejected ballot papers, and to permit the petitioner and his agents to inspect certain ballot papers which had been rejected by the returning officer on the ground that there were upon them "writing or marks by which the voters could be identified," but so as not to permit any inspection of the numbers on the backs of the ballot papers corresponding with the numbers on the counterfoils. Tyrone Election Petition, In re, Macartney v. Corry, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 190 ; 21 W. R. 627. See Stowe v. Jolliffe, infra.

Inspection of Marked Register of Voters.]—Leave to inspect the marked register of voters will be granted under the Ballot Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 33), schedule 1, part 1, rule 42, whether the petition against the return of a candidate at a parliamentary election does or does not pray for a scrutiny. James v. Henderson, 43 L. J., C. P. 238 ; 30 L. T. 527.

A petition, praying a scrutiny, was presented against the return of the respondent at a parliamentary election for a borough. The petitioner applied for the leave of the court to inspect the marked register of voters, the rejected ballot-papers, and the counterfoils. The foregoing documents had been sealed up together, and the ground of the application was stated to be the saving of expense, for if it could be known who were the voters whose votes had been rejected, it would be unnecessary to incur costs by investigating their qualifications :—Held, that the petitioner ought to be allowed to inspect the marked register, but that he was not entitled to the production of the rejected ballot-papers and the counterfoils. Stowe v. Jolliffe, 43 L. J., C. P. 173 ; L. R. 9 C. P. 446 ; 30 L. T. 299 ; 22 W. R. 946.

Interrogatories.]—The court has no power to order interrogatories to be delivered to a respondent to a parliamentary election petition, under the Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 125), for though s. 2 gives the court the same powers, with reference to such petition, as it would have if such petition were an ordinary cause, yet this is "subject to the provisions of the act," and s. 26 enacts, that until rules have been made (and none have been made as to interrogatories), the "principles, practice and rules on which committees of the House of Commons have heretofore acted in dealing with election petitions" are to be observed in the case of election petitions under the act. Wallingford

Election Petition, In re, Wells v. Wren, 49 L. J., C. P. 681; 5 C. P. D. 546.

Semble, that the power given to election judges on the rota by s. 25 of the Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868, does not enable them to make a rule for exhibiting interrogatories. Ib.

xi. Withdrawal.

Corrupt Agreement for.]—Pending a petition against the return of a member of parliament, containing charges against him for bribery, corruption and other illegal practices, and praying that the election and return might be declared null and void, the petitioners agreed, on receiving a pecuniary consideration, and on the sitting member consenting that his election should be declared null and void, to proceed no further with the petition:—Held, that such an agreement was illegal. Coppock v. Bower, 4 M. & W. 361; 8 L. J., Ex. 9.

Application for Leave—Affidavits.]—In the affidavits used upon an application under s. 36 (repealed) of the Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 125), for leave to withdraw a petition against the return of a member, it is not enough for the petitioner and respondent to swear that "to the best of their knowledge, information and belief, the withdrawal of, or application to withdraw, the petition is not the result of any corrupt arrangement, or in consideration of the withdrawal of or application to withdraw any other petition." They must make a positive affidavit that they have not been parties to any corrupt arrangement, and deny, to the best of their knowledge, information and belief, that any such arrangement has been made by their agents. The existence of any such arrangement must also be denied by the agents themselves. Leominster Election Petition, In re, Johnson v. Rankin; Nottingham Election Petition, In re, Isaac v. Seeley, 5 C. P. D. 553.

Of Charges of Corruption.]—The court will not actively sanction the withdrawal of charges of corruption. Buxton v. Garfit, 44 L. T. 287.

What Costs allowed on.]—See Pembroke Election Petition, In re, Hughes v. Meyrick, col. 141.

No Order against Parties for Public Prosecutor's Costs when no Trial.]—See Pascoe v. Puleston, col. 139.

xii. Trial.

Since the Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868, election petitions are tried by the judges instead of by parliamentary committees.

Place of.]—The power to change the place of trial of an election petition under the Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 125), can be exercised only by the court and not by an election judge. Tewkesbury Election Petition, In re, Collins v. Price, 49 L. J., C. P. 685; 5 C. P. D. 544.

Semble, the court will not exercise such power unless there are special circumstances more than mere inconvenience why the trial should not be had in the borough or county (as the case may be) to the election for which the petition relates. Ib.

The existence of "special circumstances" is under s. 11, sub-s. 11 of the Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868, a condition precedent to the exercise of the jurisdiction to order an election petition to be tried elsewhere than in the county or division where the election took place. The fact that a scrutiny is the only question to be tried, or that it would be less expensive to try elsewhere, are not "special circumstances." Lawson v. Master, 62 L. J., Q. B. 231; [1893] 1 Q. B. 245; 5 R. 152; 68 L. T. 60; 41 W. R. 221; 57 J. P. 806.

Where the allegations of fact in a parliamentary election petition are not in dispute but are specifically admitted by the respondent so as to render it unnecessary at the trial to call witnesses from the district in which the election took place, the court may order the petition to be tried in London on the ground that "special circumstances" exist within the meaning of s. 11, sub-s. 11, of the Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868 (31 & 32 Vict. c. 125), which render it desirable that the petition should be tried elsewhere than in the county or division where the election took place. Arch v. Bentinck, 56 L. J., Q. B. 458; 18 Q. B. D. 548; 56 L. T. 360; 35 W. R. 476.

Attendance of Witnesses.]—The court has no jurisdiction to apprehend persons who evade service of subpœnas. Heywood v. Dodson, 44 L. T. 285.

Evidence—Of Tampering with Petitioner.]—Evidence of an attempt to get a petitioner out of the way is not admissible. Ib.

—— Oral, as to Contents of Postal Order.]—A witness admitted having received a postal order from an agent of the respondent. The court allowed the witness to be asked what was the amount of the order, though no subpœna duces tecum had been served nor had the post-office authorities been ordered to produce it. Londonderry Case, 4 O'M. & H. 96.

—— Telegrams.]—The post-office authorities may be ordered to produce specified telegrams. Tomline v. Tyler, 44 L. T. 187.

—— Of Personation and Bribery not mentioned in Particulars.]—Leave was given to go into four cases of personation not mentioned in the particulars where agency was not alleged to shew that there had been an extensive system of personation. But leave was refused to go into a case of bribery by some person unknown which was not referred to in the particulars, as the case alleged was not very important or serious. Belfast Case, 4 O'M. & H. 105.

—— Of Personation.]—Evidence in cases of personation was allowed to be given before proof of agency. Belfast Case, supra.

On a charge of personation evidence of conversations with an agent after the poll were admitted. Belfast Case, supra.

—— Of Bribery—Previous Promise.]—The particulars alleged that A. bribed B. on certain days. Evidence of a promise made on an earlier day, not named in the particulars, to B. by A., that he should be bribed, was tendered:—Held, admissible as a link in the chain of proof. Collins v. Price, 44 L. T. 192.

—— Of Treating not in Particulars.]—Evidence of numerous cases of individual treating not specified in the particulars is not admissible to prove general treating. Spencer v. Harrison, 44 L. T. 283.

—— Proof of Agency.]—Where the petitioner makes out a primâ facie case of agency, it must be accepted unless rebutted by the respondent. Birkbeck v. Bullard, 54 L. T. 625; 4 O'M. & H. 84. See also Aylesbury Division of Bucks, 4 O'M. & H. 59.

—— Report of Court at Prior Election not conclusive as to what took place at that Election.] — When an unsuccessful candidate petitions, a recriminatory case of bribery is gone into against him, and the judge certifies his opponent not duly elected, and reports a belief in the purity of the election on his part, on a petition against him as the successful candidate at a second election, cases of bribery by and for him at the previous election may be inquired into, at least if not known after the use of due diligence, and so not gone into on the recriminatory case in the previous petition. Stevens v. Tillett, 40 L. J., C. P. 58; L. R. 6 C. P. 147; 23 L. T. 622; 19 W. R. 182.

—— Of Corruption at Previous Elections.]—Evidence of corruption at previous elections by the political party to which the petitioners belong, is irrelevant. Spencer v. Harrison, 44 L. T. 283.

—— Of Statements by Agent.]—Statements made after an election by an agent are not evidence against the candidate. Tomline v. Tyler, 44 L. T. 187.

—— Of Payments by Agent.]—Evidence of corrupt payments made after the election by an agent is admissible. Buxton v. Garfit, 44 L. T. 287.

—— Of Conversations.]—Evidence of conversation after the polling day is not usually admissible. Heywood v. Dodson, 44 L. T. 285.

—— Of Rioting.]—What is sufficient evidence of rioting considered. Heywood v. Dodson. Ib.

—— Person charged with Bribery not called.]—When evidence of bribery by an active supporter of the respondent is given, the court will draw unfavourable conclusions from the neglect or refusal of the person so charged to explain his conduct in the witness box. Collins v. Price, 44 L. T. 192.

—— Allowed-of Facts in Particulars, though Objection not specifically raised in Petition.]—See Londonderry Case, A. 2, b. iv.

—— Of Disqualification—Birth Certificate.] In order to prove that a voter was a minor a certificate of birth was tendered in evidence which contained an incorrect statement as to the mother's name:—Held, that the certificate was primâ facie evidence of the date of the birth. Londonderry Case, 4 O'M. & H. 96.

Scrutiny—Vote of "Clerk" to Election Agent.]—A regular clerk to the election agent of one of the parties addressed envelopes and did other work in connection with the election, but no increase of salary or payment was made to him in respect of such employment:—Held, that his vote must be allowed and that he was not a "clerk," within schedule 1 of the Corrupt Practices Act, 1883. Buckrose Case, 4 O'M. & H. 110.

—— Register when Conclusive as to Right to vote.]—On a scrutiny there is no power to inquire whether or not certain inhabitant occupiers should have been rated under 30 & 31 Vict. c. 102, s. 3, in order to entitle them to vote, when their names were on the list of voters, and no objection was taken to them before the revising barrister, and no express decision was given by him as to their right to be registered. Salisbury Election Petition, In re, Ryder v. Hamilton, 38 L. J., C. P. 260; L. R. 4 C. P. 559; 20 L. T. 444; 17 W. R. 795.

Where a matter of fact has been fairly raised before the revising barrister, and he has heard it, and come to an express decision upon it, then his decision may be reviewed by an election judge—in order to see that injustice has not been done—under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 18, s. 98 (repealed). Bewdley Borough, 22 L. T. 202.

A revising barrister decided that a notice of objection was bad when it was good:—Held, that this was an express decision reviewable by the election judge, and giving him jurisdiction to inquire whether the vote of the person objected to was good or bad. Ib.

Under the Ballot Act (35 & 36 Vict. c. 33), s. 7, the register as settled by the revising barrister is conclusive, not only upon the presiding officer at the election, but also on the judge who tries an election petition, except in the case of persons who have an inherent incapacity to be electors, such as peers, certain persons disqualified by holding particular offices, and persons convicted of crime. Stowe v. Jolliffe 43 L. J., C. P. 265; L. R. 9 C. P. 734; 30 L. T. 795; 22 W. R. 911.

—— Freeman on Register—Non-residence.]—Non-residence of freemen who are upon the register is not a ground of objection to their exercise of the franchise. Londonderry Case, 4 O'M. & H. 96.

—— Removal from Qualifying Premises between the Registration and the Election.]—See Reg. v. Ellis, Reg. v. Bowler, and Rex v. Harris, col. 122.

—— Party bound by his List.]—See Finsbury Case, 4 O'M. & H. 173.

—— Court may Inspect Voting Papers.]—It is competent for the judges at the hearing of an election petition to examine a voting paper before the vote given thereupon is proved to have been bad. The provisions of the Ballot Act against inspecting voting papers do not apply to the court. Isaacson v. Durant, 54 L. T. 684; 4 O'M. & H. 34.

—— Evidence of Voting.]—The statement on oath of a voter that he had voted in two divisions of the same borough is evidence of the vote given in the latter division, without the further production of the voting paper. Ib.

—— Voter called upon to Identify Ballot Paper.]—See Finsbury Case, 4 O'M. & H. 176.

—— Votes of Persons making Payments not included in Return of Election Expenses struck off.]—See Buckrose Case, col. 68.

—— Ballot Paper not void because of Absence of Official Mark.]—See Ackers v. Howard, col. 121.

—— Effect of voting twice—Personation.]—See St. Andrews Election, and Isaacson v. Durant, col. 122.

——Marked Register not conclusive as to whether Voter voted.]—See Sheil v. Ennis, col. 123.

—— Vote of Alien—Inquiry whether Voter the Person on Register.]—See Sheil v. Ennis, col. 124.

—— Ballot Papers—Validity.]—See Buckrose Case, col. 124.

Refreshing Witness's Memory.]—A witness's previous written statement may be used to refresh his memory when exhausted. Heywood v. Dodson, 44 L. T. 285.

A previous written statement of a witness may be used to refresh his memory. Buxton v. Garfit, 44 L. T. 287.

A friendly witness may not be asked in examination in chief as to his previous written declaration, for the purpose of refreshing his memory, where he is being examined for the purpose of striking off the vote of another person on a scrutiny. McLaren v. Milne Home, 44 L. T. 289.

Witnesses ordered out of Court.]—See Montgomery Case, 4 O'M. & H. 167.

Witnesses called by Court.]—See Montgomery Case, 4 O'M. & H. 169.

Respondent called by Petitioner—Conduct of Case.]—To call the respondent and his agents as the sole witnesses in support of a petition, and to treat them as hostile witnesses, is not the proper way to conduct a petition. Crossman v. Gent-Davis, 4 O'M. & H. 93; 54 L. T. 628.

Privilege of Voter Witness.]—An elector may not be asked his political opinions unless he has previously avowed them. Tomline v. Tyler, 44 L. T. 187.

Locus Standi of Public Prosecutor.]—Counsel representing the public prosecutor are not entitled to cross-examine witnesses or address the court until proceedings are about to be taken against the offender. Buckrose Case, 4 O'M. & H. 110.

The public prosecutor is not entitled to administer a general cross-examination, without definite object, to every witness called in the course of the hearing of a petition. Cross-examination with the view of shewing that a mistake has been made in giving to one voter the paper intended for another is not admissible. Isaacson v. Durant, 54 L. T. 684; 4 O'M. & H. 34.

Intervention of Public Prosecutor.]—See Walsall Case, 4 O'M. & H. 123; Hexham Case, Ib. 143, 152; Worcester Case, Ib. 155; Rochester Case, Ib. 157, 161; Montgomery Case, Ib. 167.

Time to apply for Case.]—The court refused to state a case as to the validity of certain votes on the ground that the application should have been made before the court had given a decision upon the matter. Londonderry Case, 4 O'M. & H. 96.

Reserving Points of Law.]—See Ackers v. Howard, 4 O'M. & H. 65.

Decisions of Committees of House of Commons.]—Decisions of committees of the House of Commons in cases of election are no authority in courts of law. Nash, Ex parte, 1 Deac. & C. 449.

Recriminatory Charges—Claim to Seat abandoned.]—When the respondent's election is declared void, and the petitioner then abandons his claim to the seat upon a scrutiny, whether the respondent can proceed to prove his recriminatory charges, quære:—Per Lopes, J., if the petitioner were to be elected upon the vacancy caused by the avoidance of the respondent's election, these recriminatory charges of corruption at the first election would avail anyone petitioning against the return of the former petitioner at the second election. Truscott v. Bevan, 44 L. T. 64.

Application for Relief—Insufficient Return of Expenses.]—The court granted an application by the petitioner and his agent from the consequences of an insufficient return of election expenses by the election agent. Buckrose Case, 4 O'M. & H. 110.

Evidence after Election declared Void.]—No one but the sitting member can be examined after the election has been declared void. Buxton v. Garfit, 44 L. T. 287.

Petitioner cannot be petitioned against, when declared elected.]—When a petition claims the seat for one of the defeated candidates, and the judge on the trial of the petition decides that such candidate was duly elected, his decision is final, and a petition against the return of such candidate cannot subsequently be presented under 31 & 32 Vict. c. 125. Taunton Election Petition, In re, Waygood v. James, 38 L. J., C. P. 195; L. R. 4 C. P. 361; 21 L. T. 202; 17 W. R. 824.

Bribery—Report of Court.]—In a case where bribery is proved the court has no power to report, under s. 22 of the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883, that the offence is of a trivial nature, and ought not to void the election. Birkbeck v. Bullard, 4 O'M. & H. 84; 54 L. T. 625.

Report of Judge as to Bribery by Candidate.]—See Grant v. Pagham, col. 68.

Prosecution of Persons reported.]—The initiative in cases of prosecution of persons reported by the court should be taken by the attorney-general. Belfast Case, 4 O'M. & H. 105.

xiii. Costs.

Judgment for, delivered on Day Parliament dissolved.]—The delivery of judgment upon an election petition upholding the return of the respondent thereto and awarding him costs, began at 10 a.m. and finished at 10.35 a.m. The report of the judge and his certificate was sent by the post at noon to the speaker of the House of Commons. Upon the same day upon which the foregoing judgment was delivered parliament was dissolved by a royal proclamation, but the exact time when the proclamation was issued by the Queen was not ascertained. The judge's report and certificate did not reach the speaker before the dissolution:—Held, that the delivery of the judgment and the order for the payment of the costs being judicial acts, must be taken to have happened before the dissolution, and that by force thereof the respondent was entitled to his costs after the parliament had ceased to exist. Taunton Election, In re, Marshall v. James, 43 L. J., C. P. 281; L. R. 9 C. P. 702; 30 L. T. 559; 22 W. R. 738.

Overloaded Petition.]—An overloaded petition will be visited with costs, even if it is successful. Birkbeck v. Bullard, 54 L. T. 625; 4 O'M. & H. 84. See also Ackers v. Howard, 4 O'M. & H. 65.

Of recriminatory Case.]—Costs of the petition were ordered to follow the event, but the petitioner was ordered to pay the costs of the recriminatory case caused by an insufficient return of election expenses by the petitioner's election agent. Buckrose Case, 4 O'M. & H. 110.

When Petition caused by Returning Officer's Mistake.]—A returning officer, acting bonâ fide, put such an erroneous construction upon a section of the Ballot Act as rendered a petition necessary: the court declined to order him to pay any part of the costs. Sheil v. Ennis, Ir. R. 8 C. L. 240.

The returning officer having acted on his own mere motion, and without the interference of either candidate, the court decided that the petitioner and respondent should each bear his own costs. Ib.

Of Attorney-General or Public Prosecutor.]—Costs were ordered to follow the event; but the costs of the attorney-general were not allowed on the ground that they were incident to the administration of the law. Londonderry Case, 4 O'M. & H. 96. S. P., Belfast Case, 4 O'M. & H. 105.

Where a petition is utterly unfounded the costs of the public prosecutor will be ordered to be paid by the petitioner. Crossman v. Gent-Davis, 4 O'M. & H. 93; 54 L. T. 628.

The 43rd section of the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883, applies only to the costs of the director of public prosecutions at the trial of the petition, and when the petition is withdrawn the court has no power, under the 41st section of the Parliamentary Elections Act, 1861, to order the preliminary costs of the director of public prosecutions, and the costs of the inquiries made by him to be paid by the parties. Pascoe v. Puleston, 54 L. T. 733; 50 J. P. 134.

On what Scale.]—Under the 44th section of the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883, the cost of an election petition will usually be allowed on the higher scale, in accordance with the old practice under the 41st section of the Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868. Ib.

Taxation of.]—A petitioner being awarded the costs of a petition, (1) he is entitled to be recouped the sums actually paid by him for copies of the shorthand-writer's notes; (2) he is entitled to the expenses of the witnesses bonâ fide summoned, though they have not been produced; (3) the registrar's certificate is not necessary to entitle him to expenses of witnesses; (4) he is entitled to the cost of an illustrated map of the country; (5) he is entitled to a retainer of ten guineas paid to each of the two senior counsel; (6) he is entitled to the fee paid to junior counsel on the hearing of a case reserved; (7) he is entitled to the costs of proceedings to draw money out of court; and (8) the master, in exercising his discretion as to the number of counsel, the amount of their fees, the number of consultations, the amount of consultation fees and refreshers, and the expenses of subpœnas to witnesses, telegrams and messages, ought to have regard to the difficulty, magnitude and importance of the particular case. Trench v. Nolan, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 445; 21 W. R. 640.

Upon the taxation of the costs of a parliamentary election petition, it is within the discretion of the master to allow a lump sum for "Instructions for brief," provided the items making up the lump sum have been brought before him, so as to enable him to determine whether it represents reasonable and proper charges. Barnstaple Election Petition, In re, Fleming v. Cave, 44 L. J., C. P. 200; 32 L. T. 160.

On taxation of costs in a petition under an order directing the petitioner to pay the respondent's costs, there is no objection to the master adopting 100 guineas as the fee to be allowed for senior and 75 guineas as that for junior counsel as an average for ordinary cases, but he must exercise his discretion in each case, and not allow these fees as a uniform standard without reference to the particular case; he should allow consultations from time to time in addition to daily refreshers; and though, as to preliminary expenses and instructions for brief, the court will not interfere if the master has used his discretion, unless he is shewn to be wrong, yet the parties are entitled to have his judgment on the claims instead of an allowance for one sum in gross to cover them; and an unsuccessful appeal to the court by the sitting member against the decision of the judge at chambers is collateral, and the court having disposed of the costs on the motion, the respondent is not entitled to them. Tamworth Election Petition, In re, 39 L. J., C. P. 89; L. R. 5 C. P. 172; 22 L. T. 98; 18 W. R. 605.

On the taxation of the costs of a petition, the number of witnesses to be allowed, the length of the briefs and proofs, the number of counsel, and the amount of their fees, and the incidental expenses of the trial, are matters for the master's discretion, subject to the control of the court where a proper case is shewn for its interference. The master, on taxation of the petitioner's costs, disallowed fees for consultations during the trial; the court, in accordance with the Tamworth Case (supra), directed him to review his taxation in that respect. Tillett v. Stracey, 39 L. J., C. P. 93; L. R. 5 C. P. 185; 22 L. T. 101; 18 W. R. 631.

The master disallowed a moiety of the charges paid to the under-sheriff on the trial: the court declined to interfere. Ib.

Although the amount of the reasonable expenses to be paid to any witness in an election petition may, under 31 & 32 Vict. c. 125 (the Parliamentary Elections Act, 1868), s. 34, and r. 5 of its Additional General Rules, January, 1875, be ascertained and certified by the registrar, his certificate is not conclusive of the amount as between the petitioner and respondent; but it is, as part of the general costs of the petition, subject under s. 41 to taxation by a master, who must exercise his discretion on the expenses certified. McLaren v. Home, 50 L. J., Q. B. 658; 7 Q. B. D. 477; 45 L. T. 350; 30 W. R. 85; 46 J. P. 85.

On taxation of the costs of a petition for bribery, treating and undue influence, when the petition is only withdrawn three days before the trial, and an order is made that the petitioner shall pay the respondent's costs, the respondent is entitled to all costs that could be reasonably incurred by an attorney for his client up to that time; and reasonable expenses incurred before delivery of particulars are to be allowed. Pembroke Election Petition, In re, Hughes v. Meyrick, 39 L. J., C. P. 249; L. R. 5 C. P. 407; 22 L. T. 482; 18 W. R. 806.

Fees to the respondent's counsel on their briefs are not to be disallowed, if they are delivered a reasonable time before the trial, even if that is before particulars are delivered. Ib.

c. Corrupt and Illegal Practices.

See also B. 2, m., post, col. 214.

i. Bribery.

By Candidate.]—Charges of personal bribery by candidates ought not to be made recklessly, and when made without reasonable care and investigation, the making of them may be visited with the payment of the costs thereby occasioned in any event. Per Hawkins, J.:—The costs incurred in the time consumed in trying charges of corrupt practices, which fail in proof, are to be borne by the party so failing in proof of them, although he may succeed upon the general issue. Rigden v. Passmore Edwards, 44 L. T. 64.

By Agent.]—A single case of bribery by an agent renders an election void. A circular letter addressed by a candidate to his constituents must not be interpreted with the same strictness as a commercial document. Birkbeck v. Bullard, 54 L. T. 625; 4 O'M. & H. 84. See also Aylesbury Division of Bucks, 4 O'M. & H. 59.

By Fellow-Candidate's Agent prior to Joint Candidature.]—When a candidate for election to parliament had been guilty of bribery through his agent, by reason of acts committed by such agent to procure votes for him at the election, and subsequently to such acts of bribery another candidate coalesced with him in ignorance of any previous corruption, and having no reason to suspect its existence:—Held, that such last-mentioned candidate was not liable by reason of the joint candidature to be unseated in respect of such acts of bribery. Malcolm v. Parry, 44 L. J., C. P. 121; L. R. 10 C. P. 168; 31 L. T. 845; 23 W. R. 322.

Travelling Expenses.]—To offer a voter his travelling expenses with the intention of inducing him to come and vote for a given candidate is bribery, and the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883, has not altered the law in this particular. Packard v. Collings, 4 O'M. & H. 70; 54 L. T. 625.

Where two out-voters were requested by letter to come to vote for a particular candidate, and did so without any promise of payment of their travelling expenses, and after they had voted were paid a sum equal to the first-class railway fare from the place whence they came and back, although they had in fact travelled third-class, a fact which was unknown to the persons who paid them:—Held, the facts proved disclosed no corrupt payment by the person who requested them to come, or the person who paid them the first-class fare. Rigden v. Passmore Edwards, 44 L. T. 192.

Payment to voters by way of travelling expenses of more than the sums actually expended in travelling is bribery. The court views with suspicion payments which are illegal, although they do not necessarily avoid an election. Tomline v. Tyler, 44 L. T. 187.

Semble, that where the same sum is given to every voter coming from the same place to an election, for his travelling expenses, it is bribery; and it is not the less so, though all the candidates agree in the payment of the same amount. Bembridge v. Roberts, 5 Car. & P. 186.

An election was about to take place at C. S. was one of the candidates. In the committee-room of S. the question was discussed whether the expense of bringing up out-voters was legal. S., after referring to a law book, said that it was, but limited it to the payment of expenses out of pocket. A circular had been previously prepared and printed, requesting out-voters to come up and vote for S. Upon S. making this declaration of his opinion a clerk to an agent of S. (without any express direction from S., or from the agent) wrote at the bottom of each circular, "Your railway expenses will be paid." A voter, who resided at H., received one of these circulars, with the added note. He came to C., voted for S. and afterwards received the sum of 8*s.*, the expenses to which he had bonâ fide been put by his journey:—Held, that the words added to the circular must be treated as written by the authority of S.; that the promise and payment were forbidden by 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, s. 2, and that for the purposes of that act they must be treated as corruptly made. Cooper v. Slade, 6 H. L. Cas. 746; 27 L. J., Q. B. 449; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 791; 6 W. R. 461.

A letter was written to an out-voter requesting him to come to a borough, and record his vote for S. A postcript added, "Your railway expenses will be paid." The voter did come and vote as requested; his travelling expenses were paid:—Held, that the promise and payment constituted only one act of bribery within 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, s. 2, and that consequently two counts, one for the promise to pay, and one for the actual payment, could not be supported. Ib.

Receipt of Money after Election.]—Where a voter at an election for members of parliament had received money after the election was over, but there was no proof of a prior agreement to accept it:—Held, that this was not an offence within 2 Geo. 2, c. 24, s. 7. Huntingtower v. Gardiner, 1 B. & C. 297; 2 D. & R. 450; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 120.

Landlord letting Tenants take Rabbits.]—Just before the poll, a candidate, who was sitting member, gave leave to his tenants to destroy and sell the rabbits on his estate, his tenants having on previous occasions complained without effect of their excessive quantity:—Held, that this was bribery. Launceston Election, In re, 2 O'M. & H. 122; 30 L. T. 823.

Offer of Valueless Thing.]—It is bribery to make a corrupt offer of a valueless thing in order to induce a voter to vote. Spencer v. Harrison, 44 L. T. 283.

Distribution of Coal Tickets.]—P. having been accepted by the Liberal party in a borough as a candidate at the next election, he afterwards distributed amongst the inhabitants coals by means of tickets bearing the signature of his political agent. Many of the inhabitants who accepted the coals were voters in the borough, and were not objects of charity. The coals were given corruptly. Parliament being soon after dissolved, P. was declared to be returned as member by a majority of votes over M., another candidate. A petition having been presented against the return of P., claiming the seat for M., P. was adjudged to be unseated on the ground of bribery. A scrutiny having been held, M. claimed to strike off the poll for P. one vote for every elector who had accepted the coals and had voted at the election, without ascertaining for whom he had in fact voted. The voters were not called to deny that they had received the coals corruptly:—Held, that the bribery contemplated in the Ballot Act, 1872, s. 25, was a corrupt bargain made with an elector by or on behalf of the candidate, and that under that enactment it was necessary to prove a guilty intent in the voter. Boston Election, In re, Malcolm v. Ingram, 43 L. J., C. P. 331; L. R. 9 C. P. 610; 31 L. T. 331.

Held, also, that a primâ facie case of corruption had been made out against the voters, which they were bound to displace; and that as they were not called to rebut the inference of corruption, one vote for every elector who received the coals and voted at the election must be struck off the poll of P. Ib.

Hiring Persons in the Constituency to preserve the Peace at an Election in another Town.]—Fifty persons, of whom the majority were poor voters in the borough of S., were hired by supporters of the respondents, who were candidates in S., to assist a candidate belonging to the same political party in the election for the borough of W.:—Held, upon the facts, that although the introduction of a foreign body of persons into a constituency upon an election is objectionable, the transaction did not amount to bribery. At an election private persons should not be hired to preserve the peace of the town. Persons who apprehend violence or disorder should apply to the authorities to take necessary precautions against a breach of the peace. Rigden v. Passmore Edwards, 44 L. T. 192.

Giving Workpeople Holiday.]—Where an agent of the respondent gave a holiday to the respondent's workpeople on the polling day, and they were paid their wages as usual, many of them being voters, who were supplied with colours, and some of whom were sent to the poll by such agent in carriages, and it appeared that on previous occasions, when the respondent was not a candidate, a holiday had been given, but wages withheld:—Held, the respondent's return was void for bribery by his agent. Truscott v. Bevan, 44 L. T. 64.

Taking up Voters' Freedom.]—Payment by a candidate, at an election for a member, of the expenses of taking up the freedom of his voters, is illegal. Bayntun v. Cattle, 1 M. & R. 265.

Wholesale Employment.]—The wholesale employment of voters to render valueless services avoids the election. Buxton v. Garfit, 44 L. T. 287.

At Test Ballot.]—There being a vacancy in the representation of a city, three Liberal candidates came forward; from the state of the register it appeared certain that if only one went to the poll he would be returned, and to secure this result it was agreed between the three candidates and their supporters that there should be a test-ballot to determine who should stand at the election. One of the three, who was at the head of the test-ballot, stood at the election, and was returned; but his agents gave money to voters to vote for him at the test-ballot, without, however, making any stipulation as to their votes at the election:—Held, that this was bribery within 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, s. 2, sub-s. 3, and that he was not entitled to retain his seat. Bristol Election Petition, Brett v. Robinson, 39 L. J., C. P. 265; L. R. 5 C. P. 503; 23 L. T. 188; 18 W. R. 866.

Evidence of, not in Particulars.]—See Belfast Case, col. 134.

Effect of Voters' Knowledge of.]—Bribery by a candidate at a parliamentary election, though rendering his election void, and by 31 & 32 Vict. c. 125, making him incapable of being elected during seven years, does not so affect his capacity to be a candidate at that election as to make all votes given for him by voters, with knowledge of such bribery, the same as if they had not been given at all, and thus to seat an opposing candidate. Drinkwater v. Deakin, 43 L. J., C. P. 355; L. R. 9 C. P. 626; 30 L. T. 832.

General Bribery and Treating—Effect of.]—General bribery and treating will void an election if proved to have existed upon the side of a successful candidate. Semble, that if general bribery and treating are proved, it is the duty of the judges to report the prevalence of extensive corruption. Packard v. Collings, 4 O'M. & H. 70; 54 L. T. 619. And see Aylesbury Division of Bucks, 4 O'M. & H. 59.

Candidate Reported by Judge as Guilty of.]—See Grant v. Pagham, col. 68.

Cannot be Reported as Trivial.]—See Birkbeck v. Bullard, col. 138.

Indictment for "Corrupt Practices" too General.]—In an indictment for a "corrupt practice" within the meaning of s. 3 of the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883, it is necessary to specify the particular offence with which the prisoner is charged. Reg. v. Stroulger, 55 L. J., M. C. 137; 17 Q. B. D. 327; 55 L. T. 122; 34 W. R. 719; 16 Cox, C. C. 85; 51 J. P. 278—C. C. R.

An indictment charged that at a parliamentary election the prisoner was "guilty of corrupt practices against the form of the statutes in that case made and provided." The jury found the prisoner guilty of corrupt practices by offering money for votes. After verdict it was objected that the indictment was bad, because it did not sufficiently describe the nature of the offence with which the prisoner was charged:—Held, per Lord Coleridge, C.J., and Mathew, J., that the indictment was bad for insufficient description of the offence charged, but that the defect was cured by verdict; per Field, J., that the indictment was good, but that, if not, the defect was cured by verdict; per Denman, J., and Day, J., that the indictment was bad, and that the defect was not cured by verdict. Ib.

An indictment under the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883, which merely charges the defendant with being guilty of a corrupt practice at an election, but does not specifically allege against him what that corrupt practice was, is bad for generality. Reg. v. Norton, 16 Cox, C. C. 59.

Trial of Information for Bribery—Refusal of Witness to criminate himself—Pardon.]—On the trial of an information for bribery at a parliamentary election, filed by the attorney-general, in pursuance of a resolution of the House of Commons, a person alleged in the indictment to have been bribed, was called as a witness; he refused to answer any question, on the ground that the answer would tend to criminate him. A pardon under the great seal was handed to the witness, but he still refused to answer, upon which the judge compelled him to answer, and on his evidence the defendant was convicted:—Held, that the pardon took away the privilege of the witness so far as any risk of prosecution at the suit of the Crown was concerned, and that, though the witness might be liable for an impeachment by the House of Commons, notwithstanding the pardon, by reason of the 12 & 13 Will. 3, c. 2, yet that was so unlikely to happen that the witness could not be said to be in any real danger, and he was therefore rightly compelled to answer. Reg. v. Boyes, 30 L. J., Q. B. 301; 1 B. & S. 311; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1158; 5 L. T. 147; 9 W. R. 690; 9 Cox, C. C. 32; 2 F. & F. 157.

Action for Penalties.]—On the 11th of June, 1880, the plaintiff commenced an action against the defendant for penalties for alleged bribery. A statement of claim was delivered on the 14th of July, 1880; on the 22nd of July the defendant obtained an order for particulars. No particulars were delivered, but the plaintiff's solicitor endeavoured to effect a compromise, to which the defendant, personally, was not a party, on the terms that he should be paid the costs of this and certain similar actions. In August, 1881, the defendant applied to have the action dismissed:—Held, that the facts shewed "wilful delay" on the part of the plaintiff within s. 14 of the Corrupt Practices Act, 1854 (repealed), and that the action must be dismissed. Guest v. Caldicott, 45 L. T. 609; 30 W. R. 122.

No damages are recoverable for detention of the debt in an action for penalties. Cuming v. Sibly, 4 Burr. 2489; 1 Term Rep. 239.

—— Limitation of Time to Prosecute.]—By 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, s. 14, no person shall be liable to any penalty or forfeiture thereby enacted or imposed unless some prosecution action or suit for the offence committed shall be commenced against such person within the space of one year next after such offence against the act shall be committed, and unless such person shall be summoned or otherwise served with a writ or process within the same space of time. Semble, that an information for a misdemeanor is not within this section. Reg. v. Leatham, 3 El. & El. 658; 30 L. J., Q. B. 205; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 674; 3 L. T. 504; 9 W. R. 33; 8 Cox, C. C. 498.

In an action for bribery against a member of parliament, alleged to have been committed in April, 1859, a writ of summons issued on the 15th March, 1860, and an appearance was entered on the 4th May. A declaration was delivered on the 17th April, 1861, and issue was joined on May 7th, but in June, 1862, the plaintiff had not proceeded to trial:—Held, a wilful delay within 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, s. 14, and the court stayed the proceedings. Taylor v. Vergette, 7 H. & N. 143; 30 L. J., Ex. 400; 4 L. T. 523; 9 W. R. 791.

Held, also, that such delay could not be pleaded, but is only ground for an application to stay the proceedings. Ib.

—— Defence.]—A plea of non-delivery of a claim within a month, pursuant to the Corrupt Practices Prevention Acts, held good on demurrer. Bradley v. Guinness, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 95.

—— Proof of the Election.]—In an action for bribery, it is not enough to shew that an election was held de facto, and that the defendant bribed a person who voted as an elector on that occasion; a regular election should be proved. Reed v. Lamb, 6 H. & N. 75; 29 L. J., Ex. 452; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 828.

The offence being charged in regard to an election, and being such as would be complete before the return, the return is not requisite to prove the election. Reg. v. Clark, 1 F. & F. 654.

In an action for penalties under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, the plaintiff gave in evidence a copy of the writ and return from the office of the clerk of the Crown, certified by a clerk in the office to be a true copy of the original writ, and examined therewith. The defendant's counsel having allowed it to be given in evidence as a certified copy:—Held, that, assuming it was not, there was no ground for granting a new trial. Reed v. Lamb, 6 H. & N. 75; 29 L. J., Ex. 452; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 828.

—— Proof of the Bribery.]—A declaration for bribery at an election alleged that the defendant did corrupt one A. to vote, by corruptly giving him 10*l.* as and for a reward for his vote. The proof was that A. saw the defendant in an outer room of a house; that the defendant said to him, "I suppose you vote with us, we give 10*l.*"; and then wrote down his name on a ticket, which A. took to a man, in an inner room, who gave the 10*l.*:—Held, that the evidence supported the declaration. Webb v. Smith, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 373; 6 Scott, 147; 1 Arn. 145; 7 L. J., C. P. 191; 2 Jur. 304.

Held, also, that evidence might be given that other persons not mentioned in the declaration received from the defendant similar tickets, which were honoured by the stranger in the inner room in a similar manner. Ib.

Where in an action for penalties the bribery imputed is a promise of money for a vote, or to abstain from voting, evidence of actual payment of money is admissible. Magee v. Mark, 11 Ir. C. L. R. 449.

The evidence for a plaintiff, in support of the bribery, rested solely upon the evidence of accomplices:—Held, that the jury was rightly directed that they might find for the plaintiff upon such testimony, though uncorroborated Ib. S. P., M'Clory v. Wright, 10 Ir. C. L. R. 514.

Held, also, that the judge was not bound to tell the jury, by analogy to the practice in criminal cases, that the defendant was entitled to the benefit of a doubt in the evidence. Ib.

Uncontradicted evidence of an act of bribery committed by a person in a respectable position goes very far to prove bribery and agency. Spencer v. Harrison, 44 L. T. 283.

A note given by a voter, who has been bribed, for repayment of the sum given to him in order to secure his vote, in an action for the bribery, may be given in evidence, though not stamped, to prove the fact of bribery. Dover v. Maestaer, 5 Esp. 92. S. P., Coppock v. Bower, 4 M. & W. 361; 8 L. J., Ex. 9.

In an action for bribery, it is immaterial whether the party corrupted had a right to vote or not, if he claimed a right to vote, and the corrupter thought he had such right. Lilley v. Corne, 1 Selw. N. P. 650, n.

An action for a parliamentary bribery will lie, though the party bribed does not vote according to the bribe. Sulston v. Norton, 3 Burr. 1235; 1 W. Bl. 317.

—— What a Variance.] — In an action for bribery, on 2 Geo. 2, c. 24 (repealed), it was not a material variance if the declaration stated the precept to have issued to the bailiffs of the borough, but the precept produced in evidence was directed to the bailiff. Warre v. Harbin, 2 H. Bl. 113.

—— Delay in going to Trial.]—If delay in going to trial is created by the prosecutor, the court, after verdict in his favour, will stay the proceedings on motion, and he will not be allowed his costs. Petrie v. White, 3 Term Rep. 5. And see Petrie v. Benfield, 3 Term Rep. 476.

—— Discovery of Bribery by Defendant.]—An offender who made a discovery of bribery might formerly have pleaded nil debet, and given his excuse in evidence. Davy v. Baker, 4 Burr. 2471.

A defendant, having a verdict against him for bribery at an election, moved that judgment upon the verdict might be stayed, he having made a discovery of another person offending against 2 Geo. 2, c. 24, s. 8 (repealed), who had been convicted on his (the defendant's) evidence, at the then last assizes: but the court refused to interpose, upon a motion, and said, if the law was on his side, he must take his remedy in some other way. Pugh v. Curgenven, 3 Wils. 35.

ii. Treating.

What is.]—Treating is not the entertainment of equals by equals, but of an inferior by a superior with the object of securing the goodwill of the inferior (per Cave, J.). Birkbeck v. Bullard, 4 O'M. & H. 84; 54 L. T. 625.

Before Seat vacant.]—A candidate is disqualified, under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, s. 36 (repealed), for acts amounting to corrupt treating, though the acts were not committed after the dissolution of parliament which caused the vacancy in the borough for which he was such candidate. Youghal Election Petition, Ir. R. 3 C. L. 530; 11 W. R. 590.

By Agent—Funds supplied by Candidate spent in.]—See Truscott v. Bevan, col. 115.

Evidence of, not in Particulars.]—See Spencer v. Harrison, col. 135.

Action for Refreshments supplied to Voters.]—It being illegal for a candidate to furnish provisions to any voters after the teste of the writ, an innkeeper could not recover against a candidate for provisions so furnished at his request. Ribbans v. Crickett, 1 Bos. & P. 264. S. P., Lofthouse v. Wharton, 1 Camp. 550, n.

At a general election A. was returned, after a contest, to serve in parliament, but died before the next meeting of parliament:—Held, that, immediately on his death, the representation of that place became vacant within 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 4; and that if B., being neither a candidate nor the agent of a candidate, canvassed for C., and ordered beer for the voters, after such vacancy, this came within the act, even though it was not proved that C. either knew of the canvass or of the treating; and therefore an innkeeper could not recover against B. for beer supplied to those voters by his order. The statute extended to an unsuccessful candidate who did not come to the poll. Ward v. Nanney, 3 Car. & P. 399.

To come within 7 & 8 Will. 3, c. 4, s. 1, the acts mentioned in that statute must have been done by the candidate, or some person acting for him and on his behalf, in order to be elected. Hughes v. Marshall, 2 C. & J. 118; 2 Tyr. 134; 5 Car. & P. 150; Price, P. C. 173; 1 L. J., Ex. 16.

Where supporters of a candidate gave orders to the landlord of a public-house, opened by the committee of the candidate, to supply others with refreshments, which were supplied on the credit of those who gave the orders:—Held, that it was not within that act. Ib.

Effect of General Bribery and Treating.]—See Packard v. Collings, col. 144.

iii. Undue Influence.

Threat to withdraw Custom.]—Under s. 5 of the Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854, a person is guilty of the offence of undue influence who threatens to withdraw his custom from a voter in order to induce him to vote or to abstain from voting. Reg. v. Bramwell, 5 W. R. 557.

Spiritual.]—See Meath Case, 4 O'M. & H. 130, 188.

Intimidation by rioting.]—See Ackers v. Howard, 4 O'M. & H. 65.

iv. Illegal Practices.

Illegal Employment.]—D. and his agents gave gratuitous refreshments to certain persons styled "workers" at a parliamentary election at which D. was a candidate:—Held, that this was an illegal employment within s. 17 of the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883, and rendered the election of D. void. Schneider v. Duncan, 4 O'M. & H. 76; 54 L. T. 618.

The employment of persons to keep order at meetings connected with an election is an illegal employment within the meaning of s. 17 of the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883. Packard v. Collings, 4 O'M. & H. 70.

Illegal Hiring.]—See Manchester Case, 4 O'M. & H. 120; Finsbury Case, Ib. 176, 177.

Voter driven to Poll in Cab.]—A voter had been driven to the poll in a cab paying nothing to the driver; no proof was given that the voter knew that the use of the cab was prohibited by law:—Held, that no breach of s. 14 of the Corrupt Practices Act, 1883, had been committed. Buckrose Case, 4 O'M. & H. 110.

Prohibited Committee Room—"Premises of a Public Elementary School"—Liability to Penalty.]—The user, as a committee room, of part of a schoolmaster's dwelling-house within the curtilage of a school purchased under the Education Act, 1870, is contrary to the provisions of s. 20 of the Corrupt Practices Act, 1883; but where the schoolmaster's dwelling-house was provided rent free by a subscriber to the school it does not come within the words "premises of a public elementary school" in that section mentioned.

The penalty is incurred not only by the persons letting and hiring a prohibited committee room, but also by the members of the committee using it. Buckrose Case, supra.

Personation.]—If at a parliamentary election a man applies to the presiding officer for a ballot paper in a name other than his name of origin, or in the name by which he is generally known, but in a name which appears on the register of voters, and which was inserted therein by the overseers in the belief that it was the name of the applicant, and for the purpose of putting him on the register, he is entitled to vote, and is not a person who "applies for a ballot paper in the name of some other person, whether that name be that of a person living or dead, or of a fictitious person," so as to be guilty of the offence of personation within the meaning of s. 24 of the Parliamentary and Municipal Elections Act, 1872, or the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883. Reg. v. Fox, 16 Cox, C. C. 166.

—— Voting twice.]—See St. Andrews Election, and Isaacson v. Durant, col. 122.

—— Election not avoided by, apart from Agency.]—See Belfast Case, col. 128.

—— Evidence.]—In order to sustain a conviction for personation it is not necessary to state in the indictment, or to prove at the trial, that the presiding officer at the booth where the offence was committed was duly appointed. Reg. v. Garvey, 16 Cox, C. C. 252. See Belfast Case, col. 134.

Violation of Secrecy of Ballot—Evidence.]—Upon a charge of violation of the secrecy of the ballot, the information communicated by the accused is, of itself, sufficient evidence to convict him of the offence. Reg. v. Unkles, Ir. R. 8 C. L. 50.

v. Election Commissioners.

Procedure — Formal Adjournments unnecessary.]—Commissioners appointed under 15 & 16 Vict. c. 57 (repealed) for the purpose of an inquiry into corrupt practices at an election have power to hold separate and independent meetings for the purposes of such inquiry, and are not obliged to adjourn at the close of each meeting in order to keep their powers alive. Beverley Commissioners, In re, Fitzgerald and Flint, Ex parte, 10 B. & S. 813; 39 L. J., Ex. 17; L. R. 5 Ex. 21; 21 L. T. 464; 18 W. R. 172.

Semble, that such meetings cannot be intermitted for more than one week without the consent of the secretary of state. Ib.

Whether Refusal by, of Certificate of Indemnity to Witness can be questioned.]—By 26 & 27 Vict. c. 29, s. 7 (repealed), when any witness shall answer every question relating to corrupt practices at a parliamentary election which he shall be required to answer, and the answer to which may criminate or tend to criminate him, he shall be entitled to receive from the commissioners appointed to investigate corrupt practices a certificate, stating that such witness was upon his examination required by the commissioners to answer questions the answers to which criminated or tended to criminate him, and had answered all such questions, and if any proceedings be at any time pending against such witness for corrupt practices, such proceedings, on production of such certificate, shall be stayed:—Held, that if a witness has in point of fact answered all such questions he is entitled to a certificate; and if the commissioners refuse to grant a certificate to the witness on the ground that they are of opinion that he has not answered the questions, their decision is not final and conclusive, and may be reviewed by mandamus. Reg. v. Price, L. R. 6 Q. B. 411; 24 L. T. 387. (Demurrer to return to mandamus.) Reg. v. Price, Lovibond, Ex parte, 22 L. T. 12. (Rule for mandamus.) But see Reg. v. Holl, infra.

Where commissioners appointed to inquire into corrupt practices alleged to have taken place at elections, refuse to give a certificate of indemnity to a witness examined by them, in connection with such corrupt practices, on the ground of his answers being unsatisfactory, the decision of the commissioners, refusing such certificate, is conclusive, and cannot be reviewed by mandamus. Reg. v. Price (L. R. 6 Q. B. 411) dissented from. Reg. v. Holl, 50 L. J., Q. B. 763; 7 Q. B. D. 575—C. A. Affirming 45 L. T. 69; 46 J. P. 53.

Certificate of, that Witness had answered, but not truly.]—A person was examined as a witness before the commissioners appointed to inquire into the existence of corrupt practices at an election for a city, and received from the commissioners a certificate that he was sworn and examined on oath before the commissioners, "and upon such examination was required by us to answer questions which criminated or tended to criminate him, and answered all such questions; but divers of his answers to the questions were unsatisfactory to us, and we believe were false, and false to his knowledge." He was afterwards convicted on a prosecution for bribery:—Held, that in order to entitle him to a certificate he must make true answers to all questions: that the commissioners had in effect refused to certify that his answers were true, and that the certificate was not such as, under 26 & 27 Vict. c. 29, s. 7, required, and did not operate as, a stay of proceedings. Reg. v. Hulme, 39 L. J., Q. B. 149; L. R. 5 Q. B. 377; 22 L. T. 673; 18 W. R. 830.

Answers of Witnesses before, not admissible on Information for Perjury.]—By s. 7 of the Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1863 (26 & 27 Vict. c. 29), no person summoned as a witness before any commissioners appointed under the Corrupt Practices Acts shall be excused from answering any question relating to corrupt practices forming the subject of inquiry on the ground that the answer would tend to criminate himself, "provided that no statement made by any person in answer to any question put by or before such commissioners shall, except in cases of indictments for perjury, be admissible in evidence in any proceeding, civil or criminal":—Held, that the exception in the proviso did not apply to an ex-officio information by the attorney-general for perjury. Reg. v. Slator, 51 L. J., Q. B. 246; 8 Q. B. D. 267; 30 W. R. 410; 46 J. P. 694.

Nor on Indictment for Perjury, except for Perjury before the Commissioners.]—The proviso in s. 7 of 26 & 27 Vict. c. 29, was restricted to indictments for perjury committed before the election committee or commissioners, and true answers before such commissioners could not be used against the witness to support an indictment for perjury committed before another tribunal, such as an inquiry into the validity of an election before a judge. Reg. v. Buttle, 39 L. J., M. C. 115; L. R. 1 C. C. 248; 22 L. T. 728; 18 W. R. 956.

Answers of Witnesses before, as to Documents, do not protect Documents in other Proceedings.]—By the proviso to s. 8 of 15 & 16 Vict. c. 57, no statement made by any person, in answer to any question put by the commissioner, shall, except in cases of indictment for perjury committed in such answers, be admissible in evidence in any proceeding, civil or criminal. On an inquiry before commissioners, in pursuance of 15 & 16 Vict. c. 57, into the existence of corrupt practices at an election for a member of parliament, the defendant, being asked as to a letter written by his agent to him, stated the substance of it, and of his letter in answer to it. The letter of the defendant was afterwards sent by the agent to the secretary to the commissioners, and, on the trial of an information, was produced by the secretary. The letter of the agent not being produced by the defendant, secondary evidence of it was given:—Held, that the proviso in s. 8 of 15 & 16 Vict. c. 57, did not apply to documents, though referred to in the examination of the defendant; and therefore the letters were not privileged. Reg. v. Leatham, 3 El. & El. 658; 30 L. J., Q. B. 205; 7 Jur. (N. S.) 674; 3 L. T. 777; 9 W. R. 334; 8 Cox, C. C. 498.

Held, also, that secondary evidence of the contents of the letter of the agent was admissible, even if the letter was privileged. Ib.

B. MUNICIPAL.

See Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 50), ss. 9, 11, 12, 14, 15, 25, 29, 31-33, 44-104; Third Schedule; and Eighth Schedule, Part II. See also Parliamentary and Municipal Registration Act, 1878. The M. C. Act, 1882, repeals, but in part re-enacts, the act of 1835 (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76), and the acts amending it.

1. Burgesses.

a. Occupation.

See also A. 1, a. i. (col. 3); A. 1, a. ii. (col. 14); and A. 1, b. v. (col. 50), ante.

See Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, ss. 9, 31, 33.

Joint.]—D. occupied a house in Exeter jointly with his partner, and carried on his business there. He had the exclusive use of a furnished bed-room and sitting-room. He resided more than seven miles from Exeter. He visited Exeter every day except Sundays, to attend to his business, which he always transacted at this house, and he sometimes took his meals there: his affidavit stated that he sometimes slept there:—Held, that a joint occupation was a sufficient occupation under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, to entitle a man to be placed on the list of burgesses. Reg. v. Exeter Corporation, Dipstale, Ex parte, L. R. 4 Q. B. 114, 19 L. T. 432.

Held, also, that D. did not inhabit the house in Exeter so as to constitute him an inhabitant householder under that section. Ib.

Of Part of House.]—Occupation of part of a dwelling-house, for the purposes of a private dwelling only, constitutes occupation of a "house" within ss. 9 and 31 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, so as to confer the municipal franchise upon the occupier. Greenway v. Bachelor, Aldridge's Case, 53 L. J., Q. B. 180; 12 Q. B. D. 381; 50 L. T. 272; 32 W. R. 319; Colt. 317; 47 J. P. 792.

A. occupied two rooms only in a house in which there were four other residents. The landlord did not live on the premises, but paid the poor and borough rates:—Held, that A. was entitled to the municipal as well as the parliamentary franchise. Ib.

Letting One Room.]—A person rated for the whole of a house, which he occupies, with the exception of one room, underlet by the week, has a sufficient occupation to entitle him to be on the burgess roll. Reg. v. Eye Corporation, 2 P. & D. 348; 9 A. & E. 670; 8 L. J., Q. B. 142.

Separate Outer Doors with Common Passage and Staircase.] — So, also, where one house adjoins another, both being under the same roof, and having a common entrance passage, into which the outer door of each opens, with a common staircase leading to the bedrooms, each house is distinct, and may be the subject of a sufficient occupation. Ib.

Where part of House let and Tenant rated for it.]—But where a person let a cellar under the house for which he was rated, to a person who occupied it as a warehouse, and was rated for it, there being an internal communication between the house and the cellar, the occupier of the house was not qualified to be on the burgess roll. Ib.

Of Office.]—Occupation of an attorney's office entitles a person to be a burgess, within 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 9, which requires occupation of a "house, warehouse, counting-house, or shop," and he is therefore qualified to be elected councillor of a borough. Creek, In re, 3 B. & S. 459; 32 L. J., Q. B. 89; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 646; 7 L. T. 596; 11 W. R. 234.

"House" or "Shop"—Stall in Market.]—C. and others held as weekly tenants, from the Cork corporation, and subject to the corporation regulations, stalls in the public market. The market building was closed and locked from 10 p.m. to 9 a.m., the keys being kept by, and a night watchman employed and paid by, the corporation. These stalls were open in front, and were fitted with movable benches:—Held, that such stall-holders were not occupiers within the meaning of s. 30 of the Municipal Corporations (Ireland) Act, 1840, and that such stalls were not shops within the same section. Lovell v. Callaghan, [1894] 2 Ir. R. 346.

Not affected by Assignment of Stock-in-Trade.]—The occupier of a house who has assigned all his stock-in-trade and book-debts to a creditor is nevertheless qualified to be on the burgess roll. Reg. v. Eye Corporation, supra.

Of Cottages on Farm by Labourers at reduced Rent—Rates paid by Farmer.]—The County Electors Act, 1888 (51 Vict. c. 10), s. 2, extends to counties, for the purpose of the election of county authorities in England, the burgess qualification enacted by s. 9 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 50), by which it is provided that no person shall be entitled to be enrolled as a burgess unless he has been rated and paid all poor-rates in respect of the qualifying property up to the 5th of January preceding. And by s. 32 of the same act, if an occupier of any qualifying property, whether the landlord is or is not liable to be rated to the poor-rate in respect thereof, claims to be rated, and pays or tenders to the overseers the full amount of the poor-rate, the overseers shall put his name on the rate-book; and if they fail to do so, he shall nevertheless for the purposes of the act be deemed rated to that rate. Agricultural labourers were employed by farmers on a verbal hiring at a weekly wage, by the terms of which they were permitted, but not required, to occupy cottages on the farms during the term of their employment at a lower rent than was paid for the cottages by labourers not in such employment, and the rent was deducted from the wage; the farmers paid the rates in respect of the cottages. The labourers occupied the cottages for the full qualifying period, their names being entered on the rate-books as occupiers, but all rates being paid by the farmers:—Held, that s. 32 of the act of 1882 did not apply, and also that the claimants' occupation was not by virtue of service, and that, therefore, they were entitled to be registered on the occupiers' list, division 1, both as county electors and parliamentary voters. Marsh v. Estcourt, 59 L. J., Q. B. 100; 24 Q. B. D. 147; 38 W. R. 495; Fox, 157; 54 J. P. 294.

Service Franchise.]—Occupation of a dwelling-house by virtue of an office, service, or employment within the meaning of the Representation of the People Act, 1884 (48 Vict. c. 3), s. 3, is no qualification for the municipal franchise. M'Clean v. Pritchard, 20 Q. B. D. 285; 58 L. T. 337; 36 W. R. 508; Fox, 94; 52 J. P. 519.

A person who occupies premises as a servant is only entitled to be on division 2 of the occupiers' list. Kent v. Fraser, 61 J. P. 359.

Transfer of Premises — Continuing in, as Tenant.]—G. & T. carried on business in premises jointly occupied by them till the 24th of May, 1894, upon which date they transferred the business and the whole of the premises to a limited company, and took a demise of a portion of the premises, and continued in occupation of that portion:—Held, that there had been continuous occupation of the demised portion of the premises within the meaning of s. 9, sub-s. 2, of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882. Timmis v. Albiston, 64 L. J., Q. B. 564; [1895] 2 Q. B. 58; 15 R. 422; Fox, 426; 59 J. P. 663.

Cesser of, between Parliamentary and Municipal Revision.]—W. was, for the year ending December 1st, 1873, on the municipal list in respect of premises in the ward of Cheap, and also upon the parliamentary register for the city of London for 1873–4, in respect of the same premises. He ceased to occupy the premises on the 17th October, 1873, and on the revision of the municipal list by the aldermen and common councilmen, on the 3rd December, 1873, his name was struck off the list, on the ground that he had ceased to occupy the premises in the ward:—Held, that he was qualified to vote under s. 3 (by which every person on the parliamentary register for the city, in force for the time being, in respect of the occupation of premises, is entitled to vote in municipal elections), notwithstanding that he had ceased to occupy before the 3rd December, 1873, when the municipal list was revised. A mandamus therefore issued to command the aldermen and common councilmen to restore his name to the list. Reg. v. Ward of Cheap (Aldermen, &c.), 29 L. T. 842; 22 W. R. 328.

b. Residence.

What sufficient Inhabiting to constitute.]—W., after carrying on business at Exeter for many years, went to live in London. He continued his business, which compelled him often to visit Exeter, and he kept some offices and rooms there. He was in Exeter about twenty times since Michaelmas, 1867, staying each time from four to ten days. On these occasions he always transacted his business, slept, and took some of his meals in his own rooms :—Held, that the question whether a person was an inhabitant householder within 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 9, is a question of fact, and depends upon whether there has been such a degree of inhabitance as to be in substance and in common sense a residence, and that W. was an inhabitant householder in Exeter, as there was sufficient evidence to shew that he had a residence there as well as in London. Reg. v. Exeter Corporation, Westcombe, Ex parte, L. R. 4 Q. B. 110 ; 19 L. T. 397.

C. had, within the city of Cork, a store, to which was attached a room in which he had a bed, and occasionally slept and took his meals —Held, that he did not reside in a house so as to constitute him an "inhabitant householder" under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 108 (Ir.), s. 30. M'Dougal v. Creedon, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 165. See Reg. v. Exeter Corporation, Dipstale, Ex parte, col. 152, and Rex v. Sargent, col. 183.

Not by itself a Qualification.]—An inhabitant of a borough was not, merely by force of his inhabitancy, without any inchoate right, entitled to be a corporator. Rex v. West Looe, 5 D. & R. 590 ; 3 B. & C. 677.

c. Rates.

Person not on Rate-book, who has Paid Rates and claimed to be rated, deemed to be rated.]—The assistant overseer of a borough, although requested to do so in July, 1889, failed to insert the name of the respondent in the rate-book as joint occupier of the "Blue Bell" Inn, 18, King-street, and consequently his name did not appear on the burgess roll of the 1st of August, 1889. From October, 1883, the respondent had occupied the inn jointly with his mother, and although the licence and brewer's lease were still held in her name, and the demand notes and receipts for the rates were made out in her name, yet the respondent in fact paid all outgoings and rates from the profits of the inn. On the burgess roll of the 1st of August, 1890, his name appeared as joint occupier of a "dwelling-house," and his abode stated to be 18, King-street, whilst his mother's name appeared as joint occupier of a "house," and her abode stated to be the "Blue Bell" Inn, 18, King-street. On the 1st of November, 1890, the respondent was elected a town councillor :—Held, upon the question as to whether the respondent was qualified to be enrolled as a burgess for the year 1890-91, that he had qualified himself under s. 9 (e) of the act of 1882 by payment of rates, and having claimed to be rated under s. 32, was entitled to be deemed to be rated under the 2nd clause of that section. Unwin v. McMullen, 60 L. J., Q. B. 400 ; [1891] 1 Q. B. 694 ; 39 W. R. 712

Where Rated in Two Wards.] — A burgess who is rated in two wards is not bound to select in which he will be inrolled, and, if his name appears on the roll for both, may vote in either. Reg. v. Tugwell, 9 B. & S. 367 ; 37 L. J., Q. B. 275 ; L. R. 3 Q. B. 704 ; 16 W. R. 1039. See Reg. v. Harrald, col. 203.

Mistake in Name on Rate. — To entitle a ratepayer to be upon the burgess roll, it is sufficient if it can be shewn that he was intended to be rated to the relief of the poor, although there may be a mistake in his name as entered upon the rate. Reg. v. Gregory, 17 Jur. 439.

A son, whose name was C. B. G., succeeded his father, whose name was C. G., in the occupation of a house situated in a borough, and paid the rent and rates. The overseer intending to rate the son, and not knowing that his name was C. B. G., described him in the rate as C. G. Upon an application for a quo warranto :—Held, that C. B. G. was rated to the relief of the poor and qualified to be on the burgess roll. Aldborough Town Council, In re, 1 W. R. 329.

One Person Paying for Another.]—The payment of rates in order to qualify a person to be inrolled as a burgess, must be a bonâ fide payment by such person himself. A payment by and at the expense of a third party, though by the authority and with the knowledge of such person, is not sufficient. Rex v. Bridgenorth Corporation, 2 P. & D. 317 ; 10 A. & E. 66 ; 8 L. J., M. C. 86 ; 3 Jur. 384.

Owner of Small Tenements Rated instead of Occupiers — Occupiers Treated as Rated for Purpose of Franchise — Mistake in Assessing Owner's Composition—Borough Rate paid out of Poor Rate.] — By a local act, owners of dwelling-houses within a borough of a less yearly rent than 10*l.* were to be rated to the poor, instead of the occupiers. The owners were empowered to compound with the overseers at one-third the rate where the annual rent and value did not amount to 7*l.*, and at one-half the rate where the annual rent or value amounted to 7*l.*, but did not amount to 10*l.* The act also provided that nothing was to prejudice or affect any municipal or parochial franchises of the occupiers, but that they might claim to be put on the burgess roll as if that act had not passed, and the occupiers had been rated and assessed to the poor in their own names. M. claimed to be put on the burgess roll, in respect of a house which he occupied as tenant at a yearly rent of 7*l.* The house was stated in the poor rate to be of the gross estimated value of 6*l.* 19*s.* and of the ratable value of 5*l.* 4*s.* His landlord had compounded with the overseers at one-third the poor rate, and had duly paid his composition. The borough rates were paid out of the poor rates :—Held, that under the local act, the criterion for composition was the rent which could fairly be obtained when the premises were let, or the value for which they could be let when they were vacant ; but that the title of the occupier to be put upon the burgess roll would not be affected by any mistake in the amount of the composition between the owner and overseers, that the overseers were entitled to include the borough rate in the composition as part of the poor rate, and that payment of the composition was equivalent to the payment of the borough rate. Reg. v. Kidderminster Corporation, 2 L. M. & P. 201 ; 20 L. J., Q. B. 281.

Local Rate not Extending over whole Borough, Nonpayment of.]—An act for paving and lighting the city of Lichfield, passed before the Municipal Corporations Act, did not extend over certain parts of the borough. By virtue of 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 75, the trustees appointed under the local act had transferred the powers vested in them to the council of the borough, but the council had not made an order under s. 87, that such parts of the borough should be taken to be within the local act:—Held, that a rate made and levied by the council under the local act was not a borough rate, the nonpayment of which disqualified a person from being inrolled as a burgess. Reg. v. Lichfield Corporation, 2 G. & D. 10; 2 Q. B. 693; 11 L. J., Q. B. 122; 6 Jur. 624.

Refusal to Pay Invalid Rate.]—A writ of mandamus to a mayor and assessors to inrol B.'s name, recited that B., being duly qualified and entitled to be inrolled in the burgess roll of the borough in respect of property within the parish and borough, was omitted. The return certified that B. was not a person qualified or entitled to be inrolled in the burgess roll of the borough in respect of property within the parish, and it also certified the making and assessing of a rate which was invalid, and B.'s refusal to pay, and that, because of such refusal and for other the causes aforesaid, B. was not qualified to be inrolled:—Held, that the latter part of the return was bad by reason of the objection to the rate; but that the former part might be separated from the latter, and was a sufficient answer to the writ. Reg. v. New Windsor Corporation, 7 Q. B. 908; 13 L. J., Q. B. 337.

d. Under Special Charters and Customs.

Qualification — Estate for Life — Estate in Right of Wife for her Life.]—A charter ordained that no person should be admitted a burgess, except he had for three years before been seised and possessed of an estate of freehold for the term of his life, or some greater estate in land of a certain value, with an exception of such as should be seised of such estate of such yearly value, which had come to him by descent or marriage:—Held, that one who by virtue of his marriage became seised of an estate in right of his wife for her life, was not within the exception, and therefore not qualified. Rex v. Powell, 8 Term Rep. 639.

Charter prescribing Mode of Election abrogates Usage.]—The acceptance of a charter, whereby the election of burgesses is directed in a manner different from what had obtained by ancient usage, which is inconsistent with the charter, abrogates the usage, which is determined by the acceptance of the charter; and that must afterwards be the only measure by which the election of burgesses is to be governed. Powell v. Rex (in error), 2 Bro. P. C. 298.

Power to Elect, Delegation of, by Corporation.]—The general body of a corporation may lawfully delegate the power to elect burgesses to a select body of the corporation. Rex v. Westwood, 2 Dow & Cl. 21; 4 Bligh (N.S.) 213; 7 Bing. 1; 7 D. & R. 267; 4 B. & C. 781.

Whether a power of making voluntary elections is incidental to the corporation at large, or exists in them by prescription, it is competent for them to delegate it to a select part of themselves; but they cannot delegate such power to any stranger. Rex v. Bird, 13 East, 367.

Where a power of creating freemen is shewn to have been once vested in the body at large of a prescriptive corporation, the exercise of it cannot be sustained in a select part of the same corporation continued by a charter under other names of incorporation; there being no express grant of such a power to the select body by any such charters, nor even any by-law to that effect, even supposing such a power could be transferred by a by-law from the whole to a part of the same corporation. Rex v. Holland, 2 East, 70.

Swearing in, subsequently to Election, at Meeting held for another purpose.]—A charter empowered the mayor, a justice of the peace, and the rest of the aldermen (seven in all), or the major part of them, of whom the mayor and justice to be two, when it shall seem to them convenient and necessary, to elect as many free burgesses as shall please them, and to the same free burgesses, so elected, to administer an oath. The defendant was elected a free burgess in October, 1804, and in December, 1806, at a meeting of six out of the seven aldermen, in consequence of a mandamus to them to fill up the vacant place of alderman, and which meeting the mayor said was held for that sole purpose, the defendant tendered himself to be sworn in; against which three aldermen protested, one of whom immediately left the assembly; but before the other two protestors withdrew, the mayor, with the assent of two other aldermen, administered the oath of office to the defendant:—Held, first, that the swearing in of the burgess might well be at a time subsequent to the election, he having had a present legal capacity to be sworn in at the time of his election, and therefore not like the case of an infant elected; secondly, that the act of swearing in, being merely ministerial, may be done by the mayor, as presiding officer, in the presence of the majority of the mayor and aldermen, by whom such act was required to be done, whensoever and howsoever assembled, and without any previous summons for this purpose, there being no dissent by the majority at the time when the oath was so administered; and, thirdly, though three, an equal number of those first assembled, protested against the defendant's being sworn in, when he first tendered himself to take the oath; yet one of the protestors having withdrawn, it was competent to the majority who remained to administer the oath; no vote having been come to by the major part at first assembled to preclude the body from doing the act at the meeting. Rex v. Courtenay, 9 East, 246. And see Rex v. Ellis, 9 East, 252, n.

Notice unnecessary, where Day of Election fixed by Custom or Charter.]—See Rex v. Hill, col. 168.

Right to be admitted a Burgess—By reason of Apprenticeship.]—By the constitution of a corporation, a person having served a seven years' apprenticeship to a freeman residing in the town, was entitled to his freedom:—Held, that an apprentice who was bound to a freeman, resident only occasionally and whose business was carried on elsewhere, was not so entitled. Rex v. Marshall, 2 Term Rep. 2.

By a custom in a corporate town, all persons having served an apprenticeship for seven years to a free burgess, carrying on trade there, were entitled to be admitted to the office of a free burgess:—Held, that a person who had served under articles of clerkship to an attorney (a free burgess of the borough, and residing within the same), was not entitled to be admitted to his freedom. Rex v. Doncaster Corporation, 7 B. & C. 630; 1 M. & Ry. 545; 6 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 57.

A prescriptive right in the eldest son of every burgess born in N., and in the younger sons of every burgess born there, and having served a seven years' apprenticeship to any trade, and in every person having served a seven years' apprenticeship in N., to any burgess of N., to be admitted a burgess of N. on his attaining twenty-one, does not exclude the incidental power arising by implication of law to the corporation at large, to secure their perpetual succession, by voluntary elections of burgesses ad libitum; and this, though it was averred that N. had always been and is a populous town, containing numerous resident and trading burgesses; and that, by the prescriptive modes of supply by birth and servitude, the succession of a sufficient and large number of burgesses is fully secured: for non constat that these sources had at all times been sufficient during the existence of the corporation, without occasional supplies of burgesses by election. Rex v. Bird, 13 East, 367.

—— By Birth.]—Where the custom of a corporation was that "every freeman's son, born in the town after his father was a freeman, should be admitted a freeman on attaining his age of twenty-one years"; and no instance appeared, since the time of Queen Elizabeth, of more than one son of a freeman having been admitted in right of his father:—Held, that the expression, "every freeman's son," when construed by the usage, did not mean "every son of a freeman," and that the custom was satisfied by one son only being admitted. Rex v. Rye Corporation, 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 107.

—— By Payment—Invalid By-law.]—A by-law, that any person should be admitted to the freedom of the corporation, upon payment of money, together with the fees, is bad. Rex v. Northampton, 4 Burr. 2260.

—— Corporation Officer.]—The nomination of a corporation officer in a modern charter, by necessary intendment makes him a free burgess of the borough, if he was not so before. Rex v. Downes, 7 D. & R. 775; 5 B. & C. 182; 29 R. R. 213. S. P., Rex v. Perkins, 4 D. & R. 427.

Defect in Title of Officer who admits.]—The title of a person having an inchoate right to be admitted a free burgess of a borough, cannot be impeached on the ground of a defect of title in the officer by whom he was admitted. Rex v. Slythe, 9 D. & R. 226; 6 B. & C. 240; 5 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 41; 30 R. R. 312.

Alderman, though Election void, not a Burgess.]—By the charter of a corporation, aldermen were to be nominated out of the burgesses. A burgess having accepted the office of alderman under a void election, it was held to operate as a surrender of the former office, and that, therefore, upon being ousted, he could not be deemed a burgess. Rex v. Hughes, 5 B. & C. 886; 8 D. & R. 708; 5 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 20; 29 R. R. 458. Rex v. Hubbald, 6 B. & C. 139; 9 D. & R. 145; 5 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 24.

Parochial Relief or other Alms.]—The occupier of a borough, whose father has received parochial relief, is entitled to be enrolled on the burgess list and elected a councillor, as he cannot be said to have received parochial relief or other alms within 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 9. Reg. v. Ireland, 9 B. & S. 19; 37 L. J., Q. B. 73; L. R. 3 Q. B. 130; 17 L. T. 466; 16 W. R. 358.

The receipt of alms from a public charitable institution for the benefit of poor householders not receiving parochial relief does not disqualify a person from being inrolled. Reg. v. Lichfield Corporation, 2 G. & D. 10; 2 Q. B. 693; 11 L. J., Q. B. 122; 6 Jur. 624.

Infant.]—An infant could not be elected a burgess of a corporation, nor could a person so elected act as a burgess on being sworn in on attaining the age of twenty-one. Rex v. Carter, Lofft. 516; Cowp. 58, 220.

Married Women.]—A married woman, though qualified by occupation and payment of rates and put on the burgess list, cannot vote at the election of town councillors. Reg. v. Harrald, 41 L. J., Q. B. 173; L. R. 7 Q. B. 361; 26 L. T. 616; 20 W. R. 328.

Neglecting to make out.]—The penalty imposed by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 48, on an overseer who neglects to make out, sign, and deliver a burgess list, is not taken away by 20 & 21 Vict. c. 50. Hunt v. Hibbs, 5 H. & N. 123; 29 L. J., Ex. 222; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 78; 1 L. T. 379; 8 W. R. 238.

In an action under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, and 20 & 21 Vict. c. 50, against an overseer for neglecting to make out, sign and deliver a burgess list, it is no defence, that, although he did not make out the list, a majority of the other overseers did so. Ib.

Neither is it a defence that he did make out the list after the 1st September, the time fixed by the statute, and before or on the 5th September. Ib.

The list made out ought to be in alphabetical order. Ib.

A party who neglects to make out a burgess list is only liable for one penalty in respect thereof, and cannot be sued for a second penalty in refusing a sight of a burgess list. Gregory v. Fell, 6 Jur. 422.

Signature by Overseers.]—The mere omission, whether wilful or not, to sign the burgess list, under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 15, subjects each overseer so neglecting to the penalty under s. 48. King v. Burrell, 4 P. & D. 207; 12 A. & E. 460; 9 L. J., Q. B. 337; 4 Jur. 1109. S. P., King v. Share, 2 G. & D. 453; 3 Q. B. 31; 11 L. J., Q. B. 163; 6 Jur. 730.

Before the commencement of an action for penalties against an overseer, for neglecting to do so, a previous notice of action under s. 133 need not be given. Ib.

Where a parish in a borough consists of several wards, and overseers are annually appointed, one to act for each ward, a signature by one overseer of a list of the persons entitled to be on the burgess list, for his own ward only, is not a sufficient compliance with the statute to exempt him from the penalty for not signing the list for the parish. Ib.

All the overseers, whether churchwardens or not, must have signed the burgess list. Clarke v. Gaut, 8 Ex. 252; 22 L. J., Ex. 67; 17 Jur. 239; 1 W. R. 83—Ex. Ch.

Signature by Churchwardens.]—See Reg. v. Harwich, col. 163; and Reg. v. Dover, col. 166.

Publication of Erroneous List.]—The names of several burgesses having been by mistake inserted in the wrong ward-rolls, and that fact not having been in any way brought to the notice of the revising barrister, nor the attention of the town clerk having been called to it until some days after the burgess lists had been published, a mandamus to compel the town clerk to make the requisite alterations in the burgess roll refused. Keay, Ex parte, Eastbourne Town Clerk, In re, 66 L. T. 323; 56 J. P. 470.

Provisions of Municipal Corporations Act, 1835, as to Burgess Lists only to be followed cy-près in case of New Corporations.]—The provisions of the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, as to the machinery for the formation and revision of the burgess lists, being applicable only to then existing corporations, and to the particular period at which that act took effect, need not be precisely followed in the case of new corporations, created by charter under the powers conferred on the Crown by 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 49, but may be followed cy-près. Rutter v. Chapman, 10 L. Must state Parish where Qualification is.]—A notice of claim made under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 17, to be inserted on the burgess roll, must state the parish in which the property is situated in respect of which the claim is made. Reg. v. Kidderminster Corporation, 2 L., M. & P. 201; 20 L. J., Q. B. 281.

Not signing Name in full—Sufficient Information.]—A person whose name had been omitted by mistake from the list of burgesses sent in a claim to be inserted on the burgess list. He signed the claim with the initials of his christian names and with his surname in full. He did not attend before the mayor and assessors to support his claim; but the overseer, who had omitted the name by an oversight, stated that the claim was good, and showed to the court of revision the poor-rate book containing the names of the claimant. There was no other person of the same name in the borough, and the court of revision was well acquainted with the person and handwriting of the claimant. The court, however, rejected the claim on the ground that the signature by initials of the christian names was insufficient:—Held, that the mayor and assessors had sufficient information as to the meaning of the initials to have warranted them in inserting the name of the claimant on the burgess list, and granted a mandamus to the mayor, commanding him to insert the name on the burgess roll. Reg. v. Hartlepool Corporation, 2 L., M. & P. 666; 21 L. J., Q. B. 71; 15 Jur. 1158.

Form of.]—A notice of objection to a person on the burgess list for a borough as follows:—"To J. B. I hereby give you notice, that I object to your name being retained on the burgess list for the borough of H.," is a notice to the like effect with the form No. 3, schedule (D.), to 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, notwithstanding the omission of J. B.'s description in the list; and therefore the objection ought to be heard. Reg. v. Harwich Corporation, 1 El. & Bl. 617; 22 L. J., Q. B. 216; 17 Jur. 914. But see Reg. v. Harwich Corporation, Butcher, In re, 22 L. J., Q. B. 81; 16 Jur. 995; 1 W. R. 37, contra.

A notice of objection to the name of a person being retained upon the burgess list, is not bad by reason of the parish, in which the property for which the objector is rated is situate, being omitted, the property being described as in the burgess list; nor is such a notice bad by reason of the nature of the property, in respect of which the person objected to is rated, not being specified. Reg. v. Monmouth Corporation, Reg. v. Bolton Corporation, 39 L. J., Q. B. 77; L. R. 5 Q. B. 251; 21 L. T. 748.

Of Claimants, whose Burgess List void or none delivered.]—If the burgess lists are defective and null, and the mayor and assessors decline to revise them, they are not bound to revise the list of claimants who claim to be inserted on the burgess lists. Harwich Corporation, In re, 21 L. J., Q. B. 193.

The burgess list being signed only by the overseers of the two parishes of which the borough was composed, and not by the churchwardens, the mayor and assessors refused to revise them. A list of claimants properly prepared by the town clerk, was then tendered for revision, but this was also refused:—Held, on an application for a mandamus to compel the mayor and assessors to revise the list of claimants, that such list was not a substantive list, and capable of revision by itself; and as, therefore, there was no subsisting burgess list, the list of claimants could not be revised. Reg. v. Harwich Corporation, 1 B. C. C. 13; 16 Jur. 291.

In a borough comprising several districts, an inhabitant of one district, qualified to be a burgess, sent in to the town clerk, before the annual revision, his notice of claim to be placed on the burgess list for his district. The overseers negligently omitted sending any burgess list for that district to the revision court; the mayor, consequently, decided (against the opinion of the assessors) that the applicant's name could not be placed on any list, though he proved his qualification; and the burgess roll was made up, omitting his name. On motion the court granted a mandamus to the mayor to insert the name in the burgess roll. Reg. v. Lichfield Corporation, 1 Q. B. 453; 1 G. & D. 28; 10 L. J., Q. B. 171; 5 Jur. 889.

Name not to be retained on List for more than one Ward.]—On the revision of the burgess lists of a borough, divided into wards, the mayor may call upon a burgess who occupies distinct premises, conferring a vote, in more than one ward, and whose name appears under each in the burgess lists, to select the ward in which he will be inrolled in the burgess roll as voting, and, in default, of his selecting, may retain his name on the list of any of the wards in which he so occupies, and expunge his name from the others. Reg. v. Cambridge Corporation, 1 Ell. & Bl. 210; 28 L. J., Q. B. 10; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 436.

Appeal from Refusal to asterisk Name entered twice.]—An appeal does not lie from the refusal of a revising barrister to place a mark against a name entered more than once in the list of voters in the same electoral division for the county council. Arnold v. Sharpe, 65 L. T. 618; 1 Fox, 252.

Counting-house described in List as "House"—No Power to amend—Power to register Voter for another Qualification in the Borough.]—A. was the occupier of a counting-house for business purposes, and also of a private residence in the same borough. In the burgess list the premises he occupied as a counting-house were set down as his qualification, but they were set down under the denomination "house":—Held, that the mayor was right in expunging A.'s name from the list of burgesses, and that he had no power to amend it by altering the qualification. Reg. v. Chipping Wycombe Corporation, 44 L. J., Q. B. 82; 32 L. T. 204; 23 W. R. 347.

Held, also, that although the mayor had no power to alter the qualification on the list, he might have treated it as a nullity, and registered the voter for his other qualification. Ib.

No Power to make out New List.]—The mayor and assessors have no power to make out a new burgess list, their duty under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 18, being only to revise the lists sent in by the overseers. Seal v. Reg. 8 El. & Bl. 22; 27 L. J., Q. B. 139; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1244—Ex. Ch.

The mayor and assessors at the revision of the burgess lists, erroneously treated the burgess list, de facto made out for one of the parishes, as a nullity. They then made out a fresh burgess list for that parish and inserted in it the name of a person in the original parish burgess list, who proved his title to their satisfaction; and the name thus inserted was transferred to the burgess roll:—Held, that such person, though qualified in all respects to be on the burgess list, acquired by the act of the mayor and assessors no title to be a burgess. Ib.

Mandamus to Mayor to revise List or to insert Name—Time for Revision expired.]—If for any insufficient reason the mayor and assessors have refused to revise the burgess list or to adjudicate upon any claim or objection, they or their successors may be compelled by mandamus to do so, although the period fixed by statute within which such revision is to take place has expired. Reg. v. Rochester Corporation, 7 E. & B. 910; 27 L. J., Q. B. 45; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1097.

—— To existing Mayor to revise List of past Year.]—A mandamus was directed to the mayor and assessors of a borough comprising several parishes. It contained suggestions that at the court holden in October, 1856, before the mayor and assessors for the revision of the burgess list of that year, the mayor and assessors refused, for insufficient reasons, to revise the list. The writ commanded the mayor and assessors to hold a court and revise the list for the parish. There was an insufficient return. The court having awarded a peremptory mandamus:—Held, that the mandamus was properly directed to the existing mayor and assessors to hold the court, and revise the list of the past year. Rochester Corporation v. Reg., El., Bl. & El. 1024; 27 L. J., Q. B. 434; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1227; 6 W. R. 838—Ex. Ch.

—— Refusal to entertain Objections.]—The mayor and assessors of a borough, at a court for the revision of the burgess lists holden between the 1st and 15th of October, the time limited by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 18, erroneously determined that certain notices of objection were invalid, and refused to inquire into the qualifications of the persons objected to:—Held, that they had declined jurisdiction; and the court granted a mandamus commanding them to hold a court to revise the list, although the time limited had elapsed. Reg. v. Monmouth Corporation, Reg. v. Bolton Corporation, 39 L. J., Q. B. 77; L. R. 5 Q. B. 251; 21 L. T. 748.

—— Refusal of.]—Where the names of certain burgesses qualified in other respects were objected to and expunged from the burgess lists by the mayor and assessors, on revision, on account of the non-payment of the shilling required by 2 Will. 4, c. 45, s. 56, the court considered that they had not the power to grant a mandamus to insert the names. Rex v. Hythe Corporation, 1 N. & P. 239; 2 H. & W. 455; 5 A. & E. 832.

—— Locus standi of objecting Burgess to show cause against.]—W., having been struck off the burgess list of a borough on objection at the revision, obtained a rule calling on the mayor to show cause why a mandamus should not issue commanding him to admit W. to the office of burgess of the borough. The rule was directed to the mayor only, and he did not appear to show cause:—Held, that the burgess on whose objection W.'s name had been struck off had a locus standi, and might be heard to show cause. Reg. v. Exeter Corporation, Wescombe, Ex parte, L. R. 4 Q. B. 110; 19 L. T. 397.

—— Applicant must show Title.]—Where a party, whose name has been expunged from the burgess roll by the mayor on revision, applies to the court under 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 24, for a mandamus to replace it, the court is bound to inquire into his title. It is not, therefore, sufficient for him to show that his name was inserted by the overseers, and was expunged by the mayor, on an objection which, for want of legal notice under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 17 (as the party alleges), ought not to have been heard. Reg v. Harwich Corporation, 8 A. & E. 919; 1 P. & D. 134; 1 W., W. & H. 611; 8 L. J., Q. B. 13.

—— Rule Nisi.]—A rule calling upon a mayor to show cause why a mandamus should not issue, commanding him to insert the name of a person on the burgess roll, is nisi only. Reg. v. Hartlepool Corporation, 2 L., M. & P. 666, n.

—— No Answer that List not signed, after acting on it.]—A householder of a borough had his name inserted by the overseers of a parish, within the borough, on the burgess list of the parish, which was signed by the overseers. The mayor struck off his name, without any objection having been made to it, but did not reject the list. A mandamus having issued, commanding the mayor to insert the name on the burgess roll, the return alleged that the burgess list was not signed by the churchwardens, or either of them:—Held, that the mayor having acted on the list, this was no answer to the writ. Reg. v. Dover Corporation, 16 L. J., M. C. 97; 11 Jur. 710.

—— Traverse of Allegation that all Rates paid.]—A mandamus stated that L. was an inhabitant householder, and had paid all rates, including all such borough rates directed to be paid under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, as had become payable by him, except such as had become payable within six months next before the 31st of August; that the overseers inserted his name in the burgess list, and that at the revision of the list, the mayor expunged it. Return traversed the allegation as to payment of rates, and alleged non-payment of a certain borough rate:—Held, that the title set up in the writ was answered, and that a general traverse of the allegation in the writ as to payment of rates was sufficient. Reg. v. Dover Corporation, 16 L. J., M. C. 97; 11 Jur. 710. Affirmed, 11 Q. B. 260; 17 L. J., M. C. 75; 12 Jur. 334—Ex. Ch.

k. Burgess Roll.

See Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, ss. 45—49, 51, 71, 233.

Date of Commencement of.]—The proceedings which take place with respect to the burgess list in a borough, under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, between September 5th and November 1st, are only for the preparation of that which is to be the burgess list or roll for the year, beginning on November 1st; and, until that day, the placing of a name upon such list or roll gives no qualification under the statute, the list or roll of the former year being the burgess list or roll till November 1st. Reg. v. Harvey, 4 Q. B. 475; 3 G. & D. 246; 11 L. J., Q. B. 282.

Conclusive as to Persons entitled to vote.]—The burgess roll, formed under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 22, is conclusive as to the persons entitled to vote, and a qualification of a voter on the roll cannot be questioned in a quo warranto against the person elected. Reg. v. Tugwell, 9 B. & S. 367; 37 L. J., Q. B. 275; L. R. 3 Q. B. 704; 16 W. R. 1039.

A burgess who is rated in two wards is not bound to select in which he will be inrolled, and if his name appears on the roll for both may vote in either. Ib.

After a burgess roll has been made up in the manner provided by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 9, the persons whose names are upon that roll are entitled to vote at the election of councillors, and upon the trial of an information their right cannot be questioned. Ib.

Quo Warranto against Person on.]—A quo warranto will not issue with the view of removing a disqualified person from the burgess roll, unless it is shown that the person has done something more than merely allow his name to be retained on the roll after a notice of objection to his qualification. Armstrong, In re, 25 L. J., Q. B. 238; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 211.

Information in nature of quo warranto does not lie against a burgess, who, though elected, has not been admitted. Rex v. Ponsonby, 1 Ves. 1; 5 Bro. P. C. 287.

2. Election to Corporate Offices.

a. Notice of Election.

See Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, ss. 54, 65, 66, 70.

Where no Special Day for Election, Notice necessary.]—Where by custom or charter a particular day is fixed for the election of burgesses of a corporation, it is the duty of the burgesses to take notice that the election will take place on such particular day, and attend to exercise their elective franchise, if they be so minded; but where no specific day is fixed by custom or charter, and the business of electing burgesses, as well as other business, may be many days in the year, notice must be given to the resident burgesses of a corporate meeting for such purpose, and in such reasonable time as to give them all an opportunity of attending and voting at the election. Rex v. Hill, 6 D. & R. 593; 4 B. & C. 426.

If all Members present, Notice unnecessary.]—It is not a general proposition of law, that there cannot be any lawful assembly for the purpose of election, without previous notice of the purpose of the meeting having been given to every member of a select definite body, who are the electors; for if all such members were present at, and concurred in any particular election, such notice would be unnecessary. Rex v. Chetwynd, 7 B. & C. 695; 1 M. & Ry. 534; 6 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 49; 31 R. R. 282.

All must be Summoned or be present—Accidentally omitting to Summon—Not Summoning Burgess at his own Request.]—A public body, as the burgesses of a borough, entrusted with the performance of a public duty, cannot hold an extraordinary meeting unless all the burgesses are summoned who can be summoned, or the unsummoned members are actually present at such meeting. Rex v. Langhorne, 6 N. & M. 203; 4 A. & E. 538.

A custom to hold such meeting upon a summons of all the burgesses, subject to a qualification that the accidental omission of service of the summons should not vitiate the meeting, is bad at law. Ib.

A general dispensation by one of the body, with service upon himself, is void. Ib.

The proceedings of a meeting at which any burgess is not present who might have been summoned are void, though the omission is accidental, or though the burgess has given a general notice that he wishes not to be summoned. Ib.

Purpose of Meeting not specified in Summons.]—Where certain powers are vested in a select body, appointed to be aiding and assisting the mayor of a city, touching matters concerning the same, a notice by the mayor to the members of that body to attend a corporate meeting, need not specify the purpose for which the meeting is convened; and an election at such meeting is valid. Rex v. Pulsford, 2 M. & Ry. 384; 8 B. & C. 350; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 336.

Where the whole corporation is summoned for a particular purpose (e.g. to receive the resignation of a common councilman), a select body, who are all present and consenting, may at the same meeting, without any particular summons to them for that purpose in their select capacity, proceed to an election of a common councilman, in the place of the other resigned; the power of election being in such select body, and the charter not requiring any previous summons. Rex v. Theodorick, 8 East, 543; 9 R. R. 494.

Not without Notice on a Bye-Day.]—No elections in corporations made by surprise on a bye-day can be valid. Rex v. May, 5 Burr. 2681.

Full notice should be given of corporation elections, particularly when held upon bye-days, and anything like surprise vitiates the election. Page v. Rex, 2 Ridgw. P. C. 445.

Election within Ten Days after Notice of Vacancy.]—Where a party has been elected a town councillor, and he resigns his office, the election to supply his place is well held, if it takes place within ten days after notice is given of the vacancy by two burgesses, as provided for by 16 & 17 Vict. c. 79, s. 11. Reg. v. Bester, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 262; 3 L. T. 667; 9 W. R. 277.

After Meeting dissolved by Mayor, Electors remaining and proceeding with Election without Notice of their Intention.]—Assuming that under 11 Geo. 1, c. 4, an election, begun at a corporate meeting, whereat the mayor presided, may be completed, in case of his absenting himself pending the proceedings, under the presidency of the next in place and order to him; yet, where a question arose upon the right of a voter, on which the mayor, as presiding officer, decided by rejecting the vote; and thereupon the remaining votes being equal, he declared the same, and that no election could be made, and thereupon ordered the meeting to be dissolved; and no objection was made at the time, nor any notice given to the electors present, that any of them intended to proceed in the election, notwithstanding the decision (which turned out to be erroneous); but after suffering the mayor and many of the freemen to depart without notice, the rest who remained together proceeded to complete the election:—Held, that such election was void even under the statute, as a surprise and fraud on the other electors. Rex v. Gaborian, 11 East, 77.

Two Vacancies announced, when only One.]—See Reg. v. Leeds, col. 203.

b. Aldermen and Councillors.

See Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 50), ss. 11, 12, 13, 14, 50, 52, 60, 67, 68.

Qualification—Residence.]—To qualify under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, ss. 9, 28, it was sufficient if a municipal officer had bonâ fide a place of residence within the borough, even although, from fortuitous circumstances, he did not sleep there. Reg. v. Boycott, 14 L. T. 599.

—— Inhabitancy—Usage contrary to Charter void.]—Where a charter directed that certain officers should be elected out of the burgesses and inhabitants, a usage to elect non-inhabitant burgesses was void: nor was such usage rendered valid by a charter of restoration, granting "all elections and rights of election previously enjoyed by virtue or pretence (virtu vel prætextu) of any charter, or by any other lawful manner or title." Rex v. Salway, 4 M. & Ry. 314; 9 B. & C. 424; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 277.

—— Not to be changed by By-law.]—The number of electors may be narrowed by a by-law, but not the number of the eligible. Rex v. Spencer, 3 Burr. 1827. S. P., Rex v. Tunwell, 3 Dougl. 207.

Nor can the number and description of persons declared eligible to an office by the royal charter of a corporation be changed by a by-law. Lee v. Wallis, 1 Ld. Ken. 292.

Disqualification—Candidate a Woman.]—A woman is incapable of being elected a member of a county council. Beresford-Hope v. Sandhurst (Lady), 58 L. J., Q. B. 316; 23 Q. B. D. 79; 61 L. T. 150; 37 W. R. 548; 53 J. P. 805—C. A. See De Souza v. Cobden, col. 179.

—— Interest in Contract with Council.]—The disqualification, under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 28, of any person who has any interest in a contract with the council of the borough, to be elected or be an alderman or councillor of the borough, applies only during the continuance of the contract. So that by becoming interested in such a contract an alderman or a councillor does not cease to be qualified or become disqualified within s. 53, so as to incur penalties for acting after the termination of the contract. Lewis v. Carr, 46 L. J., Ex. 314; 1 Ex. D. 484; 36 L. T. 44; 24 W. R. 940—C. A.

A person who had entered into a contract with the corporation of Dublin, held disqualified to be elected a member of that corporation, even though he had, before the election (but without the privity of the corporation), purported to assign his contract to a third person. Reg. v. Franklin, Ir. R. 6 C. L. 239.

See Reg. v. Harvey, col. 171, and Reg. v. York, col. 178.

—— Conviction for Bribery.]—See Wray, In re, col. 215.

Custom for Leet Jury of Borough to elect.]—A custom in a borough for the leet jury of the borough, being also the leet jury of a manor, to elect the members of the corporation in whom the government of the borough is vested, is a reasonable and legal custom, although the manor and borough are not shown to be co-extensive. Rex v. Beaufort (Duke), 2 N. & M. 815; 5 B. & Ad. 442; 2 L. J., M. C. 104.

Where supposed Vacancy non-existent.]—An election of A. to a corporate office, in place of a supposed vacancy, created by B., cannot be referred to an existing vacancy created by C. Rex v. Smith, 2 M. & S. 406.

Swearing in.]—A party becomes a corporate officer when he is sworn in, and not when he is elected. Rex v. Swyer, 10 B. & C. 486; 8 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 221.

A corporate officer elected under a mandamus must be sworn in before the officer presiding at such election. Rex v. Malden, 4 Burr. 2130.

The neglect to be sworn into an office for a great length of time, as above twenty years after the party is elected, may be deemed a waiver or a refusal to accept the election by the party elected; but does not vitiate the election itself. Rex v. Jordan, 9 East, 263, n.

Refusing to serve Office.]—On a conviction under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 51, upon a by-law for not serving an office, there need not be express or actual evidence, but there must be some evidence of qualification; and if, in fact, the party was not qualified, he is not liable to the penalty, and a conviction will be invalid. Reg. v. Richmond JJ., 11 W. R. 65.

Payment of a fine, imposed by the by-laws of a corporation for refusing to accept a corporate office, does not exempt the party elected from serving the office, and he may be compelled to do so by mandamus. Rex v. Bower, 2 D. & R. 842; 1 B. & C. 585; 1 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 110.

Alderman — Qualification — Residence.]—An alderman is not bound to reside within the borough, unless that is necessary to the discharge of the duties of his office, or he is so required by the charter. Rex v. Portsmouth, 4 D. & R. 767; 3 B. & C. 152.

—— Extraordinary Vacancy.]—To be qualified to be elected an alderman, on an extraordinary vacancy, within the meaning of 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, ss. 27, 28, a corporator must be either a councillor or a person qualified to be a councillor by being entitled to be on the burgess list of the borough. Reg. v. Harvey, 3 G. & D. 246; 4 Q. B. 175; 11 L. J., Q. B. 282; 6 Jur. 847.

—— Disqualification — Interest in Contract with Council.]—An alderman who lets a building for a polling station to the council is entitled to vote, this being a contract within the exception in s. 12, sub-s. 2 (a). Ib.

See Lewis v. Carr, col. 170; and Reg. v. York, col. 178.

—— Injunction to restrain Election of.]—Where an alderman had not compounded with his creditors in such a manner as to cease to hold office, an injunction was granted to restrain the town council from electing a successor. Aslatt v. Southampton Corporation, 16 Ch. D. 143; 50 L. J., Ch. 31; 43 L. T. 464; 29 W. R. 117.

—— Mayor presiding at Election and voting for himself—Quo Warranto.] — See Reg. v. Morton, col. 195.

—— Right to vote at Election of — "Outgoing Alderman"—"Mayor Elect."]—By the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 50), s. 60 (2), the election of aldermen shall be held immediately after the election of the mayor; "(3) an outgoing alderman, although mayor elect, shall not vote." On the day appointed for the election of mayor and aldermen, an alderman was elected mayor, and thereupon made and subscribed a declaration in the form contained in the 8th schedule of the act. He then voted in the election of aldermen:—Held, that his vote was invalid, for at the time when he voted he had not ceased to be an "outgoing alderman" within s. 60 (sub-s. 3) of the act. Hounsell v. Suttill, 56 L. J., Q. B. 502; 19 Q. B. D. 498; 57 L. T. 102; 36 W. R. 127; 51 J. P. 44.

—— By-law limiting Number of Electors.]—Where a charter gave the right of electing an alderman to the mayor and burgesses at large from themselves; a by-law, stated to be made in 1577, by the mayor and burgesses, but not extant in writing, whereby the right of electing was restrained to "the mayor and certain of the burgesses of the town, viz., the recorder, aldermen, coroners, common councilmen, and such of the burgesses of the town as had served or did serve the office of chamberlain or sheriff of the town, and called the livery or clothing burgesses for the time being, or so many of them as should be duly assembled together for that purpose, whereof the mayor to be one, or the major part of them," is a reasonable and valid by-law; and the office of chamberlain of the town, as stated in such by-law, was taken to be a corporate office as well as the other offices, the serving of which was made the qualification of the electing burgesses. Rex v. Ashwell, 12 East, 22.

—— Who may vote.]—An outgoing alderman has no original vote in the election of aldermen. Reg. v. Stanley, 3 P. & D. 561; 9 L. J., Q. B. 248.

—— Mode of Election prescribed by Charter —"Commonalty."]—Where a charter granted to a mayor and commonalty that "any alderman being wanted, the rest of the aldermen might nominate two burgesses, for the choosing of one of them as alderman by the commonalty":—Held, that commonalty included the whole corporation, and that an alderman so elected by the votes of the other aldermen, as well as the burgesses at large, was properly elected. Rex v. Osbourne, 4 East, 327.

—— Provision in Charter for Annual Election only directory.]—A clause in a charter, which directed that the aldermen should be chosen annually, was held to be only directory, and not to determine the office at the end of the year after election; but that the person legally elected and sworn into the office should continue until his death or removal, in the same manner as a person elected into the office of mayor. Prowse v. Foot, 2 Bro. P. C. 289. S. P., Pender v. Rex, 2 Bro. P. C. 294.

—— Election by a Minority of Council.]—At a meeting of the town council a minority of the councillors present delivered voting papers to the mayor for certain persons to be elected aldermen. The mayor and the majority of the town councillors had been advised that the day was not the proper one for the election. The mayor consequently declined to proceed with the election, and no election was declared. It was, in fact, the duty of the council to have proceeded to the election of aldermen on that day had they known the law:—Held, that the act of the minority was not the act of the town council, that the election had not been partly held, but that there had been no election, and that consequently a mandamus might issue calling upon the council to proceed to elect aldermen. Reg. v. Bradford Corporation, 2 L., M. & P. 35; 20 L. J., Q. B. 226.

—— Full Number not elected.]—An election of less than the required number of aldermen, at the first election under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 76, was rendered valid by 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 2, even if it was not valid under the former act. Reg. v. Roberts, 3 N. & P. 295; 7 L. J., Q. B. 154; 1 W., W. & H. 160; 7 A. & E. 433; 2 Jur. 372.

—— Election by Lists.]—An election of aldermen by lists, under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, where each elector has the opportunity of objecting to any of the lists proposed, or of proposing and voting for any other candidate, is good. Reg. v. Brightwell, 2 P. & D. 413; 10 A. & E. 171; 9 L. J., Q. B. 224.

—— Voting against Candidate.]—Where a person is proposed for election as an alderman, the corporation may vote against him without voting for another. Rex v. Monday, Cowp. 530.

—— In the City of London.]—Custom of the city of London as to the election of aldermen. Rex v. Johnson, 6 Cl. & F. 41; 1 Rob. 1. Affirming S. C., 5 A. & E. 488; 6 N. & M. 870; 5 L. J., Ex. 282.

Where the return to a mandamus to admit an alderman of the city of London stated an immemorial custom for the court of the mayor and aldermen to determine whether a person elected alderman was, according to their discretion and conscience, a fit and proper person duly qualified; on traverse of the custom, the jury found that the custom had existed from time immemorial down to 1689:—Held, that this finding amounted to a verdict that the custom still existed. Scales v. Key, 3 P. & D. 505; 11 A. & E. 819.

—— Election of, before Mayor elected, void.]—The election of mayor on the 9th November in each year must be the first business done by the town council, and an election of aldermen on that day previously to the election of mayor is void. Reg. v. Macgowan, 11 A. & E. 869; 3 P. & D. 557; 9 L. J., Q. B. 244; 4 Jur. 913.

—— Declaration required by 9 Geo. 4, c. 17.]—By 9 Geo. 4, c. 17, ss. 2, 3, every person who shall be placed, elected or chosen in or to the office of alderman, shall, within one calendar month next before or upon his admission into such office, make and subscribe a certain declaration, before certain parties; and by s. 4, if he shall omit or neglect to make and subscribe the declaration in manner above mentioned, such placing, election or choice shall be void:—Held, that the statute does not give the party elected a month, at all events, for deciding whether he will make the declaration or not, but only excuses him from making it at the time of his admission, if he has made it within a month before. Humphrey v. Reg., 10 A. & E. 335; 3 P. & D. 691—Ex. Ch. Reversing 3 N. & P. 681; 1 W., W. & H. 470; 7 L. J., Q. B. 202; 2 Jur. 1084.

The words "upon his admission" mean at the time, and not within a reasonable time after; and the authorities who admit may prescribe the order in which the ceremonies forming parts of the admission shall take place. Ib.

If the party offers himself to the proper court to be admitted, not having made the declaration within a month before, and being asked whether he will make it or not, declines to say, but requires the court to admit him, which they refuse, the election is thereupon void, and a precept may issue for a new election. Ib.

—— Questioning Election of, in City of London.]—See Rex v. Johnson, and Rex v. London, col. 214.

—— Delay in fixing Turn for going out of Office.]—Where the councillors of a borough did not, immediately after the first election of aldermen, appoint who should go out of office in 1838, as required by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 25, but delayed such appointment until the 29th October, 1838:—Held, that such delay vitiated the election of the alderman chosen to succeed the alderman so appointed to go out of office. Reg. v. Alderson, 1 G. & D. 429; 1 Q. B. 878; 10 L. J., Q. B. 277; 6 Jur. 321.

—— Casting Vote at Election of Mayor.]—See Hall v. Walker, col. 184.

Councillor—Qualification—Burgess.]—The Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 11, sub-s. 3, provides that every person shall be qualified to be elected and to be a councillor who is at the time of election qualified to elect to the office of councillor:—Held, that a person who, though not qualified to be a burgess, had been inrolled on the burgess roll and was therefore entitled to vote under s. 51 of the act, was not thereby qualified to be elected a councillor under s. 11, sub-s. 3. Flintham v. Roxburgh, 55 L. J., Q. B. 472; 17 Q. B. D. 44; 54 L. T. 797; 34 W. R. 543; 50 J. P. 311.

It is sufficient to entitle a person to be nominated for the office of councillor for a municipal borough that, if otherwise duly qualified, he is inrolled on the burgess roll in force at the time of the election, although his name may not be on the burgess roll which was in force at the time of the nomination. Budge v. Andrews, 47 L. J., C. P. 586; 3 C. P. D. 510; 39 L. T. 166.

Therefore, where one of several candidates for the office of councillor was nominated on the 23rd of October, 1877, who was not inrolled on the burgess roll for the year beginning the 1st of November, 1876, but was inrolled on the burgess roll for the year beginning the 1st of November, 1877, when the election was held, and was in all other respects qualified to be elected councillor:—Held, that he was rightly nominated. Ib.

The Court of Common Pleas has jurisdiction, on a petition questioning the election, to review the decision of the mayor, who had allowed an objection to such nomination, on the ground that the name of such candidate was not on such previous burgess roll. Ib.

By 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 28, no person shall be qualified to be a councillor who shall not be entitled to be on the burgess list:—Held, that a person whose name was on the burgess roll was qualified within that section. Reg. v. Thwaites, 1 El. & Bl. 704; 22 L. J., Q. B. 238; 17 Jur. 712.

To be eligible for the office of town councillor, a candidate must be "entitled to be on" the burgess roll within 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 28, as well as "on" the roll within 38 & 39 Vict. c. 40, s. 1, sub-s. 2, and the burgess roll containing his name is not conclusive evidence that he is "entitled to be on" the roll. Middleton v. Simpson, 49 L. J., C. P. 312; 5 C. P. D. 183; 28 W. R. 629; 44 J. P. 251.

The defendant, in an action for penalties under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 53, for acting as a councillor after he had ceased to be qualified, had been an inhabitant householder in the borough during the whole time required by the act. He had also, during the whole time, been rated for premises by name, by the name of a public-house, but which premises consisted of the house, with a warehouse and yard attached. In the middle of the required time the defendant let the public-house, and removed to another dwelling, but retained the warehouse in his own occupation. The defendant gave notice to the parish officers of his change of residence, and required to be newly rated, but no change was made in time in the entry in the rate-book. The defendant had paid all the rates which were due. At the registration court, before the mayor and assessors, after the change of residence of the defendant, there was an objection taken to his name on the burgess list, for that his qualifying property was wrongly described; and the objection was allowed, and his name struck off the burgess roll. Afterwards the defendant acted as a councillor:—Held, that nevertheless the defendant was not liable to a penalty, since he was at the time he acted as councillor a person so qualified within the borough as to be entitled to be upon a burgess list; and in an action for penalties under the statute, the question is not whether at the time he acted he was or was not a burgess, or was or was not inserted in the burgess roll or in a burgess list, but whether at the time he acted he was or was not a person so qualified within the borough as to be entitled to be upon a burgess list of it. Whalley v. Bramwell, 15 Q. B. 775; 20 L. J., Q. B. 53; 15 Jur. 313.

Where a person, though not duly qualified, is on the burgess roll, and his title to be there has not been questioned at the revision of the burgess list, in pursuance of 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 18, and he is afterwards elected a councillor, the court, in the exercise of its discretion, will refuse a rule nisi for a quo warranto upon the ground that he was not entitled to be on the burgess roll within s. 28. Hindmarch, Ex parte, 8 B. & S. 642; 37 L. J., Q. B. 58; L. R. 3 Q. B. 12; 17 L. T. 176; 16 W. R. 125.

—— Disqualification—Bankruptcy and Composition.]—S. served as town councillor for the St. T. Ward from 1877 to July 21, 1880, when he left at the office of the town clerk a notice of resignation, addressed to the mayor and council. No action was taken thereon by the council, and no fine paid or tendered by S.; S. did not sit in council or vote after the date of the notice. On the following day S. filed a petition for liquidation. In August a composition was accepted by his creditors. S. did not pay his debts in full. At an election of town councillor for the St. T. Ward in November, 1884, S. was returned. The objection was then taken that S. was disqualified, he having been in liquidation when he was a member of the council, and not having paid 20*s.* in the pound:—Held, that the objection was valid. Futcher v. Saunders, 49 J. P. 424.

A bankrupt uncertificated at the time of election is not disqualified from being elected a councillor. The disqualification exists only where the bankruptcy occurs during the holding of the office. Rex v. Chitty, 1 N. & P. 78; 5 A. & E. 609; 2 H. & W. 399; 6 L. J., K. B. 12.

J., a town councillor of a borough, whose term of office would expire by lapse of time on the 1st November, 1876, on the 29th June in that year filed a petition for liquidation of his affairs by arrangement. On the 29th July a statutory majority of his creditors by special resolution declared that his affairs should be liquidated by arrangement, and his discharge was granted to him on the 29th September. No declaration was made by the council under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 52, that the office held by him was void under that section, but he did not, in fact, act as town councillor after the institution of these proceedings with his creditors until after the 1st November. On the 1st November the offices of three other councillors besides that of J. would become vacant by lapse of time, and for these four vacancies seven candidates presented themselves for election. In consequence of all the candidates being nominated by one and the same person, contrary to the provisions of the act regulating the elections, the mayor declared no one to be duly nominated. Thereupon the returning officer, under 22 Vict. c. 35, s. 8, sub-s. 4, declared that the retiring councillors, among whom he included J., had been re-elected to their offices. Upon a rule for a mandamus calling upon the mayor to declare the office of councillor lately held by J. void, as required by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 52, and to proceed to the election of another person to supply such vacancy:—Held, that the office "lately held by J." was in fact filled up, and that the time had therefore passed when it could be declared void. Reg. v. Welchpool Corporation, 35 L. T. 594.

Held, also, that a mandamus would not lie for a fresh election, for inasmuch as the council had not declared J.'s office void under s. 52, the office was still full on the 1st November: that J. was therefore a retiring councillor within 22 Vict. c. 35, s. 8, sub-s. 4, and under that section was properly declared to be re-elected to his office. Ib. See also Reg. v. Leeds Corporation, col. 203.

Held, also, that if there was any remedy, it would have been under 35 & 36 Vict. c. 60, the Corrupt Practices (Municipal Elections) Act, s. 12, by petition and not by mandamus. Ib.

—— Qualification—Rating—Annual Value.]—By 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 28, no person shall be qualified to be a councillor in certain boroughs, unless he is rated to the relief of the poor in such borough upon the annual value of not less than 15*l.*:—Held, that the annual value was the rateable value and not the gross estimated rental, in the form of rate prescribed by 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 96. Baker v. Marsh, 4 El. & Bl. 144; 3 C. L. R. 343; 24 L. J., Q. B. 1; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 44; 3 W. R. 13.

—— Resident Householder—Joint Occupation.]—An attorney, in conjunction with his partner, occupied a house within the limits of a borough for which he was elected a town councillor, such occupation being for the purposes of business only, he residing out of the borough:—Held, that this was a sufficient qualification for the office under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 9. Creek, In re, 3 B. & S. 459; 32 L. J., Q. B. 89; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 646; 7 L. T. 596; 11 W. R. 234.

On a rule for a quo warranto against a town councillor as not being a resident householder, it not appearing that he had taken the house, or that he paid the rent, though a joint occupant, the rule was made absolute. Reg. v. Maxwell, 11 W. R. 308.

—— Disqualification — Mayor — Returning Officer.]—A mayor of a borough, who by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 35, with two assessors, declares the result of an election of town councillors, is disqualified, as returning officer, from being elected a town councillor; and s. 28, which disqualifies any person "during such time as he shall hold any office or place of profit, other than that of mayor, in the gift or disposal of the council," does not qualify the mayor as returning officer; and therefore, if returned, the election is void. Reg. v. Owens, 2 El. & El. 86; 28 L. J., Q. B. 316; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 764; 7 W. R. 566.

Under s. 28, which enacts that no person shall be eligible as councillor "during such time as he shall hold any office or place of profit, other than that of mayor," in the disposal of the council of the borough, the mayor is eligible as town councillor, if the borough is divided into wards, for a ward in which he is not acting as returning officer. Ib.

In a borough not divided into wards, the mayor, being returning officer, offered himself for re-election as a town councillor, and the council elected one of the aldermen to act at the election in the place of the mayor; the mayor was re-elected a town councillor:—Held, that the mayor was not disqualified as a candidate, but he could not act as returning officer; that he was incapable of acting within 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 36; and, consequently, that the appointment of the alderman as substitute and the election were valid. Reg. v. White, 8 B. & S. 587; 36 L. J., Q. B. 267; L. R. 2 Q. B. 557; 16 L. T. 828; 15 W. R. 988.

The disqualification of a candidate acting as returning officer cannot be raised by quo warranto. Reg. v. Morton, 61 L. J., Q. B. 39; [1892] 1 Q. B. 39; post, col. 195.

Votes for returning officer not thrown away so as to entitle candidate in minority to be admitted, if electors do not know that he is by law disqualified. Reg. v. Tewkesbury Corporation, 37 L. J., Q. B. 288; L. R. 3 Q. B. 629; post, col. 201.

—— Interest in Contracts with Council.]—A lease by the mayor, aldermen and burgesses, whether made before or after the passing of the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, was a contract by or with the council, within s. 28; and before the 5 & 6 Vict. c. 104, disqualified the lessee for the office of a town councillor. Reg. v. York, 2 G. & D. 105; 11 L. J., Q. B. 127; 6 Jur. 797. S. P., Simpson v. Ready, 1 D. & L. 1024; 12 M. & W. 736; 13 L. J., Ex. 193.

A person who has entered into a contract with the council, and has been employed by them in respect of such contract, is disqualified from holding the office of councillor, though such contract required the corporation seal, and is not sealed. Reg. v. Francis, 18 Q. B. 526; 21 L. J., Q. B. 304; 16 Jur. 1046.

While such contract continues, the disqualification caused by it arises de die in diem; and during that time a relator is not precluded, under 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 23, from applying for a quo warranto, though twelve calendar months have elapsed from the election of the party disqualified, or from the commencement of his disqualification. Ib.

Sect. 12 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, provides, inter alia, that "a person shall be disqualified for being elected, and for being a councillor if and while he . . . . (c) has directly or indirectly by himself or partner any share or interest in any contract or employment with, by, or on behalf of the council." The respondent was a member of a firm interested in certain contracts with a corporation of a borough that had not expired at the time of a municipal election for that borough. Before offering himself as a candidate at the election the respondent dissolved partnership, and assigned all his interest in the said contracts to the other partner, remaining liable, however, on bonds securing the due performance of the contracts. The corporation was not a party to the assignment, and gave no assent thereto, nor did they release the respondent from the contracts. The respondent's connection with the said contracts, and the fact that his candidature was objected to on that ground, were matters of notoriety in the ward for which he was a candidate. On a petition against his return as councillor:—Held, that the respondent was not qualified to be elected within the meaning of the above section, and that votes given for him were thrown away. Cox v. Ambrose, 60 L. J., Q. B. 114; 55 J. P. 23.

The vote of a person who was chemist to the council prior to his election as councillor, and who had not resigned that appointment before his election, is bad, on the ground that at the time of his election he held a place of profit in the gift of the council, and had an interest in a contract or employment with, by, or on behalf of the council within s. 12, sub-s. 1 (a) (c). Louth Municipal Election, In re, Nell v. Longbottom, 63 L. J., Q. B. 490; [1894] 1 Q. B. 767; 10 R. 193; 70 L. T. 499.

—— Alderman.]—A person is not by reason of his being an alderman disqualified for election to the office of councillor, and by accepting the latter office he vacates the former. Reg. v. Bangor Corporation, 56 L. J., Q. B. 326; 18 Q. B. D. 349; 35 W. R. 158; 51 J., P. 51—C. A. See S. C. in H. L., sub nom. Pritchard v. Bangor Corporation, col. 196.

—— Assessor elected—No Notice of Ineligibility—Candidate in Minority admitted—Quo Warranto.]—At an annual election of councillors in one of the wards of a borough divided into two wards, a majority of votes was declared in favour of a candidate who was an assessor for the other ward. No notice of the ineligibility of this candidate had been given, but the mayor rejected his name from the list published by him, pursuant to 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 35, and inserted the name of a candidate having a minority of votes, who accepted the office. The court granted a quo warranto against the latter candidate. Reg. v. Hiorns, 3 N. & P. 148; 7 A. & E. 960; 2 Jur. 108.

—— Assessors.]—The 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 15, by which no burgess is eligible to be elected a member of the council of a borough while holding the office of assessor, applies only to assessors elected under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 37, and does not apply to an assessor for revising the burgess list appointed under 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 4. Molesworth, Ex parte, 41 L. J., Q. B. 12; L. R. 7 Q. B. 209; 20 W. R. 241.

—— Person in Holy Orders.]—By 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, no person being in holy orders, or being the regular minister of a dissenting congregation, shall be qualified to be a councillor of any borough:—Held, that a minister appointed to officiate occasionally or temporarily to a dissenting congregation is not disqualified. Reg. v. Oldham, 10 B. & S. 193; 38 L. J., Q. B. 125; L. R. 4 Q. B. 290.

The regular minister of a dissenting congregation de facto, though not de jure, is disqualified. Ib.

—— County Councillor — Disqualification — Woman—Election not questioned within Twelve Months—Liability to Penalty.]—A woman who has been elected a member of a county council, and whose election has not been questioned within twelve months after the election, is, nevertheless, liable to the penalties imposed by s. 41 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, if she acts as a member of the county council after the expiration of the twelve months, even if the effect of s. 73 of that act is to make the election to all intents a valid election. De Souza v. Cobden, 60 L. J., Q. B. 533; [1891] 1 Q. B. 687; 65 L. T. 130; 39 W. R. 454; 55 J. P. 565—C. A. See Beresford-Hope v. Sandhurst, col. 170.

—— Elector registered in more than one Division—Right of Voting.]—In elections of county councillors under the Local Government Act, 1888, an elector although registered under the County Electors Act, 1888, in more than one electoral division of the same county, is not entitled to vote in more than one electoral division of the same county at the same election. Knill v. Towse, 59 L. J., Q. B. 455; 24 Q. B. D. 697; 63 L. T. 47; 38 W. R. 521; 54 J. P. 789—C. A.

—— Election without Consent—Quo Warranto—Costs.]—M. was elected a town councillor without his knowledge or consent, but being informed that he would be liable to a fine if he refused to serve, he on that ground agreed to accept the office, and made the necessary declaration. No application was made to him to resign the office. A rule nisi for a quo warranto to show by what authority he held the office having been obtained, he, as soon as he heard of it, expressed his willingness to resign, and allowed the rule to be made absolute without supporting the validity of his election:—Held, that he was not to be liable for costs, if within a week he made a valid resignation, or if a quo warranto was filed at the expense of the prosecutor, if M. at his own expense, within a week after the filing of the information, put in a valid disclaimer, but that, failing these alternatives the rule was to be made absolute with costs. Reg. v. May, 2 L., M. & P. 144; 20 L. J., Q. B. 268.

—— Vacancy, if Mayor's turn to go out of Office, though Mayor remains.]—Where the mayor is one of the councillors who go out of office on the 1st November, he causes a vacancy in the number of councillors, though as mayor, he continues a member of the council till the 9th November. Reg. v. Owens, 2 El. & El. 86; 28 L. J., Q. B. 316; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 764; 7 W. R. 566.

—— Separate Election for Occasional Vacancy.]—A councillor to fill up an occasional vacancy under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 47, and councillors to replace the third part of the council annually going out of office, ought not be chosen at one and the same election. Rowley v. Reg., 6 Q. B. 668; 14 L. J., Q. B. 62; 8 Jur. 1170—Ex. Ch.

—— Declaration required by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 50.]—Where a person has been declared duly elected a councillor, and has made the declaration prescribed by this statute, and has been admitted into the council, the court will not grant a mandamus to two town councillors, to administer the declaration to another person who claims to have been duly elected instead of the former. Reg. v. Derby Councillors, 2 N. & P. 589; W., W. & D. 671.

On an election of councillors for a ward in a borough, there were three candidates, A., B. and C.

On the 3rd November, 1851, A. and B. were declared duly elected, but B. was disqualified, and the electors had notice thereof. Upon a quo warranto, judgment of ouster was given against B. on the 30th June, 1852; and on the 26th October, C. gave notice, claiming to be admitted to the office of councillor, and requiring the declaration mentioned in 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 50, to be administered to him. On the 8th November he made the declaration required, and on the 9th November he tendered his vote as a councillor upon the election of mayor, which was rejected, and the candidate for whom he voted was thereby in a minority:—Held, that C. was duly elected a councillor, and had a right to be admitted without a mandamus or a new election; and that s. 51, which requires that every person elected to be a councillor shall accept such office by making and subscribing the declaration mentioned in s. 50 within five days after notice of his election, did not apply, and therefore C. had a right to vote at the election of mayor. Reg. v. Cooks, 3 El. & Bl. 249; 2 C. L. R. 947; 23 L. J., Q. B. 133; 18 Jur. 378.

—— Remedy for Wrongful Election—Quo Warranto or Mandamus.]—Mandamus to a corporation stating that, on 1st November, 1854, C. and S., two councillors of a ward, being a third part of the number assigned for the ward, were in turn to go out of office, and an election ought to have been held for the election of two councillors for the ward, but that an election was held on the 1st November for one councillor only, whereby the office of one councillor was vacant, and the writ commanded the mayor to proceed to the election of a councillor. Return that on the 9th November, 1853, S. being a councillor for the ward, was elected mayor for a year, and until his successor should have accepted office, and S. then accepted the office of mayor, and held it till 9th November, 1854, when his successor was elected mayor and accepted the office, and S. ceased to hold the office of mayor, and by reason thereof, S. was not, on the 1st November, 1854, in turn to go out of office as councillor, and the election ought not then to have been held for two councillors, and that on the 30th November, 1854, S. was duly elected councillor, and afterwards accepted that office, made and subscribed the declaration, and thence, continually, held and continued to hold, and did still hold and continue in that office, and the same during all the time had been and still was full of S.:—Held, that the election of S. as councillor on the 9th November, 1854, was, at any rate, not colourable, and there was therefore a plenarty, and mandamus did not lie, the proper mode of questioning the election being by quo warranto. Frost v. Chester Corporation, 5 El. & Bl. 531; 25 L. J., Q. B. 61; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 114; 4 W. R. 14.

A councillor having ceased to be registered on the burgess roll for non-payment of poor-rates, certain electors required the returning officer to hold a new election to fill up the vacancy which it was alleged had happened under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 28, and on his refusal to do so, a mandamus was applied for:—Held, that a mandamus could not be granted, but that the proper mode of proceeding was by a quo warranto. Reg. v. Bristol Corporation, 1 W., W. & H. 93.

On a contested election for the office of councillor of a borough, the mayor and assessors examined the votes to ascertain which candidate was elected; and, pursuant to 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 35, the mayor, before two of the clock of the day next but one following the election, published the name of the candidate elected. After that time a further examination was made, and the mayor published the name of another candidate as the one elected:—Held, that the act done after two o'clock by the mayor and assessors was a nullity, and the tender of his vote as a councillor by the candidate first named having been rejected, that he was entitled to a mandamus to compel the council to receive it, and that in such a case a mandamus is the proper remedy, and not a quo warranto. Reg. v. Leeds Corporation, 4 P. & D. 632; 11 A. & E. 512; 10 L. J., Q. B. 112.

—— Costs.]—Where a defendant had been elected to the office of town councillor by a majority of votes, some of which were personated, and upon a rule being obtained for a quo warranto declined to defend his election, and offered to disclaim, the court made the rule absolute, without imposing any terms upon the relator as to costs, the defendant having been a candidate for the office, and having made no previous attempt to resign. Reg. v. Sidney, 2 L., M. & P. 149; 20 L. J., Q. B. 269.

Bailiffs—Election of Senior Bailiff.]—A charter constituted a corporation to consist of two bailiffs (senior and junior), twelve aldermen and an indefinite number of burgesses; and after nominating the two first bailiffs, and directing the election of the first twelve aldermen, provided that on a certain day in the year, the senior bailiff should be chosen by the bailiffs and aldermen, or the major part of them, out of the aldermen, for one year, and until another of the aldermen to that office in due manner should be elected, perfected, and sworn; and also provided for the election of the junior bailiff on the same day, by a different mode of election, for one year, and until, &c. (as before):—Held, that the two bailiffs do not thereby constitute but one officer, and that the senior and junior bailiffs of different years last legally appointed (their respective successors de facto for several years having been ousted by quo warranto) might coalesce, and preside at a corporate meeting of the bailiffs and aldermen for the election of a senior bailiff; and that the charter having directed the future election of a senior bailiff to be made one of the aldermen, must be taken to mean that there should be only eleven acting efficient aldermen, apart from the senior bailiff, who was also an alderman; and consequently that six aldermen were a majority of that integral part, capable of making, together with the two last legal bailiffs, an elective assembly for the purpose of choosing a senior bailiff. Rex v. Thornton, 4 East, 294.

—— Qualification by Residence.]—When a person having prior connections with a borough town previously to his election to the office of bailiff, for which residence was a necessary qualification, took a house at first for four years, but afterwards, at his landlord's request, for one, and slept there one night before the election, and did not return again for near a month afterwards, when he stayed two days, but retained possession of his house under his lease the whole time; the taking of the house appearing to the court to be bonâ fide, was a sufficient legal residence to satisfy the qualification required. Rex v. Sargent, 5 Term Rep. 466.

Jurats—Qualification—Construction of Charter.]—Where by a charter it was granted that the mayor, bailiffs and burgesses should thereafter be a body corporate by the name of mayor, jurats, bailiffs and burgesses, that there should be one of the more honest and discreet burgesses or inhabitants, called mayor, to be elected as therein mentioned; and four honest and discreet burgesses or inhabitants called jurats, and two other honest and discreet burgesses or inhabitants called bailiffs; that the jurats and bailiffs should hold their offices for life, unless removed for reasonable cause; and when it should happen that either or any of the jurats or bailiffs for the time being should die, or be removed, or withdrawn from his or their office or offices, it should be lawful for the surviving and remaining jurats and bailiffs for the time being, or the greater part of them (of whom the mayor should be one), within a convenient time, to nominate another or others of the burgesses or inhabitants of the borough for the time to be jurat or jurats, bailiff or bailiffs of the borough:—Held, that it was competent to the corporation to elect the jurats from the inhabitants of the borough, or from the burgesses. Rex v. Greet, 8 B. & C. 363; 2 M. & Ry. 391; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 92.

c. Mayor.

See Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 50), ss. 15, 16, 61, 66, 67.

Qualification—Residence.]—A charter which required that the mayor should be an inhabitant resiant within the borough, on pain of forfeiting such sum as should be imposed by the mayor, recorder and major part of the common council, not exceeding 100*l.*, did not require resiancy as a qualification for holding the office, but only under a penalty. Rex v. Williams, 2 M. & S. 141.

Who may be elected.]—Under the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, an outgoing alderman may be elected mayor. Reg. v. Stanley, 3 P. & D. 561; 11 A. & E. 869; 9 L. J., Q. B. 248.

Disqualification — Dealer in Spirituous Liquors.]—Where a charter of incorporation ordained that the mayor should yearly be chosen justice within the borough, and that the justice should not permit any one to retail ale or beer within the borough, without a licence under the hands of two of the said justices, whereof the mayor to be one:—Held, that a dealer in spirituous liquors, and by that means disqualified by 26 Geo. 2, c. 13, from concurring in granting licences, was not disqualified from being elected mayor. Rex v. Smith, 2 M. & S. 583.

No Notice of Ineligibility of Candidate.]—See Rex v. Bridge, col. 201.

Election of Lord Mayor of London to have precedence on appointed Day.]—On the appointed charter day for the special purpose of the election of lord mayor of the city of London, the business of such election must have precedence of all other business; therefore, it is illegal, after the lord mayor and aldermen have retired from the hustings (having assembled for that purpose), to propose any other business inconsistent with such election, the discussion of which might have the effect of preventing the election altogether. Rex v. Parkyns, 3 B. & Ald. 668; 22 R. R. 519.

Election of, must be First Business.]—See Reg. v. Macgowan, col. 173.

Election of—Casting Vote.]—At an election for a mayor under 3 & 4 Vict. c. 108 (Ir.), in case of an equality of votes, the casting vote is to be given, not by the mayor, but by the alderman who shall have been elected by the greatest number of votes recorded in his favour on a contest; and an alderman elected after a contest is to be considered as elected by a greater number of votes than one returned by a larger constituency without a contest. Hall v. Walker, Ir. R. 9 C. L. 66.

—— Who may vote.]—Outgoing aldermen, on the 9th November in each year, may vote for the mayor to be elected on that day. Reg. v. Maddy, 3 P. & D. 563. S. P., Reg. v. Macgowan, 11 A. & E. 869; 3 P. & D. 557; 9 L. J., Q. B. 244; 4 Jur. 913; Reg. v. M'Dowall, 10 Jur. 1087.

—— Candidate voting for himself.]—At an election for the office of mayor, to which office a salary is attached, the vote of a candidate for himself is bad, on the ground that he has a pecuniary interest within s. 22, sub-s. 3 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882. Louth Municipal Election, In re, Nell v. Longbottom, 63 L. J., Q. B. 490; [1894] 1 Q. B. 767; 10 R. 193; 70 L. T. 499.

Defect in Title of Presiding Officer.]—Where the mayor who presides at the election of a new mayor is only mayor de facto and not de jure, and is subsequently removed by judgment of ouster, the election of the mayor is void. Rex v. Bridgewater, 3 Dougl. 379. See Rex v. Slythe, 5 L. J. (O.S.) M. C. 41; 6 B. & C. 240. But see now 45 & 46 Vict. c. 50, s. 42, sub-s. 2.

Construction of Charter—To be Chosen from Burgesses.]—Where a charter directed the mayor to be annually chosen out of four of the burgesses or inhabitants, and a by-law ordained that all these four should be aldermen:—Held, that it was void, as being repugnant to the charter. Tucker v. Rex, 2 Bro. P. C. 304.

A charter granted to the mayor, bailiffs and burgesses, or the greater part of them, to choose one of themselves to be mayor; but the same charter appointed the first mayor to continue for a year and until some other burgess should be elected and sworn, and the two first bailiffs to continue until two other burgesses should be elected and sworn; and it also directed the new mayor to be sworn in before the last mayor his predecessor and the bailiffs for the time being and the burgesses present; and in like manner the new bailiffs to be sworn in before the mayor and the last bailiffs and the burgesses present. These latter provisions explain the first, and show that the mayor must be chosen out of the burgesses at large, and not out of the bailiffs; and this avoids any question as to the validity of a swearing in an officer before himself, by his name of office. Rex v. Harper, 5 East, 208.

—— Vacancy by Death.]—Where a charter authorised the election of mayor on the charter-day, with power to the mayor to hold over, and on the mayor's death within the year after his election and swearing in, and in the meantime, the alderman next in order to officiate as mayor:—Held, that in the case of a mayor's holding over and dying more than a year after his election and swearing in, the charter did not authorise a new election of mayor, nor the alderman next in order to officiate as mayor; but it was casus omissus. Rex v. Smith, 2 M. & S. 583.

—— Who are to Elect.]—By a charter there were to be in a borough a mayor, alderman and twenty-four capital burgesses; on the death or removal of an alderman, the mayor and aldermen, or the greater part of them, were to elect a capital burgess to supply his place; when a capital burgess died, &c., the mayor, aldermen and capital burgesses, or the greater part of them, were to elect a successor from among the inhabitants and burgesses; and the mayor was to be annually elected on a certain day "by the burgesses of the borough, or the greater number of them," with the consent of twenty-four freeholders and inhabitants, to be chosen as directed by the charter; in practice, the mayor had always been elected by the capital burgesses only. At the election of mayor on a charter-day, there was not a majority of the number of twenty-four capital burgesses present, and no other burgesses attended:—Held, that this did not avoid the election, for that the word "burgesses" in the charter (where it treated of the election of mayor) could not be construed to mean only capital burgesses; that the right of election did not devolve upon the body of capital burgesses by the mere forbearance of the other burgesses to interfere; and that the capital burgesses, in electing the mayor, acted in the capacity of burgesses merely. Rex v. Goldsmith, 4 B. & Ad. 835.

A charter empowered the mayor and aldermen for the time being, or the greater part of them, to choose and name four of the burgesses or inhabitants, out of which four so to be named and chosen, the mayor, aldermen, bailiffs, principal burgesses, and other burgesses, and inhabitants of the borough, for the time being (they being also for that purpose upon the same day congregated and assembled together), or the greater part of them as should be so congregated and assembled, might have power and authority, by the greater part of the voices of them so assembled together, to choose and make one to be the mayor:—Held, that the election of a mayor by the majority of the whole elective body taken collectively was invalid, it appearing that there was not a majority of each definite body of principal burgesses present at the time of the election. Rex v. Bower, 2 D. & R. 761; 1 B. & C. 492; 1 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 174. See Rex v. Headley, 6 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 53; 7 B. & C. 496; 1 M. & Ry. 345; post, col. 205.

—— To be Sworn before Acting.]—Where a charter directs that the mayor shall continue in office until another is duly elected and sworn, the successor, although duly elected, cannot act until sworn, and, if he does, judgment of ouster may be given against him. Prowse v. Foot, 2 Bro. P. C. 289.

—— Re-Election.]—By a charter the capital burgesses and common council of a borough were authorised every year, on Monday next before Michaelmas, to elect and nominate one of the capital burgesses to be mayor for one whole year thence next ensuing; and he, before he was admitted to execute that office, or in any way to intermeddle in the office, was on Friday next after the feast of St. Michael next ensuing such nomination and election, not only to take his corporal oath well and faithfully to execute the office, but also all the oaths appointed to be taken by a mayor; and after such oath so taken, he might execute the office of mayor of the borough for one whole year then and next ensuing. It was then provided, that none who should have once borne the office of mayor should be again elected and preferred to be mayor within the space of three years next ensuing the end and determination of his office of mayoralty:—Held, that the words "three years," mentioned in the prohibitory clause, imported years of office, and not calendar years; and therefore a person who had once served the office of mayor might be again promoted to the same office as soon as three mayoralties had intervened:—Held, also, that a party became mayor, not when he was elected, but when he was sworn in; and that it was sufficient if three mayoralties intervened between the time when he ceased to be mayor and the time when he was sworn into office a second time. Rex v. Swyer, 10 B. & C. 486; 8 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 221.

Oath or Declaration.]—No oath is necessary as a qualification for eligibility for a mayoralty, but a declaration to the effect required by 31 & 32 Vict. c. 72, s. 12, is sufficient. Hall v. Walker, Ir. R. 9 C. L. 66.

Making Declaration on Acceptance of Office—Notice of Election.]—The notice of his election, within five days of which the mayor elect is required, by 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 51, to accept such office, by making and subscribing the declaration, means notice received either by being present at the election, or by official notification. Reg. v. Preece, 5 Q. B. 94; D. & M. 156; 12 L. J., Q. B. 335; 7 Jur. 896.

A mayor was elected on the 9th November, being then absent from the borough, to which he did not return until the 23rd November. He had in the meantime casual information of his election, but did not receive any official notice of it until his return. Within five days after his return, he made the requisite declaration and took upon him the office:—Held, a sufficient acceptance of the office within five days after notice. Ib.

Obligation to Serve.]—Under a charter of Will. 3, the mayor of a corporation was appointed to be elected out of the forty-one common councilmen, and every mayor was appointed an alderman:—Held, that a common councilman, who had once served the office of mayor, and acted as justice for the town, but had since quitted the town, and resided four miles distant, having only a bank there, and was an acting magistrate for the county, was not entitled to refuse to stand at a subsequent election of a mayor, though the serving that office would compel him to remove his residence to the town, and prevent his acting as magistrate for the county. Rex v. Leyland, 3 M. & S. 184.

Where a corporator is duly elected mayor he may be compelled to take office either by mandamus or indictment, but when the election has been a pretence the court will grant a mandamus for another election. Rex v. Colchester, 4 Dougl. 14.

Mandamus for a New Election.]—Where an election to the office of mayor becomes void within the year, the court has power, under 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 78, to issue a mandamus commanding a new election. Reg. v. Pembroke Corporation, 8 D. P. C. 302; 4 Jur. 317.

Where there is a statutable incapacity in a person being twice elected to the office of mayor, the court will consider the election as void ab initio, and will thereupon issue a mandamus commanding a new election; and such mandamus must be addressed to the mayor and burgesses, though there is legally no mayor. Ib.

Quo Warranto.]—A quo warranto will not be granted to try by what title a party exercises the office of mayor of a borough, where the ground of such application is a defect in the title of those who have elected him mayor. Reg. v. M'Carthy, 10 Ir. C. L. R. 312.

On a quo warranto information for exercising the office of mayor, it is no objection to the title that the party who was councillor when elected mayor is not shown to have been on the burgess roll at that time, it being admitted that he was de facto councillor when elected mayor, and that he was on the burgess roll when elected councillor. Reg. v. Dixon, 15 Q. B. 33; 19 L. J., Q. B. 363; 14 Jur. 811.

—— Sufficiency of Statement in Plea of Custom as to Mode of Appointment.]—A plea to a quo warranto stated, that by an immemorial usage under a by-law, a court-leet had been in part holden in the morning, and in part in the evening, and that the custom had been to elect a mayor at the morning court, and that the burgess (such mayor elect) had been accustomed to be sworn into office at the evening court by the steward of the lordship, or his deputy. At the trial, the allegation in the plea was proved, but it appeared, in addition to the custom there set out, that it had been usual for the leet jury to present in writing the candidate who had the majority of votes at the morning court to be sworn in by the steward at the evening court, and that the jury had done so in the present instance:—Held, that this was a mere ministerial act on the part of the jury, and that such presentment was no essential part of the appointment, and need not be alleged in the plea; and consequently that there was no variance between the statement in the plea and the proof adduced at the trial. Rex v. Rowland, 3 B. & A. 130.

Absence of, at Election of Successor.]—The voluntary absence of a chief officer of a corporation upon the charter day of election of his successor, is not indictable upon the 11 Geo. 1, c. 4, s. 6, unless his presence as such chief officer is necessary by the constitution of the corporation to constitute a legal corporate assembly for such purpose. Rex v. Corry, 5 East, 372; 1 Smith, 358.

e. Revising Assessors.

See Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, ss. 29, 62, 65; and County Electors Act, 1888, s. 4 (1), (a).

Election of.]—Mandamus to the mayor, aldermen and burgesses of a borough, named in schedule (A.) of the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, and divided into wards, recited that no election of assessors to revise the burgess lists with the mayor in place of the last assessors had been made on or since 1st March, 1844, by reason whereof the offices were still vacant; and the writ commanded the mayor, aldermen and burgesses to meet and elect such assessors. Return, that they did meet, and were ready to elect and to deliver and receive voting papers, but there was not, at the time of such meeting, nor has there been thence hitherto any assessor of the borough, wherefore they could not elect. On demurrer to the return, for not stating how and under what circumstances it happened that there was no assessor for the borough:—Held, first, that the return was bad for that reason. Reg. v. Weymouth Corporation, 7 Q. B. 46; 14 L. J., Q. B. 353; 10 Jur. 67.

Held, secondly, that the mandamus did not in itself show that the election could not be proceeded with. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that any omission to appoint assessors might be remedied by an election under 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 26, which extends to officers eligible under that act and the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, the provisions of the 11 Geo. 1, c. 4, ss. 1, 2. Ib.

Of Councillor—Nominator.]—At an election of town councillors for a ward in a borough under 22 Vict. c. 35, ss. 6, 7, no person is entitled to nominate who is not a member of the ward. Reg. v. Parkinson, 8 B. & S. 769; 37 L. J., Q. B. 52; L. R. 3 Q. B. 11; 17 L. T. 169; 16 W. R. 78.

—— Misstatement of Roll Number.] — The number on the burgess roll of a burgess nominating a candidate at a municipal election for the office of town councillor, must, in order to satisfy the requirements of 38 & 39 Vict. c. 40 (The Municipal Elections Act, 1875), s. 1, sub-s. 2, sched. I., form 2, and note, be stated in the nomination paper. Therefore, where, instead of the right number 695, the number 704 appeared in such paper, and an objection taken thereto was allowed by the returning officer, although no one had been or could be misled by the mistake: —Held, that the decision of the returning officer was correct, and that the effect of the mistake was not remedied by and could not be amended under the provisions of 41 & 42 Vict. c. 26, s. 41, and 35 & 36 Vict. c. 33, s. 13. Gothard v. Clarke, 49 L. J., C. P. 474; 5 C. P. D. 253; 42 L. T. 776; 29 W. R. 102; 44 J. P. 587.

—— Description of Qualifying Property.]—The nomination paper of a candidate is not rendered invalid by reason that the description of "the situation of the property in respect of which" a burgess subscribing "is inrolled on the burgess roll" is not identical with the description on the burgess roll. Soper v. Basingstoke Corporation, 46 L. J., C. P. 422; 2 C. P. D. 440; 36 L. T. 468; 25 W. R. 693.

It is sufficient if the description be true and do not mislead. Ib.

S. was nominated a candidate for the office of councillor in a borough; in his nomination paper his seconder was described as of High-street. The situation of the property of the seconder was described on the burgess roll as being in Winton-street. The street was generally known as High-street, and its name had been only recently changed to Winton-street; no one had been or could be misled by the description thereof as High-street. The mayor having declared the nomination paper to be void on the ground that the seconder of S. had improperly described the situation of the property in respect of which he was inrolled on the burgess roll:—Held, that the situation of the property of the seconder was sufficiently described, and that the decision of the mayor was wrong. Ib.

The provision of s. 1, sub-s. 2, of the Municipal Elections Act, 1875 (repealed by 45 & 46 Vict. c. 50), that "the nomination paper . . . shall be in the form No. 2 set forth in the schedule to the act, or to the like effect," is mandatory, and not directory; but a nomination paper signed by an inrolled burgess, which contains such a description of the property occupied by him at the time of subscribing such nomination paper as will enable a person to refer to the burgess roll to see whether the candidate is nominated by duly inrolled burgesses, is a sufficient compliance with the words of the section "to the like effect," even though the qualification of the burgess is in respect of a successive occupation. Henry v. Armitage, 53 L. J., Q. B. 111; 12 Q. B. D. 257; 50 L. T. 4; 32 W. R. 192; 48 J. P. 424—C. A.

Of County Councillor — Nominator's Signature.]—A nomination paper at a county council election was subscribed by one of the nominators, "James Sykes, junior." Upon the register this nominator's name was entered simply as "James Sykes":— Held, that the nomination paper had been duly subscribed, and that the nomination was not invalidated by the addition of the word "junior" to the nominator's name, it being his ordinary mode of signing it. Gledhill v. Crowther, 58 L. J., Q. B. 327; 23 Q. B. D. 136; 60 L. T. 866; 53 J. P. 677.

Of County Councillor — Name of Electoral Division Omitted.]—The nomination paper of a candidate for election as county councillor was complete and regular in every respect, with the exception that a blank in the heading of the form, which had been left for the insertion of the name of the electoral division, had not been filled in with the name of the division:—Held, that this omission did not invalidate the nomination of the candidate, being a mistake which fell within the scope of, and was cured by, the 72nd section of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882. Marton v. Gorrill, 58 L. J., Q. B. 329; 23 Q. B. D. 139; 60 L. T. 867.

Of Councillor—Signature of Assenting Burgess.]— By the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 50), third schedule, Elections, part ii., rules as to nomination in election of councillors: 1. Every candidate for the office of councillor must be nominated in writing; 2. The writing must be subscribed in the case of a ward election by two burgesses of the ward as proposer and seconder, and by eight other burgesses of the ward as assenting to the nomination. A nomination paper at a ward election was subscribed "Edwin J. Hooper," "W. E. Waller," "R. Turner," by three of the assenting burgesses. Upon the burgess roll were entered the names "Edwin John Hooper," "William E. Waller," and "Robert Turner," the numbers opposite these names on the burgess roll being the same as those appearing opposite the signature of the assenting burgesses on the nomination paper:— Held, that the nomination paper had been duly subscribed by the assenting burgesses. Bowden v. Besley, 57 L. J., Q. B. 473; 21 Q. B. D. 309; 59 L. T. 219; 36 W. R. 889; 52 J. P. 536.

A nomination paper at a ward election was subscribed with the correct name of Henry D. Davenport, as an assenting burgess, but his name was erroneously entered on the burgess roll as Davenport, Henry D., Evereux:—Held, that the nomination paper was not invalid. Harding v. Cornwell, 60 L. T. 959.

A nomination paper at an election of town councillors was subscribed with the full and correct name of "Charles Arthur Burman," as an assenting burgess; but his name was erroneously entered upon the burgess roll as "Charles Burman" only:—Held, that the defect was not such as was remedied by 45 & 46 Vict. c. 50, s. 241, enacting that "no misnomer or inaccurate description of any person . . . named in any roll

. . . required by this act shall hinder the full operation of this act with respect to that person . . . provided the description of that person . . . be such as to be commonly understood."—The words "commonly understood" in this proviso mean "commonly understood by any person comparing the nomination paper and the burgess roll." Moorhouse v. Linney, 15 Q. B. D. 273; 53 L. T. 343; 33 W. R. 704; 49 J. P. 471.

Same Burgess Assenting to Nominations in Excess of Vacancies.]—Sect. 1, sub-s. 2, of the Municipal Elections Act, 1875, provides that every candidate at a municipal election shall be nominated in writing subscribed by two burgesses as proposer and seconder, and by eight others as assenting to the nomination, and that "each candidate shall be nominated by a separate nomination paper, but the same burgesses, or any of them, may subscribe as many nomination papers as there are vacancies to be filled, but no more." At a municipal election where there were four vacancies to be filled a burgess subscribed four nomination papers, which were delivered in due time, and subsequently he subscribed a fifth nomination paper, which was also delivered in due time. In each case he subscribed as one of the eight assenting burgesses required by the act:—Held, that the first four nomination papers were valid, and that the fifth was invalid. Burgoyne v. Collins, 51 L. J., Q. B. 335; 8 Q. B. D. 450; 30 W. R. 923; 46 J. P. 390.

Several Candidates Nominated by Same Person.]—See Reg. v. Welchpool, col. 176.

Of Councillor — Surname of Candidate Misspelt.]—In four nomination papers at an election for a council of a ward of a borough under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, the name of a candidate, which was Timothy Miller, was inserted thus: "Timothy Millar," in accordance with the entry in the burgess and ward roll:—Held, that there was a sufficient statement of "the surname . . . of the candidate" to satisfy the requirements of ss. 72 and 241, and rule 5 in part ii. of the third schedule to the act. Miller v. Everton, 64 L. J., Q. B. 692; 72 L. T. 838; 59 J. P. 358.

—— Christian Name of Candidate Abbreviated.]—The provisions of sub-s. 2 of s. 1 of the Municipal Elections Act, 1875 (repealed by 45 & 46 Vict. c. 50), that "the nomination paper shall state the surname and other names of the person nominated," are satisfied if such paper contains an abbreviation of a christian name which is universally understood as meaning that name and none other; so that a nomination paper which contains the abbreviation "Wm." as meaning "William," is a sufficient statement of the christian name of the person nominated within the meaning of the sub-section. Henry v. Armitage, 52 L. J., Q. B. 165; 48 L. T. 576; 31 W. R. 244. Reversed on another point, in C. A., supra, col. 190.

In a nomination paper at an election for town councillors of a borough under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 40, the name of a candidate, which was Robert Vicars Mather, was inserted thus,—"Robert V. Mather":—Held, not such a statement of "the surname and other names of the person nominated" as to satisfy the requirements of s. 1 and the form given in schedule 2; and that the inaccuracy was not cured by 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 142. Mather v. Brown, 45 L. J., C. P. 547; 1 C. P. D. 596; 34 L. T. 869; 24 W. R. 736.

—— Candidate Abroad.]—A., when absent from the United Kingdom, was nominated town councillor. No written consent by him to his nomination was produced at the time of the delivery of the nomination paper:—Held, that A.'s election was void, and that the other candidate, who had been duly nominated, was entitled to the seat. Brown v. Benn, 53 J. P. 167.

Name of Candidate not on Burgess Roll when nominated as Councillor.]—See Budge v. Andrews, col. 174.

Nomination Papers—Time for Delivery.]—A town clerk has no discretion to require the delivery of nomination papers for town councillors at an earlier period than two days before the election, the words of 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 6, "at least two whole days," not giving him the discretion to require that the papers be transmitted to him more than two days before the day appointed for the election. Reg. v. Glover, 15 L. T. 289.

Prior to a municipal election, the town clerk is, by 38 & 39 Vict. c. 40, s. 1, sub-s. 1, to issue a notice stating the last day on which nomination papers are to be delivered. By sub-s. 3, nomination papers are to be delivered seven days at least before the day of election, and the mayor is to sit at the town hall on a subsequent day to decide on the validity of objections made to nomination papers. In accordance with these enactments, the town clerk issued a notice for a forthcoming municipal election, stating that the 23rd of October was the last day on which nomination papers were to be delivered. The 23rd of October only allowed six days (exclusive of Sundays and the days of nomination and election) to intervene between the nomination day and the day of election:—Held, that seven days mean seven clear days, exclusive of the nomination day and the day of election as well as of Sundays. Howes v. Turner, 45 L. J., C. P. 550; 1 C. P. D. 670; 35 L. T. 58.

T., one of the candidates, delivered his nomination paper on the 23rd of October. W., another candidate, delivered his paper on the 22nd of October, but took it back for the purpose of making an immaterial alteration, and returned it on the 23rd of October. Objections to the nomination papers of T. & W., on the ground that they had been delivered on the wrong day, were duly made, but disallowed by the mayor. T. and W. obtained a majority of votes and were returned as elected:—Held, that the mayor had no power to decide such an objection, as his jurisdiction was confined to the form of the nomination papers, but that such question could be raised by petition to the Court of Common Pleas. Ib.

Held, also, that T.'s paper was not delivered in time, but that as W.'s was good at the time of delivery and was not taken back with the intention of withdrawal, it was delivered in time; but that as the notice of the town clerk was so defective as to mislead one of the candidates and probably the constituency, and as consequently there could be no free election, such election was void. Ib.

—— Delivery by Agent — Jurisdiction on Petition.]—A petition was presented, under 35 & 36 Vict. c. 60, by an unsuccessful candidate at an election of councillors for a borough, questioning the election of a councillor but not claiming the seat. The nomination paper of the petitioner was delivered to the town clerk by an agent of the petitioner, and was not otherwise delivered by the candidate himself or his proposer or seconder, as required by 38 & 39 Vict. c. 4, s. 1, sub-s. 3; the nomination paper was objected to on this ground; the mayor disallowed this ground of objection, but allowed others; and the petitioner was the only candidate competing with the successful candidates:—Held, first that the delivery of the nomination paper by an agent invalidated the nomination. Monks v. Jackson, 46 L. J., C. P. 162; 1 C. P. D. 683; 35 L. T. 95.

Held, secondly, that notwithstanding the disallowance of this ground of objection by the mayor, the fact was cognisable by the court, and that the respondent must be declared to have been duly elected. Ib.

Complaint of Mayor's Decision as to Validity of, not a "Complaint of the Conduct" of the Mayor.]—See Harmon v. Park (No. 1), col. 208.

Substitution of Different Proposer after Delivery of Paper.]—By the Municipal Elections Act, 1875 (38 & 39 Vict. c. 40), s. 1, sub-s. 2, at any municipal election (of councillors) every candidate shall be nominated in writing: the writing shall be subscribed by two inrolled burgesses of such borough or ward as proposer and seconder, and by eight other inrolled burgesses of such borough or ward as assenting to the nomination. At an election of a ward councillor, a burgess was nominated in a paper signed by B. and H. as proposer and seconder, and by eight other burgesses as assenting to the nomination. After the nomination paper had been delivered to the town clerk it was altered in the absence of the seconder and assenting burgesses by striking out the name of B. as proposer and substituting that of G., another duly-inrolled burgess:—Held, that the nomination was invalid. Harmon v. Park (No. 2), 50 L. J., Q. B. 775; 7 Q. B. D. 369; 45 L. T. 174; 45 J. P. 714.

Good Nomination not vitiated by Another that is Bad.]—See Northcote v. Pulsford, col. 203.

Rules in Ballot Act not applicable.]—Held, that a defect in a bad nomination was not cured by the 12th and 13th rules of the 1st schedule of the Ballot Act, inasmuch as those rules do not apply to the nomination at a municipal election. Northcote v. Pulsford, 44 L. J., C. P. 217; L. R. 10 C. P. 476; 32 L. T. 602; 23 W. R. 700.

Statutory Provision for Election of Commissioners by Town Council—Resolution of Council restricting Power of Nomination—Ultra Vires.]—By the 1 Geo. 4, c. 52 (one of the acts regulating the port and harbour of Cork), s. 21, it was enacted that on the second Tuesday in June, or on some other day not more than ten days from the second Tuesday in June in each year, the four senior commissioners appointed under the act, not being members of the common council of Cork, should go out of office as such commissioners, and four other commissioners should be chosen to supply their places by the mayor, sheriffs and commonalty of the city of Cork, or the major part of them, in their open court duly assembled, and which court the mayor of the said city for the time being should, from time to time, cause to be held for such purpose, giving six days' notice, at the least, of the time and place of holding the same, by advertisement in one or more of the public newspapers of the said city of Cork. The council of the city of Cork, on the 7th July, 1882, passed the following resolution:—That the standing order be adopted—"That on electing gentlemen to membership of public boards, or other honorary positions, all nominations thereto shall be made in writing, signed by two members of the council (as proposer and seconder), and delivered to the town clerk seven clear days before the day of election; that each nomination shall be confined to one candidate, and that no nomination shall be announced until all shall have been received and recorded, the names being then read out in the order in which the town clerk shall receive them." On a motion for a writ of quo warranto, to set aside the election of three persons as commissioners under the 1 Geo. 4, c. 52, s. 4, on the ground that they had not been nominated seven clear days before the day of election, as required by the resolution of the 7th of July, 1882:—Held, that such resolution was ultra vires and invalid, as imposing upon the candidates for election a qualification not prescribed by the statute, and thus unduly restricting the class of persons eligible. Reg. v. Downing, 16 L. R., Ir. 501.

Presiding Officer—First Vote and Casting Vote.]—The right of a chairman of a municipal meeting, not otherwise disqualified, to have a first vote, besides a casting vote, is not interfered with by s. 61, sub-s. 4, of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882. Louth Municipal Election, In re, Nell v. Longbottom, 63 L. J., Q. B. 490; [1894] 1 Q. B. 767; 10 R. 193; 70 L. T. 499.

—— Casting Vote—By-law contrary to Charter.]—Where a charter directed the election of senior bailiff to be made by a majority of a select body, a by-law giving a casting vote to the presiding officer in case of an equality of votes, was bad. Rex v. Ginever, 6 Term Rep. 732.

—— Appointment of, in Charter.]—The king was not bound by 9 Anne, c. 20, s. 8, and, therefore, in granting a new charter to an old corporation, he might appoint a person as presiding officer who had presided at the election of members of parliament, though he had previously held that situation. Rex v. Hughes, 7 B. & C. 708; 1 M. & Ry. 625; 6 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 190; 31 R. R. 288.

—— Election in Absence of, void.]—It is necessary that a presiding officer, who by the charter of a borough forms an integral part of an elective assembly, should be present up to the time when the election is completed; and the election cannot be proceeded in during his absence, although he should improperly absent himself. Rex v. Williams, 2 M. & S. 141.

If a presiding officer, who, by the constitution of the borough, forms an integral part of an elective assembly, departs from it after the meeting has been regularly formed, and the election entered upon, but before it is completed, an election made after its departure is void. Rex v. Buller, 8 East, 389.

Returning Officer—Who is.]—At the election of a councillor for a ward in a borough, the mayor is not the returning-officer within the meaning of s. 20 of the Ballot Act, unless he also happens to be alderman of such ward, or unless the office of alderman in such ward be vacant. Harmon v. Park (No. 1), 50 L. J., Q. B. 227; 6 Q. B. D. 323; 44 L. T. 81; 29 W. R. 750; 45 J. P. 436.

—— Where Mayor a Candidate, Alderman substituted to act as.]—See Reg. v. White, col. 177.

—— Candidate acting as — Disqualification —Remedy.]—The defendant, the mayor of a borough, was candidate for the office of alderman in the borough. At the election he presided and voted for himself, and, the votes being equal, gave a casting vote for himself, and declared himself duly elected:—Held, that this disqualification fell within s. 87, sub-s. 1 (d) or (e), of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, and could not be questioned except by an election petition, and consequently quo warranto would not lie. Reg. v. Morton, 61 L. J., Q. B. 39; [1892] 1 Q. B. 39; 65 L. T. 611; 40 W. R. 109; 56 J. P. 105.

—— Knowledge of Voters that Candidate is— No Knowledge that he is disqualified.]—See Reg. v. Tewkesbury Corporation, col. 201.

—— Not eligible as Councillor.]—See Reg. v. Owens, col. 177.

—— Duties and Jurisdiction of—Declaration of Election.]—Two candidates, R. and P., were nominated for the vacant office of councillor of one of the wards of a borough. P. objected to R.'s nomination on the ground that R. was disqualified, being an alderman of the borough whose term of office had not expired, but the mayor disallowed the objection. Throughout the election P. insisted upon his objection, and claimed to be elected whatever the result of the poll might be. The votes having been counted shewed a majority for R., and the returning officer read out the names and numbers to the mayor, who announced them in public. Having taken time to consider the objection, the returning officer on the following day issued a public notice stating the number of votes given to each candidate, and the objection, and declaring P. to be duly elected. P. thereupon made and subscribed the declaration of acceptance of the office required by the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, ss. 34, 35. R. subsequently made and subscribed a similar declaration:—Held, but without deciding whether an alderman is disqualified for election as councillor, that the returning officer had no jurisdiction to determine the question of disqualification, the proper method for determining that question being an election petition as provided by the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 87, and the duty of the returning officer being to count the votes and "forthwith to declare to be elected the candidate to whom the majority of votes have been given," as provided by s. 2 of the Ballot Act, 1872; that P. had not been declared to be elected; that the office was not full; and that he was not entitled to a mandamus to compel the mayor and corporation to receive his votes at their corporate meetings. Reg. v. Coaks (3 E. & B. 249; ante, col. 181) discussed. Pritchard v. Bangor Corporation, 57 L. Voting Papers.]—Voting papers at municipal elections are not chargeable with duty by 33 & 34 Vict. c. 97, and need no stamp. Reg. v. Strachan, 41 L. J., Q. B. 210; L. R. 7 Q. B. 463; 26 L. T. 835; 20 W. R. 629.

—— Signature of Voter.]—The burgess's usual signature is sufficient; and it is no valid objection that the christian name is denoted only by an initial letter. Reg. v. Avery, 18 Q. B. 576; 21 L. J., Q. B. 428; 17 Jur. 194.

Joseph C., who was entitled to vote at the election of councillors, was on the burgess roll as James C. He signed the voting paper with the name of James C. On a motion for quo warranto, the grounds of objection stated in the rule being "the reception of votes from persons who were not entitled to vote, or who fraudulently personated persons who were entitled to vote": —Held, that the objections were not sustained. Reg. v. Thwaites, 1 El. & Bl. 704; 22 L. J., Q. B. 238; 17 Jur. 712.

Held, also, that the objection that C. had voted by a wrong name, if formally raised, could not have been sustained, inasmuch as it was the name on the burgess roll, and the misnomer would be cured by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 142. Ib.

The name of the burgess voting must so appear upon the face of the voting paper as to shew clearly that the name is intended as a signature; and also, the name must be connected with the name of the street in which the property is situate. Reg. v. Tart, 1 El. & El. 618; 28 L. J., Q. B. 173; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 679.

—— Commencing "I, A. B," delivered by Mistake to, and signed by, "C. D."]—By the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 60, sub-s. 4, any person entitled to vote at an election of aldermen may vote "by signing and personally delivering at the meeting to the chairman a voting paper containing the surnames and other names and places of abode and descriptions of the persons for whom he votes." A voting paper was delivered, commencing "I, the undersigned, A. B.," and ending with the signature "C. D."; and upon a petition against the return of the persons elected, the commissioner received evidence shewing that the town clerk had inserted A. B.'s name, in order that the voting paper might be used by him, but by inadvertence it was handed to C. D., who signed and personally delivered it to the chairman without discovering the mistake:—Held, that the vote was valid, and that the commissioner was right in receiving evidence of the circumstances under which it was given. Summers v. Moorhouse, 53 L. J., Q. B. 564; 13 Q. B. D. 388; 51 L. T. 290; 32 W. R. 826; 48 J. P. 424.

—— Description of Voter's Qualifying Property.]—At an election, a voting ticket, "W. I., of K. Street," was rejected on the ground that the qualification of W. I. on the burgess roll was described as "house in M. Street." It was shewn by affidavits that K. Street and M. Street intersect; that the house in question was a corner house; that it was one house with a street door in each street, consisting of what had formerly been two distinct houses, one in each street, and one of them being the house in M. Street:—Held, that the description was such as to be commonly understood, and that the vote was improperly rejected. Reg. v. Gregory, 1 El. & Bl. 600; 22 L. J., Q. B. 120; 17 Jur. 272; 1 W. R. 148.

A voting paper is correct if the place in respect of which the party voted, and for which he appears to be rated on the burgess roll, is described according to its actual situation, though the description may vary in terms from that on the burgess roll. Reg. v. Avery, 18 Q. B. 576; 21 L. J., Q. B. 428; 17 Jur. 194.

A voting paper described the property for which the voter voted as "situate in the parish of C.," which formed part of the borough. The description of the place was such as to be commonly understood:—Semble, by Lord Campbell, C.J., and Crompton, J. (Coleridge, J., dissenting), that the description was sufficient, and if not sufficient, it was an inaccurate description cured by s. 142. Reg. v. Spratley, 6 El. & Bl. 363; 25 L. J., Q. B. 257; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 735; 4 W. R. 527.

—— Candidate's Place of Abode.]—A shop and part of a house were used by A. B. and C. D. for carrying on the trade of booksellers in copartnership. It was entered on the burgess list and burgess roll opposite the name of A. B., as "house, Trinity Street." A. B. occupied a house, and resided and inhabited therein, within seven miles of the borough. At an election for the office of alderman, the voting papers of the members of the council for A. B. described his place of abode as Trinity Street:—Held, that this description of the place of abode was insufficient to satisfy the above section; that this defect was not cured by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 142; and that A. B. was not duly elected alderman. Reg. v. Deighton, D. & M. 683; 5 Q. B. 896; 13 L. J., Q. B. 241; 8 Jur. 686.

On the election of an alderman, if the voting papers do not contain an accurate description of the place of abode of the party voted for, the votes are bad, though the inaccuracy is without fraud, and the description in the voting paper is commonly understood to be that of the party. Ib.

Quo warranto for exercising the office of councillor. Plea, that the defendant was elected one of the councillors of the borough. Replication, that in the voting papers his place of abode was stated to be Gonville Place, whereas his place of abode at the time of the election was at Newmarket Road, and not at Gonville Place. Rejoinder, that Gonville Place had been his place of abode until a short time before the election, and that Gonville Place, at the time of the election, was commonly understood, in and throughout the borough, to be his place of abode, and that his descriptions in the voting papers by the christian name and surname, with the place of abode and description of the defendant at the time of the election, were respectively such descriptions of the defendant by the christian name and surname, with the place of abode and description of the defendant, as to be commonly understood, in and throughout the borough, as descriptions of the defendant by his christian name and surname, with his place of abode and description:—Held, that the replication was good, and the rejoinder bad; because s. 32 of the 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, requires that the voting paper shall contain the christian names and surnames of the persons for whom the burgess votes, with their respective places of abode and descriptions: and the voting papers contained an accurate description of a wrong place of abode, and not an inaccurate description of the right place of abode of the defendant, and therefore were not within s. 142, which cures an inaccurate description of any person or place in any voting paper, provided that the description of such person or place be such as to be commonly understood. Reg. v. Coward, 16 Q. B. 819; 20 L. J., Q. B. 359; 15 Jur. 726.

The voting papers must state the candidate's place of residence; his place of business, if he does not reside there, is not a place of abode; although the business is extensive and the premises where it is carried on are in the same ward as the residence, and although the proprietor is better known by his place of business than by his place of residence. And an election by means of voting papers stating only the place of business will be no answer to a quo warranto information. Reg. v. Hammond, 17 Q. B. 772; 21 L. J., Q. B. 153; 16 Jur. 194.

—— Description of Candidate.]—A voting paper contained the christian name and surname of the candidate and his place of abode, and nothing more:—Held, that this was not an inaccurate description, but a total omission of the description of the candidate, and was not cured by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 142; and the vote was therefore invalid. Reg. v. Tugwell, 9 B. & S. 367; 37 L. J., Q. B. 275; L. R. 3 Q. B. 704; 16 W. R. 1039.

—— Misnomer of Candidate.]—At an election of councillors, voting papers designated the person voted for by the initial of his christian name:—Held misnomers, and therefore cured by s. 142. Reg. v. Plenty, 9 B. & S. 386; 38 L. J., Q. B. 205; L. R. 4 Q. B. 346; 20 L. T. 521; 17 W. R. 792.

—— Contraction of Christian Name of Candidate.]—The 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 78, s. 14, is satisfied if the voting paper for the election of alderman contains a contraction of a christian name which is well known, and in ordinary use as representing that name, and in such a case the name need not be written in full; and therefore the contractions "Wm." and "Willm." may be used in a voting paper as equivalent to "William." Reg. v. Bradley, 3 El. & El. 634; 30 L. J., Q. B. 180; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 757; 3 L. T. 753; 9 W. R. 372.

Name of Candidate who had withdrawn printed by Inadvertence.]—Where the name of a person who had withdrawn his candidature was inadvertently put on the ballot papers, and thirty-four votes were recorded in his favour, an election was declared invalid, as not having been conducted in accordance with the principles laid down in the body of the Ballot Act, 1872, and as the result was probably affected by such non-compliance. Wilson v. Ingham, 64 L. J., Q. B. 775; 15 R. 488; 72 L. T. 796; 43 W. R. 621; 59 J. P. 614.

—— Invalid in every Particular—Mandamus—Rule absolute in first Instance.]—In a case where the voting papers were not signed or personally delivered to the chairman, and did not contain the surnames and names of and the places of abode and descriptions of the persons for whom the votes were given, the court, in the exercise of the discretion given by s. 225 of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, granted a rule absolute in the first instance for a mandamus to hold a fresh election. Reg. v. Wilton Corporation, 34 W. R. 273.

—— Personal Delivery to Chairman.]—By the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 60, sub-s. 4, "Every person entitled to vote may vote . . . by . . . personally delivering at the meeting, to the chairman, a voting paper . . ." At an election of aldermen for a borough, the chairman requested the town clerk to collect the voting papers and hand the same to him. The town clerk accordingly left his seat, walked round the members of the town council present, and received from the hands of each of certain of them a voting paper, and immediately handed such voting papers into the hands of the chairman, who could see, and in fact did see, that each of such members was a person entitled to vote at the election:—Held, that there was a personal delivery of the voting papers to the chairman within the meaning of the section. Baxter v. Spencer, 64 L. J., Q. B. 644; 72 L. T. 838; 59 J. P. 376.

—— On Occasion of Extraordinary Vacancies.]—Upon an election of four councillors on the 1st November, 1841, to fill three ordinary vacancies, and one extraordinary vacancy for a shorter period than three years, the voting papers contained the names of four candidates, without distinguishing which was intended to fill the extraordinary vacancy. Upon the trial of a quo warranto, the judge told the jury that the alderman and assessor ought to have obtained the information which enabled them to declare whether a candidate was elected to fill an ordinary or the extraordinary vacancy from the voting papers alone:—Held, that this direction was right. Rowley v. Reg. 6 Q. B. 668; 14 L. J., Q. B. 62; 8 Jur. 1170—Ex. Ch. S. C., in court below, Reg. v. Rowley, 3 Q. B. 143; 11 L. J., Q. B. 198; 6 Jur. 872.

Where an election was held to fill three ordinary vacancies and one extraordinary vacancy, and the voting papers contained the names of four candidates, but did not specify the person intended to fill the latter vacancy, such voting papers are void. Ib.

—— Omission to Insert in Counterfoil Number of Burgess on Roll—Tendered Papers Counted—Amending Petition.]—See Pickering v. Startin, col. 209.

—— Marking on Face of, Number of Burgess on Roll—Wrapping in Declaration of Inability to Read.]—At a municipal election, held under the Ballot Act, 1872, the presiding officer at one of the polling stations marked upon the face of every ballot paper which he gave out to each elector at such station the number of the voter appearing on the burgess roll. The number so marked was not in fact seen so as to be identified, but it could have been seen at the counting. At another of the polling stations, the presiding officer placed each of the ballot papers which he had marked by the direction of voters unable to read, in the ballot box, wrapped up in the declaration of inability to read made by the voter for whom the vote was marked, and each such vote could have been, but was not in fact, identified at the counting. No voter had been prevented from voting, and these errors of the presiding officers did not affect the result of the election, the majority of electors not being thereby prevented from effectually exercising their votes in favour of the candidate they preferred:—Held, that the election was therefore not void either by the common law of parliament or under the Ballot Act, 1872. Woodward v. Sarsons, 44 L. J., C. P. 293; L. R. 10 C. P. 733; 32 L. T. 867.

Held, also, that the ballot papers which had been so marked on their face by the presiding officer with the number of the voter, were void and ought not to be counted; but that the ballot papers which had been wrapped in the declarations of inability to read were not on that account to be rejected, but ought properly to be counted. Ib.

—— Signed by Voter—Writing Name of Candidate instead of a Cross.]—A ballot paper which bears the voter's signature is void, and must be disallowed; so also a ballot paper must be disallowed which has the name of the candidate written by the voter instead of a cross opposite to the printed name of the candidate. Ib.

—— Two Crosses instead of One—Mark other than Cross—Cross in Wrong Place.]—The mere fact of two crosses being put, or of the cross being of a peculiar form, or of there being another mark with the cross, or of there being a straight line instead of a cross, or of the cross being put on the left-hand side of the candidate's name instead of on the right-hand side, will not vitiate the ballot paper, and the same should not be rejected on that account, unless there be evidence of an arrangement that such peculiar marks were to be indications of identity. Ib.

—— Proof of.]—Voting papers given in at an election of councillors are not such public documents as to prove themselves on production from the proper custody; to make them evidence, their identity must be traced by witnesses. Reg. v. Ledgard, 8 Ad. & E. 535; 7 L. J., Q. B. 237.

When Votes for Ineligible Candidate null and void—Notice of Disqualification.]—At the election of town councillors in a borough not divided into wards, there were four vacancies and five candidates. B., one of the four who had a majority of votes, was the mayor, and acted as returning officer, and was therefore incapable of being elected:—Held, that the mere knowledge on the part of the electors who voted for B. that he was mayor and returning officer did not amount to knowledge that he was disqualified in point of law as a candidate; and therefore their votes were not thrown away, so as to make the election fall on the fifth candidate. Reg. v. Tewkesbury Corporation, 37 L. J., Q. B. 288; L. R. 3 Q. B. 629; 18 L. T. 851; 16 W. R. 1200; 9 B. & S. 683.

Semble, the votes given at a municipal election for a candidate rendered ineligible by the express words of an act of parliament, in consequence of his holding another office in the same corporation, are not thrown away, unless express notice of the ineligibility has been given to the voters upon or at the time of the election. Reg. v. Hiorns, 3 N. & P. 148; 7 A. & E. 960; 2 Jur. 108.

Upon the nomination of two aldermen of a borough, in order that one of them might afterwards be elected mayor, pursuant to charter:—Held, that votes which were given before notice of the ineligibility of one of the candidates, on account of his not having received the sacrament within one year, were not thrown away, so as to authorise the returning officer to return another candidate, who was in a minority. Rex v. Bridge, 1 M. & S. 76; 14 R. R. 395.

One who had not taken the sacrament according to the rites of the Church of England, within a year before his election in fact to a corporate office, was disqualified by 13 Car. 2, stat. 2, c. 1, s. 12, from being elected; and if such disqualification was notified to the electors at the time of election, votes afterwards given to such person were then thrown away; and any candidate having the most legal votes, though in fact inferior in number to the first, was duly elected and entitled to be sworn in; but until he was sworn in, the office was not legally filled up and enjoyed by him, within the exception of the Annual Indemnity Act; and therefore, if the disqualified person who had the greatest number of votes was sworn into the office, and afterwards qualified himself by taking the sacrament, within the time allowed by the Indemnity Act, he was thereby recapacitated and freed from all disability, and his title to the office thereby protected, such office not having been then already vacated by judgment, or legally filled up and enjoyed by another person. Rex v. Parry, 14 East, 550.

At a meeting duly held for the election of an alderman for a borough, A. and B. were candidates. Two votes were given for each, when they were interrogated whether they had qualified by taking the sacrament within the year before the election, pursuant to 13 Car. 2, stat. 2, c. 1, s. 12. A. admitted he had not, B. answered that he had. Public notice was then given of A.'s disqualification; but the poll proceeded, and after the notice twenty voted for A. and sixteen for B.: the mayor swore in A.; two of the aldermen (as they might by the constitution of the borough) swore in B.; A. took the sacrament within the time limited by the Annual Indemnity Act:—Held, first, that though notice of the disqualification of A. was not given till after the commencement of the election, all the votes for him after such notice were thrown away; secondly, that B. having the greatest number of legal votes, was duly elected, and having been sworn in by the proper officers, the office was legally filled up by him, so as to exclude the operation of the Annual Indemnity Act in favour of A.; thirdly, that B. must be presumed to have been qualified according to his own declaration, there being no evidence to the contrary. And the court appeared to have considered it of great weight that the majority (thirty-six out of forty) was unpolled at the time of the notice, though not prepared to say that it would have made any difference, though the notice had not been given till a more advanced period of the poll, if the votes for B. had exceeded the number given for A. before notice. And this judgment was affirmed by the House of Lords, the Lord Chancellor thinking that those who had voted for a disqualified person without notice, might, if they chose to demand permission, vote again for another person, but that no one was bound to call upon them to do so. Hawkins v. Rex, 2 Dow. 124; 10 East, 211; 14 R. R. 129.

The votes of electors given for a candidate, when it is publicly known that such candidate is a woman, are thrown away, even though the electors may not have been aware that this fact actually constituted a disqualification. Beresford Hope v. Sandhurst (Lady), 58 L. J., Q. B. 316; 23 Q. B. D. 79; 61 L. T. 150; 37 W. R. 548; 53 J. P. 805—C. A.

Voting for two Candidates jointly when only one Vacancy—Votes void—Third Candidate in Minority elected.]—Previously to the annual election of councillors in November, in a borough divided into wards, the mayor published a notice purporting to be made with the concurrence of the aldermen and assessors, to the effect that two vacancies were to be filled up, one in the room of A. going out by rotation, and one in the room of B. who had been declared a bankrupt. The council had not declared the office of B. to be void, or given any notice thereof. At the election, 250 burgesses voted for two candidates jointly, and 120 voted for the third singly:—Held, that the votes given for the two candidates were thrown away, and that the third candidate, to whom the 120 votes were given, was duly elected. Reg. v. Leeds Corporation, 3 N. & P. 145; 7 A. & E. 963; 1 W., W. & H. 23; 7 L. J., Q. B. 80; 2 Jur. 545.

Votes for Candidate twice nominated.]—A candidate at a municipal election was twice nominated, one nomination being good, but the other being bad. His name appeared in the ballot papers twice, once in respect of each nomination. Seventy-one voters appended their marks to his name under one nomination, and 301 under the other. All the voters so voting intended to vote for the candidate, and if both classes of voters could be added together, he had a majority, and was entitled to be returned:—Held, that having been duly nominated, and having a majority of votes, he was entitled to be returned. Northcote v. Pulsford, 44 L. J., C. P. 217; L. R. 10 C. P. 476; 32 L. T. 602; 23 W. R. 700.

Bad Votes must affect Result in order to impeach Election.]—To impeach the election of a party returned as elected, it is not sufficient to allege that many votes were bad and fictitious, without shewing that some other candidate had a majority of legal votes. Rex v. Jefferson, 2 N. & M. 487.

Voting in two Wards.]—By the Municipal Corporations Act (5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76), s. 44, if a burgess be rated in respect of distinct premises in two or more wards, he shall be entitled to be inrolled and to vote in such one of the wards as he shall select, but not in more than one. At an election of councillors for a borough which was divided into wards a burgess who was on the roll for two wards voted in one ward and immediately afterwards voted in the other ward:—Held, that the vote was good, and that the voter having voted in one ward, had irrevocably made his selection, which was not affected by what took place afterwards. Reg. v. Harrald, 42 L. J., Q. B. 211; L. R. 8 Q. B. 418; 28 L. T. 767; 21 W. R. 910.

Electors specified in Charter.]—A charter, directing an election to be made by the remaining members of a definite body of a corporation, is good in law. Rex v. Hoyte, 6 Term Rep. 430.

—— Majority of each specified integral Part of Corporation must attend.]—Where an integral part of a corporation, composed of a definite number, is required to vote at an election of a corporate officer, a majority of such integral definite part must attend, otherwise there can be no elective assembly, although other parts of the corporation also join in such election, and a majority of the whole existing body actually attends, but a majority of those present, when legally assembled, will bind the rest. Rex v. Miller, 6 Term Rep. 268; 3 R. R. 172.

Where it is granted by charter that a corporation shall have so many aldermen and so many capital burgesses, and that when one of the latter shall die, depart or be removed, another shall be elected in his place by "the mayor and aldermen and other capital burgesses then surviving or remaining, or the greater part of them," the election must be made by a majority of the full members of aldermen and of capital burgesses; a mere majority of the members of both bodies who happen to survive is not sufficient. Rex v. May, 4 B. & Ad. 843.

A charter directed that a borough should consist of a mayor, four jurats and two bailiffs; and that when any bailiff or jurat should die, the remaining jurats and bailiffs, or the greater part of them, of whom the mayor should be one, should elect another or others of the burgesses or inhabitants to be a jurat; one vacancy occurred in the office of jurat, and an inhabitant was elected a jurat by a meeting at which the mayor, two jurats and two bailiffs were present:—Held, a good election: the rule requiring the presence of a majority of each definite part of the elective body not applying, where in cases of one vacancy, viz. in the office of bailiff, it would be impossible for a majority of the bailiffs to be present. Rex v. Greet, 2 M. & Ry. 391; 8 B. & C. 363; 6 L. J. (o.s.) K. B. 331.

Where a charter required that a mayor and common clerk for the time being, and the common council for the time being, or the major part of them, should elect, and the common council was a definite body consisting of thirty-six:—Held, that a majority of the whole number must meet to form an elective assembly; and that if the corporation be so reduced as that so many do not remain, no election could be had at all. Rex v. Bellringer, 4 Term Rep. 810.

So, where the charter of a corporation, consisting of a mayor and twenty-four capital burgesses, granted that when and so often as it should happen that any one or more of the offices of these capital burgesses should be vacant, it should be lawful to the other capital burgesses "at that time surviving or remaining, or the greater part of the same, of whom the mayor for the time being should be one, to elect another or others of the burgesses of the said borough into the place or places of the capital burgess or burgesses so happening," &c.: and a burgess having been elected to fill up a vacancy by twelve capital burgesses only, who were alleged to be the capital burgesses at that time surviving and remaining:—Held, that the election was void, it not being made by a majority of the whole definite body of capital burgesses, to which the words, "or the greater part of the same," were referable. Rex v. Wyllyams, 3 D. & R. 75; 25 R. R. 523. S. P., Rex v. Devonshire, 3 D. & R. 83; 1 B. & C. 609; 25 R. R. 523.

—— Specified Electors not forming an Integral Part of Corporation.]—A corporation consisted of a mayor, recorder and thirty-six chief burgesses, of whom twelve were also called councillors. A charter recognising that constitution, directed that "mayor, recorder and chief burgesses (of which chief burgesses some were called chief burgesses councillors), or the greatest part of them, should have power to elect any of such chief burgesses and councillors to be mayor," and also to elect other officers and burgesses. The charter also gave powers to the mayor, recorder and twelve chief burgesses alone:—Held, in the absence of evidence of any other usage, that, by these charters, the twelve burgesses councillors did not form an integral part of this corporation for the purpose of election, and that therefore, to made a good election, it was sufficient that there were present the mayor, recorder and a majority of the whole thirty-six chief burgesses. Rex v. Headley, 7 B. & C. 496; 1 M. & Ry. 345; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 53.

Under Special Charter—Election of Mayor by Burgesses.]—See Rex v. Goldsmith, and Rex v. Bowyer, col. 185.

Charter directing Election by Majority of Burgesses.]—A charter provided for the election of fifteen chief burgesses, and supplying the vacancies from time to time by the votes of a majority: a return to a mandamus, that there was not a sufficient number, of such as had been themselves legally elected, to form a majority, held bad, for there might be a competent number of burgesses whose titles, though not originally legal, might yet be unimpeachable by lapse of time. Rex v. Monmouth Corporation, 4 B. & Ald. 496.

Where a charter directs an election to be by a majority of the whole number of subsisting burgesses, an election by a minor part of them is void. Rex v. Grimes, 5 Burr. 2598.

Dissent of Minority ineffectual.]—If a majority dissents from an election, but votes for nobody else, the election by the minority is good. Oldknow v. Wainwright, or Rex v. Foxcroft, 2 Burr. 1017; 1 W. Bl. 229.

Shew of Hands—Refusal of Poll—Mandamus.]—Where a statute directs an election by poll, semble, that the poll may be taken from the holding up of electors' hands; but if the tellers appointed to take the number differ, and a poll is demanded and refused, the court will grant a mandamus to enter an adjournment of the election meeting, and to proceed to complete the election. Rex v. St. Luke's, 2 N. & M. 464.

By-Laws to regulate Election.]—Where the mode of electing officers is not regulated by charter or prescription, the corporation may make by-laws to regulate the election. Newling v. Francis, 3 Term Rep. 189; 1 R. R. 687.

Where a charter expressly gave the power of election to the mayor and commonalty, together with the aldermen, a subsequent by-law which gave it to the mayor and aldermen only, was illegal and void. Hoblyn v. Rex, 2 Bro. P. C. 329.

Illegal Mode of Election.]—In the case of an occasional vacancy occurring in a town council, the commissioners elected a candidate to fill it, by placing their votes written on slips of paper in a hat, and subsequently drawing the slips out, and allowing them to be lost, so that no scrutiny could be had:—Semble, such a mode of election cannot be sustained. Reg. v. Hazley, Ir. R. 11 C. L. 360.

List of proposed Freemen voted on collectively.]—Where, at a corporation meeting, for the purpose of electing honorary freemen, a list of names was proposed upon the whole of whom the vote was taken collectively, instead of individually:—Held, that such election was void, even where the corporation consisted of an indefinite number. Rex v. Player, 2 B. & Ald. 707; 21 R. R. 459.

Custom for Mayor and Aldermen to elect, when Electors persist in electing unfit Person, valid.]—See Rex v. Johnson, col. 213.

Presence of Candidate in the Polling Station.]—A candidate at a municipal election under the Ballot Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 33), has a right as such candidate to be present in the polling station during the polling, although he does not either himself undertake the duties of an agent, or assist his agent in the performance of such duties; and therefore the presiding officer at the station has no authority to exclude such candidate therefrom, if he does not interfere with the polling or in any other way misconduct himself. Clementson v. Mason, 44 L. Suspension of Voting.]—A suspension of the voting at an election of councillors, by the mayor, does not vitiate the election, if no persons were prevented from exercising their right to vote. Reg. v. Thwaites, 1 El. & Bl. 704; 22 L. J., Q. B. 238; 17 Jur. 712.

Closing Poll.]—A municipal election held under the Municipal Corporations Act (3 & 4 Vict. c. 108), (Ir.), and the Ballot Act of 1872

(35 & 36 Vict. c. 33), declared void, on the ground that votes were received after four o'clock, p.m., though the outer door of the house in which the poll took place was closed at the proper hour, and no votes were afterwards received except from electors who were inside before the door was closed. Gribbin v. Kirker, Ir. See Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, ss. 75, 233.

Where a burgess was refused permission to compare the voting papers with a private list of his own, but was furnished with a copy of the burgess roll for that purpose, and afterwards applied for a mandamus to the town clerk to allow him to inspect the burgess roll:—Held, that the application must be refused, as he was substantially furnished at the time with what he demanded. Reg. v. Blagge, 10 Jur. 983.

Production of Voting Papers.]—The court will not order a town clerk, against whom a criminal information has been filed for misconduct in his office relating to an election of councillors of the borough, to produce the election papers which are in his official custody, in order that they may be impounded, to be forthcoming at the trial as evidence against him; though it is suggested, that the six months during which the clerk is required to keep the papers (by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 35) will expire before the trial. Rex v. Nicholetts, 5 A. & E. 376; 6 N. & M. 827.

Inspection of Voting Papers.]—Semble, that a town clerk is not bound to allow inspection of the voting papers delivered at the election of councillors, under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 35, to more than one burgess at a time. Rex v. Arnold, 6 N. & M. 152; 4 A. & E. 657; 5 L. J., M. C. 54.

Nor to allow any burgess to have more than one of such voting papers in his hand at the same time. Ib.

But he is bound to allow any burgess, who brings with him a list of the burgesses, to make marks upon such list denoting how each voter appears by the voting paper to have given his vote. Ib.

Against some only of the Successful Candidates on Ground affecting Validity of whole Election.]—An election petition may be presented under the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, s. 87, against some only of the persons returned at a municipal election, although the ground of the petition is one affecting the validity of the election as a whole; and the court can on such petition declare the persons so petitioned against not to have been duly elected. Line v. Warren, 54 L. J., Q. B. 291; 14 Q. B. D. 548; 53 L. T. 446; 49 J. P. 516—C. A.

Taking off File.]—Where it is clearly shewn on the face of an election petition that no relief can be granted under it, the court has power, under the act of 1884, to take it off the file. Ib.

Respondent, who may be.]—A person who assumes to be elected, though not in fact elected, may be made a respondent to a municipal election petition presented under 35 & 36 Vict. c. 60, against his election. Yates v. Leach, 43 L. J., C. P. 377; L. R. 9 C. P. 605; 30 L. T. 790.

There were two candidates, M. and L., for the office of councillor at a municipal election. M. had the majority of votes and was declared elected, but being disqualified he did not accept the office; upon which L. claimed to be elected, made the declaration of acceptance of office prescribed by 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 50, and sat and acted as councillor. Both M. and L. were thereupon made respondents to a petition against the election presented under 35 & 36 Vict. c. 60. They each gave notice under s. 18 that they did not intend to oppose the petition. The court held that L. was properly made respondent, and refused an application made by him to have his name struck out as respondent. Ib.

An unsuccessful candidate at an election cannot be made a respondent to a petition complaining of the election, although he had coalesced for the purposes of the election with two successful candidates, so as to be responsible equally with them for any acts done by any of the three in furtherance of the common purpose. Lovering v. Dawson, 44 L. J., C. P. 321; L. R. 10 C. P. 726; 32 L. T. 819.

Where a mayor has bonâ fide given a decision under 38 & 39 Vict. c. 40, s. 1, sub-s. 3, on the validity of an objection made to a nomination paper, a complaint of such decision as erroneous is not a "complaint of the conduct" of such mayor within the meaning of 35 & 36 Vict. c. 60, s. 13, sub-s. 6, so as to make him a proper respondent to a petition. Harmon v. Park (No. 1), 50 L. J., Q. B. 227; 6 Q. B. D. 323; 44 L. T. 81; 29 W. R. 750; 45 J. P. 436—C. A.

Service of Notice of.]—It is a condition precedent to the trial of a municipal election petition that, within five days after the presentation of it, the petitioner should in the prescribed manner serve on the respondent a notice of the presentation, and of the nature of the proposed security, and a copy of the petition as required by 35 & 36 Vict. c. 60, s. 13, sub-s. 4. Williams v. Tenby Corporation, 49 L. J., C. P. 325; 5 C. P. D. 135; 42 L. T. 187; 28 W. R. 616; 44 J. P. 348.

Time for Delivery of Particulars.]—In a municipal election petition the respondent applied for an order for delivery of particulars of the alleged corrupt practices:—Held, that, in the absence of exceptional circumstances, the petitioners should not be ordered to deliver particulars more than seven clear days before the hearing of the petition. Lenham v. Barber, 52 L. J., Q. B. 312; 10 Q. B. D. 293; 31 W. R. 428; 48 J. P. 23. S. P., Clark v. Wallond, infra.

Amendment of, when allowed.]—By the 4th sub-section of the 88th section of the Municipal Corporations Act, 1882 (45 & 46 Vict. c. 50), a municipal election petition shall be presented, except in the case of matters arising after the election, within twenty-one days after the day on which the election was held; and by the 89th section other times are prescribed depending on the date of the presentation of the petition. By the 4th sub-section of the 100th section "the High Court shall, subject to this act, have the same powers, jurisdiction and authority with respect to a municipal election petition, and the proceedings thereon, as if the petition were an ordinary action within its jurisdiction":—Held, that by reason of the words "subject to this act," the 4th sub-section of the 100th section gives no jurisdiction to the High Court to allow more than twenty-one days after the election, an amendment in a municipal election petition adding the words "and treating" to the grounds on which the petition questions the election, inasmuch as the petition would thereby be made a new petition, which would thus be presented after the time prescribed by the 4th sub-section of the 88th section. Clark v. Wallond, 52 L. J., Q. B. 321; 48 L. T. 762; 31 W. R. 551; 47 J. P. 551.

A petition against a municipal election having been filed on the grounds of treating, bribery, and intimidation, the petitioner found on inspection that the returning officer had neglected to insert in the counterfoils of twenty-nine of the voting papers used at the election the number of the voters appearing on the burgess-roll, and that certain tendered ballot papers were used as ballot papers, and were put into the ballot box and afterwards counted in favour of the respondent. Thereupon the petitioner desired to amend his petition by adding two paragraphs alleging these facts in contravention of the Ballot Act, 1872, rendering the election void. On motion for a rule enabling him to make such amendments, and cause shewn:—Held, that as the questions intended to be raised by the paragraphs were of importance, and might seriously affect the election, the amendments should be allowed. Pickering v. Startin, 28 L. T. 111.

A petition against the election of a town councillor cannot, after the expiration of the twenty-one days limited for its presentation, be amended by the introduction of a substantially new charge. Maude v. Lowley, 43 L. J., C. P. 105; L. R. 9 C. P. 165; 29 L. T. 925.

A petition as originally framed complained of the employment, contrary to the prohibition contained in 35 & 36 Vict. c. 60, s. 7, as paid canvassers at an election for the north ward of the borough, of persons who were on the register of burgesses for that ward. The petitioners after the expiration of the twenty-one days sought to amend the petition by adding "and other wards":—Held, that the court or a judge had no power to allow the proposed amendment. Ib.

A petitioner having omitted to deliver a list of objections six days before the time of trial, he applied to the court for leave to give evidence against the validity of certain votes recorded at the municipal election, and to file a list of objections nunc pro tunc:—Held, that the court had no jurisdiction to grant the application; for the power of amendment conferred by the seventh rule of the general rules related only to petitions presented in due time, and did not relate to petitions delivered after the prescribed period. Nield v. Batty, 43 L. J., C. P. 73; L. R. 9 C. P. 104; 29 L. T. 747; 22 W. R. 407.

Appeal on Interlocutory Matter.]—From an order of a divisional court upon an interlocutory matter arising in an election petition, an appeal lies to the Court of Appeal. Harmon v. Park (No. 1), 50 L. J., Q. B. 227; 6 Q. B. D. 323; 44 L. T. 81; 29 W. R. 750; 45 J. P. 436.

Leave to Withdraw—Reference to Arbitration.]—After a municipal election of aldermen at H., a petition was presented by an unsuccessful candidate, claiming that he was returned by a majority of lawful votes. The mayor of H., to save expense, induced the petitioner and the returned candidate to submit the question to arbitration. On the award being against the petitioner he asked leave to withdraw the petition, which the court allowed him to do. Mallam v. Bean, 51 J. P. 231.

Adjournment of Court.]—An election commissioner has power to adjourn his court by order from time to time by notice to the proper authority without going down to the borough, formally opening his court, and then adjourning it. Reg. v. Shellard, 58 L. J., M. C. 142; 23 Q. B. D. 273; 61 L. T. 120; 37 W. R. 706; 53 J. P. 821.

Non-Appearance of Respondent — Statement of Special Case.]—A petition against a municipal election having been duly brought to the notice of a respondent, but he having taken no steps with reference thereto, the petitioners obtained an order from a judge at chambers under the Corrupt Practices (Municipal Elections) Act, 1872, s. 15, sub-s. 6, directing a special case to be stated, and that if the parties differed the case was to be settled by a certain arbitrator. The respondent had been served with the summons upon which that order was obtained but did not appear at the hearing, and the order was made without the petitioners being required to verify the facts in the petition by affidavit. A special case was stated by the arbitrator in the absence of the respondents, and set down for hearing, notice thereof being put up in the master's office. The court, after hearing the petitioners, in the absence of the respondents, remitted the case to be re-stated. Notice of the re-hearing was put in the master's office, but at the hearing the respondents again did not appear, and the court gave judgment in favour of the petitioners. Upon a rule to set aside the proceedings as irregular:—Held, that the applicant had had sufficient notice of the proceedings; that the judge had full power to make the order directing the statement of a special case; and that the special case had been properly stated, and the court had full power to adjudicate upon it. Burgoyne v. Collins (No. 2), 46 J. P. 710.

Right of Audience "by himself" of any Person before being reported by Election Commissioner as Guilty of Corrupt Practices.]—The Municipal Elections (Corrupt and Illegal Practices) Act, 1884, s. 23, incorporated so much of s. 38 of the Corrupt and Illegal Practices Prevention Act, 1883 (46 & 47 Vict. c. 51) as provides that "before a person not being a party to an election petition, nor a candidate on behalf of whom the seat is claimed by an election petition, is reported by an election court to have been guilty, at an election, of any corrupt or illegal practice, the court shall cause notice to be given to such person, and if he appears in pursuance of the notice shall give him an opportunity of being heard by himself, and of calling evidence in his defence to show why he should not be so reported." Upon the hearing of a municipal election petition evidence was given as to alleged acts of bribery by G., who was not a party to the petition nor a candidate on behalf of whom the seat was claimed by the petition. At the first hearing counsel appeared on behalf of G., but subsequently his instructions were withdrawn. The solicitor of G. then appeared on his behalf, and applied to the commissioner before whom the petition was being heard to be allowed to examine the witnesses and to address the court on behalf of G. The commissioner decided that he could not hear the solicitor, and that counsel only had the right of audience before him:—Held, that the commissioner was wrong in deciding that counsel had the right of audience before him on behalf of G., as it was intended by the act that G. should be "heard by himself" and not be represented by either counsel or solicitor in these proceedings. Reg. v. Mansel Jones, 23 Q. B. D. 29; 60 L. T. 860; 37 W. R. 508; 53 J. P. 739.

Order for Prosecution by Commissioner.]—The commissioner for the trial of municipal election petitions ordered certain persons, prosecuted before him for a corrupt practice committed at a municipal election in Nottingham, to be prosecuted on an indictment for the offence at the ensuing assizes at Derby:—Held, that the commissioner had jurisdiction to order the trial at Derby; that his order was sufficient without describing the corrupt practice; that the Derbyshire grand jury could find, and the judge of assize had jurisdiction to try, the indictment; that "Derbyshire to wit" in the margin of the indictment was sufficient, although the body of it disclosed offences in Nottingham only; that the words "a corrupt practice" in the commissioner's order were reasonably interpreted some "corrupt practice," and that the prosecution were not precluded from preferring a number of charges of bribery in the indictment. Reg. v. Riley, 59 L. J., M. C. 122; 63 L. T. 119; 17 Cox, C. C. 120; 55 J. P. 21—C. C. R.

Report of Commissioner — Jurisdiction of High Court to deal with.]—When, after the trial of a municipal election petition, the commissioner has reported persons as having been guilty of corrupt practices, the High Court has no jurisdiction to set aside or amend his report upon the ground that the notice prescribed by the Municipal Elections (Corrupt and Illegal Practices) Act, 1884, had not been given to the persons so reported. Preece v. Harding, 59 L. J., Q. B. 82; 24 Q. B. D. 110; 61 L. T. 837; 38 W. R. 350.

Costs.]—Upon the trial of a petition against the return of a borough councillor under the Corrupt Practices (Municipal Elections) Act, 1872, the barrister in delivering judgment said that he found the councillor guilty of personal bribery, and that all the costs of the inquiry were to be borne by him, and made an order in writing for the payment by the councillor of certain costs under s. 19 of the act. The written order made no provision for the remuneration and allowances to the barrister and other persons under s. 22. The Lords Commissioners of the Treasury paid the amount of such remuneration and allowances and certified the payment to the borough treasurer, and required him to repay them the amount out of the borough fund or rates as provided by s. 22. A rate was accordingly made and levied. The commissioners, afterwards, on receiving from the barrister a letter that he had always intended to visit all the costs upon the councillor, and had said so in giving judgment, cancelled their certificate, and the borough corporation abandoned their rate and returned the sums levied to the ratepayers. Afterwards the commissioner, finding that the barrister had made no written order for the payment of the remuneration and allowances under s. 22, issued a fresh certificate requiring the borough treasurer to repay them out of the borough fund or rates the amount of such remuneration and allowances. These facts being raised upon the return to a mandamus commanding the treasurer to repay the commissioners out of the borough fund or rate, and the corporation to cause such payment:—Held, that no valid order was made by the barrister for the payment of such allowances and remuneration under s. 22; that the election court for the trial of petitions under the act was by virtue of s. 14, sub-s. 5, a court of record, and that neither the Queen's Bench Division nor the Court of Appeal on the return to the mandamus could amend the barrister's order so as to make it include the payment of such remuneration and allowances; that the act of the commissioners in certifying was not a judicial act, and that they had the power to make the second certificate; and were entitled to a peremptory mandamus compelling the treasurer to repay to them the amount of such remuneration and allowances out of the borough fund or rate, and compelling the corporation to order such amount to be levied by a borough rate. Reg. v. Maidenhead Corporation, 51 L. J., Q. B. 444; 9 Q. B. D. 494; 46 J. P. 724—C. A.

The barrister appointed under the Corrupt Practices (Municipal Elections) Act, 1872, has absolute discretion over the costs under s. 19. Lovering v. Dawson, 44 L. J., C. P. 321; L. R. 10 C. P. 726; 32 L. T. 823.

The 19th section says that all costs, &c., shall be defrayed by the parties to the petition, in such a manner and in such proportions as the court by which the petition is tried may determine:—

Held, that in a case where the petitioners had improperly made an unsuccessful candidate a respondent, they could not object that he was not a party to the petition, so as to deprive the barrister who tried the petition of jurisdiction to make an order upon them for his costs. Ib.

To obtain costs ordered to be paid by a commissioner, under the Corrupt Practices at Municipal Elections Act, 35 & 36 Vict. c. 60, and to take proceedings under r. 55, the order of the commissioner should first be made a rule of court. Pare v. Hartshorn, 31 L. T. 486; 23 W. R. 138.

The entry of the order by the registrar is sufficient; such order need not be actually indorsed on the petition by the commissioner. Ib.

The barrister who tried a municipal election petition duly certified his decision under 35 & 36 Vict. c. 60, s. 15, par. 4, in writing, and he also orally determined that the petitioner's costs were to be paid by one respondent. The registrar indorsed on the petition, "Election void, petitioner's costs to be paid by the respondent, R. A. S.":—Held, that such indorsement was to be treated as the certificate of the barrister, and could be made a rule of court in the ordinary way so as to enable the petitioner to issue execution upon it as "the rule of court ordering them to be paid" in the manner provided by r. 55, Michaelmas Term, 1872. Ib.

Appeal.]—At an election of members of a county council under the Local Government Act, 1888, the respondent obtained a majority of votes over the petitioner and was declared to be elected. On a petition claiming the seat on the ground that the respondent, being a woman, was disqualified:—Held, that an appeal lies in such case, by special leave, from the divisional court to the Court of Appeal. Beresford-Hope v. Sandhurst (Lady), 58 L. J., Q. B. 316; 23 Q. B. D. 79; 61 L. T. 150; 37 W. R. 548; 53 J. P. 805—C. A.

l. Questioning Election in City of London.

Jurisdiction.]—The common council of London has not any jurisdiction to inquire concerning the election of any person to be one of the common councilmen of the city, for, by the immemorial custom of the city, the cognisance and examination of such elections belong to the court of record, held before the lord mayor and aldermen. Bolton v. Jeffes, 2 Bro. P. C. 463.

A custom of the city of London for the court of mayor and aldermen to examine and determine whether or not a person elected alderman of a ward, and returned to the court as such alderman, is, according to their discretion and sound consciences, a fit and proper person and duly qualified, is a valid custom. Rex v. Johnson, 5 A. & E. 488; 6 N. & M. 870; 5 L. J., Ex. 282. S. C., in the House of Lords, affirming judgment, 1 Rob. 1; 6 Cl. & F. 41.

So a custom, that when the inhabitants of any ward shall three times return to the court the same person to be alderman, who shall be by the court, according to the former custom, adjudged on such three returns, according to the discretion and sound consciences of the mayor and aldermen, not a fit person to support the dignity and discharge the duties of the office, the mayor and aldermen may, for remedy thereof, nominate, elect, and admit a fit person, being a freeman, out of the whole body of the citizens, to be alderman of such ward. Ib.

The latter custom is not abrogated by 11 Geo. 1, c. 18, s. 7; nor by the by-law of the city, 13 Anne. Ib. See also Scales v. Key, 3 P. & D. 505; 11 A. & E. 819; and Rex v. Parkyns, 3 B. & Ald. 668; 22 R. R. 519.

Validity of Election.]—Where, at an election of aldermen in London, three poll clerks were first appointed, and two of them afterwards dismissed, and it appeared that, upon a scrutiny being demanded, the wardmote was adjourned to meet again on a fresh summons; that the mayor then went out of office, and the new mayor assembled a wardmote by a fresh summons, took the scrutiny, and declared A. duly elected, and that upon a return thereof being made to the court of mayor and aldermen, they upon petition declared the election void:—Held, that the dismissal of the poll clerks, and the change of the mayor, were no objections to the validity of the election; and that the mode of adjourning the wardmote was not a dissolution, and did not affect the proceedings at the scrutiny. Rex v. London Corporation, 3 B. & Ad. 255; 2 N. & M. 126; 1 L. J., K. B. 216.

m. Corrupt and Illegal Practices.

See Municipal Corporations Act, 1882, ss. 77-86. See also I. 2, c., col. 141, ante.

Evidence on which Election Commissioner can order Prosecution for—Order not sealed.]—Where, in a municipal election inquiry, evidence is given that a person has been guilty of corrupt or illegal practices under the Municipal Elections (Corrupt and Illegal Practices) Act, 1884, and on the termination of the inquiry application is made by the representative of the Director of Public Prosecution to prosecute the person so charged, it is not necessary for the commissioner, if satisfied that sufficient evidence has been given during the inquiry to put the person charged on his trial, to rehear the evidence before ordering his prosecution. The non-attachment of a seal to the order for prosecution by such election commissioner does not invalidate such order. Reg. v. Shellard, 58 L. J., M. C. 142; 23 Q. B. D. 273; 61 L. T. 120; 37 W. R. 706; 53 J. P. 821.

Persons reported as guilty of—No Notice.]—See Preece v. Harding, col. 212.

Order for Prosecution for, by Election Commissioner—Indictment preferred in adjoining County—Jurisdiction—Order need not Specify Corrupt Practice.]—See Reg. v. Riley, col. 211.

Bribery—Employment—Corrupt Bargain.]—A declaration for bribing a voter in the election of councillors, by corruptly promising to give him employment in hauling stones at certain hire, as and for a reward to give his vote for particular candidates, is good; for an employment is a reward within the latter as well as the former branch of the section; and whether the employment in the particular case was given by way of corrupt bargain, was a question for the jury; but the court must assume that such was the case, a corrupt agreement being sufficiently alleged in the declaration. Harding v. Stokes, 1 M. & W. 354; 1 Tyr. & G. 599; 2 Gale, 41; 5 L. J., Ex. 178. And see 2 M. & W. 233; M. & H. 6; 6 L. J., Ex. 76; 1 Jur. 206.

—— Completion of Offence—Offering to Corrupt.]—The offence of corrupting a voter is complete where the bribe is offered and accepted, and the voter promises to vote in pursuance of the corrupt contract, although he may break his promise, or may never have intended to perform it; but when a bribe is offered, but not accepted, the offence is that of offering to corrupt; and it is for the jury to say whether there was a complete agreement or not. Ib.

—— Evidence of Corrupt Bargain.]—Giving money to a person, after having voted, is evidence of a previous agreement "for gift or reward," for the purpose of corrupting him to give his vote, within 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76, s. 34. Reg. v. Thwaites, 1 El. & Bl. 704; 22 L. J., Q. B. 238; 17 Jur. 712.

—— Promise of Remuneration for Loss of Time.]—In an action on the 22 Vict. c. 35, s. 11, for a penalty for bribery, it appeared that the defendant, while soliciting a vote at an election of councillors for a city, told the voter that he would be remunerated for loss of time. The judge of the county court gave judgment for the defendant, but submitted the question whether the transaction was bribery within the Corrupt Practices Prevention Act, 1854 (17 & 18 Vict. c. 102), s. 2, sub-s. 1, which by 22 Vict. c. 35, s. 12, applied to municipal elections:—Held, that it was so, inasmuch as it amounted to an offer or a promise to procure or endeavour to procure money or valuable consideration for a vote in order to induce him to vote at the election. Simpson v. Yeend, 10 B. & S. 752; 38 L. J., Q. B. 313; L. R. 4 Q. B. 626; 21 L. T. 56; 17 W. R. 1100.

—— Promise of Travelling Expenses, if conditional on voting.]—The 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, s. 2, enacts in clause 1, that to promise money to a voter in order to induce him to vote, and corruptly to give money to a voter on account of his having voted, are severally matters which subject to a penalty the person so promising or giving:—Held, that a promise to a voter of his travelling expenses conditionally on his coming and voting for the promisor or for a particular candidate is within the first part of the enactment, but that a promise of travelling expenses is not. Cooper v. Slade, 6 El. & Bl. 447; 25 L. J., Q. B. 324; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1016.

—— Separate Penalty for each Act.]—A person guilty of bribery at an election, may under 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, and 35 & 36 Vict. c. 60, be sued for the penalty for every act of bribery, and not merely once for bribery at the election. Milnes v. Bale, 44 L. J., C. P. 336; L. R. 10 C. P. 591; 33 L. T. 174; 23 W. R. 660.

—— Effect of Conviction.]—A person who has been convicted of bribery at a municipal election, and fined 40*s.* in a county court for that offence, is not disqualified for six years from serving a municipal office. Wray, In re, 12 L. T. 270; 13 W. R. 633.

Treating—Refreshment to Voters.]—By the Corrupt Practices (Municipal Elections) Act, 1872, the provisions of s. 23 of 17 & 18 Vict. c. 102, by which giving refreshments to voters at parliamentary elections is made illegal under a penalty of 40*s.*, are rendered applicable in the case of municipal elections. Hargreaves v. Simpson, 48 L. J., Q. B. 607; 4 Q. B. D. 403; 41 L. T. 216; 27 W. R. 885.

Indictment for giving False Answer on voting.]—An indictment upon s. 34 of 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 76 for giving a false answer on voting for a town councillor, is bad, if it does not allege that the defendant wilfully gave the false answer. Reg. v. Bent or Bent, 2 Car. & K. 179; 1 Den. C. C. 157.

Charging that he gave the false answer falsely and fraudulently is not sufficient. Ib.

—— Evidence.]—The son of a burgess, of the same name as his father, living in the house in respect of which the father had been qualified, but the father having for some time been absent, and the son paying the rates, is not indictable for untruly answering the questions put to voters upon his voting. Reg. v. Goodman, 1 F. & F. 502.

Personation—Inducing another to personate—Proof of Election.]—See CRIMINAL LAW (PERSONATION), Vol. IV., col. 1440.

Charge of communicating Information as to Votes before Close of Poll—Evidence.]—An information was laid against the respondent, charging that he, being a personating agent duly appointed and in attendance at a certain polling station in connection with a municipal election for a town councillor, did not then and there maintain and aid in maintaining the secrecy of the voting in such station, but did then and there communicate before the poll was closed to a certain person or persons certain information as to the names and numbers on the register of voters of certain electors who had and had not applied for ballot papers or voted at that election. It appeared that the respondent, having been appointed personating agent, as stated in the information, attended at the polling booth with a copy of the burgess-roll, and remained there some hours placing a mark against the name of each voter who obtained a ballot paper, and then before the close of the poll left the station, taking with him his copy of the burgess-roll, which he left in the committee-room of the candidate by whom he was employed. There was no proof that the copy of the burgess-roll was seen by any person while in the room:—Held, that there was not sufficient evidence to warrant a conviction under the Ballot Act, 1872 (35 & 36 Vict. c. 33), s. 4, as there was no proof that the information as to the voters was actually communicated to any person, and it was not enough that the means of acquiring such information were afforded to any one. Stannaught v. Hazeldine, 48 L. J., M. C. 89; 4 C. P. D. 191; 40 L. T. 589; 27 W. R. 620.

Charge of fraudulently placing Ballot Papers in Ballot Box—Inspection of Ballot Papers.]—On the trial of an indictment for fraudulently placing ballot papers in a ballot box at a municipal election, contrary to 35 & 36 Vict. c. 33, s. 3, a sealed packet was produced under the order of a county court judge, obtained under 35 & 36 Vict. c. 33, sched. I. rr. 40, 41, Part I., r. 64, and the counterfoils and marked register and voting papers produced therefrom were given in evidence, and the face of the voting papers was inspected:—Held, that the evidence was properly admitted. Reg. v. Beardsall, 45 L. J., M. C. 157; 1 Q. B. D. 452; 34 L. T. 660; 13 Cox, C. C. 193.

Return of Expenses required, though none incurred—Extension of Time.]—The return of expenses and the accompanying declaration which, under the Municipal Elections Act, 1884, every candidate is required to send to the town clerk within twenty-eight days of the election of a town councillor must be sent although no expenses may have been actually incurred by the candidate in and about the election. The court will, upon satisfactory proof that the omission happened under such circumstances as to amount to an authorised excuse under the act, make an order that the return and declaration be made by the candidate notwithstanding the lapse of the prescribed statutory period for making them. Robson, Ex parte, 18 Q. B. D. 336; 55 L. T. 813; 35 W. R. 290; 51 J. P. 199.

Charge of "Printing or causing to be Printed" Bills without Name of Printer—Evidence.]—Upon an information against the appellant under s. 14 of the Municipal Elections (Corrupt and Illegal Practices) Act, 1884, it was proved that the appellant was a candidate for a seat in the local board of Willesden: that the respondent received from his own servant at his residence a printed address and letter having reference to the election, and purporting to be signed by the appellant, but without the printer's name and address thereon; that this document was printed for publication by instructions conveyed to the printer in a letter from the appellant's brother, who resided with him; and that the printer had debited the appellant with the cost of printing, but had not been paid:—Held, no evidence that the appellant "printed or caused to be printed" the document in question, within s. 14. Bettesworth v. Allingham, 16 Q. B. D. 44; 34 W. R. 296; 50 J. P. 55.

Placards or posters (also without the printer's name or address), printed by the instructions of one Ellis (who was advertised in a local newspaper as the chairman of a committee for promoting the election of the appellant, and who sent the "copy" to the printer), were proved to have been posted about the district at Ellis's expense:—Whether this was evidence of the printing and posting by an agent of the appellant, quære; but, the justices having convicted the appellant in one penalty for both the alleged offences, and the conviction being bad as to one of them:—Held, that it was bad altogether. Ib.

Application for Relief.]—In order to support an application under s. 20 of the Municipal Elections (Corrupt and Illegal Practices) Act, 1884, it will not be sufficient that notice of intention to make the application has been advertised in local papers, but such notice should be published in such a manner as will insure a reasonable certainty that persons interested had notice; and it will also be insufficient in the affidavits upon which the application is made merely to state that the act in respect of which relief is sought arose from inadvertence, and not from any want of good faith, without shewing some reasonable excuse for such inadvertence. Perry, Ex parte, 48 J. P. 824.

—— Publishing Posters without Printer's Name.]—Four persons stood as candidates for election at the municipal election in the borough of Huntingdon, held on the 1st November, 1884. These persons employed a printer to print their bills and posters. A fortnight before the election Clark, one of the candidates, went to the printer, Wm. Goggs, and particularly drew his attention to s. 14 of the Municipal Elections Act, 1884. Goggs in his turn gave instructions to his workmen in accordance with the instructions received by him from Clark. On the 28th October Goggs printed, published, and posted certain posters on behalf of the four candidates (the applicants) which did not bear his name and address. When the omission was discovered he took steps to rectify it. A prosecution under the act was commenced against Clark and his colleagues, and Goggs the printer of the posters, but by consent the hearing of the summons before the magistrates was adjourned until an application was made to the court for an order excusing the applicants from the consequences of the omission. The applicants made their application under s. 20, and filed affidavits to the effect that the issuing of the posters, without the printer's name and address being on them, was due to inadvertence and not to the want of good faith:—Held, that, under the circumstances, the applicants were entitled to an order excusing them from the consequences of the omission under s. 20. Clark, Ex parte, Huntingdon Election, In re, 52 L. T. 260.

—— Omission to make a Return of Expenses.]—Where a candidate who, at a borough municipal election, had omitted to make a return of expenses, applied to the court for relief on an affidavit, which stated certain facts in an uncandid way, and merely alleged, but without any corroboration, that the omission was due to inadvertence, the court refused the application. Haseldine, Ex parte, 59 J. P. 71.

—— Petition pending.]—Where a candidate at a municipal election applied, under s. 20 of the Municipal Elections (Corrupt and Illegal Practices) Act, 1884, for relief against the consequences of an illegal practice, and it appeared that the applicant had been elected, and that a petition had been presented and was pending against his election, the court refused to entertain his application for relief, which was ordered to stand over until after the trial of the election petition. Wilks, Ex parte, 55 L. J., Q. B. 576; 16 Q. B. D. 114; 34 W. R. 273; 50 J. P. 487.

—— Appeal from Refusal of.]—An appeal lies to the Court of Appeal from the refusal by a Divisional Court of an application, under s. 20 of the Municipal Elections (Corrupt and Illegal Practices) Act, 1884, for relief from penalties incurred through inadvertence by a candidate at an election of county councillors, such refusal not being a judgment in a criminal cause or matter within s. 47 of the Judicature Act, 1873. Walker, Ex parte, 58 L. J., Q. B. 190; 22 Q. B. D. 384; 60 L. T. 581; 37 W. R. 293.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING.

Nuisance—Noise and Vibration.]—Where an electric lighting company is formed under a provisional order which is subsequently confirmed by act of parliament, such order must be read together with the provisions of the Electric Lighting Act, 1882, and the company are not thereby exempted from liability to an action for a nuisance. The powers given by s. 10 of the act of 1882, as read with s. 32, are applicable only to the construction of the authorised works as distinguished from the user of them when constructed, and s. 17 is confined to the payment for damages caused by the execution of such works, and does not apply to damages caused by their user. Shelfer v. City of London Electric Lighting Co., 64 L. J., Ch. 216; [1895] 1 Ch. 287; 12 R. 112; 72 L. T. 34; 43 W. R. 238—C. A.

Lessee — Reversioner — Injunction.]—An injunction was granted at the suit of a lessee and a reversioner respectively of a public-house to restrain an electric lighting company from carrying on their works so as by noise and vibration to interfere with the enjoyment of the lessee, and to cause injury to the structure of the premises. Ib.

A. ESTATE IN FEE SIMPLE.

1. LIMITATION OF, IN DEED.

Legal Estate.]—Where lands were settled to the use of the husband for life, with remainder to the use of the wife, remainder to the use of the heir female of the bodies of the husband and wife begotten and now living, and in default of such issue to the use of the heir male in like manner begotten, and in default thereof to the right heirs of the settlor, the husband; and there was issue several sons and daughters:—Held, that such limitation to the heir female was not void, but good words of description of a purchaser, although such daughter was not heir-at-law, and that the daughters took by purchase, but for life only, and that, upon the death of the survivor, the son of the settlor's second son (the eldest dying without issue) became entitled. Chambers v. Taylor, 2 Myl. & C. 376; 6 L. J., Ch. 193.

A father conveyed lands by lease and re-lease to his son in consideration of natural love, and to entitle him to a wife and fortune now in contemplation, "to hold" to the use of the son, his heirs and assigns for ever. It was not proved that any particular marriage was in contemplation at the date of the deed. The son survived the father, but died unmarried:—Held, that the fee simple was vested in him absolutely by the deed. Alleyne v. Alleyne, 8 Ir. Eq. R. 493; 2 Jo. & Lat. 544.

Limitation in a deed declaring the uses of a copyhold to the use of the first male issue lawfully begotten by settlor, which should attain twenty-one, and to the heirs and assigns of such male issue for ever, and for default of such male issue, to use of all and every the daughters and daughter of the settlor, lawfully begotten, and to their several heirs and assigns for ever, to hold as tenants in common discharged of any further limitation over; and for default of such issue, then over:—Held, to vest in fee in three daughters of settlor, his only children, and who died unmarried in his lifetime, and that plaintiff was entitled as heir-at-law to them in exclusion of devisees of settlor. Hampson v. Brandwood, 1 Madd. 381.

A widow, erroneously believing that certain lands, of which she was seised in fee, were subject to the trusts of her marriage settlement, in which case she would only have been entitled to an estate for her life, released all her estates (except to her and her assigns during her life the lands in question, the mines and minerals) to a releasee to uses and his heirs, to the use of trustees for a term, and subject thereto to the use that she might receive an annuity, and subject thereto to the use of her son, his heirs and assigns:—Held, that the lands passed to the son in fee subject to the term, and that the exception of her life estate was repugnant and void. Youde v. Jones, 13 M. & W. 534; 14 L. J., Ex. 70.

Upon the hearing, on further directions:—Held, in equity, that the son took, at the least, an estate in fee in remainder expectant on the mother's death. S. C., 14 Sim. 131.

The Court of Queen's Bench had held that the son did not take any estate in the property. S. C., Ib.; 8 Jur. 547.

Under a deed executed by father and son, the son, in consideration of the release by his father of a sum of 1,000*l.*, part of an alleged debt, purported to assign to his father absolutely all his "estate and interest whatsoever of and in the property, estate, and effects devised and bequeathed" by a certain will. The property subject to the will consisted partly of realty and partly of money in court, paid in as the result of compulsory sales. To all of this property the son was absolutely entitled, subject to the life interest therein of his father. On the death of the father the effect of the assignment was disputed:—Held, that, in the absence of the proper words of limitation, or of any words of reference which might supply the defect, the deed failed to pass both the fee simple in the realty (whether the estate was legal or equitable), and also the money in court, which must be treated and conveyed as land. Dearberg v. Letchford, 72 L. T. 489.

Equitable Estate.]—An equitable estate in fee could not be created by a deed executed before the Conveyancing and Law of Property Amendment Act, 1881 (44 & 45 Vict. c. 41) without words of inheritance. Meyler v. Meyler, 11 L. R. Ir. 522. Whiston's Estate, In re, Lovatt v. Whiston, 63 L. J., Ch. 273; [1894] 1 Ch. 661; 8 R. 175; 70 L. T. 681; 42 W. R. 327; Dearberg v. Letchford, 72 L. T. 489.

By a settlement made in 1817, freehold and leasehold property was conveyed to trustees upon trust to apply the rents and profits in the maintenance and education of the two children of M., deceased, until the youngest of them should attain twenty-one, and from and after that event to pay the rents unto and equally between the two children of M., their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns respectively, "provided nevertheless that in case either of the children should die without leaving lawful issue," then on trust to pay the share or shares of him, her, or them so dying, unto and equally between persons named. M. had two children, one of whom, B., died intestate and unmarried; the other, C., intestate as to his share, but leaving a daughter, D.:—Held, that the interest taken by D. under the settlement was an interest in fee simple, and that an estate tail was not created by the proviso as to failure of issue. Olivant v. Wright, 47 L. J., Ch. 664; 9 Ch. D. 646; 38 L. T. 677; 27 W. R. 284.

—— By Implication.]—If the intention of a deed is clear to pass an equitable estate in fee simple, it is not necessary that the proper words of inheritance should be used for the purpose. Pugh v. Drew, 17 W. R. 988.

By a deed of settlement, on the 7th March, 1818, leaseholds were settled, as to a third share, in trust, in the events which happened, for A. and B. absolutely in equal shares. In 1819 freeholds were settled "upon such and the same trusts, and for such and the same ends, intents, and purposes, and subject to such and the same powers, provisoes, and declarations as in the indenture of the 7th day of March, 1818, are expressed, declared, and contained of and concerning the premises therein mentioned and described, or as near thereto as the difference of the respective estates of A. M., M. J., and A. J." (the trustees) and their respective heirs, executors, and administrators, therein respectively would admit, to the intent that the rents, issues, and profits of the hereditaments and premises might be had, received, and taken, and the hereditaments and premises held, sold, conveyed, and assigned, and the produce paid and applied unto such person or persons, and in such manner, and at such time and times, in every respect as in the indenture of the 7th March, 1818, is expressed and declared of and concerning the premises therein particularly mentioned and described":—Held, that the want of proper words of inheritance was not fatal, but that A. and B. took equitable estates in fee simple, and not for life only, in one-third share of the freeholds. Ib.

By a deed of settlement, the lands of A., which were freehold, were settled by T. on J. and his issue in strict settlement, with an ultimate remainder to "H., his heirs and assigns"; and the lands of B., which were partly freehold and partly chattel, were settled on T. for life, "and from and after the decease of the said T. to several uses, intents, and purposes, as are hereinbefore expressed and declared, respecting the said lands of A." The deed then went on to recapitulate shortly the previous limitations to the family of J., after his own life estate, and gave the ultimate remainder "to and for the use and benefit of the said H., subject to the provisions hereinbefore made for the issue of the said marriage" :—Held, that H. took an absolute interest in the lands of B., notwithstanding there were no words of limitation. Garde v. Garde, 2 Con. & L. 175 ; 3 Dr. & War. 435.

2. CHARGES.

Keeping down Interest.]—By a settlement made in 1862, property, subject to a prior mortgage, was settled upon A. in fee, with a contingent charge in favour of B. upon his attaining twenty-one :—Held, that A., during his life, and his estate after his death, was bound to keep down the interest on the mortgage, so that the property might remain a security intact for the benefit of B. Wilson, In re, Butcher v. Simmonds, 35 L. T. 304 ; 24 W. R. 781.

3. DESCENT.

Heir—Definition.]—See HEIR-AT-LAW.

—— Disinheriting.]—See HEIR-AT-LAW.

Before the Inheritance Act—Title by Purchase.]—The rule that a man cannot make his right heir a purchaser is confined to the estate of which he is seised. Robinson v. Knight, 1 Eden, 159.

Where lands were devised to the heir, subject to the payment of an annuity :—Held, that notwithstanding he would take by descent, the devise to him could not be treated as a mere nullity, nor deprive him of any benefit intended by the testator, and as between him and other devisees, the estates devised to him were not to be applied in payment of debts in priority of the estate devised to the latter. Biederman v. Seymour, 3 Beav. 368 ; 10 L. J., Ch. 177.

If creditors resort to estates devised to the heir in priority of other devisees, he is entitled to contribution from them to the extent to which his estate may be exhausted by defendants. Ib.

The general rule is, that a person who claims as heir male to another by purchase must be complete heir male ; but in the case of a devise there may be exceptions to this rule from manifest intention of the testator. Newcoman v. Bethlem Hospital, Ambl. 8.

Devise of his estates to his wife for life, and after her decease to his son (his heir-at-law), charged with a yearly payment of 100*l.* to his daughter for her life, and at her decease with 1,500*l.*, to be divided among the children ; or if no child, to be disposed of as she should direct ; and in default of payment of either of these sums within the time appointed to T., his heirs, administrators, and assigns, in trust, to raise the 100*l.* out of the rents and profits, and the 1,500*l.* by sale or mortgage of a sufficient part of the lands, and subject to the charges and trust to his son, his heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns :—Held, that the son took by descent, and not by purchase. Chaplin v. Leroux, 5 M. & S. 14.

Where a man granted to A., with remainder to his own heirs male, his heirs male took by descent. Wills v. Palmer, 2 W. Bl. 687 ; 5 Burr. 2615.

If such limitation was made by will, or by a third person in a deed, the heir male took by purchase. Ib.

Devise to the heir-at-law, in fee, with an executory devise over, in case he did not attain twenty-one :—Held, not to alter the quality of the estate, which he would otherwise have taken as heir ; that he took by descent and not by purchase. Doe d. Pratt v. Timins, 1 B. & Ald. 530. S. P., Langley v. Sneyd, 3 Br. & B. 243 ; 7 Moore, 165.

—— Stock of Descent.]—Whoever claims as heir by descent must make himself heir to the person last actually seised and in possession of the inheritance. Jenkins v. Pritchard, 2 Wils. 45.

Real estate stood limited to A. B. for life, with remainder to C. D. in fee simple. C. D. died, living A. B., leaving two aunts, a cousin, the son and heir of another aunt, and two cousins, the daughters and co-heiresses of another aunt, her co-heirs at law. The property became thus divisible in eighths, two to one aunt, two to another, two to the son of another, and one-eighth to each daughter of the other aunt. One of the daughters, E. F., died in 1824, living A. B., the tenant for life, leaving I. K., her son and heir-at-law ; the other, G. H., died in 1832, living A. B., the tenant for life, leaving I. K., her nephew and heir. None of these persons had in any way dealt with the property. In 1839 A. B., the tenant for life, died :—Held, that as to the one-eighth which had belonged to his mother, it was not necessary to trace the descent afresh from C. D., to whom the remainder in fee was limited, but that he ought to be considered as standing in his mother's place in respect of that share. Paterson v. Mills, 19 L. J., Ch. 310 ; 15 Jur. 1.

Real estate descended on a lunatic, subject to a mortgage, afterwards exonerated by the lunatic's personalty, not in any way derived from, or connected with, the descended estate :—Held, that the order and course of succession was not thereby changed, for the next of kin were entitled, on the death of the lunatic, to have so much of the personalty as had been applied in discharge of the mortgage, considered as a lien on the real estate, and raised accordingly. Weld v. Tew, Beat. 266.

Devise (previously to 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106) to the testator's heir-at-law and others, as trustees, upon certain trusts, and after the termination thereof, upon other trusts, void for remoteness : —Held, that the reversionary equitable estate undisposed of resulted, as part of the old use, to the testator, and descended to the heir quâ heir, who was consequently not made a fresh stock for the tracing of a descent. Buchanan v. Harrison, 1 John & H. 662 ; 31 L. J., Ch. 74 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 965 ; 10 W. R. 118.

—— Paternal or Maternal Line.]—A. being seised in fee, ex parte paternâ, conveys to trustees in trust for herself, her heirs and assigns, to the intent that she should appoint, &c., and for no other use, intent, or purpose whatsoever. A. dying without appointment and without heirs ex parte paternâ :—Held, per Ld. K. and M. R., 1st, that the maternal heir was not entitled ; 2ndly, that there being a terre tenant, the Crown, claiming by escheat, had not a title, by subpœna, to compel a conveyance from the trustee, the trust being absolutely determined ; no opinion being given upon the right of the trustee ; per Ld. Mansfield, C. J., 1st, that the heir ex parte maternâ was not entitled ; 2ndly, that from the analogy between trusts and legal estates, the Crown was entitled by escheat ; but that if the conveyance had barred the Crown of its right, as between the maternal heir and the trustee, the former was entitled. Burgess v. Wheate, 1 Eden, 177; 1 W. Bl. 121.

Where person seised of estate by descent ex parte maternâ dies without issue, descendants of his maternal grandfather must all be extinct before any descendant of a remote maternal ancestor can inherit, however nearly related to the propositus ex parte paternâ. Hawkins v. Shewen, 1 Sim. & S. 257; 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 148.

The heir on the part of the great-grandfather has a prior claim to the heir on the part of the maternal grandfather. Davies v. Lowndes, 5 Bing. (N.C.) 161; 7 Scott, 22; 8 L. J., C. P. 73.

If the legal interest in lands descended in fee simple is ex parte maternâ, and the equitable interest in fee simple ex parte paternâ, or vice versâ, the equitable estate merges in the legal, and both follow the line through which the legal estate descended. Goodright d. Alston v. Wells, 2 Dougl. 771.

One seised in fee of a copyhold of inheritance by descent ex parte maternâ surrendered the same to the use of himself for life, remainder to such persons and for such estates as he should by deed or will, attested by three witnesses, appoint, remainder in default of appointment to himself in fee; after which he made a mortgage, and surrendered to the use of the mortgagee in fee, who, upon repayment of the principal and interest, surrendered again to the mortgagor:—Held, that the line of descent was thereby broken, and that the estate descended to the paternal heir. Doe d. Harman v. Morgan, 7 Term Rep. 103.

Devise of all the testator's real and personal estate and effects to B. V., his wife, in trust for the education of his daughter, M. V., till twenty-one, and in case of the death of his daughter before twenty-one, the whole of his said estate and effects to his wife; the testator died, leaving B. V., his wife, and M. V., his only child. B. V. died, leaving M. V., also her only child, and then M. V. died under age, and without issue:—Held, that the heir of M. V. ex parte maternâ was entitled to succeed. Goodtitle d. Castle v. White, 2 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 383; 13 R. R. 441, n. S. P., Goodtitle d. Vincent v. White, 15 East, 174; 13 R. R. 429.

Devise to trustees, their heirs, executors, administrators, and assigns, in trust, to let the freehold estates for any term they thought proper, at the best improved yearly rent, to pay one-third of the rents of the freehold estates to his wife for life, and one-third of the personalty to her absolutely, and then to lay out the other two-thirds of the personalty in the funds; and to pay the dividends of the rents of the two-thirds of the freehold estates, and, after the death of the wife, the other third of the rent of the freehold estate to his daughter for her own separate use, and after her death the freehold estates and the two-thirds of the personal estate to the daughter's children, to be equally divided amongst them, and to be paid them at their respective ages of twenty-one years; and if his daughter died without leaving issue, then his freehold estates to his wife for life, and after her death to his heir-at-law, as if he had died intestate:—Held, that the trustees took an estate in fee, and that upon the death of the widow, who was the surviving trustee, the legal estate descended to the daughter, and upon her death without issue vested in the heir ex parte maternâ. Doe d. Tomkyns v. Willan, 2 B. & Ald. 84; 20 R. R. 355.

Where a feme sole, after marriage, was admitted tenant of a manor of certain premises, to her and her heirs as of her own tenant right, according to the custom; and afterwards the lord executed a conveyance of the premises to the husband in fee, and enfranchised the same from all seigniory rights to which they were previously liable; it seems that this conveyance, after the death of the husband, had the effect of giving the wife an absolute estate in fee-simple of the premises, descendible only upon the heirs ex parte maternâ. Doe d. Newby v. Jackson, 2 D. & R. 514; 1 B. & C. 448.

—— Equitable Considerations—Right to Call for Conveyance of Legal Estate.]—Infant died seised of equitable estate descended ex parte maternâ, his incapacity to call for conveyance of legal estate (whereby course of descent might have been changed) is not sufficient reason for it to be considered as done actually, it being trustees' duty not to convey till called upon. Langley v. Sneyd, 1 Sim. & S. 45; 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 14.

—— Merger.—Where the equitable and legal estates, equal and co-extensive, unite in the same person, the former merges; therefore, where the former descends ex parte paternâ, the latter ex parte maternâ, upon their union the paternal heir has no equity. Selby v. Alston, 3 Ves. 339; 4 R. R. 10.

—— Cousins.]—First cousins twice removed come under denomination of first and second cousins, as second cousins, they being related to propositus in same, viz. sixth degree. Silcox v. Bell, 1 Sim. & S. 301; 1 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 137; 24 R. R. 173.

—— Half-Blood.]—Before 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106, there could be no heir of the half-blood. Anon., Lofft, 396.

Under a devise, previously to the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106, to trustees, one being the testator's heir-at-law, upon trust (subject to prior estates) for conversion, the trust for conversion being void for remoteness, the equitable reversionary interest thus left undisposed of results as part of the old use, and descends to the heir in his character of heir, and does not so merge in his legal interest, under the devise to him as a trustee, as to break the descent and constitute him a fresh stock, from which, on decease intestate, the descent is to be traced. Buchanan v. Harrison, 1 Johns. & H. 662; 31 L. J., Ch. 74; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 965; 10 W. R. 118.

Consequently, upon his decease intestate, before the expiration of the particular estate, reversionary interest descends to his brother of the half-blood, in preference to his sister of the whole blood, as heir to their common father. Ib.

A. devised all his lands to J. (his son by the first venter) when he should come to the age of twenty-one, but if he should die before twenty-one, and D. (testator's daughter by the second venter) should be then living, he gave the same to her when she should attain twenty-one. The testator died, and then J. died under age and without issue:—Held, that on the death of J. the inheritance vested in D., his sister of the half-blood, in preference to his uncle of the whole blood. Doe d. Andrew v. Hutton, 3 Bos. & P. 643.

—— Coparcener.]—Real estate was devised to A. for life, with remainder to B. in fee. B. died in 1821, in the lifetime of A., leaving C. and D.

her co-heiresses at law. C. died in 1824, in the lifetime of A., without having in any manner dealt with the property, leaving a son, E.:—Held, that it was not necessary to trace the descent, as to C.'s moiety, from B., but that E., for every purpose, ought to be taken as standing in C.'s place with reference to that moiety. Paterson v. Mills, 19 L. J., Ch. 310; 15 Jur. 1.

A. and B. being seised of land in coparcenary, B. conveyed his moiety to a purchaser, and A., the other parcener, made partition by lease and re-lease, and conveyed the whole to H. and his heirs, as to one portion, to the use of B. in fee, and as to the other portion to the use of A. in fee:—Held, that A.'s portion remained descendible to his heir ex parte maternâ. Doe d. Crosthwaite v. Dixon, 1 N. & P. 255; 5 A. & E. 834; 2 H. & W. 364; 6 L. J., K. B. 61.

—— Possessio Fratris.]—The rule of possessio fratris did not apply to estates tail; nor to inheritances in fee simple, without an actual possession of the brother of the whole blood. Doe d. Gregory v. Whichelo, 8 Term Rep. 211.

There may be a possessio fratris of a trust as well as of a legal estate, and, notwithstanding the heir was merely equitable tenant in fee of the reversion, he may, by some act of conveyance in his lifetime, have so dealt with his equitable interest as to constitute himself a fresh stock of descent, and to entitle his sister to claim as his heir, upon the principle that possessio fratris facit sororem esse hæredem. Buchanan v. Harrison, 1 Johns. & H. 662; 31 L. J., Ch. 74; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 965; 10 W. R. 118.

Being born in one house, and receiving rents of three others by his mother and guardian, was a sufficient seisin by a posthumous son, who died at five weeks old, to bar the descent to his sisters of the half-blood, and convey it to a collateral heir. Goodtitle d. Newman v. Newman, 2 W. Bl. 938; 3 Wils. 516.

A testator, being possessed of estates, which, by a deed of settlement on his marriage, had been settled on himself for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail male, remainder to himself in fee, and having issue one son and two daughters by the marriage, devised all his lands, manors, &c., to his son, subject to the payment of his debts and legacies, with a proviso, that, in case his son should die without issue male, he bequeathed a certain sum to all his daughters who should be living at the time of his death, to be equally divided amongst them; and then charged his estates with the payment of these sums, and devised them to two trustees, their heirs and assigns, without impeachment of waste, by sale or mortgage, to raise a sufficient sum to pay those legacies, and as to the remainder of his land, &c., as should not be sold by the trustees, he devised it to his brother for life, with divers remainders over. His son having died under age, unmarried, and without issue:—Held, that the daughters took no estate by descent in the hereditaments devised. Sanford v. Irby, 3 B. & Ald. 654.

Since the Inheritance Act—Title by Purchase.]—The statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106, s. 3, which provides that land devised to the heir of the testator shall be considered to have been acquired by such heir as a devisee and not by descent, applies for all purposes; and therefore a demurrer by the heir, who was also devisee of the lands, to a bill by a legatee seeking to marshal the assets of the testator with reference to such land as against the heir, was allowed. Strickland v. Strickland, 10 Sim. 374; 9 L. J., Ch. 60.

—— Stock of Descent.]—C. died seised in fee of lands in New South Wales, which C. inherited from B., her father. C. had two sons, one died in her lifetime, unmarried, and the other survived his mother, but died before acquiring possession of the lands, leaving a son, the defendant. In an action against him, on a covenant of his mother, and as her heir, he pleaded that he took by descent, not from his mother, but from B., his great-grandfather. The question was whether by virtue of the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106, adopted in the colony, the plea was established:—Held, that the lands descended to the defendant from C. and not from B., and that the plea was not established. Badham v. Shiel, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 509 of part 2.

—— Tracing Descent—Paternal or Maternal Line.]—By a marriage settlement real estate, of which the lady was seised as heir to her maternal grandfather, was conveyed to trustees, upon trust for the lady and her heirs until the marriage, and after the marriage, upon trust for the lady for life; with remainder, in default of issue of the marriage, in trust for the lady and her heirs, if she survived her husband; but if she predeceased him, then in trust for the person or persons who would at her death have become entitled to the property if she had died intestate, and without having been married. The lady died without issue in her husband's lifetime:—Held, that the ultimate trust, being for the benefit neither of the settlor nor of the heirs of the settlor, was unaffected by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106, s. 3, and that the persons intended to take thereunder were those who would have been entitled if the settlement had never been executed; and, consequently, that the heir ex parte maternâ took the property, by purchase under the settlement. Heywood v. Heywood, 34 Beav. 317; 34 L. J., Ch. 317; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 633 12 L. T. 168; 13 W. R. 514.

B. conveyed customary freeholds, which he had inherited from his mother, to N. absolutely, and N., after surrender and admittance, executed on the same day a deed of declaration of trusts for such person as B. should by deed or will appoint, and in default for B. and his heirs, this process being necessary according to the custom to give B. the power of devising. B. died intestate:—Held, that the descent had not been broken, and that the heir of the testator ex parte maternâ was entitled. Nanson v. Barnes, L. R. 7 Eq. 250; 20 L. T. 154; 17 W. R. 429.

A., having inherited lands ex parte maternâ, devised them to trustees in fee, upon trust for his widow for life, and on her decease to convey the same to such person as should answer the description of his heir-at-law, and died, leaving only collateral heirs:—Held, that the heir general, and not the heir ex parte maternâ, was entitled. Davis v. Kirk, 2 Kay & J. 391; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 857.

Sect. 4 of the Inheritance Act (3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106), is not merely declaratory of the old law; it introduces a new rule as to the tracing of the descent in the case of a limitation to the heirs general of a deceased person. By a marriage settlement executed in 1810, real estate of the wife was limited to the use of the husband for life, remainder to the use of the wife for life, and, after limitations in favour of the issue of the marriage, the ultimate limitation was "to the use of the right heirs of J. W., deceased (the mother of the wife), for ever." At the date of the settlement the wife was seised of part of the real estate as the heiress-at-law of her deceased mother, and of the other part as one of the co-heiresses of her deceased maternal great-uncle. The wife died in 1846; the husband died in 1871. The limitations in favour of the issue all failed on the death in 1880 of the surviving son of the marriage:—Held, that, if under the ultimate limitation the wife took the estate as a purchaser, Manderille's Case (Co. Litt. 26 b.) did not apply, and that the descent from her would be traced in the ordinary way, and not ex parte maternâ. But held, that, under the ultimate limitation, the wife took the estate as part of the old estate which she had before the marriage, and that the descent was not broken by the settlement. Moore v. Simkin, 55 L. J., Ch. 305; 31 Ch. D. 95; 53 L. T. 815; 34 W. R. 254.

A testator who died in 1853, devised as his own an estate which had devolved on his late wife in fee as heiress-at-law of her mother. The devise was to trustees in fee, on trust to pay the rents to the testator's only son and to his two daughters in equal shares, and to the survivors or survivor of them, with remainder on trust for the children of the son and the daughters respectively in fee, with an ultimate remainder unto and to the use of the testator's own right heirs. The son and both the daughters survived the testator, but they all died without issue. The son survived the daughters, and died intestate. He was the heir-at-law of his father, and also of his mother. The testator had also devised real estate of his own to the son, who elected to confirm the will:—Held, that the equitable estate, which the son took under the will, and by virtue of his election, merged in the legal estate which descended to him from his mother, and that the descent was regulated by the legal estate, and that, consequently, on his death intestate and without issue, the property descended to the heir of his maternal grandmother, who was the last purchaser of the legal estate, and not to his own heir. Douglas, In re, Wood v. Douglas, 54 L. J., Ch. 421; 28 Ch. D. 327; 52 L. T. 131; 33 W. R. 390.

—— Coparceners.]—G. T., seised in fee of certain hereditaments, died intestate, leaving two daughters, Ellen and Sarah. Both daughters died intestate, leaving a son. It was held that the statute 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106, was not intended to apply to cases which were plain before it was passed; and that the moiety of each daughter descended upon her son. Cooper v. France, 19 L. J., Ch. 313; 14 Jur. 214.

The decision in Cooper v. France (19 L. J., Ch. 313) applies to a case which is not one of direct lineal descent. Where, therefore, a person has died intestate, unmarried, and entitled to real property by descent through his mother, who was one of two coparceners, but never became actually seised of her moiety, the whole interest of the intestate in the real property will pass to his nephew as heir-at-law; and the title is not to be traced back to the last purchaser so as to cause the real property to be divided between the nephew and those claiming descent through the other coparcener. Matson, In re, James v. Dickinson, 66 L. J., Ch. 695; [1897] 2 Ch. 509; 77 L. T. 69.

—— Between Brothers.]—The descent of property between brothers is immediate, and not through their father. Kynnaird v. Leslie, 35 L. J., C. P. 226; L. R. 1 C. P. 389; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 468; 14 L. T. 756; 14 W. R. 761.

—— On Attainder.]—The descendants of one child of an attainted person may trace a heritable descent to the descendants of another child of such attainted person, even though the marriage, of which such children were the issue, took place abroad after the attainder. Ib.

—— Proof of Pedigree—Tracing Descent.]—At the trial of an action for the recovery of land, in 1876, it was proved by the plaintiff that J. F. W. died seised in fee, without issue, and intestate, in 1868; that all the descendants of his paternal grandfather, W., were dead, and that the plaintiff was the heir-at-law of the paternal grandmother. On the death of the intestate in 1868 advertisements were published in the London and provincial newspapers, for the heir-at-law of J. F. W., describing his father and grandfather and the property. Several persons came forward, and, besides the plaintiff, no one was able to establish any relationship except the defendants, who were co-heiresses of the mother of J. F. W., and to whom the tenants of the property had attorned. Deeds, wills, and documents were put in evidence, in which no mention was made of any person who would have been of nearer kin than the plaintiff, beyond those whose deaths were proved. The defendants proved that the paternal great-grandfather had, besides W., another son, N., born in 1717, and also a sister, a Mrs. M., both of whom were alive in 1755, and that the paternal great-grandmother's maiden name was S. B. But no further evidence as to N., Mrs. M., or the B. family was given:—Held, that there was evidence on which the jury might properly find for the plaintiff. Greares v. Greenwood, 46 L. J., Ex. 252; 2 Ex. D. 289; 36 L. T. 1; 25 W. R. 639—C. A.

—— Intermediate Rents—Posthumous Child.]—A., being seised of real estate, died, leaving his sisters presumptive co-heiresses, his wife being enceinte of a son, born subsequently. The rents from the ancestor's death remaining unreceived by the co-heiresses:—Held, that their seisin being gone on the birth of the posthumous child, they were not entitled to so much of the intermediate rents as they had not received before the birth of the heir. Goodale v. Gawthorne, 2 Sm. & G. 375; 23 L. J., Ch. 878; 2 W. R. 680.

A qualified heir is entitled to the rents and profits of realty of which the ancestor dies seised, in fee or in tail, which accrue due between the death of the ancestor and the birth of the ancestor's posthumous and only child, whether such rents be actually received or not. Richards v. Richards, Johns. 754; 29 L. J., Ch. 836; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1145.

—— Charity.]—Upon a devise to trustees in favour of a corporation to be thereafter formed for a good charitable use, valid under the Statutes of Mortmain, the heir has no right to the rents and profits accrued before the devise is carried into effect. Att.-Gen. v. Bowyer, 3 Ves. 714; 4 R. R. 132.

B. ESTATE TAIL.

1. Property within the Statute De Donis.

Chattels Real.]—Leasehold estates bequeathed in trust to pay the rents and profits to the persons for the time being entitled under the limitations of real estate, devised in strict settlement, with power to the trustees at any time, with the consent of the persons so entitled, or, if minors, at their own discretion, to sell and invest the produce in real estate to the same uses. The leasehold estates vest absolutely in the tenant in tail upon his birth. Ware v. Polhill, 11 Ves. 257; 8 R. R. 144.

By articles relating to leases, pur autre vie, and for years and to money, it was agreed that said leases for lives and for years should be conveyed to trustees in trust (after successive life estates to D. and J.), "after the decease of J., to the issue of J. and A., in such shares and proportions as the said J. should appoint, and for want of such appointment, to go to such children equally, share and share alike, and for default of such issue, to the heirs, executors, and administrators of said J., during said leases; the money or the lands agreed to be purchased therewith to go to the issue of said J. and A., in such shares and proportions, &c., and for want of such appointment to be equally divided amongst such children, share and share alike; and if no children of said marriage, or all should die before twenty-one," then a power to dispose of said money:—Held, that issue is to be construed children, and that the issue of J. and A. took the absolute interest in the chattel property, and a quasi fee in the freehold property. Campbell v. Sandys, 1 Sch. & Lef. 281; 9 R. R. 33. And see Murthwaite v. Jenkinson, 2 B. & C. 357; 3 B. & C. 191; 3 D. & R. 764; 26 R. R. 384.

Copyholds.]—See COPYHOLD.

Personalty.]—Limitation which would create an estate tail as to freehold property, would give an absolute interest if applied to personal estate. Sterne, Ex parte, 6 Ves. 159. S. P., Campbell v. Sandys, supra; Ward v. Bevil, 1 Y. & J. 512; 30 R. R. 840.

Heirlooms.]—Heirlooms are personalty, and words which would limit an estate tail in freehold lands will give an absolute interest in heirlooms. Warter v. Hutchinson, 2 Br. & B. 349; 5 Moore, 143; 23 R. R. 457.

Estate pur autre vie.]—Estate pur autre vie may be limited in tail. Sterne, Ex parte, supra. And see Campbell v. Sandys, supra.

Title of Dignity or Honour.]—When a dignity is limited to the heirs of the body, then, although no place be named in the creation of the title, the dignity is within the statute De Donis, and descendible as an estate tail, and the patent does not create a fee simple conditional. There is no difference in these respects between a baronetcy and other descendible dignities. Rivett-Carnac's Will, In re, 54 L. J., Ch. 1074; 30 Ch. D. 136; 53 L. T. 81; 33 W. R. 837.

2. Limitation of, in Deed.

A settlement to S. for life, remainder to the heirs of S. on the body of his wife A. to be begotten, the male to be preferred before the female, is an estate tail in the first instance. Den d. Creswick v. Hobson, 2 W. Bl. 695.

A settlement before marriage on a husband and wife for life (of freehold), remainder to the heirs of the husband and wife; and of copyhold in borough English, on the husband and wife for life, remainder to the heirs of their two bodies, in like manner, and to the same uses as the freehold; the younger son will succeed as heir in tail to the copyhold. Roe d. Aistrop v. Aistrop, 2 W. Bl. 1228.

A limitation in a deed, to the use of A. for life, with remainder to the use of the first son of the body of A. lawfully issuing, and for default of such issue to the second, third, and other sons of A., and of the several heirs male of the body and bodies of all and every such son and sons respectively issuing, gives an estate in tail male to the first son of A. Owen v. Smith, 2 H. Bl. 594; 3 R. R. 513. S. P., Galley v. Barrington, 2 Bing. 387; 10 Moore, 21; 27 R. R. 663.

A marriage settlement, purporting to be made in pursuance of articles recited in it, conveyed an estate to A. and his wife, and the heirs of their bodies:—Held, that they became tenants in tail special, and that a court of law could not construe the deed as rendering them tenants for life, with remainder to their issue in tail, even if that might have been the construction to be put upon the articles by a court of equity. Doe d. Daniel v. Woodroffe, 10 M. & W. 608; 12 L. J., Ex. 147. Affirmed, 15 M. & W. 769; 7 Jur. 959—Ex. Ch.; 2 H. L. Cas. 811; 13 Jur. 1013.

Under a limitation in a marriage settlement to the husband for life, then to the wife for life, then to the heirs of the body of the wife and their heirs, the wife takes an estate tail; and though it was recited in the deed that the husband's father conveyed, in consideration of the marriage, and "for settling and establishing the lands to the uses thereinafter expressed," and subsequent uses were added in the deed, the court would only take notice of the legal estate. Alpass v. Watkins, 8 Term Rep. 516.

Lands were settled by deed in tail male on such person as at the decease of T. H. should be the second son then living of T. H. and A. H.; and, for default of such issue to the third, fourth, and so on (other than and except the eldest), in like manner; for default of such issue, to the eldest or only son in tail male; and for default of such issue to T. H. in fee. T. H. died in 1766, leaving four sons, P., C., T., and J. P. died in 1770, an infant, without issue; C., in 1829, without issue; T., in 1783, without issue. Upon a suit instituted after the death of C.:—Held, that in the events which had happened, J. took an estate tail under the settlement. Hawkins v. Hawkins, 9 Bing. 765; 3 M. & Scott, 322; 2 L. J., C. P. 154.

Lands were limited to the use of the settlor for life, remainder to D., his heirs and assigns, but if D. should die without issue, then to T., his heirs and assigns; but if both D. and T. should die without issue, then to the issue male of the settlor:—Held, that D. and T. took estates tail. Morgan v. Morgan, 39 L. J., Ch. 493; L. R. 10 Eq. 99; 22 L. T. 595; 18 W. R. 744.

3. After Possibility of Issue Extinct.

Power to Commit Waste.]—By settlement before marriage, the husband's estate was conveyed to trustees, to the use of the husband for life sans waste, remainder to trustees to preserve contingent remainders, remainder to the use of the wife for life, for her jointure, and in bar of dower, remainder to the first and other sons of the marriage in tail male, remainder to the first and other daughters in tail male, remainder to the heirs of the body of the husband and wife, remainder to the right heirs of the husband; the wife survived the husband and had no issue; and after possibility of issue by the husband extinct:—Held, that she was tenant in tail after possibility, &c., that she was unimpeachable of waste, and was entitled to the property of the timber when cut by her. Williams v. Williams, 12 East, 209; 15 Ves. 472; 11 R. R. 357.

4. Descent.

Heir Male.]—Whoever will take as heir male by purchase must be both heir and male. Greynore v. Nooke, 1 Wils. 30.

Quære, whether a person may take as heir male of the body, without being heir generally. Wills v. Palmer, 5 Burr. 2615; 2 W. Bl. 687.

5. Barring Estate Tail.

i. Restriction on Power to Bar.

By Act of Parliament.]—When lands are limited to a person and the heirs of his body by a statute which forbids the alienation of any portion of the lands therein mentioned by the donee or the heirs of his body, the estate thus created is nevertheless a tenancy in tail deprived of one of its ordinary incidents—namely, that the estate tail can be barred and the heirs in tail and the remainderman cut off. Abergavenny (Earl) v. Brace, 41 L. J., Ex. 120; L. R. 7 Ex. 145; 26 L. T. 514; 20 W. R. 462.

An estate granted by Charles the Second to one of his illegitimate children for love and affection may be well barred by bargain and sale under 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 74, s. 15, notwithstanding 34 & 35 Hen. 8, c. 20. Grafton (Duke) v. London and Birmingham Ry., 5 Bing. (N.C.) 27; 6 Scott, 719; 1 Arn. 363; 8 L. J., C. P. 47.

By Charge.]—Trust by deed creating estates tail after any contract for alienation to raise a sum of money for persons next in the course of limitation, declared void, as tending to a perpetuity, and inconsistent with the rights of the tenants in tail. Mainwaring v. Baxter, 5 Ves. 458.

Devise to J. for life; remainder to his issue male, and to his and their heirs, share and share alike; and for want of such issue, to his issue female, and her and their heirs; remainder to J. K., his heirs and assigns, with a proviso that if J. K. or his issue, or any of them, shall alienate, mortgage, or incumber, or do any act to defeat the bequests, he or they shall pay, and he charges the premises with 2,000*l.* to such persons who should or ought to take next under the above limitations. J. had two daughters and no son, and he and his daughter suffered a recovery. Bill to be paid the 2,000*l.*:—Held, J. K. took an estate tail, and that the proviso was repugnant to the estate. King v. Burchell, Ambl. 379; 1 Eden, 424.

By Condition.]—Condition, that tenants in fee shall not alien, or that tenant in tail shall not suffer a recovery, is void. Bradley v. Peixoto, 3 Ves. 324; 4 R. R. 7.

By Limitation Over.]—A testator, by will made in 1840, after directing the payment of annuities, and giving a life estate in his property to the benefit of his wife, to be reduced to an annuity of 500*l.* in the event of her second marriage, gave one moiety of his residuary estate to his son H. for life, with remainder to his four daughters; and the other moiety, subject to a trust for accumulation after the death or second marriage of his wife and the decease of H. and his four daughters, he gave to A. in tail, with remainder to H. in tail. The trust for accumulation he declared should continue until after the decease or second marriage of the wife, and the decease of the five children above referred to, or during so much of such time as the law will allow for accumulation; and after the expiration of that period the trustees were to retain so much as should be required for repairs, and subject thereto, the estate and interest of the tenant in tail under the antecedent limitations were to come at once into possession. The will contained the following clause: "That if any person for whom any rents and profits, annuity, or other income is provided by this my will (being persons now living), should become bankrupt or become insolvent, or should, either alone, or being a female, either alone or in conjunction with any husband, present or future, make any assignment, appointment, or other disposition of, or charge upon, the rents and profits, or share of rents and profits, annuity, or income, to the receipt of which such person shall be immediately or otherwise entitled under this my will, before the same shall actually accrue due, or should attempt so to do, by any writing, then and in such case not only shall the rents and profits, or shares of rents and profits, annuity, or income to which such person so becoming bankrupt or insolvent, or doing or attempting to do such act as aforesaid, was entitled, be forfeited, and be no longer payable to him or her, but the right which each such person might have had upon any future event to any other rents and profits, or share of rents and profits, annuity, or income, shall be forfeited and never accrue." A., by deed, after reciting the will, in consideration of two annuities, assigned all the real and personal estate to which he was entitled in possession, remainder, or contingency under the will:—Held, that the deed created no forfeiture, as the clause could not apply to either the estate tail or to the corpus of the accumulation, as such a clause prohibiting alienation in respect of those interests would be null and void. The clause could not apply to the income, as the right to the income was consequential upon the right to the corpus. Chapman v. Brown, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 995; 9 L. T. 6—L.JJ.

By a Trust.]—A testator devised his estates to his son and his heirs male "in the fullest trust and confidence" that he would not do, nor permit to be done, "any action in law or otherwise" to defeat the thereinafter declared trusts and limitations of the estates, but that, on the contrary, he would do all in his power to effectuate them. He then declared how the estates were to go if the son died without issue of his body lawfully begotten, specifically devising one-fourth portion to D. The son having entered into possession of the devised estates, suffered a recovery:—Held, that the words of the will did not create a trust, and that the entail was barred by the recovery. Dawkins v. Penrhyn (Lord), 48 L. J., Ch. 304; 4 App. Cas. 51; 39 L. T. 583; 27 W. R. 173—H. L. (E.)

The right of a tenant in tail to enlarge his estate into a fee cannot be restricted by any expressions of a testator, the donor of the estate. Ib., per Lord Penzance. S. P., Foorde v. Foorde, 2 W. Bl. 698.

ii. Contract to Bar.

When Specifically Performed.]—Specific performance decreed against an heir in tail in possession of an agreement, during the life of a tenant for life, to levy a fine. Holles v. Carr, 3 Swanst. 638.

On a sale by a tenant in tail in remainder who had disentailed without the concurrence of the tenant for life, the tenant in tail covenanted that he would execute every disentailing and other assurance for further or more perfectly assuring the premises as the purchaser should reasonably require:—Held, on the construction of the whole deed, that under this covenant the tenant in tail was bound to execute a disentailing deed after the death of the tenant for life. Davis v. Tollemache (2 Jur. (N.S.) 1181) observed upon. Bankes v. Small, 56 L. J., Ch. 832; 36 Ch. D. 716; 57 L. T. 292; 35 W. R. 765—C. A.

The 47th section of the Fines and Recoveries Act does not interfere with the jurisdiction of the court to decree against a tenant in tail specific performance of a contract to execute a disentailing assurance entered into by him, but only prevents the court from treating the contract as being in equity a disposition taking effect under the act so as to bind the issue in tail and remainderman. Ib.

Conveyance to trustees in trust to sell and purchase other estates, to be settled. Those entitled under the limitations directed of the estates to be purchased, have equitable interests coextensive until a sale. Therefore, a specific performance was decreed of an agreement for partition against an objection to a title, under a fine by a person, who would have been tenant in tail of the estates to be purchased, the effect being an election to keep the estate, binding the trustees; though it may be questionable whether they could take upon themselves to convey in fee to a person entitled to an estate tail only. Pearson v. Lane, 17 Ves. 101.

—— In the Case of Mortgages.]—See col. 240, post.

—— Against Persons claiming under Tenant in Tail.]—Where a tenant in tail has entered into a contract for the sale of his estates for value, and in order to convey them to the purchaser has suffered a recovery which turns out to be technically defective at law, the court will not allow persons claiming under him to take advantage of the flaw. Howard v. Shrewsbury (Earl), 36 L. J., Ch. 283; L. R. 3 Eq. 218; 15 W. R. 301. On appeal, 36 L. J., Ch. 908; L. R. 2 Ch. 760; 17 L. T. 358; 15 W. R. 1213.

In 1825 a person took the benefit of the Insolvent Debtors Act, and executed an assignment of all his real and personal property in possession, reversion, or expectancy, to the provisional assignee, in trust for his creditors. The insolvent was at the time tenant in tail in remainder of real estate, and in 1826 he became tenant in tail in possession by the death of his father. In 1831 he became bankrupt, and the commissioners executed a disentailing deed of his real estate. In 1844 he died, leaving issue inheritable under the entail. The assignee under the insolvency claimed the estate against the assignees under the bankruptcy, on the ground that the estate conveyed to him by the deed of 1825 was enlarged into a fee simple by the disentailing deed executed under the bankruptcy:—Held, that the deed of 1825 only passed such interest as the insolvent had power to convey without fine or recovery, and did not operate as a contract to convey the fee. Sturgis v. Morse, 3 De G. F. & J. 223; 29 L. J., Ch. 766; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 766; 2 L. T. 647; 8 W. R. 737.

Receiver.]—Where a tenant in tail in remainder had agreed to pay a sum of money after the death and failure of issue of his brother, the tenant in tail in possession, and had secured the money by a mortgage of the estate, and covenanted to levy a fine and suffer a recovery, to give effect to the mortgage, but coming into possession of the estate refused to perform this covenant, the court appointed a receiver of the rents. Free v. Hinde, 2 Sim. 7.

iv. By Fine and Recovery.—See FINES AND RECOVERIES.

v. Under Fines and Recoveries Act.—See FINES AND RECOVERIES.

vi. Equitable Estate Tail.

Tenant in tail of a trust estate, with remainders over, cannot by will or settlement bar the remainders, or without a recovery, any more than tenant in tail of a legal estate. Kirkham v. Smith, Ambl. 518.

vii. Quasi Estates Tail.

By Deed.]—An interest in an estate pur autre vie, that would be an estate tail if applied to freehold lands of inheritance, may be disposed of by deed. Sterne, Ex parte, 6 Ves. 158.

Quasi estate tail in an estate for lives barred by release. Moody v. Waters, 16 Ves. 313.

A father, tenant for life of an estate pur autre vie, and his son tenant in quasi tail in remainder, under a marriage settlement of the year 1767, joined in executing a deed of the year 1792, the son being then under age, whereby the lands were conveyed to a trustee, upon trust for the father for life, remainder to the son, if he survived his father, absolutely, but if he died in the lifetime of his father, without issue, then to the father absolutely. This deed contained a power enabling the father and son to revoke the uses and declare new ones. The father, in three years after, executed a deed, by which he purported to convey all his interest to the son, but still remained in possession, and subsequently obtained a renewal to himself from the head landlord. The father and son subsequently joined in selling a part of the lands comprised in the original settlements creating the quasi entail, and exercised the power of revocation contained in the deed of 1792. The son, in 1815, executed a settlement upon the occasion of his marriage, his father being then alive, but not a party to the deed, by which settlement he conveyed the lands to trustees upon certain trusts for himself for life, for his intended wife and the issue of the marriage; and in default of issue for himself absolutely. The son survived the father, and died in 1832 :—Held, that by the operation of the deed of 1792, which was voidable only, and not void, the quasi entail had been effectually barred. Allen v. Allen, 2 Dr. & War. 307 ; 1 Con. & L. 427 ; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 472.

A tenant in quasi tail, in possession of an estate pur autre vie, may bar the quasi entail by any conveyance or disposition inter vivos, but not by will. Ib.

A tenant in quasi tail in remainder of an estate pur autre vie, can, with the concurrence of the tenant for life, by any act inter vivos, bar the quasi entail. Ib.

If tenant in quasi tail in remainder of an estate pur autre vie takes a renewal, with the concurrence of the tenant for life, or if tenant for life takes the renewal, and conveys to the tenant in quasi tail in remainder, the quasi entail will be barred. Ib.

Tenant in quasi tail in remainder cannot, without the concurrence of the tenant for life, affect the quasi entail. Ib.

A tenant in quasi tail in remainder cannot, without the concurrence of the tenant for life, bar the remainders, though semble he can bar his own issue ; but the tenant for life merely executing a deed by which the remainderman conveys, or vice versâ, will bar the subsequent remainders. Ib.

In this case a deed executed by a tenant for life, and his eldest son an infant tenant in quasi tail in remainder, was held to have been rendered a valid bar by subsequent dealings of the son with the property. Ib.

If a tenant quasi in tail in remainder executes a conveyance for valuable consideration, but without the concurrence of the tenant for life, and surviving tenant for life lives until a period at which he was clearly capable of barring the entail. Quære, whether such alienation shall operate to bar the remainders over. Ib.

By Surrender.]—Quasi tenant in tail of a freehold lease for lives may, by surrendering the old lease, and taking a new one to himself, bar the remainders over. Grey v. Mannock, 2 Eden, 339.

A., possessed of a church lease for three lives, devised it to trustees for certain purposes, till his son R. should attain twenty-one, and when his said son should attain that age, he directed his trustees to stand seised of it to the use of his said son, and the heirs of his body ; and by a codicil he directed that if his son R. should die without issue, his son P. should inherit the estate in the same manner as R. was to inherit it. R. being quasi tenant in tail, if he surrender this lease and take a new one to himself and his heirs for three new lives, there is no equity on behalf of P. to make R., or his devisees, trustees of the new lease for P. Blake v. Blake, 1 Cox, 266 ; 1 R. R. 35.

Quasi tenant in tail of a freehold lease for lives may, by surrendering the old lease, without the trustee's joining and taking a new lease to himself, bar the remainders over ; notwithstanding there were prior existing trusts at the time of such surrender. Blake v. Luxton, G. Coop. 178 ; 14 R. R. 235.

By Will.]—Tenants in quasi tail cannot bar the remainders over by will. Dillon v. Dillon, 1 Ball & B. 77. See 14 R. R. 241, n. S. P., Allen v. Allen, 2 Dr. & War. 307 ; 1 Con. & L. 427 ; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 472 ; Campbell v. Sandys, 1 Sch. & Lef. 281 ; 9 R. R. 33.

Consent of Tenant for Life.]—A leasehold for lives being settled on A. for life, with remainder to B., as quasi tenant in tail, with remainders over :—Held, that the quasi tenant in tail could not, by fine or otherwise, during the life of A., bar the subsequent remainders without the concurrence of A. Slade v. Pattison, 5 L. J., Ch. 51.

S. and J. being joint tenants of copyhold lands for life in remainder expectant upon determination of a previous life estate in M., with several inheritances in tail with cross remainders in tail, S. and her husband without the concurrence of M. surrendered their estate and interest to the intent that the lord should regrant the same to such person or persons as the husband should by will appoint ; S. died in the lifetime of her husband and of J. ; the husband afterwards died, having by his will appointed the surrendered share to his executors :—Held, that the quasi estate tail of S. was not barred, and that whether the life estate of M. was under the same instrument as that under which S. and J. derived their title, or whether M.'s tenancy was under her paramount title of freebench, still her concurrence was necessary in order effectually to bar the estate tail in remainder :—Held, also, that there was, under the circumstances, no severance of the joint tenancy. Edwards v. Champion, 3 De G. M. & G. 202 ; 23 L. J., Ch. 123 ; 1 W. R. 497.

Whether the surrender by a joint tenant to the use of his will would per se effect a severance of the joint tenancy, quære. Ib.

6. Leases.

Agreement for—Specific Performance.]—If a tenant in tail makes an agreement, not under seal, to let land for fourteen years, and then dies, the issue in tail cannot be compelled specifically to perform the agreement by granting a lease under 32 Hen. 8, c. 28. Osborn v. Marlborough (Duke), 12 Jur. (N.S.) 559 ; 14 L. T. 789 ; 14 W. R. 886.

Semble, mere acceptance of rent by the issue in tail will not amount to a confirmation of a voidable lease granted by his predecessor. Ib.

See also Settled Land.

By Committee of Lunatic Tenant in Tail.]—See Lunatic.

7. Mortgages.

Covenant for further Assurance—Trustee in Bankruptcy—Specific Performance.]—Tenant in tail makes a mortgage with covenant for further assurance, and becomes bankrupt ; his assignees are bound by the covenant. Pye v. Daubuz, 3 Bro. C. C. 595.

A., in November, 1841, mortgaged estates of which he was tenant in tail in remainder, and the indenture contained the usual covenant for further assurance. In September, 1842, A. was adjudicated a bankrupt, and subsequently received his certificate. In July, 1855, an order was made which declared that A. was entitled to two parts of the estates in S., and that they were comprised in the mortgage deed. A disentailing assurance was in February, 1856, tendered by the mortgagee to A. for execution, but he refused to execute it ; and thereupon a bill was filed against A. and his assignees in bankruptcy, praying that it might be decreed, pursuant to his covenant for further assurance, to execute and deliver to the plaintiff a proper disentailing assurance, of all the hereditaments in S., to which he was entitled for an estate in tail male. A demurrer to the bill by A. was allowed, and the bill was subsequently dismissed. Davis v. Tollemache, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1181.

Semble, unless there be words in a conveyance to shew it was intended that the covenant for further assurance should extend to enlarging the estate conveyed, and to barring an interest in other persons than the grantor, the court will not resort to its extraordinary jurisdiction for specific performance, to compel the grantor to execute an assurance of a kind that was not contemplated when the grant was made. Ib.

Purchase of Equity of Redemption.]—A mortgagee in fee who had been in possession for more than twenty years died in 1805, leaving a will by which he devised the property to his eldest son in tail, with divers remainders over, and appointed him executor and residuary legatee. In 1812 the persons claiming under the will of the mortgagor filed a bill against the son to redeem, and the suit was compromised in 1814 on the terms of his paying a sum for the equity of redemption, which was accordingly conveyed to him. He afterwards died without issue, and without having done any act to bar the entail created by his father's will:—Held, that his heir-at-law was entitled to the equitable fee, and that the remaindermen under his father's will had no title in equity. Pendleton v. Booth, 1 De G. F. & J. 81; 29 L. J., Ch. 265; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 182; 8 W. R. 101.

8. Other Charges and Incumbrances.

Act of Parliament—Power to Charge Estates.]—Tenant in tail, with remainder over, is enabled by act of parliament to pay debts, and charge the estate with a sum of money; but the saving clause does not except the right of the remainderman; yet he is barred. Secus, if he had been tenant for life only. Westby v. Kierman, Ambl. 697.

Power to Charge Portions.]—Power to charge portions not inconsistent with an estate tail. Jervoise v. Northumberland (Duke), 1 Jac. & Walk. 575; 21 R. R. 229.

Power to Jointure—Agreement for a Settlement.]—Father being tenant for life and son tenant in tail in remainder of an estate, a settlement was made, wherein was a power for the son, when in possession, to make a jointure. Father and son enter into a general covenant (without reciting or referring to the power) that the son within twelve months shall make a jointure on the then intended wife: the father dies within twelve months; the son takes possession, and dies without making any settlement: the estate is bound in the hands of the remainderman. Jackson v. Jackson, 4 Bro. C. C. 462.

Charge of a Sum in Gross.]—By a marriage settlement, an estate was limited to the husband for life, remainder to trustees for 500 years, for raising younger children's portions, remainder to the sons of the marriage in tail. By an agreement indorsed on the settlement before its execution, and signed by the husband and the father of the lady, it was agreed that if the lady should die without leaving issue of the marriage, the husband, after her death, should pay her father 600*l.*, and that, in default of payment, it should be raised by demise, &c., of the term. There was issue of the marriage, a son and a daughter, the latter died an infant in her mother's lifetime:—Held, that notwithstanding an estate tail had vested in the son before the 600*l.* was raisable, the recovery did not defeat that charge. Eales v. Conn, 4 Sim. 65.

Devise of separate estates to three younger sons for their lives, and after their death to the eldest son, W., with power to leave the estates to such of his sons as he thinks proper, "but in case he leaves no sons, or in case of failure of issue male from them, then to the heirs male of my other sons in succession." "And in case the whole of my estate come into possession of W. or his issue male by the death of all my younger sons, I then give to each of my younger sons' children 1,000*l.*, to be paid out of the estates which I give to my younger children for their lives":—Held, that W. took the estates in tail male in remainder, which vested in him on the deaths of the younger sons respectively, and that such estates tail were on vesting respectively charged with legacies to the children of such younger sons, but that such legacies were not payable until the whole of the estates had so vested, and that the legacies were not remainders or charges posterior to the estate tail, and so capable of being barred by a disentailing assurance. Cholmeley v. Strickland, 39 L. J., Ch. 814—H. L. (E.)

Judgment.]—In a mortgage suit by a judgment creditor of a tenant in tail in possession, the latter was ordered to execute a disentailing deed, in order to give full effect to the plaintiff's charge. Lewis v. Duncombe, 20 Beav. 398.

Costs of Suit.]—Whether costs incurred in a suit, in which real estate is recovered for plaintiff, who was tenant in tail of the estate so recovered on his death without issue, and without barring the limitations over, are a lien as against other tenant in tail, taking in a new line of the limitations, quære. The principle in Gifford v. Hart (1 Sch. & Lef. 386) is not to be carried further in straining the effect of notice against a purchaser under a decree. Lansdowne v. Beauman, 1 Moll. 89.

Other Matters.]—No contribution to an incumbrance, in respect of an estate sold by a prior tenant in tail, in favour of a remainderman, who might have been barred; especially if the sale was under a decree. Lloyd v. Johnes, 9 Ves. 37; 7 R. R. 147.

9. Keeping down Interest.

Tenant in tail not obliged to keep down interest on a charge affecting the estate; if he does, his personal representative will not be allowed it out of the estate. Redington v. Redington, 1 Ball & B. 143; 12 R. R. 5.

An infant, tenant in tail, is bound to keep down the interest of debts charged upon the entailed estates. A tenant for life was also held to have been liable to keep down the interest of the debts although, having the ultimate remainder in fee, he had consented to an act of parliament by which the estates were vested in trustees for the payment of the debts. Burgess v. Mawbey, Turn. & R. 167; 24 R. R. 9.

On bill by infant tenant in tail, receiver was appointed, with order to keep down interest of incumbrances out of rents. He kept down accordingly interest of all but one mortgage, the interest of which (belonging to infants) was never applied for, except a small portion for maintenance; residue of rents paid into court to credit of cause. Tenant in tail coming of age suffers a recovery, and resettles estate, and afterwards dies. Master by report having certified that deceased was not bound, while tenant in tail, to keep down interest of incumbrances, and consequently that rents paid into court, during time, belonged to his personal representatives, party claiming to be entitled to estate under settlement petitioned for leave to except to report, on following grounds:—1st, That, in case of infant tenant in tail, interest of incumbrances ought to be kept down out of rents; 2ndly, That direction to receiver to keep down interest, amounted to an appropriation of so much of rents to that purpose; and 3rdly, That deceased, by not claiming fund when of age, showed an intention that it should be appropriated. But it was held:—1st, That general question could only arise in favour of remainderman or reversioner, and all such rights were in this case barred by recovery; 2ndly, That order was not meant to vary rights of real and personal representatives, but to prevent incumbrancers from being prejudiced by court taking estate into its custody, and also to protect estate from hostile proceedings on part of creditors, and did not amount to appropriation; and, lastly, That there was nothing in circumstances to alter the character of property, which consisting of rents paid into court, and neither applied in payment of interest nor appropriated for such payment, was personal estate and to be dealt with as such. Bertie v. Abingdon (Lord), 3 Mer. 560; 17 R. R. 125.

10. Right to Deeds.—See Deed and Bond.

11. Decrees Against Tenant in Tail.

When Binding on the Heir in Tail.]—A decree directing the owner of a legal estate to do such acts as are requisite to bar the estate tail, but which are incomplete at his death is not binding on the succeeding issue in tail. Frank v. Mainwaring, 2 Beav. 115. Fox v. Crane, 2 Vern. 306. Powell v. Powell, Prec. Ch. 278.

The decree of a court of equity against an equitable tenant in tail for the specific execution of a contract relative to the lands entailed, and which was founded upon a personal equity against the tenant in tail, is not binding on the issue in tail, the tenant in tail having died without performing the decree. Stoney v. Saunders, Hay & J. 519.

When Binding on Remaindermen.]—If first tenant in tail be made party, remaindermen need not be joined, but will be bound by decree. Reynoldson v. Perkins, Dick. 427; Ambl. 564.

Tenant in tail claiming upon death of former tenant in tail without issue, not through or under him, but by a new limitation in remainder is entitled to continue suit of former tenant in tail, and to benefit of proceedings by supplemental bill. Lloyd v. Johnes, 9 Ves. 37; 7 R. R. 147.

Parties in remainder held not bound by the proceedings in a suit to which the prior tenant in tail was a party, he having no interest to protect, and not having protected the interests of such remaindermen. Alsop v. Bell, 24 Beav. 451.

The rule which allows the first tenant in tail to represent the fee in suits affecting the estate does not apply to heirs of entail under a Scotch deed of tailzie; and therefore a decree made in a suit framed upon that principle, for the administration of a fund which in a certain event was liable to be invested in the purchase of land in Scotland to the uses of a Scotch deed of tailzie, was opened at the instance of a subsequent heir of entail under that deed. Fordyce v. Bridges, 2 Ph. 497; 1 Coop. C. C. 326; 17 L. J., Ch. 185. Affirming 10 Beav. 90; 16 L. J., Ch. 81; 10 Jur. 1020.

A testator in 1815 devised an estate to A. for life, remainder to his sons successively in tail, remainder to B. in tail, and in 1818 made another will, devising the estate to A. for life, remainder to his sons successively in tail, remainder to C. in tail:—Held, that a decree establishing the will of 1818, made in a suit to which B. was not a party, but A. and his first son were parties, as representing the inheritance, was not binding between B. and C. Arnold v. Bainbrigge, 2 De G. F. & J. 92.

A person wrongly supposed to be the trustee under a will, sold in 1806 under a power for sale and reinvestment on certain trusts, with the usual receipt clause. He conveyed and signed the receipt, but allowed the purchase-money to be received by the tenant for life, who appropriated it. The interests in remainder accrued in 1845, and in 1851 ejectment was brought against the purchaser, who set up outstanding terms:—Held, that the remaindermen ought to take their remedy against the supposed trustee, whose estate appeared to be solvent, and were not entitled to the assistance of the court to remove the outstanding terms. Hicks v. Sallitt (3 De G. M. & G. 782) distinguished. The remaindermen having dealt with their interests in the proceeds of the sale, and a decree having been made in a former suit giving relief against the estate of the tenant for life for the sums received by him, a perpetual injunction was granted against proceedings at law to recover the land, though the estate of the tenant for life was insufficient to make good the purchase-money the said decree containing a clause "without prejudice to the right of resorting to the land":—Held, that this did not alter the effect of the decree so far as strangers to the suit were concerned. Hope v. Liddell, 25 L. J., Ch. 90; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 105; 4 W. R. 145.

The remainderman in tail is not bound by a decree against the tenant for life, for specific performance of an agreement for a lease, which was in violation of his leasing power, and is not, therefore, a necessary party to such suit; he may afterwards proceed at law to evict such lease. Corry v. Corry, Wall. Lyn. 278. See Lowry v. Dufferin, 1 Ir. Eq. R. 281.

The original defendant, in a bill to perpetuate testimony, having been tenant in tail when the examination was had, his eldest son, though claiming as remainderman, under a settlement subsequently executed, is bound by the proceedings. M'Namara v. M'Namara, Wall. Lyn. 258.

In a suit to raise a charge affecting the inheritance, the tenant in tail consented to an interlocutory order, referring it to the master to take the accounts prayed, and died after the report was made, but before certain objections taken to it by the tenant in tail were disposed of:—Held, that the proceedings had under the consent order were binding on the issue in tail; but that he was entitled to be placed in the position of the tenant in tail when he died; and liberty was given to him to argue the objections. Creagh v. Creagh, 3 Jo. & Lat. 485.

Four tenants in common being entitled to the first estate tail in X., under a deed, were before the court in a suit instituted to establish a will devising Y., the validity of which depended on the deed; but in a cross-cause, impeaching the deed, only two of them were made parties. Both causes having been heard together, a decree was made on a compromise setting aside the deed as to X., and directing a reconveyance by all proper parties. A person who would have been entitled to a prior estate tail in X. under the deed was born. A conveyance was afterwards executed in pursuance of the decree, in which the four tenants in common joined:—Held, that the inheritance having been imperfectly represented in the cross-cause, a good title could not be made, derived through the decree. Pasley v. Clanmorris (Lord), 7 Ir. Eq. R. 442.

Other Matters.]—Depositions taken in a cause where a tenant in tail was defendant, are binding on another tenant in tail, who came in esse before a decree, and took as tenant in tail prior to the former tenant in tail, who had been made a defendant. Westmeath (Lord) v. Westmeath (Lady), 3 Madd. 436.

12. Other Matters.

Base Fee—Entry of Issue in Tail.]—A conveyance by lease and release by a tenant in tail, conveyed a base fee, voidable by the entry of the issue in tail. Doe d. Neville v. Rivers, 7 Term Rep. 276.

—— Remitter to Original Title.]—A tenant in special tail, deeming herself tenant for life, by deed-poll granted and surrendered certain manors and estates to her only son, to hold to him and his assigns. She died, leaving the son, a daughter and W., son of a deceased daughter, surviving. The son, in 1735, suffered a recovery, in the life-time of the mother, of the manors and estates in question, and of other lands, and devised all his manors and estates to W. W., the son of W., for life, with remainders over. The testator was seised of no other manors but those conveyed by the deed-poll. At his death, his sister and W. were co-heirs under the original entail. W. W. entered upon all the premises, and treated himself as tenant for life until 1814, when he discovered that he was tenant in tail of one moiety, and suffered a recovery. In 1818, person upon whom the other moiety had descended joined W. W. in suffering a recovery, and the entire estate was mortgaged by W. W. to the plaintiffs at law. Upon the death of W. W., the tenant in tail under the will entered into possession:—Held, that the deed-poll operated as a covenant to stand seised, and created a base fee in the son; that the recovery of 1735 was inoperative to bar the issue in tail under the original settlement, but that it estopped the son from claiming as issue in tail; that the entry of W. W., although he entered as tenant for life under the will, was to remit him to his better title as tenant in tail; that the issue in tail were not barred by lapse of time; and that the entry of W. W. was the entry of his coparcener, but that whether he had acquired a title against his coparcener by ouster or not, the plaintiffs were entitled to recover, as the coparcener had joined in the recovery of 1818. Woodroffe v. Daniell, 7 Jur. 959.

—— Enlarging Defective Estate.]—A. and B. took estates in tail; A. afterwards conveyed his moiety to B. in fee by lease and release, with a covenant to levy a fine; that created a base fee in B., which estate was afterwards confirmed by the fine, though that was not levied till after the death of the releasee. Doe d. Gregory v. Whichelo, 8 Term Rep. 211.

In 1825 a person took the benefit of the Insolvent Debtors Act, and executed an assignment of all his real and personal property in possession, reversion or expectancy, to the provisional assignee, in trust for his creditors. The insolvent was at the time tenant in tail in remainder of real estate, and in 1826 he became tenant in tail in possession by the death of his father. In 1831 he became bankrupt, and the commissioners executed a disentailing deed of his real estate. In 1844 he died, leaving issue inheritable under the entail. The assignee under the insolvency claimed the estate against the assignees under the bankruptcy, on the ground that the estate conveyed to him by the deed of 1825 was enlarged into a fee-simple by the disentailing deed executed under the bankruptcy:—Held, that the deed of 1825 only passed such interest as the insolvent had power to convey without fine or recovery, and did not operate as a contract to convey the fee. Sturgis v. Morse, 2 De G. F. & J. 223; 29 L. J., Ch. 766; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 766; 2 L. T. 647; 8 W. R. 737.

The rule that disentailing assurances will enlarge and confirm defective estates and titles, previously granted, rests on technical grounds, and does not apply to estates created by statutory powers, in the absence of some paramount equity overriding the power to bar the estate tail. Ib.

Barring Estate Tail—Acceleration of Interest.]—A testator bequeathed a sum of stock to trustees, upon trust, during sixty years from his death, if the law should allow, or, if not, then during the lives of his two sons and of the survivor, and twenty-one years after his death to lay out the dividends in repairing and insuring the houses, &c., on his farms called H. and S., and upon trust to pay the surplus, if any, of the said dividends equally among the persons for the time being in possession of the estates under his will, during the continuance of the said trust; and immediately after the expiration thereof, to transfer one moiety of the said stock to the person then in possession of the H. farm, such person being one of his sons, or a descendant of a son; but if not, then to the descendants of the testator's brothers and sisters, and to pay the other moiety in like manner to the person in possession of the S. farm. And the testator devised the H. farm to the same trustees in fee, upon trust for his son John, for ninety-nine years, if he should so long live, remainder to the use of his first and other sons in tail, with divers remainders over. And the testator devised the S. farm in like manner for the benefit of his son James and his issue. John and James, and their eldest sons, barred the entail in remainder in the said farms, and resettled the same, and the stock having been transferred into court under the Trustee Relief Act, petitioned for the payment out of the fund to them:—Held, that the fund being intended for the benefit of the sons and their issue, the period for the enjoyment of the capital had been accelerated by barring the entail. Colson's Trusts, In re, 1 Kay, 133.

Insurance Moneys.]—By an order of court the receiver of certain real estates was directed to pay certain fire insurances on them. By a subsequent decree it was declared that H. was tenant in tail in possession of the real estates, and the receiver was directed to pay the balances to the account of H. A fire having taken place, it was held that A. was entitled to the insurance money. Seymour v. Vernon, 21 L. J., Ch. 433; 16 Jur. 189.

A testator was possessed of leaseholds of tithes held for three lives, and renewable on the dropping of any of the lives. He was in the habit of effecting insurances on the lives, and out of the moneys payable at a death, he renewed the lease, and effected a fresh policy on the new life inserted. By his will he gave all his real and residuary personal estate to trustees to accumulate the same for twenty-one years, and authorised them thereout to keep up the policies, to renew the leases, and to effect fresh policies on the new lives "on the plan he himself had adopted," and subject thereto, he gave the estate and its accumulations to B. for life, with remainder to her sons and daughters successively in tail. B. married, and had two daughters only, the elder of whom died an infant in her mother's lifetime. One of the cestuis que vie died, and there was a large surplus of the sum assured after renewing the lease and effecting a new policy:—Held, that, although the will imported a power only to the trustees to renew the lease, &c., it was one which they were bound to exercise, and was consequently equivalent to a trust, and that therefore a competent part of the fund must be retained for those objects; but that, subject thereto, the policies, being part of the personal estate of the testator, vested absolutely in the first tenant in tail, subject to the life estate of the tenant for life under the will, and were payable to her legal personal representative. Meller v. Stanley, 10 L. T. 512.

Conveyance by Tenant in Tail—Confirmation.]—A., tenant for life, with remainder to B. in tail, commits a forfeiture; B., in consideration of an annuity for the life of A., releases; the release is not good against the heir of the body of B., and B. is therefore bound to make a good conveyance for the life of A., although the release contained no covenant for further assurance. Lewis v. Rogers, 2 Anstr. 579.

Merger.]—See MERGER.

C. ESTATE FOR LIFE.

1. LIMITATION OF, IN DEED.

Legal Estate.]—By a gift from father to son by deed-poll of lands, to hold to him and his assigns for ever, charged with 100*l.* to his younger brother, at the end of his apprenticeship, and warranty against all men, the son takes only the estate for life. Wright d. Allingham v. Dowley, 2 W. Bl. 1185.

R., being seised in fee, surrendered copyhold lands to A., whom he intended to marry, and the heirs of their two bodies; and, for default of such issue, to the use of the right heirs of R.:—Held, that A. took an estate for life, with a contingent remainder to the heirs of the body of her and her husband. Throgmorton d. Robinson v. Wharrey, 3 Wils. 125, 144; 2 W. Bl. 728.

Semble, that an estate for life, executed by the Statute of Uses, cannot unite with a legal remainder by the rules of common law. Playford v. Hoare, 3 Y. & J. 175; 32 R. R. 793.

By letters-patent of 38 Eliz., the trustees of an almshouse were empowered to appoint and remove twenty-four poor men as often as to them should seem fit:—Held, that the appointees under this power did not take an estate for life, their removal being at the discretion of the trustees. Davis v. Waddington, 1 Lutw. Reg. Cas. 159; 7 Man. & G. 50; 8 Scott (N.R.) 814; 14 L. J., C. P. 45.

On the 10th November, 1864, a tenant for life demised and leased to J., his executors, administrators and assigns, a public-house, to have and to hold the same to J., his executors, administrators and assigns, from the 13th November for the term of the aforesaid J. for the term of his natural life. J. afterwards leased to the defendant, which lease still was existing. On the 31st October, 1874, the tenant for life made another lease of the premises to the plaintiff:—Held, that the defendant had a good title to the premises, and that the deed of the 10th November, 1864, was not void on the ground that it purported to create a future estate of freehold, as there was in the premises an express grant of a life estate in præsenti, which was not controlled or overruled by the habendum. Boddington v. Robinson, 44 L. J., Ex. 223; L. R. 10 Ex. 270; 33 L. T. 364; 23 W. R. 925.

Equitable Estate.]—By a settlement made on the marriage of a widow, having children, real estate was conveyed by her to a trustee and his heirs upon trust for her separate use for life, with remainder in trust for her children as tenants in common:—Held, that they took life estates only. Holliday v. Overton, 15 Beav. 480; 21 L. J., Ch. 769; 16 Jur. 346. Affirmed, on appeal, 16 Jur. 751.

The rule that the estate of the cestuis que trustent is commensurate with that given to the trustee, is inapplicable to limitations in a deed; therefore where an estate was limited to trustees in fee, but the trust in favour of the cestius que trustent wanted the ordinary words of inheritance:—Held, that they took life estates only. Ib.

Land was conveyed to a trustee, his heirs and assigns, to certain uses; and after the determination of those uses, to the use of the trustee, his heirs and assigns, upon trust to receive the rents and profits and pay them to a married woman for her separate use, and after the determination of that estate to stand seised of the land, to such uses and upon such trusts as she should by will appoint, and in default of appointment to the use of her heirs and assigns:—Held, that (though the construction might be otherwise on a will) the trustee took the legal estate in fee, and that she took an equitable estate for life, with an equitable remainder to her heirs and assigns, which two estates united according to the rule in Shelley's Case (1 Rep. 93), and gave her the equitable estate in fee. Cooper v. Kynock, 41 L. J., Ch. 296; L. R. 7 Ch. 398; 26 L. T. 566; 20 W. R. 503.

2. IN RENEWABLE LEASEHOLDS.

Contribution and Apportionment.]—Contribution of tenant for life to fine on renewal, is in proportion to his enjoyment; not as formerly, one-third, nor as on mortgage, confined to keeping down interest. Allan v. Backhouse, 2 Ves.

& B. 65; 13 R. R. 23. Affirmed, 1 Jac. 631; 23 R. R. 167. S. P., Nightingale v. Lawson, 1 Bro. C. C. 440. White v. White, 4 Ves. 24; 9 Ves. 554; 4 R. R. 161. Randall v. Russell, 3 Mer. 190; 17 R. R. 56. Reeves v. Creswick, 3 Y. & C. Ex. 715. Hudlestone v. Whelpdale, 9 Hare, 775. Ainslie v. Harcourt, 28 Beav. 313; 30 L. J., Ch. 686. And see Jones v. Jones, 5 Hare, 440; 10 Jur. 516; col. 251, post.

Lands holden under a lease for four lives, and renewable upon payment of a fine, are devised to trustees in trust for the testator's wife for life, she keeping good the renewals and filling up the lives, and, subject to her life interest, in trust to let and set the same, and after paying the chief and other rents and land-tax, and keeping full the lives, to pay the residue thereof to W.; and after his decease, upon certain trusts, for the benefit of the testator's grandchildren. Upon the death of the testator, his widow enters; she afterwards dies insolvent, having neglected to substitute a life for that of C., one of the nominees for life, who died in her lifetime, W. then enters, and likewise omits to substitute a life for that of C.; and seven years after the commencement of his possession, Q., another nominee, dies:—Held, that two lives must be substituted for those of C. and Q., and that the cost of the renewal being, in the first instance, raised by a mortgage of the estate, W. must repay such part of the expenses as is incurred in renewing the second life, but that he is in no default for not having renewed the first life, and is exempt from such portion of the expenses as ought, on the death of C., to have been paid by the widow, together with the interest thereon, at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum, from the death of C. to the death of Q. Wadley v. Wadley, 2 Coll. 11.

Real estate consisting of freehold, copyhold and renewable leasehold, was devised upon trust for sale, the proceeds to go to A. for life, with remainder for her children. The children decreed to contribute to the renewal of the leaseholds previously to sales. Keir v. Robins, 2 Jur. 773. Compare Garmstone v. Gaunt, 1 Coll. 577; 14 L. J., Ch. 162; 9 Jur. 78.

Leasehold estate renewable, being bequeathed with limitations in nature of strict settlement, the custom being to renew annually, and to underlet, the decree declared that the fines upon the renewal ought to be paid out of the rents and profits; that the person entitled for life undertaking to pay those fines out of the rents and profits, was entitled to the fines of renewal of underlease, and a renewal to such under-tenants as should be desirous of it was directed. Milles v. Milles, 6 Ves. 761.

A leasehold for three lives was settled in the usual way, but there was no trust to renew. After two of the lives had dropped, the trustees renewed the lease by adding two new lives, and the tenant for life voluntarily advanced a portion of the fine:—Held, that he was not entitled to repayment out of the other trust funds, until the extent of his enjoyment could be ascertained. Harris v. Harris, 32 Beav. 333; 11 W. R. 451.

But the tenant for life having died in the life of the remaining cestui que vie:—Held, that his estate was then entitled to be repaid out of the trust funds. Ib.

—— Where the Tenant for Life is one of the Lives.]—Tenant for life of an estate for lives, being himself one of them, it is not competent to the remainderman to compel him to contribute to the expense of a renewal, if it is a legal estate. Sed quære, if a trust. White v. White, 4 Ves. 33; 4 R. R. 161.

—— Where a Fund is set apart for Renewal.]—Where a testator provides a fund for the payment of fines on admission to copyholds, and on renewals of leases, the manner of raising the fines, and the question of contribution between the tenant for life and remainderman must depend upon the intention of the testator, to be collected from the whole will. Playters v. Abbott, 2 Myl. & K. 97.

Bill by devisee in remainder to him and his heirs male of a lease for lives against tenant for life, also entitled in reversion to him and his heirs, to compel him to procure a renewal, one life having dropped; the construction of the will being, that the lease should be kept full, and that 500*l.* and no more should be charged thereon for that purpose upon the dropping of each life, decreed that if the plaintiff chose to pay the excess, the lease should be renewed, in trust to secure the 500*l.* and, subject thereto, for the defendant for life; after his decease to raise the further sum advanced by the plaintiff for renewal and the expense of the suit, with compound interest at 4 per cent. during the life of defendant; and subject thereto, for plaintiff in tail male; remainder to defendant and his heirs. Affirmed, on appeal, by Lord Eldon, L.C., who added an express direction that the tenant for life ought to have kept down the interest. White v. White, 4 Ves. 24; 9 Ves. 554; 4 R. R. 161.

A. having given his real, leasehold, and personal property, which leasehold was bishops' leases, renewable as a general fund charged with annuities, to trustees to pay rents and profits to B. for life, with remainder to the plaintiff, the fines for renewing the leases which he directed should be renewed, are to be paid out of the whole fund, not apportioned between the tenant for life and the remainderman. Stone v. Theed, 2 Bro. C. C. 243.

A. B. devised and bequeathed certain leasehold interests held by him under the see of Waterford and Lismore, and other property, to trustees upon trust for the sole use and behoof of his daughter, for and during her natural life, and from and after her decease to the use and behoof of the first son which might thereafter be lawfully begotten on the body of his daughter and her heirs for ever; these leasehold interests were renewed by the trustees until the testator's daughter reached her full age, and from that period, continued from time to time to be renewed by the tenant for life, and large fines were accordingly paid for that purpose. A bill having been filed by the husband of the tenant for life, after her decease, against the remainderman for contribution towards the fines so paid:—Held, that as upon the true construction of the will, the tenant for life was bound to keep these interests renewed, and was only entitled to the surplus rents and profits which remained after paying the head rent and renewal fines, such bill could not be sustained. Trench v. St. George, 1 Dr. & Wal. 417.

Where the first trust of leasehold property held for lives and years is to pay the fines on renewals out of the rents and profits, and the next trust is for the benefit of those who in strict settlement take freehold and copyhold property under the same will, the expenses of renewal are incidental to the leasehold property, and fall upon those who from time to time are entitled to the possession of it under the will. Shaftesbury v. Marlborough, 3 Myl. & K. 111; 3 L. J., Ch. 30.

A testator being seised in fee of a farm in the parish of A., and being also possessed of a lease for lives of the rectorial tithes of that parish, devised the farms to his nephew in tail male, and the lease to his brother J., his executors, administrators and assigns, upon conditions that his said brother J., his executors, administrators, and assigns, owners or occupiers of the said parsonage, tithes and premises, should at all times after his decease, free and discharge his said farm from all manner of tithes, which should be payable out of the same to the said owner or occupier of the parsonage and tithes aforesaid. J. survived the testator, and devised his interest in the lease to his four sons, who took several renewals, and in 1782 assigned the existing lease, for a valuable consideration, to A. B., with notice of the trusts of the will:—Held, that a party to whom the tithes were bequeathed by the will of A. B., and who took a renewal of the lease in 1817, held a renewed lease upon the trusts of the will, consequently that he had no title to the tithes of the farm, and that the owner of the farm was not bound to contribute to the renewal fines. Webb v. Lugar, 2 Y. & Coll. 247; 6 L. J., Ex. Eq. 49.

On a devise of leaseholds to parties successively, the testator directing the leases to be from time to time renewed: the fines and expenses decreed to be borne by them respectively, according to their actual enjoyment, and not speculatively of probable interest; and the rule is the same whether the leases be for lives or for years. Where specific directions are given for raising such fines, the general rule is superseded, but the mode is left to the discretion of the trustees, which if they do not exercise, the court will act upon the general rule. And quære, whether there is any difference in the rule as to apportionment in the cases where the interests are created by will or deed of settlement; and where trustees are empowered to raise such fines out of the rents and profits, or by mortgage, as they may think fit, if they can so execute the power as to throw the burden on the parties in proportions different from those in which it would be distributed under the general rule. Jones v. Jones, 5 Hare, 440; 10 Jur. 516.

Testator bequeathed to his wife the interest of such stock as should be standing in his name at his decease during her life; and he directed that at her decease one moiety of such stock, "after deducting such premium or sum of money as should be necessary for the renewal of the Crown lease of the leasehold messuages which he purchased of Sir H. T., in case he should not have renewed such lease in his lifetime," should go to his five children. In a subsequent part of the will, he gave to his son G. all his leasehold houses, which he purchased of Sir H. T., to hold to his said son, and his executors, &c., for the then existing term or terms therein, and "all benefit of renewal aforesaid," for his and their own use and benefit. At the time of the widow's death, the lease was subsisting unrenewed:—Held, that there was a gift to the son out of the consols of a sum sufficient to effect the renewal of the lease, and that by the "renewal" of the lease was intended a grant at the widow's death of a reversionary lease to commence at the expiration of the former lease for the same term, at the same rent, and under the same covenants as were mentioned and comprised in the former lease, or as near thereto as the law, by which Crown leases are regulated, would allow. Rickards v. Rickards, 2 Y. & Coll. C. C. 419; 12 L. J., Ch. 460; 7 Jur. 715. Affirmed, 13 L. J., Ch. 344.

The Crown officers being bound by the act to renew leases upon certain terms in reference to the value of the property, and having, upon the death of the widow, declined to renew, except upon payment of the higher fines, rent and repairs:—Held, that G. was entitled to receive out of the fund such sum, by way of fine, as should be necessary for the renewal of the lease, and in calculating which the amount required for repairs might be considered. Ib.

Where trustees of a settlement, having power to raise a sum of given amount, out of the rents and profits, or by assignment, or other disposition of the settled estates, as a provision for the fines and expenses payable on the renewal of leases comprised in the settlement, exercised that power by mortgage, and also paid further sums for renewals out of the rents of the settled estates:—Held, that the tenant for life, under the settlement, was bound to keep down, out of the rents and profits, the interest only of the sum raised by mortgage, but that the further sums paid for renewals must be apportioned between the tenant for life and the remainderman, according to the ordinary rule of the Court of Chancery in such cases. Plumtre v. Oxenden, 25 L. J., Ch. 19; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1037; 4 W. R. 29.

Where there is a trust to raise fines for the renewal of settled leasehold estates out of the rents or by a mortgage, the fines must be borne by the successive tenants for life of such estates in proportion to their actual enjoyment. Ainslie, v. Harcourt, 28 Beav. 313; 30 L. J., Ch. 686.

A trust by sale or mortgage of other estates, to raise fines for the renewal of the lease of a particular estate, imposes on the successive tenants for life the duty of keeping down the interest on the mortgages. Ib.

Under a trust to renew leases out of the rents, issues and profits, followed by a power, in case, from any cause, the money wanted to pay the fines should not be produced by the ways and means aforesaid, to mortgage:—Held, the rents being sufficient for that purpose, that the fines ought to be paid out of income. Solley v. Wood, 29 Beav. 482.

Trustees of a will held a renewable lease upon trust for successive life tenants, with remainders over, and the residuary personal estate of the testator upon trust out of the income to pay all the costs, charges and expenses of executing the trusts of the will, with divers trusts of the residue:—Held, that the trustees, and not the life tenants, were the persons liable to observe the covenants and to pay the rent and outgoings which, on the true construction of the will, should be paid by them out of income, and that the fine and expenses of renewal of the lease should be borne by the beneficiaries ratably, according to their enjoyment of the lease, to be ascertained by actuarial valuation. Baring, In re, Jeune v. Baring, 62 L. J., Ch. 50; [1893] 1 Ch. 61; 3 R. 57; 67 L. T. 702; 41 W. R. 87.

Retaining Interest of Tenant for Life.]—The court will not retain the income of the tenant for life, because he may become liable to give security for the payments on account of renewals before the occasion for giving such security has arisen. Hudleston v. Whelpdale, 9 Hare, 775.

—— By Tenant for Life's Estate to Remainderman.]—Where testator, tenant for life, ought to have renewed lease, and it was, after testator's death, renewed by remainderman, reference was directed to apportion sum to be paid by executor. Colegrave v. Manby, 6 Madd. 72; 2 Russ. 238; 22 R. R. 245.

—— To Tenant for Life's Estate by Remainderman.]—When a tenant for life of renewable estates or leases for lives has renewed the lives, the proportions of the fines and expenses of the renewals payable as between his estate and that of the remainderman entitled to the property are to be estimated with regard to the actual enjoyment of the property; and compound interest at 4*l.* per cent. per annum, with annual rests on the amount payable by the remainderman, will be allowed to the estate of the tenant for life for the period between the renewal and his death; simple interest only after that event. Bradford v. Brownjohn, 38 L. J., Ch. 10; L. R. 3 Ch. 711; 19 L. T. 248; 16 W. R. 1178.

Compound interest allowed by court on sums paid by the tenant for life on renewals. Nightingale v. Lawson, 1 Bro. C. C. 440.

—— Bankruptcy of Tenant for Life—Liability of Trustee in Bankruptcy.]—T. devised certain freehold and leasehold property, upon trust, to permit his son E. to receive the rents during his life, subject to the payment of rents and performance of the covenants reserved and contained by and in the present and future leases, whereby the leasehold premises were and should be held, and also all taxes, fines and expenses attending the same; remainder upon trust for the sons of E. in fee, as tenants in common. The tenant for life became bankrupt, and afterwards died. His assignees received a sum of 2,000*l.* subsequent to the bankruptcy for rents:—Held, that these rents were liable to the fines for renewal. Hulkes v. Barrow, Taml. 264; 31 R. R. 93.

—— Lien for Fines.]—Money paid as a fine by the last life in a lease for a renewal, ordered to be a charge on the estate. Adderley v. Clavering, 2 Cox, 192; 2 Bro. C. C. 658.

A tenant for life paying the whole fines for renewal, if he has not the whole enjoyment, will have a lien on the estate for whatever ought to be paid by the remainderman, and if the remainderman renews, he is entitled to security from the tenant for life for his proportionate part, calculated on the assumed duration of the life interest. Jones v. Jones, 5 Hare, 440; 10 Jur. 516.

Where a leasehold estate for lives was settled upon the husband for life; remainder to the wife for life, with remainder to the children, the husband, having renewed by putting in the wife's life, is to be considered as a creditor upon the estate for the fine and charges of renewal. Lawrence v. Maggs, 1 Eden, 452.

Duty to Renew.]—G. F. being possessed of a chattel interest under a lessee of the see of Dublin, with a toties quoties covenant for renewal, bequeathed it to trustees to the use of E. O. for life, with divers limitations over, and with a power to the trustees to sell the same, and invest the produce in the purchase of freehold lands, to be settled to the same uses:—Held, that there was no obligation imposed on E. O., the tenant for life, to renew. O'Ferrall v. O'Ferrall, Ll. & G. t. Plunk. 79.

A testator gave his widow "the full and entire enjoyment" of his real and personal estates, which, after her death, he gave to other persons, and he empowered her to retain a portion of a sum of 150*l.* a year, given to other persons for renewing the leaseholds:—Held, she was entitled to enjoy the leasehold in specie; that it was not imperative on her to renew, but that she had acted wrong in surrendering a lease, of which she was the only cestui que vie, as she thereby deprived herself of the option of renewing for the benefit of the parties in remainder. Harvey v. Harvey, 5 Beav. 134.

A testator being possessed of a leasehold, subject to a nominal yearly rent, under an ecclesiastical corporation (who were not bound to renew, but were in the habit of renewing every fourteen years, upon the payment of fines, leases of houses held under them), bequeathed it to A. for life, subject to the payment of all fines and rents as they became due, yearly and for every year, and after the death of A., to B. absolutely:—Held, that A. was not bound to renew the lease during her life. Capel v. Wood, 4 Russ. 500: 3 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 91; 28 R. R. 162.

A. B. devised and bequeathed certain leasehold interests, held by him under the see of Waterford and Lismore, and other property to trustees, upon trust, for the sole use and behoof of his daughter, for life; and after her decease, to the use of her first son, lawfully begotten, and her heirs for ever. These leasehold interests were renewed by the trustees, until the testator's daughter reached her full age, and from that period continued to be renewed by herself, as tenant for life, and large fines paid for that purpose. A bill having been filed by the husband of the tenant for life, after her decease, against the remainderman for contribution towards the fines so paid:—Held, that from the intention of the testator as upon the true construction of the will the tenant for life was bound to keep these interests renewed, and was only entitled to the surplus rents and profits which remained after paying the head rent and renewal fines; the bill could not be sustained. Trench v. St. George, 1 Dr. & Wal. 417.

Testator gave his personal estate to his mother for life, remainder to his children, on condition that his mother should see the fines for renewal of a lease, and the interest of a mortgage, paid, and be consulted as to the manner of raising the fines, that she may give her approbation as she may think proper; she is only to keep down the interest. Buckeridge v. Ingram, 2 Ves. J. 652.

A lessee of a bishop's lands in Ireland, with a custom of renewal, granted sub-leases with covenants to renew on payment of rents and fines. The sub-leases became vested in R., who charged the lands and other lands of which he was seised in fee with annuities, and conveyed both descriptions of lands to a trustee, to secure the annuities with power, if they should be in arrear, to raise payments by sale or other means. R.'s interest in the leasehold and freehold lands was assigned to H. in 1814, and the lease under the bishop had then become vested in him, and he obtained renewals of it. On a bill filed against him in 1815 by the annuitants, praying a sale for payment of arrears then due, orders and decrees were made, appointing a receiver of the rents and profits of all the lands to pay the annuities thereout, and declaring them to be a first charge on both descriptions of lands, and ordering a sale of part to pay the arrears, unless H. should pay the same in six months. On a supplemental bill, by the annuitants, stating that they had discovered that the sub-leases had not been renewed, and praying that H. might be ordered to renew them, a decree was made ordering him to execute renewals on payment of the rents and fines due to him, the same to be a first charge on the lands in case of renewal; but if the annuitants should not pay the rents and fines, then their bill, as far as it prayed renewals of the sub-leases, to be dismissed with costs, and the freehold lands to be sold subject to the annuities for payment of the arrears. The annuitants declined to renew, finding the proceeds of the freehold lands which were sold a sufficient fund for their dividends:—Held, that the annuitants ought not to be compelled to renew the sub-leases. Haig v. Homan, 8 Cl. & F. 320—H. L. (Ir.). And see 4 Bli. (N.S.) 380—H. L. (Ir.)

A testator gave all his freehold, copyhold and leasehold hereditaments to one for life, with remainder over in fee; and he gave all the residue of his personal estate upon trust to pay debts, &c., and to keep his leasehold property in repair, and renew the leaseholds at the accustomed times; and subject thereto to pay to or permit the tenant for life to receive the annual proceeds. The testator had allowed the time for renewal of one part of his leaseholds to pass before the date of his will, and the time for renewal of the other part also passed before his death, and he took no steps to set right his omission to renew. Since his death his executor had endeavoured, but without success, to effect renewals:—Held, that the tenant for life was entitled to enjoy the leaseholds in specie, as if no direction to renew had been contained in the will. Pinfold v. Shillingford, 46 L. J., Ch. 491; 25 W. R. 425.

Insurance of Life of Cestui que vie.]—Where a tenant for life is directed to renew, with power to raise fine by mortgage, and court directs fine to be raised, by sale or mortgage, parties cannot be compelled to insure life of cestui que vie for the better security of mortgage, but if money cannot be raised on mortgage, must sell estate. Grantley v. Garthwaite, 6 Madd. 96.

Leaseholds for lives being devised in trust for parties in succession, with a direction to renew out of the rents or by mortgage, the court sanctioned a reference to the master, to inquire whether it would be for the benefit of all parties that the future fines for renewal should be provided by an insurance on the lives of the cestui que vies. Difficulties in arranging the proportions of the fines which the parties in succession ought to bear in such cases. Greenwood v. Evans, 4 Beav. 44.

Where leases which the testator had directed to be renewed were renewed by adding a cestui que vie, by means of a payment out of funds belonging to the testator's estate (not charged with such renewal), and it was referred to the master to inquire what security the tenant for life of the leases ought to give, and to what amount, for the contribution which he might be liable to make for the benefit he should derive from the renewal, the master found, and the court had confirmed the finding, that the payment for the renewal ought to be secured by a policy of life insurance for the amount paid, in the name of the trustees, on the life of the new cestui que vie, the costs and premiums in respect of which ought to be paid out of the rents and profits of the estate to which the tenant for life was entitled. The court subsequently declared the policy of life insurance to be a security for the benefit which the tenant for life had derived, or might derive, from the renewal, or might have derived therefrom if another proper life had been inserted in lieu of his own. But semble, the mode of providing the security adopted by the report is erroneous in principle; for the object of the court, in requiring security to be given by the tenant for life in respect of the benefit which he may derive from the renewal of the lease, is, that the sum paid out of the capital shall be borne by the parties in proportion to the benefits which they derive, and the security therefore is for the purpose of bringing back to the capital so much as the tenant for life has had the benefit of; and this sum (which would be payable on the death of the tenant for life) is not properly secured by a policy of insurance on the life of another person, inasmuch as it throws upon the remainderman not merely the interest of the capital provided, but the burthen of keeping up a policy of life insurance for the full amount; and it is mere speculation whether this burthen will be compensated by giving him the benefit of a policy at a less rate of premium, owing to an earlier insurance of the life. Although it may be that, when provision is made of a fund for renewal, the remainderman will not suffer, this is not the principle; for the principle is, that the remainderman ought to bear so much of the capital paid for renewal as may not be paid by the tenant for life under the security which he has given. Hudlestone v. Whelpdale, 9 Hare, 775.

Where Renewal becomes Impossible.]—By a settlement, the trustees were to use their utmost endeavours to renew an ecclesiastical lease upon reasonable terms, and to raise the fines out of the rents, or by mortgage. A renewal became impracticable:—Held, that the fund reserved by the trustees out of rents for the purpose of renewal belonged absolutely to the tenant for life. Morris v. Hodges, 27 Beav. 625.

When leaseholds renewable by custom have been settled, accompanied by an unqualified trust for renewal, which shews that the settlor intended to create, and thought he was creating, a perpetual estate, out of which he was carving successive interests, and the leaseholds so settled are taken by a railway company, and the purchase-money is paid into court, then, although the possibility of a renewal of such leases is destroyed before the time at which they could have been renewed arrives, the tenant for life under the settlement will only be allowed the income of the purchase-money, and the whole of the capital will be preserved for the remaindermen. Wood's Settlement, In re, 40 L. J., Ch. 59; L. R. 10 Eq. 572; 19 W. R. 59.

A testator gave to his trustees a tithe rent-charge held under an ecclesiastical lease for twenty-one years, which was in practice renewed every seven years on payment of a fine, upon trust to renew out of the proceeds, and to apply the surplus in a certain way during the life of his wife, and directed that after her death it should form part of his residuary estate. He gave his trustees power at any time to sell the leasehold interest. The lease having ceased to be renewable :—Held, that the leasehold interest ought to be sold and the proceeds invested, and only the income of this fund and of the renewal fund applied as income. Maddy v. Hale, 45 L. J., Ch. 791 ; 3 Ch. D. 327 ; 35 L. T. 134 ; 24 W. R. 1005—C. A.

A testator gave all his freehold, copyhold, and leasehold hereditaments to one for life, with remainder over in fee ; and he gave all the residue of his personal estate upon trust to pay debts, &c., and to keep his leasehold property in repair, and renew the leaseholds at the accustomed times ; and subject thereto to pay to or permit the tenant for life to receive the annual proceeds. The testator had allowed the time for renewal of one part of his leaseholds to pass before the date of his will, and the time for renewal of the other part also passed before his death, and he took no steps to set right his omission to renew. Since his death his executor had endeavoured, but without success, to effect renewals :—Held, that the tenant for life was entitled to enjoy the leaseholds in specie, as if no direction to renew had been contained in the will. Pinfold v. Shillingford, 46 L. J., Ch. 491 ; 25 W. R. 425.

Leaseholds for lives in settlement subject to a trust for renewal were, after refusal of the lessor to renew, sold under the leases and sales of Settled Estates Acts :—Held, that the first taker was entitled only to the income of the purchase-money. Barber's Settled Estates, In re, 50 L. J., Ch. 769 ; 18 Ch. D. 624 ; 45 L. T. 433 ; 29 W. R. 909.

—— Lapse of Time.]—Testator bequeathed a church lease for twenty-one years to A. for life, remainder to his first and other sons, and directed the lease to be perpetually renewed by the persons in possession for the time being. A. neglected to renew, and the lease expired in 1798. His eldest son attained twenty-one in 1800. In 1830 A. died. In 1831 the eldest son filed his bill, praying to be compensated for the loss of the lease out of A.'s assets :—Held, that he was entitled to the relief, notwithstanding the lapse of time. Bennet v. Colley, 5 Sim. 181. Affirmed 2 Myl. & K. 225 ; Coop. t. Brough. 248.

If a tenant for life pays more than he ought towards the fines for renewing the leases of the settled estates, his executors and trustees cannot, nearly twenty years after his decease, claim an account with a view to the repayment of the excess beyond what he ought to have paid. Ainslie v. Harcourt, 28 Beav. 313 ; 30 L. J., Ch. 686.

Purchase of the Reversion.]—Renewable leaseholds were devised to A. for so much of the term as he should live, and after his decease during the continuance of the term to the children of A., share and share alike, as tenants in common. The lease was renewed twice by A., who then purchased the reversion :—Held, that the doctrine that a tenant for life can only renew a leasehold for the benefit of the remainderman applied where he had purchased the reversion, and that the children of A. became possessed of the fee-simple in the property subject to the trusts of the will. Phillips v. Phillips, 54 L. J., Ch. 943 ; 29 Ch. D. 673 ; 53 L. T. 403 ; 33 W. R. 863—C. A.

Testator seised in fee of a moiety of an estate at L., and in possession of the other moiety as tenant from year to year, to St. J. College (this lease from the college having expired), gives to his wife durante viduitate, all that his messuage or tenement, with the farm and lands at L., all his estate and interest therein, she paying the rent reserved to St. J. College, &c. The widow after his death obtains a new lease, and subsequently purchases the reversion of one to whom it had been conveyed by the college under an act of parliament :—Held, that the renewed lease was taken subject to the trusts of the will, and those in remainder to contribute to the fine paid by the widow, in proportions to be settled by the Master : that the purchase of the reversion not from the college but from the person to whom it had been conveyed by the college, was not, under the circumstances, to be taken subject to the trusts of the will. Randall v. Russell, 3 Mer. 190 ; 17 R. R. 56.

Devise of leaseholds for lives and 21 years after the death of the survivor to a daughter for all the testator's estate therein, with an executory gift over. The devisee enters, and renews the lease, and gives the same to J. J. "for all her estate and interest therein." On the death of the daughter, the person entitled under the gift over enters. J. J. brings ejectment, and recovers possession, and afterwards purchases the reversion in fee, for which an option is given him as tenant of the premises :—Held, that the renewed term was impressed with a trust, but that J. J. was a purchaser of the fee for his own benefit, there not being enough in the case to extend to it the principle upon which the renewed lease was held to be taken for the benefit of those in remainder. Hardman v. Johnson, 3 Mer. 347 ; 17 R. R. 95.

If a tenant for life of an under-lease for eighteen years, granted by a person who himself holds the premises so under-let along with other property, under a lease for twenty-one years, purchases the interest of his immediate lessor, and obtains from the superior lessor a renewal of the lease thus purchased, the renewed lease is subject, so far as regards the premises which were comprised in the under-lease, to the same trusts as would have affected the under-lease if it had not been merged, or had not expired by the effluxion of time. The same rule holds, though the lease at the time of the purchase was vested in a trustee upon trust, under which he could not have granted a renewal of the under-lease, and though the tenant for life outlived, by twenty-six years, the time at which the under-lease would have expired by effluxion of time. Giddings v. Giddings, 3 Russ. 241 ; 27 R. R. 78.

A father devised real estate to trustees upon trust for his son for life, with remainders in strict settlement in tail, and he devised and bequeathed all his copyhold and leasehold estates, whether for lives or years determinable on lives, to the same trustees and upon the same trusts, as far as might be, as his other real estate. And he directed his trustees to invest the proceeds of his residuary personal estate in the purchase of freehold, copyhold, and leasehold hereditaments, to be settled on similar trusts. And he directed his trustees, out of the annual profits, to renew leases for lives and pay expenses attendant on admissions to copyhold estates. The tenant for life, out of his own moneys, advanced considerable sums in the purchase by way of enfranchisement of the reversion in fee of renewable leaseholds and in the enfranchisement of copyholds of inheritance. In some cases the conveyances were made to the uses of his father's will, in others not:—Held, that in the absence of declared intention that the purchases enured for the benefit of the inheritance, the tenant for life had a charge on the inheritance to the extent of the purchase-money; the rule in such case being, as between tenant for life and remaindermen, payment and apportionment of the fine with reference to actual enjoyment. Isaac v. Wall, 46 L. J., Ch. 576; 6 Ch. D. 706; 37 L. T. 227; 25 W. R. 844.

Held, also, that in the case of a renewable lease, of which the freehold had been purchased by enfranchisement and conveyed upon the trusts of the will, the legal personal representative of the first tenant in tail was entitled to such a term of years as would have subsisted if the reversion had not been purchased, and that subject thereto the property ought to go according to the limitations of the will. Ib.

3. Rights, Duties, and Liabilities of Tenant for Life.

a. Inventory and Right to Possession or Income.

Inventory, when required.]—A. was tenant for life, with remainder to his children, remainder to B. A. being unmarried, B. has a right to compel A. to set out a full description and particular of the settled estates. Beynon v. Morris, 10 L. T. 710; 12 W. R. 1023.

It is not now the practice, upon an order on further consideration in an administration action in ordinary cases, to require the tenant for life to give security before being let into possession of settled land and heirlooms, but he is only required to sign an inventory of the latter. Temple v. Thring, 56 L. T. 283.

Tenant for Life Executor—Fund in Court—Payment out.]—A sole executor, who is tenant for life of a fund, is not entitled to have the fund paid to him. Marston v. Guillet, 10 L. T. 292.

Possession—Since the Settled Land Acts.]—The power of the court to make an order allowing an equitable tenant for life to take possession of settled property is discretionary, and will only be made on proper undertakings. The circstances under which, and the terms upon which, the order will be made, depend upon the facts of each particular case. Newen, In re, Newen v. Barnes, 63 L. J., Ch. 763; [1894] 2 Ch. 297; 8 R. 309; 70 L. T. 653; 43 W. R. 58.

The fact that a tenant for life has mortgaged his interest is not conclusive against giving him possession of the property. Ib.

And see Bagot's Settlement, In re, Bagot v. Kittoe, 63 L. J., Ch. 515; [1893] 2 Ch. 369; 3 R. 433; 68 L. T. 520; 41 W. R. 375; Wythes, In re, West v. Wythes, [1893] 2 Ch. 430; 3 R. 722; 69 L. T. 281; 42 W. R. 125.

—— Before the Settled Land Acts.]—It was not of course to let an equitable tenant for life into possession. It depended upon the intention of the testator. Tidd v. Lister, 5 Madd. 429; 21 R. R. 323.

Tenant for life subject to a trust term not let into possession before account, till the trust is executed, unless on paying into court a sum sufficient to answer it, or where the best way of performing the trust appears to be by letting him into possession. Blake v. Bunbury, 1 Ves. J. 194; 1 R. R. 111.

Tenant for life let into possession on consent, and giving security to pay charges payable out of rents and profits, and to keep down interest of the fund to answer contingent charges. Blake v. Bunbury, 1 Ves. J. 514; 4 Bro. C. C. 21; 1 R. R. 111.

Upon the construction of a devise of real property:—Held, that an equitable tenant for life was entitled to the personal enjoyment of the property upon giving security for the due fulfilment of the objects of testator's will. Baylies v. Baylies, 1 Coll. 537.

A testator died in 1844, having by his will directed his trustees, out of the rents and profits of his real estates, to pay all his debts, including 8,000*l.* charged on part of his realty. The testator also directed that "no person to whom any estate for life or in tail was given by the will should be entitled to the rents and profits of the estate, or any part of them, until they were totally disencumbered, and clear of debt." The trustees were to invest the moneys to come to their hands under the trusts of the will until applied by them in any payment under it. All the debts had been paid except the 8,000*l.*, and there was stock enough in court to meet that. The payment of the debts had been affected by a sale of part of the realty, under the orders of the court, and a receiver had been appointed. In 1874 a summons was taken out by the tenant for life to discharge the receiver, and to be let into possession of the estates:—Held, that the receiver must be discharged, and the tenant for life admitted to the estates. Tewart v. Lawson, 43 L. J., Ch. 673; L. R. 18 Eq. 490; 22 W. R. 822.

—— Deaf Mute.]—A party born deaf and dumb, attaining twenty-one, applies for possession of her real estate, and to have an assignment of her chattel estate; Lord Hardwicke, Ch., having put questions to the party in writing, and she having given sensible answers thereto in writing, the same was ordered. Dickenson v. Blisset, 1 Dick. 268.

At what Date Rights ascertained—Capital.]—Where a testator, who was possessed of shares in a company, bequeathed them to legatees for life, with remainders over, and dividends on such shares were declared after his death in respect of profits made by the company in his lifetime:—Held, that the dividends formed part of the income, and not of the corpus of the property, and belonged to the legatees for life. Bates v. Mackinley, 31 Beav. 280; 31 L. J., Ch. 389; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 299; 5 L. T. 783; 10 W. R. 241.

A testator bequeathed East and West Indian Dock stock to life tenants and others in succession. Some time after his death bonuses were declared upon the stock. On the 8th of February, 1865, by an order made in a suit for the administration of the estate, the bonuses were invested in 3*l.* per cent. annuities, and the dividends directed to be paid to the tenants for life. On the 12th of January, 1871, that investment order was discharged:—Held, that the bonuses were income, and not capital of the estate, and belonged to the life tenants. Dale v. Hayes, 40 L. J., Ch. 244; 24 L. T. 12; 19 W. R. 299.

Necklace Mortgaged—Who liable for Debt.]—A tenant for life under a settlement executed a deed, by which—reciting an agreement by O. to lend him 150*l.* on a bill of sale or transfer of a diamond necklace, and a desire to settle it as an heirloom—he assigned it in trust for O., subject to a proviso for cesser of the trust on repayment of the principal and interest, and, after repayment, in trust for himself for life, and, after his death, as an heirloom, with the estates limited by the settlement; and he covenanted to pay the money with interest, and that, in default of payment, O. should possess and sell the necklace, and pay the surplus proceeds to the donor:—Held, that, as between the remainderman and the personal representative of the donor, the necklace was primarily liable for the payment of the debt. Owen v. Braddell, Ir. R. 7 Eq. 358.

Rule in Howe v. Dartmouth (Earl).]—When a testator limits his residuary property to one for life, with remainders over, it is primâ facie to be intended that the testator means that the property which is given to the tenant for life is to pass to those entitled in remainder; and if any part of the property be of a wasting nature, as long annuities or leasehold, it must be immediately sold and converted into permanent property unless, upon the whole context of the will, it shall appear that the testator had not that intention. Howe v. Dartmouth (Earl), 7 Ves. 137; 6 R. R. 96.

Where leasehold or other perishable property is included in a gift of all the testator's estate, and effects to one person for life, with remainder over after his decease, the property is not to be converted into money at the testator's death, if the will contains indication of an intention that the tenant for life should enjoy the property in its existing state. Pickering v. Pickering, 4 Myl. & C. 289; 8 L. J., Ch. 336; 3 Jur. 743. Affirming 2 Beav. 31.

The rule laid down in Howe v. Dartmouth (Earl) (7 Ves. 137), is, that where property of a perishable nature is given to be enjoyed in succession, the object of the testator can only be effected by converting the property into permanent annuities, and giving each person in succession the dividends of the fund. This rule prevails, unless there can be gathered from the will some expression of intention that the property is to be enjoyed in specie, and which it is incumbent on those contesting the application of the rule to point out. Morgan v. Morgan, 14 Beav. 72.

Modern cases allow small indications of intention to prevent the application of the rule, but the mere absence of any direction to convert is insufficient. Ib.

An express direction by a testator for the conversion and for investment of his personal property, from time to time, as trustees may think fit, will not necessarily prevent the operation of the general rule, that where personal property is given in a series of limitations it shall be invested in such securities as are approved of by a court of equity, for the benefit of parties interested in remainder, after the death of the tenant for life. Caldecott v. Caldecott, 1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 312; 11 L. J., Ch. 158; 6 Jur. 232.

—— Who is Tenant for Life.]—A person having a charge for life on residue, has, to the extent of that charge, the rights of a residuary legatee, and is entitled to have the residue ascertained and secured within, if possible, one year after the death of the testator. It is the duty of the executor to do all in his power to effect that object. Wightwick v. Lord, 6 H. L. Cas. 217; 26 L. J., Ch. 825; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 699; 5 W. R. 713.

A testatrix gave A. B. an annuity for life, and after her "death the principal reverts to her father and his children." The investments were not to be altered without her consent, the overplus of the income to go to the father and his children:—Held, that this was a gift of an annuity for life, and a gift over of the property subject to the annuity; that the case was that of annuitant and residuary legatee, and not that of the tenant for life and remainderman. Croly v. Weld, 3 De G. M. & G. 993; 1 Eq. R. 134; 22 L. J., Ch. 916.

As a rule the legatee for life of a reversion is entitled to have it sold, though the legatee be tenant for life in possession of the fund out of which the reversion springs. The surplus of a fund appropriated to discharge an annuity is not a reversion within the above rule. Johnson v. Routh (27 L. J., Ch. 305), approved and distinguished. Harrington (Countess) v. Atherton, 4 N. R. 206.

Property within the Rule—Long Annuities.]—A testator gave an annuity of 40*l.* to M., for life, payable out of his long annuities, and at her death gave the principal out of which the annuity arose to his next of kin:—Held, that as the long annuities were not of a permanent character, they must be sold, and a sum of 3 per cent. stock sufficient to produce the annuity purchased with the produce. Fryer v. Buttar, 8 Sim. 442.

A testator, having long annuities and money in different funds, after giving several sums of stock, gave all the residue to A. for life, and gave other stock legacies after her death, and whatever there might remain, to B.:—Held, that the long annuities ought to be converted for the benefit of the parties in remainder, and the interest only paid to A. Lichfield v. Baker, 2 Beav. 481; 9 L. J., Ch. 291. Affirmed on this point, 13 Beav. 447.

Widow held entitled to enjoyment in specie of long annuities (in which she had a life interest) not required for payment of debts of testator. Milne v. Parker, 17 L. J., Ch. 194; 12 Jur. 191.

A testatrix, in terms sufficiently large to include "long annuities," directed her residuary estate to be converted, and, after payment of debts, to be invested in parliamentary stocks and funds; and she gave the income of such stocks and funds, and of such stocks as should be standing in her name at the time of her death, to A. for life:—Held, that A. was not entitled to the income of the long annuities in specie. Sheppard v. Joynes, 2 W. R. 26. And see Skirving v. Williams, 24 Beav. 275; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 927.

—— Railway Shares.]—Railway shares, although not a perishable property, must be converted into consols, as between the tenant for life and remainderman. Thornton v. Ellis, 15 Beav. 193; 21 L. J., Ch. 714; 16 Jur. 236.

—— Turnpike Bonds.]—Where a tenant for life is entitled in specie, the rule is, that investments may remain, but debts, as turnpike bonds, must be realised. Holgate v. Jennings, 24 Beav. 623.

—— Property in India.]—The general rule for the conversion of personal property bequeathed for life, with remainders over, into the 3 per cents., held not to attach upon property of a testator who died in India, under his will made there, invested by his executor in the company's security there; but on the arrival of the parties in this country, decree was made, that it should be remitted and invested accordingly. Holland v. Hughes, 16 Ves. 111.

A testator gave the residue of his personal estate to trustees, directing them to convert it into money, and invest the proceeds in government or real security, of which they were to stand possessed, upon trust for A., during her life, and after her death to B. The trustees permitted a share, which the testator had in an Indian loan, bearing interest at 10*l.* per cent., to remain for several years on that security, during which time they paid to A. the interest at 10*l.* per cent., which it yielded annually; and the loan being afterwards paid off, they invested the money in the 3 per cents. at a time when the funds were so low, that the amount of stock purchased was considerably greater than if the conversion had taken place at the end of a year from the testator's death:—Held, that the tenant for life was not entitled to the actual interest which the money yielded, while it remained on the Indian security; but only to the dividends of so much 3 per cent. stock as would have been purchased with it, at the end of a year from the testator's death; that the trustees ought to be charged with the whole of the stock actually purchased, and all the sums actually received in respect of the Indian rate of interest, and that they ought to be allowed in their discharge as payments for the tenant for life, not the sums which they had in fact paid her, but only a sum equal to what she would have received for dividends if the money had been transferred from the Indian security, and invested in the 3 per cent. stock at the end of a year from the testator's death. Dimes v. Scott, 4 Russ. 195; 28 R. R. 46.

—— Property Abroad.]—The testator directed his real and personal estate to be converted, got in, and invested in government or real securities, and the interest, dividends, and annual produce to be paid to his wife for her life. The greater part of the testator's property at his death, consisted of capital in a partnership business abroad, to be withdrawn by instalments in the course of three or five years at the discretion of his executors, and bearing interest at 5 per cent. in the meantime:—Held, that the tenant for life would be entitled to the income actually produced by such of the property of the testator as was invested according to his will from the time of such investment, but that she was not entitled during the first year after the testator's death to a larger income in respect of such part of the testator's property as was not so invested, than the property would have produced, if invested according to the will. Taylor v. Clark, 1 Hare, 161; 11 L. J., Ch. 189; 6 Jur. 76.

When Entitled in Specie—Where there is a Trust for Conversion.]—Testator, after devising lands to uses in strict settlement, gives the residue of his personalty to be invested in lands, to be settled to the same uses. The tenant for life is not entitled to the interest of the residue, till one year from the testator's death. The general rule, fixing the end of the first year as the period at which the enjoyment of the tenant for life is to commence, is not to be departed from, unless it appears that the testator's intention is incompatible with it. Taylor v. Hibbert, 1 Jac. & Walk. 308.

The tenant for life of a residue, which is directed to be laid out in certain securities, is entitled to the income accrued in the first year after the testator's decease, on such parts of the testator's estate as are invested at his death in the proper securities, and on such parts as are afterwards so invested within the same year, but the income before such investment forms part of the capital of the residue. La Terriere v. Bulmer, 2 Sim. 18.

Testator having devised lands to A. for life, remainder to his children in strict settlement, directs the residue of his personal estate, subject to the payment of debts and legacies, with all convenient speed to be laid out in the purchase of lands to be settled forthwith to the same uses, with a proviso, that the trust moneys, until they should be laid out, might be invested upon government or real securities, the dividends and interest of which were to go and be paid as the rents of the lands to be purchased would go and be payable; a large portion of the testator's personal estate, not required for the payment of debts and legacies, being invested on the funds, and upon securities carrying interest, the tenant for life was held entitled to the interest of that portion from the death of the testator. Angerstein v. Martin, Turn. & R. 232; 2 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 88; 24 R. R. 32. S. P., Hewitt v. Morris, Turn. & R. 241; 2 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 87; 24 R. R. 39.

Where the testator directs a sale with all convenient speed after his death, and directs the produce to be invested and the dividends to be paid to one for life, and the land remains unsold, the court considers twelve months as a reasonable time within which the estates ought to have been sold, and the produce invested, and will give to the tenant for life the rents of the unsold estate from that time. Vickers v. Scott, 3 Myl. & K. 500; 3 L. J., Ch. 223.

The testator devised and bequeathed the residue of his estate and effects, real and personal, to trustees, upon trust to convert the same into government securities in their own names, and to pay the interest and dividends thereof to M. S., for her life, and after her decease to pay and transfer such residue, in equal moieties, to the persons therein mentioned:—Held, that the tenant for life was entitled to the interest of the residue, making interest as it stood at the time of the testator's death, until the end of one year or so much of that year as should elapse before the conversion of the residue according to the direction of the will. Douglas v. Congreve, 1 Keen, 410; 6 L. J., Ch. 51.

General residuary bequest, including a leasehold farm, with the stock, to be converted into money, as soon as conveniently may be, upon trust to pay the interest, &c., for life, and as to the capital for the children. The stock being considerably increased between the death in April, and the sale at Michaelmas, it was decreed that the conversion was in a reasonable time, and the party entitled for life should have interest from the conversion, and as to the premises, that from a defect of title could not be sold, that being for the interest of all that they should not be sold, a value should be set upon them to carry interest at 4 per cent. from the death. Gibson v. Bott, 7 Ves. 89; 6 R. R. 87.

A testator gave 16,000*l.* in legacies payable within six months, and the remainder to his widow for life, with remainder over. He died possessed of a large sum in consols. The widow, who was executrix, received the first half-yearly dividends on the stock, and then sold sufficient to pay the legacies:—Held, that she was not entitled, as tenant for life, to the dividends on the stock producing the 16,000*l.*, but that it formed corpus. Holgate v. Jennings, 24 Beav. 623.

Where lands are vested in trustees upon trust for sale and investment of the proceeds, and payment of the income of the investments to a tenant for life, with remainders over, and without any power of postponement, the tenant for life is entitled to receive the net rents and profits until such conversion. Hope v. D'Hédouville, 62 L. J., Ch. 589; [1893] 2 Ch. 361; 3 R. 348; 68 L. T. 516; 41 W. R. 330.

A father specifically bequeathed to trustees certain railway and other shares upon trust to convert the same at their absolute discretion, and to pay the income arising from the proceeds to his daughter for life, with remainders over. The testator's property had become the subject of an administration suit, in which a decree had been made about two years previously. Some of the shares had not been converted, and the dividends thereon had, since the testator's death, been paid to the tenant for life:—Held, that the tenant for life was only entitled to the income that would have been derived from so much consols as the moneys arising from the sale of the shares one year after the testator's death would have purchased at that date, and that she must account for what moneys she had received in excess of that sum. Anderson v. Read, 22 W. R. 527.

—— Directions concerning Time of Conversion.]—Where the testator gave the residue of his estate real and personal to his executors upon trust, to permit his wife to receive the rents, profits, and annual proceeds thereof to her sole use during her life, and after her decease upon trust to sell his freehold house in Oxford Street, and also his leasehold houses, by auction; and the testator desired that E. A. should be employed as auctioneer, to convert the whole of his estate into money, for the purposes therein mentioned; it was held that the widow was entitled to enjoy for her life the income of the testator's long annuities. Alcock v. Sloper, 2 Myl. & K. 699.

A testator bequeathed his residuary personal estate, consisting partly of ships, to his own sister B. (a married woman), subject to the legacy thereinafter bequeathed to T., and the commission directed to be paid to him, and subject to the directions thereinafter contained as to conversion of ships. He appointed H. & T. his executors, and gave T. a legacy for his trouble, and directed his executors not to sell any of his ships for seven years from his death (unless the keeping them unsold should cause loss), and to work them, employing as much of his residuary estate as should be necessary for that purpose, and he gave T. an allowance of 500*l.* a year for his trouble while he should assist in managing them. By a codicil he stated that he still wished B. to have the residue, but directed that it should be invested in such manner as his executors should think fit, "in trust for her sole benefit during her lifetime," and that after her death it should be divided between her surviving children:—Held, that the direction to keep the ships unsold for seven years was not revoked by the codicil, and that while they remained unsold, B. took the actual income for her separate use. Green v. Britten, 1 De G. J. & S. 649.

Right of a tenant for life to enjoy a residue in specie inferred from a direction "to get in and convert the same into money and divide" after his death. Rowe v. Rowe, 29 Beav. 276.

Upon the construction of a will:—Held, that chattel leaseholds were to be enjoyed in specie by the tenant for life of the residuary real and personal estate. Daniel v. Warren, 2 Y. & C. C. C. 290; 7 Jur. 462.

—— Where the Exercise of the Trust or Power is Discretionary.]—A discretionary power to convert, if and when the trustees shall think fit, entitles the tenant for life to the enjoyment of the leasehold property in specie in the meantime. Where a full discretion is by the will given to the trustees, the rule in Howe v. Dartmouth (Earl) (7 Ves. 137), is not applicable, and the court will not interfere. Leonard, In re, Theobald v. King, 43 L. T. 664; 29 W. R. 234.

Where a testator gives an absolute discretion to his executors to postpone the sale and conversion of his estate, they are not bound by the ordinary rule to convert the property within a year, even though some of the property consists of shares in an unlimited company. Nor will they be liable in the absence of mala fides for loss arising to the estate for the non-conversion. Norrington, In re, Brindley v. Partridge, 13 Ch. D. 654; 28 W. R. 711—C. A.

Where trustees have a discretion as to what part of the testator's estate should be converted, the court will not interfere with such discretion, at all events if a considerable period has elapsed since it has been exercised. Tenants for life entitled to enjoy leaseholds in specie, where the trustees have such a discretion. Sewell's Estate, In re, 40 L. J., Ch. 135; L. R. 11 Eq. 80; 23 L. T. 835.

Devise and bequest of residuary, real, and personal estate to trustees, upon trust with all convenient speed to sell the real estate and such part of the personal estate as was in its nature saleable; but the mode and time of sale, and of settling and adjusting accounts, and of requiring payment of what should be due to the testator to be left entirely to the discretion of the trustees; and until such sale and the final adjustment of his co-partnership accounts, the rents and income of the real and personal estate remaining unsold, and the interest on any debt or debts owing to the testator, to be paid to the same persons, and in the manner, directed with respect to the income of the estate when invested. The testator gave the produce of his real and personal estate to his two daughters for their lives, with remainder over; and he recommended each of his two daughters to pay 25*l.* a year out of her moiety of the income of his estate for the education and maintenance of his nephew until the nephew attained twenty-one years:—Held, that there being no improper delay in the conversion of the estate, the daughters of the testator, as tenants for life, were entitled to the income actually produced by the residuary estate during the interval before the sale and realisation of the whole of such estate, and the investment thereof, according to the directions in the will; but that they were not entitled during that interval to any interest upon such parts of the residuary property, or on the value of such parts thereof, as were unproductive; that the two sums of 25*l.* were only to be allowed by the daughters to the nephew yearly out of their income during their lives; and that such sums did not constitute a charge upon the life interest of the daughters for the whole period of the minority of the nephew. Mackie v. Mackie, 5 Hare, 70; 9 Jur. 753.

A tenant for life held, upon the terms of the will, entitled to the actual income arising from the personal estate of the testator until the time of conversion. Sparling v. Parker, 9 Beav. 525; 10 Jur. 448.

Testator bequeathed his residuary personal estate to trustees in trust, with all convenient speed after his death, to sell such part or parts as they or the survivor of them, or the executors or administrators of such survivor, or their or his assigns, should think proper, of any moneys in the funds, and also to call in, sell, and convert into money all such parts of the rest of his general personal estate as should not consist of money, and, out of his general personal estate and the moneys forming part thereof and to arise thereby, to pay his debts, &c., and to invest the residue of the moneys to arise from his general personal estate, which should remain after answering the purposes aforesaid, in the usual securities, and from time to time to alter, at their or his discretion, as well the same stocks, funds and securities, as also such of the stocks, funds, or securities, being part of his personal estate, which they or he should not think proper to sell and convert into money; and to stand possessed of all the trust moneys, stocks, funds, and securities which should be so purchased as aforesaid, and which should remain unconverted into money as aforesaid, in trust to pay the interest, dividends, and annual produce thereof, as and when the same should be received, to the plaintiff. The residue of the testator's estate, after payment of his debts, &c., consisted in part of sums of long annuities and bank and East India stock, which still remained unsold:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the income accrued on those sums from the testator's death. Wrey v. Smith, 14 Sim. 202.

A testator devised a brickfield which had been worked by him, to trustees for sale when they should think desirable. They deferred the sale in the exercise of their discretion:—Held, that the tenant for life was entitled to the royalties as income. Miller v. Miller, 41 L. J., Ch. 291; L. R. 13 Eq. 263; 20 W. R. 324.

A. devised estates in trust for his wife for life, and he gave the trustees a discretionary power of sale. Part of his estate consisted of unproductive building ground, which remained unsold for some years:—Held, that the tenant for life was only entitled to the actual rents of the property until sold; but that she would have been entitled to interest on the value, if the trust for sale had been absolute. Yates v. Yates, 28 Beav. 637; 29 L. J., Ch. 872; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1023; 3 L. T. 9.

A testator having, a few days before the date of his will, executed a deed of partnership, whereby certain annual sums, rents, and royalties were payable to him out of the partnership property, by his will gave all the residue of his real and personal estate to trustees to receive "the rents, dividends, interest, and annual proceeds," and pay the same to his wife for life. After the wife's death the residuary estate was to be sold, and there was a subsequent proviso giving the trustees a discretionary power of conversion in her lifetime:—Held, that the rule in Howe v. Dartmouth (Earl) (7 Ves. 137) did not apply, but that the widow was entitled in specie to the annual income of the testator's estate as it existed at the time of his death. Greaves v. Smith, 29 L. T. 798; 22 W. R. 388.

—— Power to Postpone Conversion.]—Where there is a discretionary power to postpone conversion and retain property in existing investments, the tenant for life is entitled to the actual income of so much of the estate as is represented by investments retained so far as those investments are authorised by a will. But in so far as the investments retained are unauthorised, the tenant for life is only entitled to an income equal to the dividends on a sum of consols which would have been produced by a sale and investment in consols at a year from the death, and not to an income equal to interest at 4 per cent. on their value. Brown v. Gellatly, L. R. 2 Ch. 751; 17 L. T. 131; 15 W. R. 1188.

Testator bequeathed all his personal estate to trustees, and directed them to convert it into money, and to pay the interest to certain persons for their lives, then to invest the principal in the purchase of lands, it being also understood that, where his money or personal estate might be lying on undoubted real or personal security, such securities might be only renewed in the names of the trustees. The testator's personal estate consisted in part of long annuities:—Held, that the cestuis que trustent for life of the personalty were not entitled to receive the long annuities, but that they must be converted into consols. Preston v. Melville, 15 Sim. 35.

A. gave his real and personal estate to trustees, to permit his wife to receive "the income arising from one-third" for her life, with remainder to his children. And to facilitate the ultimate devise, he authorised them to convert his personal estate into money and to sell his real estate. And he authorised his trustees to permit any part of his personal estate to remain in the state of investment in which it might be at his death, and to invest his residuary personal estate in the public funds, &c., and, from time to time, to alter and vary the securities:—Held, that the widow was not entitled to enjoy leaseholds and perishable property in specie. Llewellyn's Trust, In re, 29 Beav. 171.

A testator directed his trustees to allow his estate to remain invested as it might be at his decease, if they should think fit, and, subject to such direction, to convert it and pay the income to his widow for her life, remainder over. The trustees proceeded to realise his estate as soon as possible after his death, but in the interval certain ships in which he was interested as partner earned freight, and dividends were paid on certain shares held by him in partnership; on the sale of these ships and shares a considerable profit was also realised:—Held, that the tenant for life was not entitled to the freight or dividends or to the profits on the sales as income, but that they formed part of the capital, and that she was entitled to interest thereon from the death of the testator. Cooper v. Laroche, 38 L. J., Ch. 591.

A husband gave his residue to trustees on trust to convert and invest on government or real securities, and to pay the income to his wife for life, and after her death to distribute the corpus, and he also empowered them to continue invested any of his government stocks or real securities, and directed that his wife should be entitled to the interest, dividends, and annual proceeds of his residuary estate as from the day of his death:—Held, that the trustees were, under the will, empowered to retain such government securities only as were of a permanent character; that certain long annuities which formed part of the testator's estate, ought to have been sold and the proceeds invested on permanent securities, and that the widow's estate was after her death liable to recoup to the testator's estate the amount which would have been produced by the sale of the long annuities, she having received in her lifetime the whole proceeds till they expired. Tickner v. Old, L. R. 18 Eq. 422; 31 L. T. 29; 22 W. R. 871.

A testator devised his real estate in trust for sale, the proceeds to be held as a general fund in aid of his personal estate. Subject as aforesaid, the proceeds and the residuary personal estate were to be invested upon trust for A. for life with remainder over. Power was given to postpone the sale, the rents in the meantime to be applied as income of the proceeds. The personal estate was insufficient for the payment of debts; and more than a year after the testator's death the real estate was sold, and part of the proceeds applied in paying the remaining debts:—Held, in adjusting the accounts between the tenant for life and the remainderman, that the former was not entitled to the whole of the rents during the first year after the death of the testator. Marshall v. Crowther, 2 Ch. D. 199; 23 W. R. 210.

A testator gave several leasehold houses held upon short terms to trustees to pay the income to his wife for life, and then to his grandchildren, and he gave his trustees, one of whom was his wife, power to retain any portions of his property in the same estate in which it should be at his decease, or to sell and convert the same as they should in their absolute discretion think fit:—Held, that the special power to retain existing investments took the case out of the general rule as to conversion of perishable property, and that the trustees were at liberty to retain the short leaseholds and any other investments held by the testator for such period as they should think fit. Gray v. Siggers, 49 L. J., Ch. 819; 15 Ch. D. 74; 29 W. R. 13.

A testator, possessed of shares in several ships, bequeathed his personal estate to trustees, upon trust for sale and conversion, and to pay the income arising therefrom to his wife for life. The will contained a power for the trustees to postpone such sale and conversion for so long as they may think fit, and a direction that the income arising from his unconverted personal estate should be paid and applied in the same manner as the income of the moneys produced by such conversion would be payable or applicable. The ships were not sold until two years after the testator's death, and in the interval made several voyages, from which large profits resulted:—Held, that such profits must be treated as income and not capital, and were, therefore, payable to the tenant for life. Lean v. Lean, 32 L. T. 305; 23 W. R. 484.

H., by his will, gave his property to trustees upon trust, to convert, or, in their discretion, to retain present investments. The estate was administered by the court, and, acting on the chief clerk's certificate, some of the investments were retained, and, in particular, several shares in the West Middlesex Waterworks, which were shown to have paid a high dividend, and also to have increased in value since the death of the testator. On a question as to the apportionment of the dividends on these shares between a tenant for life and remaindermen:—Held, that the tenant for life was only entitled to interest at 4 per cent. per annum on the value of the shares at the death of the testator. Furley v. Hyder, 42 L. J., Ch. 626.

A testator empowered his trustees at their discretion to continue all or any part of his personal estate in the state or investment in or upon which the same should be at his death, or otherwise to convert the same and to invest the proceeds in the names of the trustees in certain specified securities. At the death of the testator part of his personal estate consisted of securities not of a wasting nature and not specifically authorised. In an action for the administration of the estate the chief clerk found that some of these securities were proper to be continued, and that others were proper to be called in:—Held, that the tenants for life under the will were entitled to receive in specie the income of those unauthorised securities which were retained, and which were not of a wasting nature. Sheldon, In re, Nixon v. Sheldon, 58 L. J., Ch. 25; 39 Ch. D. 50; 59 L. T. 133; 37 W. R. 26.

A testator directed his trustees to get in and convert all his residue with all convenient speed, and invest in permanent securities, and pay the income to one for life, with remainder over: and then gave power to his trustees to suspend the conversion and sale as long as they should think proper, and directed that in case of any such suspension, the income of his estate in its actual investment should go as he had directed concerning the income of the estate got in and held in trust. The trustees had not up to the time of filing the bill, a period of more than two years, sold any part of the testator's estate, which consisted in part of leaseholds and other terminable securities:—Held, that the tenant for life was entitled to the actual income produced, and not, as in Dimes v. Scott (4 Russ. 495), to the amount which the estate, if converted, would have produced, there being no suggestion of any fraudulent favour shown by the trustees to the tenant for life at the expense of the remainderman. Morley v. Mendham, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 998.

A testator leaving property invested in a variety of securities, giving large time to realise, and ample powers to his trustees:—Held, that he intended, as between tenants for life and remaindermen, that the tenants for life should at once have the income both of the converted and unconverted property, in specie, as to that which was unconverted, and the actual income of that which was converted. Scholefield v. Redfern, 2 Dr. & Sm. 173; 32 L. J., Ch. 627; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 485; 8 L. T. 487; 11 W. R. 453.

The court will not make any apportionment of income, as between tenants for life and remaindermen, with reference to the increase or decrease of price arising out of the nearness or remoteness of a period of investments to or from the day when dividends are payable. Ib.

A testator, by will, directed his trustees to collect and convert into money such part of his personal estate as should not consist of money and to invest the same, and permit his wife to receive the annual income of the trust fund during her life, and he authorised his trustees to postpone from time to time the sale, calling in, collection, or conversion of any part of his personal estate, to such period or periods as they should in their judgment think fit, and to pay the rents, dividends, and produce of the same, or any part thereof not sold, called in, collected, or converted, to the same person or persons, and in the same manner as the income of the money to arise by such sale would be payable under the trusts thereinbefore declared. He, at the time of his death, was a partner in a mercantile firm, under articles of partnership, which provided that interest at 5*l.* per cent. should be allowed on the balances standing to the credit of the respective partners at the end of each year, before any division of the profits, and that, in the event of the decease of one or more of the partners during the term, the partnership should not cease, but the representatives of the deceased partners should be entitled to his share of the capital and profits up to the expiration of the term, and the survivors should pay to the representatives of the deceased partner the balance appearing to his credit at the expiration of the term, by three equal yearly instalments, with interest at 5*l.* per cent. in the meantime on the balance remaining unpaid. The trustees allowed the whole of the testator's capital to remain in the business until the expiration of the partnership by effluxion of time, and large profits were made after his death:—Held, that the widow was entitled to all the interest and profits arising from the testator's capital, as it stood at the first making up of the accounts after his death, together with a proportionate part of the interest on the balance standing to the testator's credit at the last previous making up of the accounts, for so much time as elapsed between his death and the next making up of the accounts. Johnston v. Moore, 27 L. J., Ch. 453; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 357; 6 W. R. 490.

A. bequeathed to his wife and three others 300,000*l.*, upon trust to invest in government or real securities, and to pay the interest to his wife for life, such legacy afterwards to fall into his residue. He bequeathed the residue of his real and personal estate to the same four persons, upon trust, with all convenient speed after his decease, to sell and convert, and invest the proceeds in parliamentary stocks or public funds, or in government or real securities, and to pay the income to his wife for life, and afterwards to transfer and assign the same over. He declared that it should be lawful for his trustees to permit and suffer all or any part of his residuary estate to remain in or upon the same securities or state of investment as they in their discretion should think proper. The testator appointed his wife sole executrix. Part of the residue having been suffered to continue in an investment which was unauthorised by the power, though not of a wasting kind, the tenant for life of the residue was nevertheless held entitled to the whole interest of such part of the residue as it stood, and not merely to interest from one year after the testator's death upon such a sum of consols as it would have purchased. Bulkeley v. Stephens, 3 N. R. 105; 10 L. T. 225.

That which has been stated as a rule in Dimes v. Scott (4 Russ. 209) is merely an adjustment of rights between tenant for life and remainderman, under special circumstances. Ib.

The legacy not having been appropriated, the tenant for life (who was also executrix and trustee) was held entitled to the income of the funds which represented it, in their actual state of investment, from the death of the testator. Ib.

Foreign stock, with the current dividend, having been sold by the trustees, with the consent of the tenant for life, and the proceeds of sale of the stock, exclusive of the dividend, having been invested in mortgage for her benefit, the tenant for life was held entitled to an apportioned part of the proceeds of the sale of the dividend. Ib.

Testator, by will, gave his residuary personal estate and effects to trustees, upon trust to convert the same and invest the proceed of sale as therein mentioned, with power in their absolute discretion to retain any existing securities or property at the time of his death unconverted for such period as they should think fit; and declared that his trustees should stand possessed of the "stocks, funds, shares, and securities for the time constituting or representing the residuary personal estate and effects hereinbefore bequeathed, and the income thereof," in trust to pay the income to certain tenants for life, with remainders over. At the testator's death part of his personal estate consisted of American railroad bonds repayable at par at a fixed date, but bearing a high rate of interest, and now commanding a considerable premium in the market. These were not authorised investments by the investment clause, but had been retained unconverted by the trustees under the power to retain existing securities:—Held, that the tenants for life were entitled to the net income of the unconverted property. Thomas, In re, Wood v. Thomas, 60 L. J., Ch. 781; [1891] 3 Ch. 482; 65 L. T. 142; 40 W. R. 75.

Where the trustees of a will held freehold and leasehold estates in trust for sale, with power to postpone at discretion:—Held, that the words of the will were insufficient to entitle the tenant for life to enjoy in specie the income arising from the leaseholds prior to the sale. Carter, In re, 41 W. R. 140.

—— Where Consent is required to the Exercise of a Trust or Power to Sell.]—Residuary gift of the whole income of the testator's property, which included leaseholds and long annuities, to his wife for her life, at her own disposal, but not to sell without the consent of all parties; remainder to the brothers of the testator equally:—Held, that construing the gift with reference to the other provisions of the will, the widow was entitled to the income of the property for her life in the state of investment in which it was left by the testator. Semble, in the application of the rule for converting into permanent investments at the death of the testator perishable property in which he has given interest for life, and other interests in succession, the inclination of the court in the latter cases, when the meaning was doubtful, has been in favour of that construction which would give to the tenant for life the enjoyment of the property in specie. Hinves v. Hinves, 3 Hare, 609.

Where a will gave no specific directions as to the payment of debts, the executor, who was also the ultimate residuary legatee, having taken on himself (after the trustees named in the will had renounced) to administer the estate, did not ascertain and secure the residue at the end of the year, but worked part of the property

(a coal mine), to a profit for several years, when it ceased to be of any value, on a bill, at the suit of the person having the charge on the residue, praying that the will might be established, and accounts taken:—Held, that the executor was not, after assuming to act as a trustee, entitled to postpone the sale of the property to the prejudice of the person having the charge on the residue; that, having postponed it, he was chargeable with the value of the mine at the end of a year from the testator's death, with interest thereon, and that that value must be calculated as constituted of the aggregate of the annual profits derived from the mine in all the subsequent years, till it became unproductive, such annual profits to be treated as deferred payments. Wightwick v. Lord, 6 H. L. Cas. 217; 26 L. J., Ch. 825; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 699; 5 W. R. 713.

L., by will, gave personal estate including his share in the business of a jeweller and gold and silversmith to executors with a direction to convert and invest and to vary investments, and with a discretion (the life-tenant consenting) to continue part of the estate in his business of jeweller and to increase the same:—Held, that the life-tenant was entitled to the profits of the business as the income of that part of the estate of the testator continued in the business with the life-tenant's consent. Lambert v. Lambert, 43 L. J., Ch. 106; L. R. 16 Eq. 320; 27 L. T. 59; 20 W. R. 943.

—— Trust for Accumulation.] — Testator directed residue of his personal estate subject to payment of legacies, &c., with all convenient speed to be laid out in real estate, to be strictly settled, and that interest should accumulate, and be laid out in lands, to be settled in like manner. Various circumstances having delayed the collection and investment of the personal estate, the tenant for life was held entitled to the interest from the end of a year after the death of testator. Sitwell v. Bernard, 6 Ves. 520; 5 R. R. 374. And see Macpherson v. Macpherson, 16 Jur. 847—H. L. (Sc.)

A testator directed his residuary personal estate to be invested in land from time to time, and at all convenient opportunities, and in the meantime to be accumulated:—Held, that the tenant for life of the land was entitled to the interest of the uninvested personalty, as from a year from the testator's death. Tucker v. Boswell, 5 Beav. 607.

Where residue directed to be laid out in land, and in meanwhile interest thereon to be accumulated, tenant for life held entitled to the interest from the end of the year after the testator's death, till residue laid out. Kilvington v. Gray, 2 Sim. & S. 396.

A testator directed his executors to get in his debts, and to invest the proceeds with the clear moneys he should die possessed of in consols, and to pay certain annuities out of the stocks standing in his name and those purchased by his executors, and out of the rents of the real estate if necessary; and to accumulate the surplus during the lives of the annuitants (a period which turned out to be more than twenty-one years). Part of the personal estate consisted of long annuities, which the executors did not convert, but accumulated with the other surplus income till the death of the annuitants. The income of the personal estate would have been more than sufficient to pay the annuitants if the long annuities had been converted:—Held, that the executors were not bound to convert the long annuities. Hughes v. Perrens, 1 Eq. Rep. 385.

—— Directions respecting Intermediate Income.] — Testator gave the residue of his personalty in trust to be converted by his executors from time to time, as they should think best, for payment of his debts and legacies, and subject thereto he directed them from time to time to invest the same, with the accumulated produce in the purchase of lands, to be conveyed to the same uses as other lands devised by the will, and he directed that the interest and produce of his said personal estate should be paid to the person who would under the will be entitled to the rents of the real estate:—Held, that the tenant for life was entitled to the income, from the testator's death, of such parts of the personal estate as were in a proper state of investment, and to the income of such parts only. Caldecott v. Caldecott, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 312; 11 L. J., Ch. 158; 6 Jur. 232.

A tenant for life held, upon the terms of the will, entitled to the actual income arising from the personal estate of the testator until the time of conversion. Sparling v. Parker, 9 Beav. 525; 10 Jur. 448.

—— Directions concerning Possession or Enjoyment of the Property.]—A testator gave to his widow "the full and entire enjoyment" of his real and personal estates, which, after her death, he gave to other persons; and he empowered her to retain a portion of a sum of 150*l.* a year given to other parties for renewing the leaseholds:—Held, she was entitled to enjoy the leaseholds in specie; that it was not imperative on her to renew, but that she had acted wrongly in surrendering a lease of which she was the only cestui que vie, as she thereby deprived herself of the option of renewing for the benefit of the parties in remainder. Harvey v. Harvey, 5 Beav. 134. And see 4 id. 215.

Testator after certain specific bequests gave to his wife all his property in the world for her life, and after his decease all his freehold and leasehold estates to his sister B., and her heirs, and the interest of his funded and other property between B. and S. for their respective lives, with remainders over. The testator then declared that his wife should hold peaceable possession of his house, furniture, plate, linen, and glass, and all his property at East House and elsewhere for her life; and that no distribution of any part of his property should take place until after the decease of his wife, except for payment of debts, &c.:—Held, that the widow was entitled to the enjoyment in specie of certain long annuities, part of the residue of the testator's estate. House v. Way, 18 L. J., Ch. 22; 12 Jur. 958.

A testator, by his will, charged all his real and personal estate with payment of his debts and legacies; he then devised all his real estates to trustees, to uses in strict settlement; he then bequeathed all his personal estate, charged as aforesaid, to the same trustees, "in trust, as far as the nature of such property will admit, for the persons who for the time being may have the ownership and be in possession of the said estates. And I hereby direct, that the said persons, under letters of attorney and powers from the said trustees, shall receive the yearly dividends which may arise out of the public funds, and the yearly interest which may arise from other parts of my personal property, under the same restrictions and limitations and to the same extent on which they hold my said estates" :—Held, that long annuities and bank stock were to be enjoyed in specie by the tenant for life. Neville v. Fortescue, 16 Sim. 333 ; 12 Jur. 908.

—— Directions concerning Rents, Profits, or other Annual Produce.]—Testator gave a residue including leaseholds upon trust to permit the "rents" and annual proceeds to be received by A. for life, and after his decease to C. and D., with powers to the trustees to apply the "rents" towards their maintenance, until their shares should become vested :—Held, that the leaseholds were to be enjoyed in specie by the tenant for life, and not to be converted. Goodenough v. Tremamondo, 2 Beav. 512.

Testator gave to his wife the whole of the interest arising from his property, both real and personal, during her life, and in case he should die without issue he gave, after the death of his wife, the whole of his property, both real and personal, to his brothers and sister. The testator died possessed of leasehold and also of real property :—Held, that the widow was not entitled to the leasehold property in specie during her life, but only to the dividends of stock to be purchased with the proceeds of the sale of it. Benn v. Dixon, 10 Sim. 636 ; 9 L. J., Ch. 259 ; 4 Jur. 575.

Testator bequeathed to his widow, subject to such annuities and insurances as he was liable to pay, "all the interests, rents, dividends, annual produce and profits, use and enjoyment of all his, the testator's, real and personal estate," for life, and, after giving certain legacies, he proceeded to give all the rest and residue of his estate and effects to his son-in-law :—Held, that the widow was entitled to enjoy the property of the testator, including a leasehold and a determinable annuity, in specie. Pickering v. Pickering, 2 Beav. 31 ; 3 Jur. 331. Affirmed 4 Myl. & C. 289 ; 8 L. J., Ch. 336 ; 3 Jur. 743.

A testator, by his will, as to the rest and residue of his moneys, debts, stocks, funds, and securities for money, and all other his personal estate and effects, gave and bequeathed the same, and every part thereof, unto trustees, upon trust to permit and suffer A. to have, receive, and take the interest, dividends, and proceeds thereof, during her natural life, to her own use and benefit ; and after the death of A., for other persons. The residue of the testator's estate consisted only of long annuities :—Held, that A. was not entitled to enjoy the long annuities in specie, and that they ought to be sold, and the produce invested for the equal benefit of all parties interested in the residue. James v. Gammon, 15 L. J., Ch. 217.

Testatrix bequeathed the residue of her estate, goods, chattels, and effects, which she should be possessed of, interested, or entitled to at her decease, to trustees, with very special directions to apply the whole of the income thereof for the benefit of her daughter (who was a lunatic), for life :—Held, nevertheless, that the bequest of the residue was not specific, and consequently that certain leasehold houses, which formed part of it, ought to be sold, and the proceeds invested in the 3 per cents. Chambers v. Chambers, 15 Sim. 183 ; 15 L. J., Ch. 318 ; 10 Jur. 326.

Testator willed that his wife should receive the interest of "all the property I possess in the public funds for her life" :—Held, that the wife was entitled to receive the income of all the property which the testator had in the funds at the date of his will, and in its then state of investment, notwithstanding it consisted of long annuities. Cockran v. Cockran, 14 Sim. 248 ; 8 Jur. 679.

After a specific gift of certain leasehold houses to the testator's wife for her life, she paying the ground rents and performing the covenants, with remainder over to his nephew, the testator bequeathed the "rents and profits, dividends and interest," of all the residue of his property to his wife for her life, with a gift over of the whole of the residue after her decease to other persons :—Held, that the widow was not entitled to the enjoyment in specie during her life of that part of the residue which consisted of leasehold and other perishable property, but that the same ought to be converted. Pickup v. Atkinson, 4 Hare, 624 ; 15 L. J., Ch. 213 ; 10 Jur. 303.

A testator, having 3½ per cents., East India stock, Danish bonds, and other property, bequeathed to his wife, during her widowhood, the interest of all the money he had or might possess in the funds or other securities. "And I further bequeath to my wife the interest of any other property I do or may possess, to be enjoyed by her so long as she remains single" :—Held, that the testator's widow was entitled, as against the residuary legatees, to enjoy, in specie, every portion of her husband's property which came within the description of money in the funds or other property, and consequently his 3½ per cents., East India stock and Danish bonds. Oakes v. Strachey, 13 Sim. 414 ; 7 Jur. 433.

A testator began his will by bequeathing the whole of his property to his wife, and afterwards to be equally divided between his children. He then gave to each of his children and to his wife some pecuniary and specific legacies, and afterwards bequeathed as follows : "the property, my house 21, North Street, St. Marylebone, let on lease at 48*l.* a year, 1,000*l.* new 4 per cents., 1,500*l.* in the 3 per cent. consols, 645*l.* in the threes reduced, and 20*l.* per annum in the long annuities, all this I give to my wife, with the residue and interest, should there be any" :—Held, that the widow took a life interest only in the general residue, including the particulars enumerated in the concluding clause, but that of those particulars she was entitled to the enjoyment in specie. Vaughan v. Buck, 6 Jur. 23.

A testator gave all his real and personal estate and effects, upon trusts to pay the rents and profits, dividends and interest, to a tenant for life, with trusts over in remainder ; and declared that notwithstanding the gift of his freehold and leasehold estates, the trustees might sell them, except his dwelling-house, at such time as they should think fit. The testator's estate consisted partly of leasehold property and long annuities :—Held, that the tenant for life was entitled to the enjoyment of the income of both these descriptions of property in specie. Burton v. Mount, 2 De G. & Sm. 383 ; 12 Jur. 934.

Residuary devise and bequest on trust to pay the dividends, interest, and annual produce of the testator's real and personal estates to the separate use of his daughter or daughters for life, and after her or their decease to pay, transfer, and equally divide the whole of his real and personal estate among the issue of his daughter or daughters : and for want of such issue to pay certain legacies, and to sell the residue of the real and personal estate, not consisting of money :

—Held, to entitle the tenant for life to the enjoyment of the personalty in specie. Hunt v. Scott, 1 De G. & Sm. 219.

A testator bequeathed all his money, securities for money, money in the funds, household furniture, cattle, and all other his personal estate and effects, unto two trustees, upon trust to pay his debts and legacies, and, subject to the payment of a legacy, to stand possessed upon the trusts after mentioned. He then devised his freehold estates to trustees, upon trust to permit his wife to reside at his house, and to use the household furniture, plate, linen, and china therein for her life, and to "pay the rents and profits of his real estate," and "the interest, dividends, and proceeds to arise from his said money, and securities for money, money in the funds, and personal estate therein before bequeathed," to her for life, and after her decease, to sell his real estate, and divide and pay the purchase moneys, "and pay, assign, or transfer his said money and securities for money, money in the funds, and personal estate," unto his children. The testator possessed long annuities and leaseholds :—Held, that they ought to be converted into 3 per cents., and that the widow was merely entitled to the dividends thereon. Morgan v. Morgan, 14 Beav. 72.

A testator, by his will, gave the interest of all moneys and securities for money, and the rents and profits of all the real and personal estates of which he might die possessed, to his widow for life, or during such part thereof as she should continue his widow. He gave his son the residue of his estate and effects. He was possessed of long annuities and chattel leaseholds :—Held, that those parts of the property were not to be converted, but that the widow was entitled to enjoy them in specie. Howe v. Howe, 14 Jur. 359.

A testator gave all his residuary real estate, and his stock, mortgages, and securities for money, and all other his personal estate and effects, to his wife and his son, upon trust for his wife for life, subject to an annuity for his son; and after her death, as to all the devised and bequeathed freehold, and residuary real and personal estate, of which his wife was to have the yearly interest, upon trust for his son absolutely. The testator left leaseholds as to which at the time of his death he was liable to the landlord for repairs, and they were afterwards repaired at the widow's expense :—Held, first, that the widow was entitled to the leaseholds in specie; secondly, that the repairs were to be borne by the residue, and not by the tenant for life. Harris v. Poyner, 1 Drew. 174; 21 L. J., Ch. 915; 16 Jur. 880.

A testator, after giving some legacies, proceeded: "the residue of my property, of every description it may be at my death, I bequeath the interest and proceeds thereof to" A. for life. He then gave the "interest and proceeds" to others for life, and after their deaths he bequeathed "the said residue" to another :—Held, that A. was not entitled to the specific enjoyment, and that the whole of the property, after giving some legacies, must be converted into consols. Thornton v. Ellis, 15 Beav. 193; 21 L. J., Ch. 714; 16 Jur. 236.

A testator gave the residue of his freehold, copyhold, and leasehold estates, and all other his estate and effects, upon trust to pay the dividends and interest, rents, profits, and annual produce to E. B. for life, with remainders over. This residue consisted of leasehold property, canal and insurance shares, and Dutch bonds :—Held, that the tenant for life was entitled to enjoy the leaseholds in specie, but not the shares or Dutch bonds. Blann v. Bell, 2 De G. M. & G. 775; 22 L. J., Ch. 236; 16 Jur. 1103.

A testator gave his freehold, copyhold, and leasehold estates, and all his stocks, shares, and personal estate to trustees, in trust to receive the "rents," issues, and profits, and thereout to keep the houses, &c., in good, substantial, and tenantable repair, and renew his leaseholds, &c., and then to pay "the net income arising from the residuary, real and personal estate," to his wife for life :—Held, first, that the wife was entitled to the enjoyment in specie; and secondly, that all ordinary repairs were to be paid out of the income, but not such extraordinary repairs as would amount to rebuilding the houses. Part of the testator's property being at his death invested on insufficient securities, an inquiry was also directed, whether any and which of the outstanding debts due to the testator should be got in. Crowe v. Crisford, 17 Beav. 507; 2 W. R. 45.

A testator gave the "residue of his estate and effects" to trustees, upon trust to sell sufficient to pay his debts, and after payment, to hold "his residuary estate and effects," in trust to pay "thereout," interest, dividends, and annual produce to A. for life. There was a power to let and sell with the consent of A. :—Held, that A. was entitled to enjoy leaseholds in specie. Hind v. Selby, 22 Beav. 373.

A testator having freeholds, gave "all his real and personal estate" upon trust, "out of the rents and profits of his real and personal estate," to pay his widow sufficient for her maintenance; and on her death he devised "all his real and personal estate" to the children :—Held, that the trustee was not bound to convert the leasehold property. Wearing v. Wearing, 23 Beav. 99.

Devise of residue of real and personal estate on trust to permit A. to "receive and take the rents, issues, and profits" for life, with remainder over :—Held, that A. was entitled to enjoy leaseholds and railway stock in specie. Vachell v. Roberts, 32 Beav. 140.

A testator gave the residue of his estate and effects in trust to pay "the annual proceeds to his wife" for life, and after her death to divide his "residuary estate and effects" between his nephews and nieces; and he directed that his nephews, in the division, should take such parts of the joint property as he held with them. Part of the joint property was leasehold :—Held, that the tenant for life was entitled to enjoy the whole perishable property in specie. Holgate v. Jennings, 24 Beav. 623.

A. gave his real and personal estate to trustees, to permit his wife to receive "the income arising from one-third" for her life, with remainder to his children. And to facilitate the ultimate devise, he authorised them to convert his personal estate into money and to sell his real estate. And he authorised his trustees to permit any part of his personal estate to remain in the state of investment in which it might be at his death, and to invest his residuary personal estate in the public funds, &c., and, from time to time, to alter and vary the securities :—Held, that the widow was not entitled to enjoy leaseholds and perishable property in specie. Llewellyn's Trust, In re, 29 Beav. 171.

A. bequeathed to his widow "the interest, dividends, or income of all moneys or stock," and

"of all the property whatsoever yielding income at his death," for her life, the principal to remain untouched, and at her death to be divided amongst his children:—Held, that the widow was entitled to enjoy the residue in specie. Boys v. Boys, 28 Beav. 436.

E. devised and bequeathed all his freehold, and leasehold, and personal estates to trustees, and after directing conversion of his stock-in-trade, and payment of debts, directed that the trustees should, out of the annual rents and produce of the real and personal estate, pay to the persons named certain shares of the rents and produce for their lives, and with remainders over in favour of grandchildren. The will gave power to the trustees to invest all principal moneys which should arise from his real and personal estate, and declared that the receipts of the trustees for the purchase-money of the hereditaments and premises sold should be good discharges to the purchasers; but it contained no express trust for sale, and no power of sale was expressly given. Some of the leasehold property was held on terms, of which only eleven years remained:—Held, that the words of gift, which directed an enjoyment of the leasehold property in specie, were not controlled by the subsequent words in the will, and that the trustees were not bound to convert. Elmore's Will, In re, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1325; 3 L. T. 359; 9 W. R. 66.

A testatrix directed that the interest and dividends of all the residue of her property should be applied by her trustees for the benefit and comfort of her sister during her life. Part of the residue so bequeathed consisted of terminable annuities:—Held, that the annuities must be converted, and the income arising from the investment of the proceeds paid to the tenant for life. Pidgeon v. Spencer, 16 L. T. 83.

A testator gave his residuary estate to trustees in trust to convert into money such parts as should not at his decease consist in money or be invested in any of the public funds or government securities, and to invest the same in such public funds or government securities as to them should seem most advantageous, and to pay the interest, dividends, and annual proceeds of such residue to his children in equal shares for their lives, and after their deaths upon other trusts:—Held, that long annuities, of which the testator died possessed, were within the exception from the trust for conversion, and that the tenants for life were entitled to enjoy them in specie. Wilday v. Sandys, L. R. 7 Eq. 455; 20 L. T. 861; 17 W. R. 603.

A husband gave the residue of his estate, real and personal, to trustees to pay to his wife the rents, issues, and profits for life for her own absolute use and benefit, and after making bequests of leaseholds, but not directing conversion, and of moneys, he gave the residue of his estate to five persons named equally. He authorised and empowered his trustees to allow the moneys which he possessed to remain in the same state of investment in which they should find them at his decease, unless circumstances should render it advisable to dispose of his bank shares. The testator's estate consisted of a sum of long annuities:—Held, that the widow was not entitled to enjoy the annuities in specie, but that they must be treated as having been converted at the death of the testator. Porter v. Baddeley, 5 Ch. D. 542.

A testator gave specific bequests by his will, and to his niece a leasehold house held for lives together with a policy of insurance on one of the lives, and all bonuses and additions, she paying the future premiums; and he directed that, if she should be married at his death, the house and policy should be settled on her and her children; and he gave the residue of his personal estate, including his furniture, to L. After the date of the will the testator married, and he then made a codicil, giving to his wife all the income, dividends, and annual proceeds of his entire estate, and postponing the payment of all legacies and the distribution of all estates vested in him until after her decease. Subject thereto he confirmed and republished his will. A portion of the property consisted of Egyptian 7 per cent. bonds of the nominal amount of 4,000*l*. On a bill by the widow for the administration of his estate, and claiming the enjoyment of all the estate in specie during her life:—Held, that there was nothing to exempt the case from the operation of the rule in Howe v. Dartmouth (Earl) (7 Ves. 137), and that therefore the residuary estate, including the furniture and bonds, ought to be converted, and the income paid to the widow. Macdonald v. Irvine, 47 L. J., Ch. 494; 8 Ch. D. 101; 38 L. T. 155; 26 W. R. 381.

Held, also, that the bonuses ought to be added to the sum insured and not taken in reduction of the premiums; but that the premiums ought not to be charged on the rents of the leasehold property, but should be charged upon the policy money. Ib.

Testator, after bequeathing certain leaseholds for years to A., who died in the testator's lifetime, and after bequeathing several legacies, gave and bequeathed to trustees all his moneys in the long annuities and other of the public stocks or funds, ready money and securities for money, outstanding debts, and all the rest, residue, and remainder of his estate and effects whatsoever and wheresoever, upon trust, in the first place, by sale thereof, or of so much thereof as should be necessary for that purpose, to pay thereout all his debts, and funeral and testamentary expenses, and the legacies by him thereinbefore given, and, subject thereto, to pay the dividends and interest thereof to B. for life, and after B.'s decease to permit C. to have the dividends and interest for life, and after the decease of the survivor of B. and C. he bequeathed the principal of the said trust fund to the children of D.:—Held, that the tenants for life were not entitled to the enjoyment in specie of the rents of the leaseholds and the dividends of the stock, but that the leaseholds and stock must be invested so as to be permanently productive for the persons entitled to it according to the limitations of the will. Sutherland v. Cooke, 1 Coll. 498; 14 L. J., Ch. 71; 8 Jur. 1088.

A husband died on the 20th of December, 1870, having bequeathed the residue of his personal estate to trustees to invest as therein mentioned, and then to permit and empower his wife to receive "the dividends, interest and income of his trust money, stocks, funds, shares and securities" for her life; and on her death to permit his brother to receive the residue (after the payment thereout of certain legacies) of the same dividends, interest and income, for his life, with remainder to one of his brother's children and another legatee as therein mentioned. At his death the testator had twenty-five shares in the Sun Life Assurance Society, and fifty-two in the Sun Fire Insurance Office. The trustees of the will paid his widow the dividends on those shares till 1873, when they withheld the January and July dividends on the respective shares, on the ground that it was doubtful whether the dividends were corpus, or income, of the estate. The question depended on the construction of the company's deed of settlement, and on the mode in which the company had declared the dividends, which were called extraordinary and special. The resolutions under which the dividends were declared were not produced to the court; but it was stated that they were identical in terms with the dividend warrants; and the warrants spoke of the money payable thereunder as dividend paid out of profits. The trustees paid the money into court; and the widow presented a petition praying payment of it out to her:—Held, that the dividends were income and not corpus of the estate and belonged to the widow. Hopkins' Trusts, In re, 43 L. J., Ch. 722; L. R. 18 Eq. 696; 30 L. T. 627; 22 W. R. 687.

—— Property continued in Trade.]—A testator gave his real and personal estate to trustees in trust to permit his wife to receive the "annual produce, interest, rents and profits thereof," for life; and after death in trust to stand seised and possessed of the said real and personal estate for A. and B. And he directed his trustees to carry on his partnership trade in which he was engaged, or such part as they should think proper, for the benefit of his wife and those in remainder. Sir John Leach held that the widow was entitled to any increase in the value of the testator's capital which took place between the death and the expiration of the partnership, but the decision was reversed on appeal. Mousley v. Carr, 4 Beav. 49; 10 L. J., Ch. 260.

By partnership articles the testator's capital was to remain in the concern for eighteen months after his death. The tenant for life of the residue was held, upon the terms of the will, entitled to the profits made during that period. Skirring v. Williams, 24 Beav. 275; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 927.

A. authorised his executors to enter into a partnership with his brother on such terms as they should think fit, and leave his capital therein. The executors did so, and the articles of partnership stipulated that interest at 5*l.* per cent. should be paid on the capital, and that part of the executor's profits should be left in the concern "as additional capital":—Held, that the tenant for life was entitled to the interest, but that the share of the profits retained as additional capital must, as between the tenant for life and remainderman, be considered as capital, and not income. Stroud v. Gwyer, 28 Beav. 130; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 719; 2 L. T. 400.

A testator directed that his widow should receive the income of his property, however invested, from the time of his death. The testator was a member of a partnership, by the articles of which accounts were to be taken once in each year. Each partner was then to receive interest on his capital, and the remaining profits were to be divided equally:—Held, that the widow was entitled to the whole of the testator's share of the profits divisible at the end of the current year, but that she was only entitled to interest on the capital from the time of the testator's death. Ibbetson v. Elam, 35 Beav. 594; L. R. 1 Eq. 188; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 114; 14 W. R. 241.

A sole trader by his will gave "the annual or other earnings, proceeds and profits to arise from his business," to one for life, with remainders over:—Held, that, in ascertaining these proceeds and profits, interest on his capital in his business was not to be first deducted. Gee v. Liddell, 35 Beav. 631, 658.

Where a testatrix, after giving specific chattels, bequeathed her residuary estate to R., on trust to sell all the estate, except the leasehold house in which she had carried on business, declared it to be her will and mind that R. should employ W., then in her service, to carry on and conduct the business until the expiration of the lease, allowing him a reasonable salary; and that after the expiration of the lease, R. should sell the business, goodwill, &c.; and then bequeathed pecuniary legacies, and the residue to the plaintiff:—Held, that the plaintiff was not entitled to have an immediate sale of the leasehold house. Saunders v. Rotherham, 3 Giff. 557; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 66; 7 L. T. 185; 10 W. R. 505.

A testator directed that his business should be carried on for the benefit of his widow or until her second marriage, with powers to the trustees to carry on the same; and to "increase or abridge his business, and his capital, stock and implements therein," and generally to act "as most advantageous and mostly for the benefit of the persons claiming under his will." He also directed that all his debts, funeral and testamentary expenses, and the "costs, charges and expenses of carrying into effect the trusts of his will," should be paid out of the capital of the business:—Held, that the widow was entitled for life or until second marriage, to the whole of the profits made by such business after the testator's death; the cash at the banker's and the trade debts being the assets or part of the capital of such business. Dixon v. Dutfield, 5 L. T. 741.

Held, also, that the debts, funeral and testamentary expenses, and the costs of a suit, should be borne out of the capital of such business; the testator having exonerated his residuary estate from any such or similar charges. Ib.

The testator having directed his property to be converted and invested, and the dividends paid to his children for life, with remainder to their children after their deaths, and the court being of opinion that it would be for the benefit of all parties that the business should be carried on, the tenants for life were allowed out of the profits, 5*l.* per cent. on the capital for the time being in the business, the surplus to be accumulated and to go with the capital. Some of the tenants for life had drawn larger sums out of the profits than others. It was ordered that the drawings should be equalised, but no allowance should be made of interest on the sums which had been allowed to remain in the business. Lambert v. Rendle, 3 N. R. 247.

A direction in a will empowering trustees to postpone the sale and conversion of any part of testator's property for such period as to them should seem expedient, justifies the trustees in postponing the sale of testator's business, and in carrying on the business with a view to benefit the tenant for life, who is entitled to the profits till sale. Crowther, In re, Midgley v. Crowther, 64 L. J., Ch. 537; [1895] 2 Ch. 56; 13 R. 496; 72 L. T. 762; 43 W. R. 571.

A testator devised and bequeathed his real and personal estate upon the usual trusts for sale and conversion, the proceeds to be invested and to be held upon trust for his wife for life, and after her death for his children. The will contained a power to postpone the sale and conversion of the real and personal estate, and a direction that until sale and conversion, the rents, profits and income thereof should be paid to the same persons and applied in the same manner as the income of the trust estate. The will contained no reference whatever to the business of the testator, which comprised the bulk of his estate. The executors carried on the business for nearly two years with a view to its sale as a going concern, and the question arose whether the profits of the business during that period were to be treated as capital or income:—Held, that the executors had power to carry on the business for a reasonable period with a view to its sale as a going concern; and that, as the testator had expressly directed that the profits of his personal estate until conversion were to be treated as income, the general rule laid down in Howe v. Dartmouth (Earl) did not apply, and therefore the widow was entitled to the profits of the business. Chancellor, In re, Chancellor v. Brown, 53 L. J., Ch. 443; 26 Ch. D. 42; 51 L. T. 33; 32 W. R. 465—C. A.

—— Colliery.]—A father bequeathed all his real and leasehold estates, part of which consisted of leasehold collieries, to trustees upon trust, as to one moiety for his daughter E. for life, with remainder to her husband T. for life, with remainder to their eldest son who should attain twenty-one absolutely, and in default, to the eldest daughter, with power to E. and T. to appoint portions to their other children, to be raised out of the testator's real and personal estate, and upon trust as to the other moiety for the separate use of his daughter C. (then a spinster) for life, with remainder (subject to a power to C. to appoint a part of the income to any surviving husband) upon trust for C.'s eldest son, with remainder, in default of children, in trust as to the other moiety. There was a power in the will to appoint portions to be raised and paid out of the "real and personal estates respectively," and a power to C. to appoint part of the "rents, issues and profits, dividends and annual income" to a surviving husband, and a power of advancement out of the "income and annual produce" of the respective moieties. There was also a power to the trustees to lease all or any part of the freehold or leasehold estate, and from time to time to sell and convert all or any part of the trust estates, and, in case the trustees should deem it beneficial "to conduct, carry on and continue the collieries," and "either to increase or abridge the business thereof," all losses, costs, charges and expenses of carrying on the business to be borne, paid and defrayed out of the real and personal estate, and to procure any leases of the collieries to be renewed, and to continue the business thereof after such renewal. The trustees carried on the business, and renewed several of the leases:—Held, that the testator intended the tenants for life to enjoy the profits of the collieries in specie. Thursby v. Thursby, 44 L. J. Ch. 289; L. R. 19 Eq. 395; 32 L. T. 187; 23 W. R. 500.

A husband bequeathed to his wife a life interest in his one-seventh of a colliery of which he was a partner. By the deed of partnership, the majority in value of the partners had power to dispose of the profits by adding them to the capital or dividing them between the partners or carrying them to the separate accounts of the partners. For several years profits were made, but retained to the credit of a profit-and-loss account. Afterwards profits were divided, but at the death of the tenant for life a large sum remained to the credit of the profit-and-loss account, the greater part of which had been sunk in the works of the colliery:—Held, that the share of the testator in the sum standing to the credit of the profit-and-loss account belonged to the persons entitled in remainder, and not to the executor of the tenant for life. Straker v. Wilson, 40 L. J., Ch. 630; L. R. 6 Ch. 503; 24 L. T. 763; 19 W. R. 761.

—— Brewery.]—A brewer, who carried on trade upon leasehold premises, gave his freeholds, leaseholds, shares in the brewery, moneys and personal estate to trustees upon trust, after raising an annuity and portions, "to pay to or permit and suffer or well and sufficiently to authorise and empower his son and his assigns to receive and take the interest, dividends and annual income for life." The court, though of opinion upon the context that, if there had been no question as to the trade, the son would have been entitled to enjoy the leasehold property for life, in specie, yet thinking that there was not sufficient to authorise the carrying on of the trade, held, that the testator's property ought to have been converted on the testator's death. Kirkman v. Booth, 11 Beav. 273; 18 L. J., Ch. 25; 13 Jur. 525.

—— Cotton Mills.]—H., having a cotton manufactory and other property situate at H. and W., and a freehold estate at B., unconnected with his manufactory, by will gave to trustees all his freehold estates at B., and also all his freehold and leasehold property at H. and W., and all his real and personal estate and effects upon trust to carry on the cotton manufactory, for which purpose he authorised them to retain as much ready money as a capital in the business as by them might be considered necessary; and he directed, that at the end of every twelve months, provided his daughters L. and E. were living, the profits, if any, and the surplus income from the H. and W. estates, after paying the annuities charged thereon, and retaining a sufficient capital to carry on the manufactory, should be equally divided between his two daughters; but if the trustees were not inclined to carry on the business, they were to let the premises, and the reserved capital was to be equally divided between L. and E., and also the surplus rents of H. and W. The testator then gave estate B. to his daughter E. for life, remainder to her issue, share and share alike; remainder to L. for life, remainder to her issue; and if L. should die without issue, and E. should leave issue, such issue was to have the whole of the estates in B., H. and W., and all other his real and personal estates and effects; and if both L. and E. should die without leaving issue, "then the whole of the rents, profits and interests of all my estates, real and personal, situate in B., W. and H., to be paid to R. H." The trustees carried on the manufactory, retaining a very large sum for capital. L. and E. both died without leaving issue:—Held, that the daughters took absolutely all the testator's personal estate not retained by the trustees for capital; but that what was so retained was to be considered as annexed to, or as passing with, the H. and W. estates to R. H. Ashton v. Horsfield, 6 Jur., (N.S.) 355; 2 L. T. 1; 8 W. R. 285—H. L. (E.)

—— Farming Stock.]—A general residuary bequest, including a leasehold farm, with the stock, to be converted into money as soon as conveniently may be, upon trust to pay the interest, &c., for life, and as to the capital for the children. The stock being considerably increased between the death in April and the sale at Michaelmas, it was decreed that the conversion was in a reasonable time; and the party entitled for life should have interest from the conversion. Gibson v. Bott, 7 Ves. 89; 6 R. R. 87.

A testator directed his trustees to apply a sufficient part of his personal estate in carrying on his farm till the termination of his lease therein; and to employ the annual profits for the benefits of his wife for life, and then of his children; and, at the end of the lease, to sell the stock then on the farm, and apply it upon the trusts of the will. The trustees refused to act, and the widow carried on the farm; and, after applying a sufficient part for the maintenance of herself and children, employed the rest of the annual profits in purchasing stock, so that, at the end of the lease, the stock on the farm was of much greater value than that which was originally employed in carrying on the farm:—Held, that the widow was not entitled to the increased value of the stock on the farm at the end of the lease, although it had arisen in a great measure from the application by her of the surplus profits each year in purchasing stock. Whiting v. Whiting, 5 Jur. 1127.

Under a gift of farming stock to one for life, with remainder over, the first taker does not become absolutely entitled to such of the articles comprised in the gift as are of a consumable nature, but if he enjoys it in specie he must keep up the amount of it, and if it has to be sold he will only be entitled to the income produced by the proceeds. Cockayne v. Harrison, 41 L. J., Ch., 509; L. R. 13 Eq. 432; 26 L. T. 385; 20 W. R. 504.

Money Lent in Breach of Trust.]—Trustees, without authority, lent trust moneys at interest at 5*l.* per cent.:—Held, that the tenant for life was entitled to the whole interest, and that the remainderman had no right to insist that the excess of the interest beyond the dividends which would have been produced if the money had been invested in consols formed capital. Strond v. Gwyer, 28 Beav. 130; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 719; 2 L. T. 400.

Setting Value on Property.]—A testator gave the residue of his real and personal estate to trustees, upon trust to pay or permit his widow to receive the income and profits, and after her death he gave the capital over. The will contained no direction as to the conversion of his estate. Part of the testator's estate consisted of 12,000*l.*, invested in a partnership. Under a stipulation in the deed of partnership, the surviving partner gave a warrant of attorney to the executors of the testator, securing payment of the 12,000 by instalments of 1,500*l.* a year, with interest at 5 per cent. on the unpaid balances:—Held, that the rule laid down in Howe v. Dartmouth (Earl) (7 Ves. 137), as applied to this case, required the trustees not to convert the property, but to set a value upon it, and to give the tenant for life 4*l.* per cent. on the value, and to invest the residue of the surplus income, paying the income of these investments to the tenant for life, and appropriating the corpus to the remainderman. Meyer v. Simonsen, 5 De G. & Sm. 723; 21 L. J., Ch. 678. And see Gibson v. Bott, 7 Ves. 89; 6 R. R. 87.

Where a part of the assets was so situated that it could not be realised immediately without loss to the estate, and was producing 5*l.* per cent., the tenant for life held entitled, in the meanwhile, to 4*l.* per cent. on the value. Llewellyn's Trust, In re, 29 Beav. 171.

A testator directed his executors to convert his personal estate, when and in such manner as they should see fit, with power to sail his ships for the benefit of his estate, till they could be satisfactorily sold. He gave his residuary estate to tenants for life, with remainders over, and gave his executors power to invest at their discretion, or to allow to remain as then invested, all his funds in certain specified securities. His ships gained considerable earnings after his death:—Held, that the tenants for life were not entitled to the earnings of the ships as income; but that they were entitled to interest at 4 per cent. on the value of the ships from the testator's death. Brown v. Gellatly, L. R. 2 Ch. 751; 17 L. T. 131; 15 W. R. 1188.

A testatrix, being possessed of reversionary interests, bequeathed them to a tenant for life, with remainder over. Before the reversionary interests fell into possession, the devisee for life died. The reversionary interests having afterwards fallen in:—Held, that, in estimating what was due to the estate of the devisee for life, the value of the reversions must be calculated as at the end of a year from the testatrix's death, on the assumption that they would fall in when they actually did; and that the devisee for life was entitled to 4*l.* per cent. on that amount from the death. Wright v. Lambert, 6 Ch. D. 649; 26 W. R. 206.

Where a will contains an implied but no specific direction for conversion of the property, and by an innocent mistake it has been left upon the original security, and the income enjoyed by the tenant for life in specie, the court, upon the mistake being rectified, will at its discretion allow the tenant for life interest at the rate of 4*l.* per cent. per annum upon the value of the property as taken at the expiration of one year from the testator's death. Sutherland v. Cooke, 1 Coll. 503; 14 L. J., Ch. 71; 9 Jur. 224.

Residuary personal estate of a testator, which, at the time of his death, stood invested in securities not recognised by this court, having been valued by the master, as at the period of one year after the testator's death, the court ordered the interest on the value so taken (not exceeding 4 per cent.) to be paid to the tenant for life from the testator's death. Caldecott v. Caldecott, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 737; 11 L. J., Ch. 414; 6 Jur. 1032.

Gift of residue to the testator's sister, confirmed in a codicil, but with a desire "that the same should be invested in any way my executors think proper," in trust for her sole benefit during her lifetime, and at her death for her children:—Held, that she was not entitled to the income of leaseholds and other parts of the testator's estate, consisting of investments not usually authorised by the court, which had remained for some time unconverted, but only to interest on their value at 4 per cent. Green v. Britten, 42 L. J., Ch. 187; 27 L. T. 811.

—— In other Cases.]—A testator gave to his wife all and every part of his property, in every shape, and without any reserve, for her life; and at her death the property so left to be divided, one-half among certain persons mentioned, the other half to be at the sole disposal of his wife. Part of the testator's property was leasehold:—Held, that the persons to whom a moiety of the testator's property was given over were not entitled to have the leasehold property sold, but that the widow was entitled to enjoy it for her life. Collins v. Collins, 2 Myl. & K. 703.

Part of a residuary estate, settled on one for life, with remainder to her issue, consisted of life annuities and policies on the lives for securing the principal money. The court, seeing it for the benefit of all parties, did not order a sale, but directed the policies to be kept up, and that the surplus annuities should be paid to the tenant for life. Glengall v. Barnard, 5 Beav. 245.

Where the testator directed that the residue might be employed in any manner his executors should think proper:—Held, that they were not liable for not investing it in 3 per cent. consols as in ordinary cases. Dickinson v. Player, C. P. Cooper, 178; 2 Jur. 870.

In a suit for administration instituted by the administrator, who was also the first tenant for life of the estate under the will, orders were made for the sale of bank stock and East India stock, and for the realisation of other funds and securities, and the investment of the proceeds in consols, but such orders were not prosecuted:—Held, in a suit by the next tenant for life, that the estate of the administrator, plaintiff in the first suit, was liable for the loss or damage occasioned to the estate of the original testator by the neglect or omission to carry into effect the directions of the said orders. Sowerby v. Clayton, 3 Hare, 430; 8 Jur. 597.

Upon the construction of a will:—Held, that the testator's widow was not entitled to enjoy the testator's residuary property for her life in specie. Johnson v. Johnson, 2 Coll. 441; 10 Jur. 279.

A testatrix gave her property, with certain exceptions, to her granddaughter, and afterwards stated "that her property was in the bank and India House":—Held (assuming her to take for life), that she was entitled to enjoy the Bank and India stock in specie, and that it was not liable to be converted into consols. Hubbard v. Young, 10 Beav. 203; 16 L. J., Ch. 182; 11 Jur. 177.

Tenant for life held to be entitled to the income of the real and personal estate in specie. Simpson v. Earles, 11 Jur. 921.

The testator in the cause, by his will gave and bequeathed all the residue of his property, including the lease of the cottage in which he resided, unto his daughter C. for her life, upon trust that she should either allow her sister E. to live with her, rent free, in the said cottage while that lease should last, or, if from any cause whatever the said sisters should not life together and after the said lease should expire, pay to the said E. the yearly sum of 20*l*., by equal quarterly payments, the first payment to be made three months after they should cease to live together, or the said lease should have expired; and after the decease of his said daughter C., he gave the residue to his said daughter E., for her life, and after her decease, to his son S. absolutely. An administration suit having been instituted against the personal representative of the testator, the furniture in the cottage was (with the exception of certain articles) sold under an order, made at the hearing, to sell the personal estate not specifically bequeathed; and, by the master's report, it appeared that the testator had been only tenant from year to year of the cottage;—Held, on the hearing for further directions, that the furniture of the cottage was intended to be enjoyed by the tenants for life as specifically as the lease itself, and that they were entitled to retain in their possession the articles of furniture which still remained unsold. Cotton v. Cotton, 14 Jur. 950.

A testator devised his real and personal estate to trustees, upon trust to sell and put out one-ninth of the produce in government or real securities, and to pay the interest to A. for life, and afterwards to her children. By a codicil, he bequeathed a leasehold to the trustees, to hold upon the same trusts, in all respects, and for the same persons and subject to the same powers, provisoes, conditions and limitations, as the above one-ninth:—Held, that A. was not entitled to enjoy the leasehold in specie, but that it must be sold and invested for the benefit of the parties entitled in succession. Murton v. Markby, 18 Beav. 196.

The rule, that residuary property of a wasting nature is to be converted for the benefit of those in remainder, will not be followed where the testator has given indications of a contrary intention. Simpson v. Lester, 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1269.

A testator devised and bequeathed the whole of his property, comprising freeholds, leaseholds and personalty, to trustees, upon trust for the payment of annuities, and, subject thereto, for certain persons for life, with remainder to others, their heirs, executors, administrators, or assigns. The leasehold property belonging to the testator was considerable, and was held for short terms:—Held, that there being no indication upon the face of the will of any intention on the part of the testator that the leaseholds should not be converted, the general principle must be applied, and there must be a conversion. Craig v. Wheeler, 29 L. J., Ch. 374; 8 W. R. 172.

A testator gave his property to trustees for the benefit of his wife for her life, and after her decease to be equally divided among his ten children, the object being that during the widow's life she might have the means of bringing up her children. One of the children became insolvent, and, on a claim for the administration of the testator's estate, filed by assignees in insolvency, and praying that the widow might be ordered to convert certain leaseholds and long annuities, and to invest the money in court, instead of enjoying the income in specie:—Held, upon the construction of the will, and considering that the testator's object was to provide not only for his widow, but also for his children during her life, that she was entitled to the income in specie, and that the plaintiffs were not entitled to costs in prosecuting a claim in such a case. Marshall v. Bremner, 2 Sm. & G. 237; 2 W. R. 320.

Testator gave all his freehold and leasehold messuages, lands and hereditaments, ready money, securities for money, stock in the public funds, goods, chattels and effects, and all other his real and personal estates and effects, to trustees, in trust to pay the rents of his freehold and leasehold estates, and the dividends, interest and proceeds of his money in the funds, and other, his said personal estate, to his daughter for life, and after her death to stand possessed of his said freehold and leasehold estates, money in the funds, and all other his real and personal estate for the children of his daughter, and in default of such children in trust to pay the rents of his said freehold and leasehold estates, and the dividends, interests and proceeds of his said stock in the funds, and other his said personal estate, to his nephews for their lives, and after their deaths in trust to stand possessed of his freehold and leasehold money in the funds, and other his said personal estate, for their children; and in default of such children, he gave his said freehold and leasehold estates, stock in the funds, and all other his said real and personal estate, to the corporation of S., in trust, as soon as conveniently might be after they should come into possession thereof, to sell the said freehold and leasehold estates, and also to sell, call in and convert into money his said stock in the public funds, and all other his said personal estate, and to lend the same to certain persons, upon the terms therein mentioned. The testator at the date of his will, and at his death, was possessed of leasehold estates, turnpike securities, bank stock, and other personal estate:—Held, that the bequest to the trustees was a general residuary bequest, and that the leasehold and bank stock ought to be sold, and the proceeds invested in 3 per cents.; and an inquiry was directed, whether the turnpike securities, were real and permanent securities. Mills v. Mills, 7 Sim. 501; 4 L. J., Ch. 266.

A direction that the trustees should retain a percentage on the rents to be collected, fortified by other expressions in the will, regarded as evidence that the testator contemplated the enjoyment of the leasehold property in specie by the legatees. Cafe v. Bent, 5 Hare, 36.

Where the general intention is to give a tenant for life interest upon the entire amount of a residue, the court has given him the benefit of property which never was realised during his life. In the same manner, the court will make proper arrangements, so as to make available for the remainderman the property which the testator intended for him. Coote v. Milltown (Lord), 1 Jo. & Lat. 501; 7 Ir. Eq. R. 391.

Where an annuity for a term of years forms part of a residue, the executors, until they can sell it, must invest the payments; and interests of the investments will belong to the tenant for life of the residue. Crawley v. Crawley, 7 Sim. 427; 4 L. J., Ch. 265.

A testator gave "all his freehold, copyhold and leasehold estates, and all other his real and personal estate," to trustees, upon trust to get in all money due to him on "mortgages, bonds or other securities, and rents," and after payment of debts and legacies, to lay out the residue in the public stocks or funds; and as to one-half of his "freehold, copyhold and leasehold estates, and all the trust moneys, stocks, funds and securities, and all other his real and personal estates," upon trust for A. and B. for life, and "the inheritance and capital," after their decease, to be in trust for the children of one of them:—Held, that terminable government annuities, and annuities for years charged on parish rates and furniture, &c., forming part of the testator's estate, ought to be converted into consols, but that the leaseholds were to be enjoyed in specie. Hood v. Clapham, 19 Beav. 90; 24 L. J., Ch. 193; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 78; 3 W. R. 78.

A testator gave all his property, both real and personal, to his wife for life, and he authorised her, with the consent of his executors, to sell or exchange any part of his property. After her death, he gave all his property, both real and personal, to his daughters, and afterwards to their children:—Held, that the tenants for life were not entitled to enjoy the property in specie, but that the perishable part must be converted. Jebb v. Tugwell, 20 Beav. 84; 24 L. J., Ch. 433; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 460; 3 W. R. 278.

A testator gave all his residuary estate, including leasehold estates, some of which were reversionary, to his trustees for his wife for life, and after her death to be divided into seven shares for the benefit of his seven children, and if W., one of his sons, should die under twenty-one, his share to accrue to the testator's other children living at his death, or their issue. The shares of the daughters were settled. The hotchpot clause provided that his son J. and his daughters H. and C. should bring in 1,000*l.* each before division of his residuary estate. W. died before the testator under twenty-one. The other six children survived him and attained twenty-one. C., one of the daughters named in the hotchpot clause, and her husband died in the widow's lifetime leaving children. The widow died in 1865:—Held, first, that the trustees were not bound to have converted the leasehold property on the death of the widow; secondly, that the share which accrued to the daughters of the testator on W.'s death was subject to the settlement trusts declared concerning their original shares; thirdly, that the hotchpot clause applied to the children of C., so that they must bring in 1,000*l.* before a division of the testator's residuary estate. Lane v. Brown, 23 L. T. 152.

Where a railway company took leaseholds, whereof one was tenant for life in specie, the court directed that the invested purchase-money, or so much as from time to time remained, and the interest thereon should, in each year, be divided by the number of years which would have remained yet unexpired of the lease, had it still existed, and that the amount of the quotient should be paid yearly to the tenant for life. Littlewood v. Pattison, 10 Jur. (N.S.) 875; 10 L. T. 875.

Where a term of years is bequeathed to a legatee for life with remainder over, and the legatee for life having joined with the executors in selling and assigning the term to a purchaser for a sum of stock survives the duration of the term, the legatee for life, and not the legatee in remainder, is entitled to the stock, although the latter was not a party to the sale. Phillips v. Sargent, 7 Hare, 33.

—— Rents.]—A receiver over a life estate continued in receipt of the rents after the death of the tenant for life, whose widow subsequently obtained a decree against the remainderman, appointing the same receiver over the lands, for an arrear of jointure:—Held, that the rents received by the receiver between the death of the tenant for life and the decree belonged to the remainderman as bygone rents. Guinness v. Cottingham, Ir. R. 7 Eq. 109.

—— Rents and Royalties.]—The owner of an estate contracted to lease coal to be worked by instroke from adjoining mines in the occupation of the intended lessees. The owner died before his coal was reached or the leases granted:—Held, that the tenant for life, under his will, though impeachable for waste, was entitled to the rents and royalties. Kemeys-Tynte, In re, Kemeys-Tynte v. Kemeys-Tynte, 61 L. J., Ch. 377; [1892] 2 Ch. 211; 66 L. T. 752; 40 W. R. 423.

Rents and royalties of brickfields, one of which had been leased by the testator and the other by trustees of his will under a power held to belong to the tenant for life. Cowley (Earl) v. Wellesley, 35 Beav. 635; L. R. 1 Eq. 656; 14 L. T. 425; 14 W. R. 528.

—— Fines on Renewals.]—Lands let on lease for lives, with right of perpetual renewal at the same rent on payment of a fine on the dropping of each life, were settled to the use of A. for life with remainder over, and the settlement contained powers of leasing at rack rent only, and of sale and exchange, with a declaration that moneys arising from any sale should be laid out in land to be settled to the same uses:—Held, that the tenant for life was entitled to all fines payable on renewals, under the original lease, during his life. Brigstocke v. Brigstocke, 47 L. J., Ch. 817; 8 Ch. D. 357; 38 L. T. 760; 26 W. R. 761—C. A.

—— Fines of Copyholds.]—Fines paid to trustees as lords of the manor on the enfranchisement of copyholds by persons admitted before the 1st July, 1853, pursuant to the Copyhold Act, 1852, treated as income. Cowley (Earl) v. Wellesley, 35 Beav. 635; L. R. 1 Eq. 656; 14 L. T. 425; 14 W. R. 528.

—— Wastes of Manor.]—Proceeds of sale of gravel and earth taken and dug from the waste lands of a manor, according to custom pursued by testator, held income and not corpus. Ib.

Heirlooms.]—A tenant for life of heirlooms will not be required to give security for the heirlooms, but only to sign an inventory, unless there is reason to suppose that the heirlooms will be in danger in his possession. Temple v. Thring, 56 L. J., Ch. 767.

Practice as to tenant for life giving security for heirlooms. Conduitt v. Soane, 1 Coll. 285; 13 L. J., Ch. 390.

Jewellery and other articles were given by deed to trustees in trust, after the death of a person who had the use of them for life, for sale, and the proceeds of the sale to be held in trust for an infant, with a gift over in the event of the infant dying under twenty-one. The tenant for life threatened to pledge them, and the trustees refused to deliver them to her:—Held, that they were bound to deliver them to her, she undertaking not to pledge them. Kay v. Watkins, 17 W. R. 983.

i. Rent.

Incidence of Liability for.]—Where a testator directed his executors and trustees to arrange his affairs and manage his estate, and to retain certain specified leaseholds held on ground rents, and to let them on lease at fair rentals, and to pay the income derived from them to his wife for the benefit of herself and her children during her life, and after her decease to divide his estate equally between his children, it was held that the words, "income to be derived" from the premises, meant not the whole income, but the income after deducting all proper outgoings, and that the widow must, as from the testator's death, bear the expense of the ground rents, rates, taxes, insurance and other outgoings on the leaseholds. Redding, In re, Thompson v. Redding, 66 L. J., Ch. 460; [1897] 1 Ch. 876; 76 L. T. 339; 45 W. R. 457.

A testator bequeathed all debts which should be due to him, and all chattels which should be in his possession, and all other personal property to which he should be entitled at his decease, to his wife and her assigns absolutely; and he devised all his real property and estates to her for life, with remainder over in fee, and appointed his wife executrix, who proved the will, and went into possession of the real estate. The testator was a lessee for years of a house, which he had underlet at a rent lower than that reserved by the lease. The personal estate being insufficient to pay the rent:—Held, that the wife was bound to keep down the rent of the house out of the rents of the real estate in exoneration of the inheritance. Fairtlough v. Johnstone, 16 Ir. Ch. R. 442.

A testator directed his executors and trustees to allow his wife, if she pleased, to occupy his leasehold house during her life, with the use of the furniture, and after her death the same might be sold and the proceeds divided among his children:—Held, that the widow was liable to pay the rent and taxes during the period she occupied the premises, and to keep them in such repair as a tenant would be liable for in the absence of express contract; but that it was the duty of the trustees, and not of the widow, to keep the premises sufficiently insured. Jeune v. Baring (62 L. J., Ch. 50; [1893] 1 Ch. 61) not followed. Kingham v. Kingham, [1897] 1 Ir. R. 170.

Rent Due at the Date of the Settlement.]—A testator had leaseholds; one he assigned to his partner, who, after the testator's death, took another partner, A., and became bankrupt. The bankrupt repudiated the leaseholds, and A., under the direction of the court, paid 100*l.* to the executors to release him from liability, and reassigned the lease to the executors. The testator had bequeathed his residue for life, with remainder over:—Held, that as to rent due at the death of the testator, and such subsequent rents and dilapidations, the corpus, and not the tenant for life, must bear them. Allen v. Embleton, 4 Drew. 226; 27 L. J., Ch. 297; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 79; 6 W. R. 272.

ii. Dilapidations and Repairs.

Arising from Permissive Waste.]—An action on the case does not lie for permissive waste. Gibson v. Wells, 1 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 290; 8 R. R. 801.

The estate of a legal tenant for life is not liable for permissive waste. A legal tenant for life of land, upon whom no express duty to repair was imposed by the will under which her estate was derived, died leaving the buildings upon the land in a dilapidated condition. In the administration of her estate the remainderman in fee claimed from her executor compensation by way of damages for permissive waste:—Held, that the claim could not be sustained. Woodhouse v. Walker (5 Q. B. D. 404, 407), and Yellowly v. Gower (11 Ex. 274), discussed. Cartwright, In re, Avis v. Newman, 58 L. J., Ch. 590; 41 Ch. D. 532; 60 L. T. 891; 37 W. R. 612.

Account against the representative of tenant for life, without impeachment of waste, of dilapidations permitted by him in and about the mansion-house, refused. Lansdowne v. Lansdowne, 1 Madd. 116; 1 Jac. & Walk. 522; 15 R. R. 225.

A house was devised to X. for life, subject to a condition to keep it in repair, with remainder to A. for life with remainders over, the estates being all legal:—Held, that A. had no remedy in equity against X. for breach of the condition. Kinnersley v. Williamson, 39 L. J., Ch. 788; 23 L. T. 39; 18 W. R. 1016.

A court of equity will not interfere at the instance of a remainderman, in cases of permissive waste, either by injunction or to give satisfaction against an equitable tenant for life in possession. Powys v. Blagrave, 4 De G. M. & G. 448; 2 Eq. R. 1204; 24 L. J., Ch. 142; 2 W. R. 700. S. P., Godfrey, Ex parte, Warren v. Rudall, 1 J. & H. 1; 29 L. J., Ch. 543; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 395; 2 L. T. 693; 8 W. R. 331. Contra Caldwall v. Bayliss, 2 Mer. 408; 16 R. R. 189.

Incidence of Repairs.] — Tenant for life, choosing to reside in mansion-house, must submit to expense of repairs done by himself. Hibbert v. Cooke, 1 Sim. & S. 552; 24 R. R. 225.

An agreement for letting a farm having been sanctioned by the court, the tenant for life was allowed the expense of permanent repairs done to the house and buildings out of stock settled upon the same trusts. Macnolty v. Fitzherbert, 27 L. J., Ch. 272; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1237.

Devise of lands to successive tenants for life, and then in strict settlement:—Held, that although the mansion-house was inadequate to the income of the devised property, and was also dilapidated, the tenant for life was not authorised to employ towards improving or repairing the mansion-house any part of the capital of funds directed by the testator to be laid out in the purchase of lands to the same uses. Dunne v. Dunne, 7 De G. M. & G. 207; 3 Eq. R. 760; 3 W. R. 380.

It is not proper to keep up the mansion on a settled estate, as a residence, during the minority of the tenant for life. Bennett v. Wyndham, 23 Beav. 521.

A tenant for life in remainder cannot charge upon the inheritance money expended by him in repairs, which ought to have been performed by a prior tenant for life, unless the expense was occasioned by wilful waste done by him. Sharshaw v. Gibbs, 1 Kay, 333; 2 Eq. R. 314; 23 L. J., Ch. 451; 18 Jur. 330.

A testator gave all his personal estate to trustees upon trust to convert and invest; and to pay the annual produce thereof to his daughter during her life; and, subject thereto, and to the power (which was afterwards exercised) to appoint an estate for life to the daughter's husband, in trust for her children. And the testator declared that the trustees should, with the consent of his daughter, invest any of the trust moneys in (amongst other securities) the purchase of freehold lands. And in case any of his personal estate should be laid out in the purchase of lands, such lands should be liable to a trust for sale, in order that his personal estate so laid out might, notwithstanding such investment, retain for the purposes of his will the character of personal estate. The bulk of the trust moneys was laid out, with the consent of the daughter, in the purchase of freehold land. After the death of the daughter, and during the life of her husband, some of the buildings on the land were very much out of repair:—Held, that the tenant for life was not bound to put the property in repair, but that such repairs as were necessary should be done by the trustees, and the costs thereof defrayed out of the residuary personalty, by mortgage of the land or otherwise. Freeman, In re, Dimond v. Newburn, 67 L. J., Ch. 14; [1898] 1 Ch. 28; 77 L. T. 460.

—— Dilapidations existing at the Date of the Settlement.]—A testator gave land to tenants for life, with remainders over, and directed his trustees out of the rents and profits to keep the buildings in good repair:—Held, that those buildings which were in bad repair at his death must be put into good repair out of the rents and profits. Cooke v. Cholmondeley, 4 Drew. 326; 27 L. J., Ch. 826; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 827; 6 W. R. 802.

The testator at the time of his death was under liability under covenants in leases to repair, and a sum of 91*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.* was found due from him in respect of dilapidations:—Held, that the tenant for life was not bound to pay that sum out of her income, but that it was payable out of the corpus of the residuary personal estate. Pinfold v. Shillingford, 46 L. J., Ch. 491; 25 W. R. 425.

A testator gave the residue of his real and personal estate upon trust to permit his wife to receive the rents, issues and profits, interest, dividends and annual proceeds, after paying all outgoings; and after the decease of his said wife, as to all the said residuary real and personal estate, of which she was to have the clear yearly income for her life, subject as aforesaid, upon trust for his son absolutely. The testator had leaseholds and freeholds. The leaseholds being dilapidated at the death of the testator the wife repaired them, under notice from the superior landlord:—Held, that the amount expended in repairs might be charged on the estate. Harris v. Poyner, 1 Drew. 174; 21 L. J., Ch. 915; 16 Jur. 880.

A testator bequeathed certain leaseholds to trustees upon trust for his widow for life, and after her death upon trust to sell and to divide the proceeds as therein mentioned. And the testator authorised his trustees, "providing they should deem it advisable," to sell any portion of his short leasehold messuages. At the time of the death of the testator these leaseholds were in a very bad state of repair and the tenant for life only did sufficient repairs to keep them in a like state:—Held, that the tenant for life was under no legal obligation to put the leaseholds in such a state of repair as to satisfy the covenants in the leases. Courtier, In re, Coles v. Courtier, 56 L. J., Ch. 350; 34 Ch. D. 136; 55 L. T. 574; 35 W. R. 85; 51 J. P. 117—C. A.

As between a tenant for life of a leasehold, specifically bequeathed, and the general assets of a testator, there is no equity in favour of the latter to throw on the former the obligation of putting the leasehold premises, which were dilapidated at the time of the testator's death, into repair. Brereton v. Day, [1895] 1 Ir. R. 518.

—— Where there is an Express Obligation to Repair.]—Reversioner of leasehold renewed lease in his own name, and covenanted to repair with privity of tenant for life:—Held, he was to be considered as having entered into the covenant on behalf of the tenant for life, and the latter's estate was liable for dilapidation occasioned by his neglect to repair. Marsh v. Wells, 2 Sim. & S. 87; 2 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 191; 25 R. R. 160.

When a tenant for life of leasehold houses is allowed by the trustees to receive the rents, and the houses are not kept in a proper state of repair according to the covenants of the lease, the court will, at the instance of one of the trustees, appoint a receiver of the rents for the purpose of enforcing the proper repair of the houses. Fowler, In re, Fowler v. Odell, 16 Ch. D. 723; 44 L. T. 99; 29 W. R. 891.

A. B. being devisee for life of premises, with a condition against committing any manner of waste, and for keeping the same in good and tenantable repair, became lunatic, and the premises were subsequently destroyed by accidental fire. A petition was then presented by the committee of the person, who was also remainderman, praying a declaration that the premises ought to be rebuilt at the expense of the lunatic's estate, and a reference as to the amount of such expense, and out of what fund it ought to be defrayed. The Lord Chancellor made an order for the reference, holding, that the words of the will created an obligation upon the tenant for life to rebuild the premises, and that the question of such liability was rightly brought before the court on the petition. Skingley, In re, 3 Mac. & G. 221; 20 L. J., Ch. 142; 15 Jur. 958.

A testator directed his trustees to allow A. to occupy a mill, so long as he should think proper to do so, "he nevertheless keeping the premises in good and tenantable repair, and paying" a rent of 100*l*. A. accepted the gift, but the premises were afterwards totally destroyed by accidental fire:—Held, that A. was bound to reinstate them, and was liable for the rent in the meanwhile, and that he could not escape from the liability to rebuild by declining any longer to retain them. Gregg v. Coates, 23 Beav. 33; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 964; 4 W. R. 735.

A testator gave his freehold, copyhold and leasehold estates, and all his stocks, shares and personal estate to trustees, in trust to receive the "rents," issues and profits, and thereout to keep the houses, &c., in good, substantial and tenantable repair, and renew his leaseholds, &c., and then to pay "the net income arising from the residuary real and personal estate" to his wife for life:—Held, that all ordinary repairs were to be paid out of the income, but not such extraordinary repairs as would amount to rebuilding the houses. Crowe v. Crisford, 17 Beav. 507; 2 W. R. 45.

A testator devised to his wife for life two freehold houses with the buildings, land and appurtenances thereto belonging, "she keeping the same in good and tenantable repair." The testator directed the property to be sold by his trustees after the death of his wife, the proceeds to be held upon the trusts mentioned in his will. After the death of the testator his widow entered into possession of the property and continued therein until the date of her own death. It was then discovered that the property was in a dilapidated condition. Evidence was adduced to shew that the greenhouses were wholly neglected and in complete disrepair at the time the testator purchased; that he never intended to put the same into repair, but had thought of having them pulled down:—Held, that the fact that the testator did not himself keep the greenhouses in good and tenantable repair could not be regarded as an excuse for his widow not doing so, having regard to the express direction contained in the will; and that, therefore, her estate was liable for the amount of the repairs required. Bradbrook, In re, Lock v. Willis, 56 L. T. 106.

Where a will contained a direction that the tenant for life of the settled estates should from time to time keep the mansion-house, outbuildings, parks, grounds, fences, gates and appurtenances thereto belonging in good and substantial repair, order and condition:—Held, that no obligation was thereby imposed upon the tenant for life to scour and cleanse an ornamental lake situate in the park near the mansion-house which had been allowed to become foul and choked with weeds, mud and filth, the state of the lake at the testator's death having to be taken into consideration. Dashwood v. Magniac, [1891] 3 Ch. 306; 64 L. T. 99.

Where a testator directed his executors and trustees to arrange his affairs and manage his estate and to retain certain specified leaseholds held on ground rents, and to let them on lease at fair rentals, and to pay the income to be derived from them to his wife for the benefit of herself and her children during her life, and after her decease to divide his estate equally between his children, it was held that the words "income to be derived" from the premises meant not the whole income, but the income after deducting all proper outgoings, and that therefore the widow must as from the testator's death bear the expense of the ground-rents, rates, taxes, insurance and other outgoings on the leaseholds. Baring, In re, Jeune v. Baring (62 L. J., Ch. 50; [1893] 1 Ch. 61) commented on. Courtier, In re, Coles v. Courtier (56 L. J., Ch. 350; 34 Ch. D. 136) distinguished. Redding, In re, Thompson v. Redding, 66 L. J., Ch. 460; [1897] 1 Ch. 876; 76 L. T. 339; 45 W. R. 457.

Other Matters.]—Where a tenant for life, under a covenant to repair, had permitted dilapidations to take place on the property, an application by trustees under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, s. 30, on behalf of a remainderman (an infant) for permission to effect a compromise as to the damage done, and thus prevent the necessity of a suit, was granted. Cross's Settlement, In re, 10 L. T. 405.

Moneys directed by a will to be laid out in the purchase of land to be settled to the same uses as those declared concerning estates thereby devised, and moneys arising from the sale of parts of the devised estates under a power conferred on the trustees by a private act of parliament, may be ordered by the court to be applied in erecting new buildings on the devised estates, or in rebuilding such as are actually in a ruinous condition; but as it is the duty of the tenant for life to keep the buildings in repair, and to reinstate the mansion-house if damaged by fire, the court will not order any of the moneys to be applied for either of these purposes. Drake v. Trefusis, L. R. 10 Ch. 364; 33 L. T. 85; 23 W. R. 762.

iii. Other Outgoings.

Tenant Right.]—An owner in fee demised a farm for seven years, and agreed at the expiration of the term to pay for the tenant's property in and upon the farm at a valuation. He devised the land to trustees for a term of 1,000 years upon trust to raise money in aid of his personal estate for payment of debts, funeral and testamentary expenses, and legacies, and subject thereto to the plaintiff for life, with divers remainders over. On the testator's death the plaintiff took possession. On the expiration of the term a new tenant could not be found. The plaintiff paid the outgoing tenant for his property in the farm, and claimed to be repaid the amount out of the testator's estate:—Held, that the liability to pay the outgoing tenant was a liability attaching to the land, and that the landlord for the time being was the person primarily liable; that the plaintiff, being in receipt of the rents and profits, was the landlord, and not the trustees of the term, that he therefore was the person primarily liable, and had no claim to be repaid wholly or in part either out of the testator's estate or by the persons entitled in remainder. Mansel v. Norton, 52 L. J., Ch. 357; 22 Ch. D. 769; 48 L. T. 654; 31 W. R. 325—C. A.

Costs of Opposing Bill in Parliament.]—The tenant for life of a settled estate is not entitled to throw upon the estate his costs of opposing in parliament a bill brought in by a public company for taking part of the estate. But he is entitled to charge the estate with the costs, charges and expenses, properly incurred by him in or about an arbitration entered into between him and the company under the provisions of the Lands Clauses Act regarding the value of the land, on the ground that under the act he is made the fiduciary agent for such purposes on behalf of the estate. Berkeley's (Earl) Will, In re, 44 L. J., Ch. 3; L. R. 10 Ch. 56; 31 L. T. 531; 23 W. R. 195.

Drainage Expenses.]—A testator gave freehold and leasehold houses, bonds and consols on trust to pay the income after deducting ordinary outgoings to his widow for life:—Held, that the tenant for life must bear the cost of drainage work required to be done to one of the leasehold houses by the vestry under the Metropolis Local Management Act, 1855, s. 73. Crawley, In re, Acton v. Crawley, 54 L. J., Ch. 652; 28 Ch. D. 431; 52 L. T. 460; 33 W. R. 611; 49 J. P. 598.

Expenses of Making a Street.]—By leases in 1875 and 1877, of two houses abutting on a private road, the lessee covenanted to pay all rates and taxes, and to keep up the road. In 1882 the lessee executed a deed of gift of the two houses to his son upon trust for the father for life, he paying "all outgoings and performing the covenants in the leases," and after his death upon trust for the son absolutely. In July, 1884, the local board served notices on the father under s. 150 of the Public Health Act, 1875, requiring him to make up the portions of the road on which the houses abutted; but the notice was not complied with, and the board themselves did the work, which was completed in February, 1875. In June, 1885, the father died, and the son entered into possession of the houses. In September, 1886, the son was served by the board with notices assessing a sum on each house for the proportion of expenses of making up the road, and in February, 1887, he was served with demands and orders for payment of the assessed amounts by instalments, with interest:—Held, in an action by the son claiming payment of the assessed expenses out of the father's estate, (1) that the expenses were not a debt due from the father's estate, inasmuch as the relation of debtor and creditor was not created by the Public Health Act, 1875, between the board and an owner of property for expenses incurred by the board; and (2) that the charge of the expenses under s. 257 could not be recovered by the son against the estate of the tenant for life. Boor, In re, Boor v. Hopkins, 58 L. J., Ch. 285; 40 Ch. D. 572; 60 L. T. 412; 37 W. R. 349; 53 J. P. 467.

Fences.]—Expense of fencing waste lands of a manor granted to a trustee for the benefit of the estate, held payable out of corpus. Cowley (Earl) v. Wellesley, 35 Beav. 635; L. R. 1 Eq. 656; 14 L. T. 425; 14 W. R. 528.

Sanitary Works.]—The cost of the execution of sanitary works required by a local authority under the powers of the Public Health (London) Act, 1891, falls, as between tenant for life and remainderman of the premises in respect of which the works are executed, upon the corpus of the property. Lever, In re, Cordwell v. Lever, 66 L. J., Ch. 66; [1897] 1 Ch. 32; 75 L. T. 383; 45 W. R. 172.

Insurance of Buildings, &c.]—See Redding, In re, Thompson v. Redding, 66 L. J., Ch. 460; [1897] 1 Ch. 876; 76 L. T. 339; 45 W. R. 457; Freeman, In re, 67 L. J., Ch. 14; [1898] 1 Ch. 28; 77 L. T. 460; and Kingham v. Kingham, [1897] 1 Ir. R. 170, supra.

Incidence of Debts and Interest thereon.]—Upon taking the accounts in a suit to administer real and personal estate, if a question arises between the tenant for life and the remainderman as to the proper mode of applying the personal estate, the court will, if the justice of the case require it, for the purpose of seeing to what extent and in what form the real estate is to be exonerated by means of personalty, investigate the application of the personal estate, and proceed, as a general rule, upon the principle of applying the capital of the personal estate to pay the principal of debts and the income of the personal estate to pay the interest of debts. Shore v. Shore, 4 Drew. 219; 26 L. J., Ch. 386; 5 W. R. 250. S. C., on further consideration, 4 Drew. 501; 28 L. J., Ch. 940; 7 W. R. 390.

As between tenant for life and remainderman, the interest of the testator's debts must be borne by the income, as from the day of his death. Barnes v. Bond, 32 Beav. 653.

The rule that in adjusting the accounts of a testator's estate between the tenant for life and the remainderman, the debts and legacies are to be taken as having been paid, not out of capital only, but with such portion of the capital as together with the income of that portion for one year is sufficient for the purpose, is not affected by the circumstance that the debts and legacies have been paid before the expiration of a year from the testator's death, and that the income from the continuance of the estate in the business carried on by the testator has greatly exceeded 5 per cent., so that the rule operates unfavourably to the tenant for life. Lambert v. Lambert, 43 L. J., Ch. 106; 16 L. R., Eq. 320; 21 W. R. 748.

Where a testator expressly or in effect gives income-bearing property in specie to one for life, with remainders over, subject to debts or other liabilities, it must be considered, for the purpose of adjusting the relative rights of the tenant for life and remainderman, that an adequate portion of the property is at the moment of the testator's death appropriated with all its future income, to meet such of the debts and liabilities as are then ascertained; but the tenant for life is entitled to the income of so much as is set apart to meet contingent liabilities. Allhusen v. Whittell, 36 L. J., Ch. 929; L. R. 4 Eq. 295; 16 L. T. 695.

Where a residue becomes settled, the above rule applies to so much as at the moment of the death of the testator who settles it is in a proper state of investment; the rest must be considered as converted and invested in consols at that time. Ib.

d. Improvements.

Mansion-house.]—The court will not, on the application of the tenant for life, direct an inquiry whether it would be for the benefit of all parties interested in the property that certain permanent and substantial improvements should be made in the mansion-house. Nairn v. Marjoribanks, 3 Russ. 582. S. P., Mathias v. Mathias, 3 Sm. & G. 552; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 780.

Tenant for life of real estate under will, having expended money in finishing mansion, which testator had begun, inquiry directed to ascertain if for benefit of all parties interested, and if so, expense would be charged on real estate if no personal. Hibbert v. Cooke, 1 Sim. & S. 552; 24 R. R. 225.

Tenant for life choosing to reside in mansion-house must submit to expense of repairs done by himself. Ib.

Other Improvements.]—The tenant for life laying out money on buildings and improvements cannot charge them on the inheritance; and an inquiry with that view refused. Caldecott v. Brown, 2 Hare, 144; 7 Jur. 693.

L. M. by his will directed that 50,000*l.*, part of his personal estate, should be laid out in the purchase of lands and settled to certain uses. C. M., the tenant for life, and the administrator with the will annexed of L. M., purchased the L. and other estates, which the master estimated to be of the value of 49,773*l.* On the L. estate which C. M. contracted to purchase for 35,500*l.*, he erected a mansion at a cost of 8,000*l.* and upwards, and by improvements increased the value of the estate to 60,000*l.* On petition by the personal representatives of C. M., praying that the amount so expended in building and in improvements, and the costs of and relating to the purchases, might be allowed as charges on the estate:—Held, that there was no ground for the application, and the prayer of the petition was refused, except as to the sum for costs and expenses in the purchases. Mathias v. Mathias, 3 Sm. & G. 552; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 780.

A tenant for life may ask for an inquiry respecting the outlay of money expended by him in the completion of a mansion commenced by a testatrix, and also in payments by him in respect of mines, to prevent their being forfeited, though the mines themselves had been unproductive. But a tenant for life is not entitled to any inquiry in respect of money expended by him in building a conservatory and vinery or other superfluous additions to the mansion, or in the erection of furnaces to copper-works, or for rebuilding dilapidated farmhouses, or for the substitution of new cottages for old dilapidated farm buildings, or for draining the estates, even though some of the improvements had been contemplated by the testatrix. Dent v. Dent, 30 Beav. 363; 31 L. J., Ch. 436; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 786; 10 W. R. 375.

When during the minority of a tenant for life part of the income has been expended under the order of the court in improving property, the court has no power to declare the sum so expended a charge on the property, even though the tenant for life dies an infant and the order may have been made in the presence of remainderman. Floyer v. Bankes, L. R. 8 Eq. 115.

A testator empowered his trustees, out of the funds from time to time coming to their hands under the trusts thereinbefore contained, to expend such sums or sum of money as they should deem expedient in the repairs and improvement, and insurance against fire, of any of the messuages, and other buildings, lands and hereditaments devised; and if any should think proper to permit the persons who might under the trusts be entitled to a life or other greater estate in the respective portions of the estate to occupy the mansion-house, gardens and premises without paying any rent or compensation for the same, and without such person being obliged at his expense to keep the same in repair, or being at any other expense than paying the rates and taxes:—Held, that the tenant for life was entitled under this trust to occupy a park surrounding the mansion, and to have the vineries and forcing pits kept in repair, and the gardens kept stocked with plants, shrubs and trees, at the expense of the trust estate. Lethbridge v. Lethbridge, 3 De G. F. & J. 523; 30 L. J., Ch. 388; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 296; 4 L. T. 127.

A testator gave his freehold, copyhold and leasehold estates, and all his stocks, shares and personal estate to trustees, in trust to receive the "rents," issues and profits, and thereout to keep the houses, &c., in good, substantial and tenant-able repair, and renew his leaseholds, &c., and then to pay "the net income arising from the residuary real and personal estate," to his wife for life:—Held, first, that the wife was entitled to the enjoyment in specie; and, secondly, that all ordinary repairs were to be paid out of the income, but not such extraordinary repairs as would amount to rebuilding the houses. Crowe v. Crisford, 17 Beav. 507; 2 W. R. 45.

S. was at the time of his death seised of a plot of ground upon which he had commenced to build certain houses. By his will he devised and bequeathed all his real and personal property to J., for life, upon trust, as to one moiety of the rents and profits for himself, and as to the other for other parties, with remainder over. J. became the personal representative of S., and after S.'s death expended large sums of moneys in completing the houses:—Held, that J. was not entitled to a charge upon the plot of ground for the moneys expended by him, either as tenant for life, trustee or personal representative of S. Gilliland v. Crawford, Ir. R. 4 Eq. 35; 18 W. R. 60.

Other Matters.]—The tenant for life under a settlement voluntarily expended moneys in erecting necessary buildings on the trust property. He also paid the expenses of the investment of the trust funds in land:—Held, that his executors could not set off his outlay as a satisfaction pro tanto of a covenant on his part to pay 3,000*l.* to the trustees of the settlement. Horlock v. Smith, 17 Beav. 572; 23 L. J., Ch. 962; 2 W. R. 117.

e. Charges and Incumbrances.

Right of Remainderman to pay off.]—A. devised his estate charged with the payment of a sum to trustees, and with interest at 4*l.* per cent. The trustees were to pay the interest to persons for life, and after their deaths to pay the money charged to their children:—Held, that the owner of the estate had a right, in the life of the tenants for life, to pay off the charge. Marsh v. Keith, 29 Beav. 625.

Proceedings by Tenant for Life for Protection of Estate—Expenses—Charge on Inheritance.]—A freehold estate was subject to four legal mortgages over different parts of the estate, also to an equitable mortgage over the whole, and to a charge over the whole. The rate of interest was 5 per cent. per annum reducible to 4 per cent. on three of the legal mortgages. On the fourth legal mortgage and on the charge it was 4 per cent. per annum. One of the legal mortgagees having commenced a foreclosure action, the estate was in danger of being broken up. To prevent this, A. and B. at the request of the tenant for life paid off his mortgagee and took a transfer of his security, and also of the equitable mortgage. The foreclosure action was stayed, and the tenant for life paid to the mortgagee his costs of the foreclosure action and of the transfer of his security. The tenant for life also incurred certain costs in that transaction. The other legal mortgagees having subsequently demanded repayment, the tenant for life arranged with C. to advance such a sum as would enable all the incumbrances on the estate to be paid off, and a transfer of the incumbrances to A. and B. for a term of five years at 3¾ per cent. to be procured. C. also agreed to advance a sum sufficient to pay the costs, charges and expenses already incurred by the tenant for life, and also the costs, charges and expenses of and incident to the transfer of the several mortgages. The tenant for life then commenced an action against the first tenant in tail (an infant, aged sixteen), claiming to be entitled to charge the inheritance with such costs, charges and expenses as he had incurred with interest for the same:—Held, that there must be a declaration that the plaintiff was entitled to a charge on that part of the estate comprised in the legal mortgage in respect of which the foreclosure action was brought, for the costs, charges and expenses paid or incurred by him in relation to the foreclosure action, and of the transfers, with interest at 4 per cent.; also to a charge upon the several parts of the estate comprised in the other legal mortgages and in the equitable mortgage, and the charge for costs, charges and expenses to be incurred by the plaintiff and the mortgagees and transferees thereof in relation to the proposed transfers of the last-mentioned securities, or for any other costs properly incurred by the plaintiff in protecting the estate from the claims of the mortgagees thereof, with interest at 4 per cent. Held also, that, if necessary, the above-mentioned costs, charges and expenses, and the costs of this action, might be raised by a proper mortgage of the estate. Moore v. Moore, 60 L. T. 626; 37 W. R. 414.

Apportionment of Charges.]—Charge on estate in settlement must be so raised as not to fall unequally on tenant for life to benefit of remainderman. Devise to trustees to sell for payment of testator's debts, and subject thereto to A. for life, sans waste, remainder to his first and other sons in tail. The trustees sold timber on the estates, and applied the proceeds in payment of the debts:—Held, that A. was entitled to have the amount raised by sale of part of the estate, and paid to him. Davies v. Westcomb, 2 Sim. 425; 29 R. R. 128.

Limitation of estates to successive tenants for life, with remainders in tail, subject to a term vested in trustees, the trusts of which were, in the first place, by cutting and selling timber of full growth, by demising, mortgaging or selling estate (except the mansion-house), for all or any part of the term, or by all or any of the said ways or any other reasonable ways, to raise 30,000*l.*, and pay the same to the parties therein mentioned:—Held, that as between tenants for life not impeachable for waste and the remaindermen, the corpus of the estate must bear the charge; and that the interest of the charge must be paid by the tenant for life in possession, who in the meantime was entitled (as part of the profits of the estate) to the timber, which, as tenant for life, he had a right to cut. Marker v. Kekewich, 8 Hare, 291; 19 L. J., Ch. 492; 14 Jur. 544. S. P., Blake v. O'Reily, [1895] 1 Ir. R. 479.

The trustees of the term in such a case have not an unlimited discretion to raise the charge in such a manner as they think fit; and it does not follow that, because their discretion in the mode of raising the charge has been honestly exercised, the charge will be left to be finally borne by those parties upon whom their act might chance to throw it. Ib.

The periodical payments of an annuity, for which the testator was liable, held payable by the tenant for life and remainderman under his will, in proportion to the values of their respective interests in the estate, the property having, for some years, been unproductive. Yates v. Yates, 28 Beav. 637. S. P., Muffett, In re, Jones v. Mason, 57 L. J., Ch. 1017; 39 Ch. D. 534; 59 L. T. 499; 37 W. R. 9.

A claim made against the estate of a testator, founded on an alleged breach of trust was compromised by the payment of a large sum several years after his death:—Held, that for the purpose of dealing between the tenants for life and remaindermen under the trusts of the will, the sum paid was to be treated as composed of a principal debt due on the day on which the transaction took place out of which the claim originated, of interest at 5*l.* per cent. from that day up to the date of the death, and of interest at 4*l.* per cent. on the aggregate of the principal and interest from the death to the time of payment; and that the principal and interest up to the testator's death were chargeable against corpus, and the subsequent interest against income. Maclaren v. Stainton, L. R. 11 Eq. 382.

A testator bequeathed several pecuniary legacies, to be paid after three years from his decease, but without interest. He directed his residuary personal estate to be accumulated to form a fund for payment of legacies; and in case of deficiency, charged his lands at U. with 1,000*l.* towards such deficiency; and in case of further deficiency, declared that the same should be raised out of the annual rents and profits of his lands at D.; and subject thereto he devised the lands at D. to M. for life, remainder to his first and other sons in tail, &c.

The personal estate and the 1,000*l.* being insufficient to pay the legacies:—Held, that the deficiency must be borne out of the rents and profits of the lands at D. as they accrued due, and that the tenant for life could not throw it as a charge on the corpus. Marsh v. Marsh, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 348.

C. gave to the trustees of his marriage settlement a bond to secure the payment, three months after his death, of a sum which was settled on trust for his widow for life, with remainder to his children. He died and his estate was insufficient to pay even the principal due on the bond; in addition to which there was a large amount for interest due thereon:—Held, that there must be a calculation what sum, received and invested when the principal debt secured by bond had become due, would, together with the interest thereon, have equalled the amount recovered from his estate at the time of such last-mentioned amount being paid, and an apportionment must be made between the tenant for life and remainderman on that basis. Cox v. Cox, 38 L. J., Ch. 569; L. R. 8 Eq. 343; 17 W. R. 790.

B. granted certain annuities by bond, and subsequently died, leaving his widow, the testatrix, his universal legatee and sole executrix. Under her will her residuary estate was held in trust for a tenant for life, with remainders over to other persons:—Held, that each payment of the annuities, as it became due, must be raised out of the corpus of the estate, and the rights of the tenant for life and remaindermen determined on that basis. Muffett, In re, Jones v. Mason (39 Ch. D. 534) explained. Bacon, In re, Grissel v. Leathes, 62 L. J., Ch. 445; 3 R. 459; 68 L. T. 522; 41 W. R. 478.

G. G. having an estate in fee, devised the same to C. G. for life, remainders over. G. G., at the time of his decease, was indebted to D. by judgment; after his decease, D. issued an elegit, obtained possession, and levied the amount of his judgment. The amount of the principal money, levied by D. out of the life estate of C. G., is a charge upon the inheritance; and forms part of the personal estate of C. G.; but C. G. having sold a house in G. Street, which the testator directed to be sold, for payment of debts, the court held that any portion of the purchase-money, which was not applied in payment of the debts of G. G., was applicable in exoneration of the inheritance from this charge, and directed inquiries accordingly. Flood v. Digby, 1 Jones, 520.

Tenant in fee borrowed money, to secure the payment whereof with interest he confessed a judgment in double the amount, and put his creditor into the receipt of a fee-farm rent, which was equal in amount to the annual interest, and afterwards devised all his estates to A. for life, remainder to B. for life, remainder to the first and other sons of B. in tail. A. died in 1802, the full amount of the judgment being then due to the creditor, who had not been paid interest since 1786. B. died in 1824, never having received any part of the fee-farm rent, but his executors were paid twenty-one and a half years' arrears of the rent. B. having in 1824 paid off the judgment and taken an assignment of it to a trustee for himself:—Held, that his executors were not at liberty to retain, as against the remainderman, the arrears of the fee-farm rent received by them, and to leave the arrears of the interest a charge upon the estate, particularly as B. in 1803 and 1821 became a party to family settlements, in which the estate was dealt with as if the fee-farm rent had been applied in payment of the interest, and the benefits were given to him by those settlements. Caulfield v. M'Guire, 2 Jo. & Lat. 141; 8 Ir. Eq. R. 164.

A tenant for life under a settlement executed a deed, by which—reciting an agreement by O. to lend him 150*l.* on a bill of sale or transfer of a diamond necklace, and a desire to settle it as a heirloom—he assigned it in trust for O., subject to a proviso for cesser of the trust on repayment of the principal and interest, and, after repayment, in trust for himself for life, and, after his death, as a heirloom, with estates limited by the settlement; and he covenanted to pay the money with interest, and that, in default of payment, O. should possess and sell the necklace, and pay the surplus proceeds to the donor:—Held, that, as between remainderman and the personal representative of the donor, the necklace was primarily liable for the payment of the debt. Owen v. Braddell, Ir. R. 7 Eq. 358.

Keeping down Interest.]—The obligation of the tenant for life of an estate subject to incumbrances, to keep down interest on the incumbrances, exists only as between him and the remainderman, and not as between him and the incumbrancers. Morley, In re, Morley v. Saunders, L. R. 8 Eq. 594.

A testator devised real estate to trustees for a term of 500 years upon trust to raise a sum of 9,000*l.*, with interest, for his younger children, and subject thereto to his son F. for life, with remainders over. One moiety of the charge of 9,000*l.* became vested in the testator's daughter M. No part of the charge was ever raised; and F., who had been let into possession, failed to keep down the interest. M. died in the lifetime of F., having by her will left him a legacy to be paid out of her moiety of the 9,000*l.*:—Held, that the legacy could not be retained by the executors of M. in satisfaction of the arrears of interest due to her. Ib.

The general rule is, that the tenant for life is bound to pay the interest upon incumbrances; but an incumbrancer, if he merely neglects to enforce payment of the interest from the tenant for life, will not be debarred thereby from raising it, with the principal, out of the inheritance. Wrixon v. Vize, 1 Con. & L. 298; 2 Dr. & War. 192; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 463.

The obligation of a tenant for life to keep down the interest on a charge only extends to interest which accrues due during his life estate. Kirwan v. Kennedy, Ir. R. 4 Eq. 499. And see S. C., Ir. R. 3 Eq. 472.

Where there are successive life estates, if a subsequent tenant for life is compelled to pay arrears of interest upon a charge affecting the inheritance which had accrued due during a prior life estate, he is entitled to repayment of that sum out of the inheritance. Ib.

A tenant for life of an estate, subject to a mortgage, is not liable, as between himself and the remainderman or reversioner in fee, to pay out of the rents and profits of the estate arrears of interest on the mortgage which accrued due during the life of a preceding tenant for life, who died insolvent; but such arrears are primarily a charge upon the inheritance. Sharshaw v. Gibbs, 1 Kay, 333; 2 Eq. R. 314; 23 L. J., Ch. 451; 18 Jur. 330.

Observations on the dicta in Penrhyn (Lord) v. Hughes (5 Ves. 99). Ib.

A second tenant for life cannot charge upon the inheritance money expended by him in repairs, which ought to have been performed by the first tenant for life, unless the expense was occasioned by wilful waste done by him. Ib.

Mortgagee, having permitted the tenant for life to run in arrear for the interest, purchases the estate for life, and takes possession under that purchase; he is bound to apply the surplus rents and profits beyond the current interest, in discharge of the arrear, and in the account, under a bill of foreclosure, was charged accordingly. Penrhyn (Lord) v. Hughes, 5 Ves. 99.

A tenant for life of real estate, upon which the debts of the testator have been ascertained to be a charge, must keep down all the interest which accrues due. Marshall v. Crowther, 2 Ch. D. 199; 23 W. R. 210.

As between tenant for life and remainderman, the interest on the testator's debts must be borne by the income, as from the day of his death. Barnes v. Bond, 32 Beav. 653.

Where a tenant for life of an estate subject to a charge bearing interest, pays the interest, although the rents and profits are insufficient for that purpose, he cannot make himself an incumbrancer on the estate for this excess in his payments, if he has not given to the remainderman any intimation of the insufficiency of the rents and profits, and of his intention to charge the excess of his payments on the inheritance. Under such circumstances, there is a presumption of the sufficiency of the rents and profits, and the personal representatives of the tenant for life cannot be allowed to rebut that presumption. (Dissentiente, Lords Cranworth and Wensleydale, who held that there is no such presumption, especially when the payment is made under force of a personal obligation to pay.) Kensington (Lord) v. Bouverie, 7 H. L. Cas. 557; 29 L. J., Ch. 537; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 105. And see S. C., 24 L. J., Ch. 442; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 577; 3 W. R. 469.

If a tenant for life is himself the person entitled to the benefit of the charge, and has mortgaged it, and his mortgagees have regularly been paid the interest on the mortgage debt, they are in no better situation than the personal representatives. Ib.

Where a will of the tenant for life disposes of the charge "and interest," those words cannot be taken to refer to anything but the interest, which will accrue after his death till the charge itself is redeemed. Ib.

Tenant for life is only to keep down the interest of the incumbrance, but not to be charged with any part of the principal. Shrewsbury (Countess) v. Shrewsbury (Earl), 1 Ves. Jun. 234; 3 Bro. C. C. 120.

Tenant for life bound to keep down the interest of incumbrances, though the whole should be exhausted. Tracy v. Hereford, 2 Bro. C. C. 129.

Where an estate, subject to a charge bearing interest, is limited to several persons in succession as tenants for life, the conclusion to be drawn from the authorities appears to be that each tenant for life is liable only for the interest for his own time, but that to liquidate the arrears during his own time, he must furnish all the rents, if necessary, during the whole of his life. Caulfield v. Maguire, 2 Jo. & Lat. 141; 8 Ir. Eq. R. 164.

In a mortgage by husband and wife of the wife's settled lands, the husband covenanted for payment of the mortgage money. On a bill by the husband, an inquiry was directed into the application of the money raised, and the husband was held discharged for so much as was applied to the wife's use, but as tenant for life, he was held bound to keep down the interest. Kinnoul (Earl) v. Money, 3 Swanst. 202, n.

A. created a trust for the payment of incumbrances, out of the rents and profits of his real estate, part of which being subject to the arrears of a rent-charge to the crown, was discharged by a privy seal, provided 5,000*l.* be paid to B. and C., for securing which a term was created by act of parliament:—Held, that this was a debt affecting the estate, and not within the trusts of the deed, and, therefore, that the tenants for life must keep down the interest. Peterborough (Earl) v. Mordaunt, 1 Eden, 474.

A devisee for life of a rent-charge, having granted several annuities thereon (and which were in arrear), assigned it to his creditors. The tenant for life of the estate, with intent to redeem it for the annuitant, gave bonds to the creditors in consideration of giving up their securities to be cancelled. The obligor's executor paid all the bonds. The annuitant is entitled against the executors, to the annuity, disencumbered, but not to have paid the arrears on the annuities to creditors, incurred in the life of the obligor, and as against the tenant of the estate to the arrears since the death of the obligor, but the future payments must be left to agreement. Graham v. Graham, 1 Ves. Jun. 272.

Testator gave his personal estate to his mother for life, remainder to his children, on condition that his mother should see the fines for renewal of a lease, and the interest of a mortgage, paid, and be consulted as to the manner of raising the fines, that she may give her approbation as she may think proper; she is only to keep down the interest. Buckeridge v. Ingram, 2 Ves. Jun. 652.

The testator, by his will, charged his debts and legacies upon his real and personal estate, and gave such real and personal estate to trustees upon trust for his nephew for life (to whom also he gave a legacy), with remainder to the first and other sons of the nephew successively in tail male, with remainder to the second and every other son of the testator's brother successively in tail male, remainder to the testator's own right heirs; and added, "and upon this last-mentioned contingency, failing heirs male of my said brother, and of my said estate going to my right heirs more remote as aforesaid, then I do hereby charge, subject, and make liable my said estate with the payment of the sum of 5,000*l.* to my niece." The testator died in 1775, leaving his brother his heir-at-law; the nephew entered into possession of the real estate, which consisted of a plantation in Jamaica, subject to a mortgage created by the testator in 1765; the brother afterwards died, leaving the nephew, his only son, and then heir-at-law of the testator: the nephew died in 1822, without issue male: a bill was filed in 1837, against the mortgagees and the devisees of the nephew, to obtain payment of the niece's legacy of 5,000*l.*:—Held, that, on the death of the nephew without issue male, the event happened on which the niece would become entitled to the legacy of 5,000*l.*; and that it was not too remote: that the nephew was only bound in his lifetime to keep down the interest of the debts and legacies: and that he was entitled to keep on foot, as subsisting charges against the real estate, the principal of the debts and legacies paid off by him, and also his own legacy. Faulkner v. Daniel, 3 Hare, 199; 10 L. J., Ch. 33.

A. granted several annuities which he charged on real estates, and covenanted to pay and gave a warrant of attorney to confess judgment for double the consideration money. The annuities might be "purchased" or "redeemed" by him on certain conditions. A., by his will, gave several legacies and annuities, and devised his real estates to trustees to raise money in aid of his personal estate to pay debts, except mortgage debts, and legacies, and annuities thereby given, and to raise 500*l.* a year out of the rents as an accumulating fund for discharging the mortgages, and, subject as aforesaid, he devised his real estate to W. for life, remainder to his children in strict settlement:—Held, that W. was not bound to pay the annuities, but that they ought to be valued, and the tenant for life to keep down the interest on such value only. Bulwer v. Astley, 1 Ph. 422; 13 L. J., Ch. 329; 8 Jur. 523.

A testator charged all his estate with the payment of his debts and legacies, and he authorised the trustees of his will to raise 4,000*l.* by mortgage for that purpose. The property of the testator consisted chiefly of a lunatic asylum, the annual profits of which amounted to a considerable sum, and the will contained special directions for the management of the asylum, and referred to it as part of the property on which the debts were charged, and out of which several annuities given by his will were to be paid:—Held, that the debts, &c., were charged on the corpus of the property, including the asylum; and that as between the tenant for life and the parties entitled in remainder under the will, the income and profits of the asylum were not liable to bear the charge. Wastell v. Leslie, 13 L. J., Ch. 205; 8 Jur. 367.

Limitation of estates to successive tenants for life, with remainders in tail, subject to a term vested in trustees, the trusts of which were, in the first place, by cutting and selling timber of full growth, or by demising, mortgaging or selling the estate (except the mansion house) for all or any part of the term, or by all or any of the said ways, or any other reasonable ways, to raise 30,000*l.*, and pay the same to the parties therein mentioned:—Held, that, as between the tenants for life not impeachable for waste and the remaindermen, the corpus of the estate must bear the charge, and that the interest of the charge must be paid by the tenant for life in possession, who in the meantime was entitled (as part of the profits of the estate) to the timber, which as such tenant for life he had a right to cut. Marker v. Kekewich, 8 Hare, 291; 19 L. J., Ch. 492; 14 Jur. 544.

The trustees of the term in such a case have not an unlimited discretion to raise the charge in such a manner as they may think fit: and it does not follow that because their discretion in the mode of raising the charge has been honestly exercised, the charge will be left to be finally borne by those parties upon whom their act might chance to throw it. Ib.

A testator directed his real estate to be sold immediately or as soon as conveniently might be, and applied in aid of his personal estate in payment of his debts; but until the settlement should be made, as after directed, the rents were to be applied in keeping down the mortgages, and the residue to be paid to the persons entitled under the settlement. He then directed the unsold hereditaments to be settled on A. for life, with remainder over. The testator was greatly indebted on bonds, and his personal estate was largely deficient. More than a year elapsed before the sale of the real estates:—Held, that the interest on all the debts for the first year was payable out of the corpus of the real estate, but that the tenant for life was bound to keep down the subsequent interest. Greisley v. Chesterfield (Earl), 13 Beav. 288.

A testatrix directed her trustees to levy and raise, out of the interest, dividends and annual produce of certain trust funds, an annual sum of 100*l.*, and pay the same to R. P. during his life, and "subject and without prejudice to the payment of the said annuity," to pay the income of the trust funds to F. C. for life, and after his decease, "subject and without prejudice, as aforesaid," to stand possessed of the trust funds for other persons. The income of the fund was insufficient to pay the annuity:—Held, that such arrears were a charge upon the corpus of the trust property, and that the tenant for life was only bound to keep down the interest of such arrears. Held, also, that the claim for arrears beyond six years was not barred by the statute, there being a trust for the payment. Playfair v. Cooper, 17 Beav. 187; 1 Eq. R. 137; 23 L. J., Ch. 341, 343; 1 W. R. 216, 376.

Trustees allowed a tenant for life to enter into possession, and she paid the interest of incumbrances and expended money on improvements. The trustees did not call for any account of the rents; and the evidence, both as to the income being insufficient to keep down the incumbrances, and as to the improved value of the estate, was unsatisfactory. The tenant for life purchased the property, and the trustees allowed her to deduct from the purchase-money the money expended in paying interest, and in improvements:—Held, that she ought not to have been allowed those sums. Dixon v. Peacock, 3 Drew. 288.

In the administration of a mixed estate, real and personal, where, owing to peculiar circumstances, considerable time has elapsed before the personal estate can be realised, and in the meantime interest runs upon debts, and has been paid out of the income of the tenant for life of the real estate, the court will investigate the application of the personal estate, so as to determine the equities between the tenant for life and the remainderman. Shore v. Shore, 4 Drew. 219; 26 L. J., Ch. 386; 5 W. R. 250.

A. was sole legatee and executor of the testator's personal estate, and tenant for life of his real estate, with remainder to his son. At the death of the testator he was largely indebted, and his personal estate was outstanding, owing, as to the greater part, to his having advanced large sums to a bank, of which his son was a partner, and which failed, and became bankrupt. For about eleven years the tenant for life kept down the interest of the debts out of his life estate, which was wholly or nearly absorbed by such payment. Ultimately enough personalty was got in to pay a large portion of the debts, and was so applied, and then the real estate was sold:—Held, that no portion of the money representing the corpus of the real estate could be applied in recouping the tenant for life the interest he had paid. S. C., 4 Drew. 501; 28 L. J., Ch. 940; 7 W. R. 390.

Where, subject to debts and legacies, an estate is devised to one for life, the tenant for life is bound, out of the income, to keep down charges; and where the charges had greatly accumulated in consequence of an unavoidable delay in selling a portion of the estate, directed by the will to be primarily liable:—Held, that such accumulations were chargeable on the interest of the tenant for life, and to no extent on the corpus of the estate. Hawkins v. Hawkins, 6 L. J., Ch. 69.

A trust by sale or mortgage of other estates to raise fines for the renewal of leaseholds imposes on the successive tenants for life the duty of keeping down the interest on the mortgages. Ainslie v. Harcourt, 28 Beav. 313; 30 L. J., Ch. 686.

Where an estate charged as a further security for a mortgage debt was devised to a tenant for life and remainderman in fee, and the interest was for many years paid by the remainderman and his assignee, and the tenant for life paid nothing, it was held that the tenant for life was bound to keep down the interest during his life. Therefore, where default was made in the payment of interest, and the mortgagee entered upon and sold the original security, thereby paying himself part of his mortgage debt, and the tenant for life paid the remainder, taking a transfer of the mortgage security, it was held, in a foreclosure suit by the representatives of the tenant for life, that they were entitled to interest only from her death, and not from the date of the transfer. Long v. Harris, 1 Jur. (N.S.) 913.

Testator devised his real estate to the use of trustees for a term of years, upon trust that in case his personal estate should be found insufficient for the payment of his debts and legacies, they should, after the decease of his wife, by sale or mortgage, raise such sums of money as should be sufficient to discharge his legacies, for the discharge whereof his personal estate should be found insufficient; and subject thereto he devised the estates to his issue, and for default of issue living at the time of his decease, to his wife for her life, remainder to the use of E. C. for his life, remainder to the first and other sons of E. C. in tail male, and died without issue:—Held, that the tenant for life should pay the interest on the deficiency, to be ascertained, either within a reasonable time after the death of the testator, or to be ascertained by the actual result of the account, and the estate is to bear the capital only of the deficiency. And if the personal estate be got in, in sums composed partly of capital money, and partly of interest, the interest will be applied in payment of the interest on the legacies, and the capital will be applicable to the payment of the capital of the legacies in ease of the term of years. Coote v. Milltown (Lord), 1 Jo. & Lat. 501; 7 Ir. Eq. R. 391.

A remainderman paid with his own money, after he came into possession, interest which had accrued, during the preceding estate for life, upon charges affecting the inheritance:—Held, first, that his executor was entitled in 1870 (as against the personal representative of the tenant for life), not only to be recouped out of, but to all the accumulations of, a fund in court, the produce of rents of the life estate brought in, in 1815, by a receiver appointed in an incumbrancer's suit instituted against the tenant for life. Howlin v. Sheppard, Ir. R. 6 Eq. 253. Affirmed Ir. R. 6 Eq. 497.

Held, secondly, that the remainderman had a specific lien upon all that remained of or represented the estate for life. Ib.

A tenant for life, who was entitled to charges on the inheritance vested in a trustee for himself, bequeathed to the remainderman all arrears of rent due at his death out of the settled estates, and also "the apportioned part up to the day of his death of the gale of rent which shall be then current," and died between two gale days:—Held, that the remainderman was entitled to the entirety of the apportioned part of the current gale, without deducting any sum in respect of an apportioned part of interest on the charges. Lindsay v. Wicklow (Earl), Ir. R. 6 Eq. 72.

—— Extent of Liability—Aggregate Devise—Several Estates—Several Incumbrances—Application of Aggregate Income.]—The tenant for life of several incumbered estates devised together as an aggregate whole must apply the aggregate income in keeping down the aggregate annual charges in respect of incumbrances. He cannot refuse the onerous and accept the beneficial portion of the property. Guthrie v. Walrond (52 L. J., Ch. 165; 22 Ch. D. 573) and Hotchkys, In re, Freke v. Calmady (55 L. J., Ch. 546; 32 Ch. D. 408) followed. Syer v. Gladstone (30 Ch. D. 614) discussed and distinguished. Frewen v. Law Life Assurance Society, 65 L. J., Ch. 787; [1896] 2 Ch. 511; 75 L. T. 17; 44 W. R. 682.

—— Tenant for Life—Heir.]—Tenant for life is bound to keep down the interest of debts, but being an heir-at-law not otherwise provided for, is, as against the remainderman, entitled to maintenance. Burges v. Mawbey, Turn. & R. 167; 24 R. R. 9.

An infant tenant in tail is bound to keep down the interest of debts charged upon the entailed estates. A tenant for life was also held to have been liable to keep down the interest of the debts, although, having the ultimate remainder in fee, he had consented to an act of parliament by which the estates were vested in trustees for the payment of the debts. Ib.

—— Tenant for Life with Absolute Power of Appointment.]—Tenant for life, with an absolute power of appointment, bound to keep down the interest on charges created by himself. Whitbread v. Smith, 3 De G. M. & G. 741; 2 Eq. R. 377; 23 L. J., Ch. 611; 18 Jur. 475; 2 W. R. 177.

—— Obligation of Assignee of Tenant for Life.]—The estate of a tenant for life was charged with a sum of 25,000*l.*, and interest from the time that the life estate commenced, and it was provided that the 25,000*l.* should not be raised until the expiration of two years from the commencement of the life estate. The tenant for life failed to keep down the interest of the 25,000*l.*, and there was raised on the estate by the trustees of the term created for the purpose of the charge a sum considerably exceeding the 25,000*l.* The persons entitled in remainder after the life estate, have an equity to recoup of the future income which shall accrue to the tenant for life, the excess raised beyond the 25,000*l.*, and the tenant for life having taken the benefit of the Insolvent Debtors Act, his assignees are affected by the same equity. Waring v. Coventry, 2 Myl. & K. 406.

Upon the sale of lands which were subject to an annuity, the vendor covenanted that certain other lands should be an indemnity against the annuity. He afterwards, on his marriage, settled the indemnity lands upon himself for life, with remainders over; and covenanted that the settled lands were free from incumbrances. The tenant for life having suffered the annuity to run in arrear, the arrears were raised by a sale of part of the settled lands. The remainderman has an equity against the tenant for life and against his assignee, under the Insolvent Act, to be recouped the arrears so levied out of the produce of the life estate. Coote v. O'Reilly, 1 Jo. & Lat. 455; 7 Ir. Eq. R. 356.

If a mortgagee enters, not in his character of mortgagee only, but as purchaser of the equity of redemption, he must look to the title of his vendor, and the validity of the conveyance he takes; and if the conveyance be such as gives him only the estate of a tenant for life, he is bound, having united in himself the characters of mortgagor and mortgagee, to keep down the interest of the mortgage for the benefit of the person or persons entitled in remainder. Raffety v. King, 1 Keen, 601; 6 L. J., Ch. 87.

—— What Interest.]—The court refused to give interest entered upon judgment debts beyond the amount of the penalty in the bonds against remainderman, where the interest had accrued during the lifetime of the tenant for life; on appeal to the lords, decree affirmed. Latouche v. Fitzgerald, 2 Ridgw. P. C. 333.

A. devised two estates, known as the home estate and the outlying estate, to trustees as to the latter for sale, and with the proceeds to pay off the mortgages existing on both properties. The tenant for life of the home estate claimed to have the income of the outlying property in the meantime until the sale applied in discharge of the interest accruing on the mortgage:—Held, that he was so entitled. Bond v. Biggs, 6 L. T. 794.

Where a tenant for life has permitted arrears of charges to accumulate, the claim of a remainderman for compensation out of the life estate, for the increased burden thus cast on the inheritance has priority over charges on the life estate created by the tenant for life, and secured by a demise of a legal term, without notice of the facts constituting the remainderman's equity. Fitzmaurice v. Murphy, 8 Ir. Ch. R. 363.

—— Other Matters.]—Principles on which this court assumes, that a tenant for life, who is also the owner of a charge on the inheritance, has duly discharged his duty of keeping down the interest on the charge. Burrell v. Egremont (Earl), 7 Beav. 205; 13 L. J., Ch. 309; 7 Jur. 587.

A. B., being seised in fee of four estates, mortgaged two of them, and subsequently settled the mortgaged estates, and one of the others, on himself for life, with remainder to his son in tail, and covenanted against incumbrances; but the settlement did not recite that there were any incumbrances. He afterwards mortgaged the fourth estate, and took the benefit of the Insolvent Debtors Act. After this a creditor on certain bills of exchange became a registered judgment creditor, and then filed a bill against the tenant in tail and the assignee in the insolvency, and the other incumbrancers, praying a sale in satisfaction of the judgment debt, and what might be paid by the plaintiff in discharge of prior incumbrances, subject to the estate and interest of the tenant in tail under the settlement:—Held, reversing a decree of foreclosure against the tenant in tail, that the settled estates must be regarded as exonerated from incumbrances, as between A. B., the settlor, and the tenant in tail, and that the plaintiff was subject to the same equities as the settlor, and that, as the judgment debt was itself subsequent to the settlement, the tenant in tail could not be affected by the judgment. Hughes v. Williams, 3 Mac. & G. 683; 16 Jur. 415. And see Chappell v. Rees, 1 De G. M. & G. 393; 16 Jur. 415.

Between Tenant for Life and Remainderman.]—Where a testator has bequeathed his residuary personal estate to trustees upon trust for conversion, with power to postpone such conversion at their discretion, and to hold the proceeds upon trust for a person for life with remainders over, and such residue includes outstanding personal estate, the conversion of which the trustees, in the exercise of their discretion, postpone for the benefit of the estate, and which eventually falls in some years after the testator's death—as, for instance, a mortgage debt with arrears of interest, or arrears of an annuity with interest, or moneys payable on a life policy—such outstanding personal estate should, on falling in, be apportioned as between capital and income, by ascertaining the sum which, put out at interest at 4 per cent. per annum, on the day of the testator's death, and accumulating at compound interest calculated at that rate with yearly rests and deducting income tax, would, with the accumulations of interest, have produced, at the day of receipt, the amount actually received; and the sum so ascertained should be treated as capital, and the residue as income. Chesterfield's (Earl) Trusts, In re, 52 L. J., Ch. 958; 24 Ch. D. 643; 49 L. T. 261; 32 W. R. 361. S. P., Beavan v. Beavan, 52 L. J., Ch. 961, n.; 24 Ch. D. 649, n.; 49 L. T. 263, n.; 32 W. R. 363, n.

When reversionary property is allowed to remain unsold until it falls into possession, the estate of a tenant for life of the property under a will who dies before it falls into possession is entitled to have paid to it, in respect of interest, out of the property, 4*l.* per cent. upon the value of the reversion, commencing at the end of a year from the testator's death, and calculated upon the assumption that it was to fall in on the day when it actually did fall in. Wright v. Lambert, 6 Ch. D. 649; 26 W. R. 206.

Trustees, having a discretion, allowed a reversionary interest to remain unsold for nineteen years, when it fell into possession:—Held, that the tenant for life, who had in the meanwhile received nothing in respect of income on it, was entitled to be recouped out of the fund. Wilkinson v. Duncan, 23 Beav. 469; 26 L. J., Ch. 495; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 530; 5 W. R. 398.

Mode of calculating the amount to be received by the tenant for life, and of regulating the relative rights of the tenant for life and remainderman, in such a case. Ib.

Rate of Interest.]—The usual rate at which interest ought to be calculated in administration proceedings is now 3 per cent. per annum. The old rate of 4 per cent. ought to be abandoned. Goodenough, In re, Marland v. Williams, 65 L. J., Ch. 71; [1895] 2 Ch. 537; 13 R. 454; 73 L. T. 152; 44 W. R. 44. And see Cleveland's (Duke) Estate, In re, Hay v. Wolmer, 65 L. J., Ch. 29; [1895] 2 Ch. 542; 13 R. 715; 73 L. T. 313.

What shall be Apportioned—Emblements.]—As between tenant for life and remainderman, emblements go to executor of former. Lawton v. Lawton, 3 Atk. 13.

—— Quit Rents.]—Quit rent shall not be apportioned as between the tenant for life and remainderman, the statute 11 Geo. 2, c. 19, s. 4, having no application in this case. Sutton v. Chaplin, 10 Ves. 66.

—— Royalties.]—A testator devised a brickfield to trustees for sale when they should think desirable. They deferred the sale in the exercise of their discretion:—Held, that the tenant for life was entitled to the royalties as income. Miller v. Miller, 41 L. J., Ch. 291; L. R. 13 Eq. 263; 20 W. R. 324.

—— Debts.]—Part of a testator's residuary estate consisted of a bond debt, which, owing to the insolvency of the debtor's estate, was not recovered until many years after the testator's death, when the gross sum recovered in respect of principal and interest did not equal the amount of the original debt:—Held, that as between the tenant for life of the residue, and those in remainder, the former was not entitled to receive what had actually been recovered in respect of interest, but only the amount of interest at 4*l.* per cent. on the sum which the bond would have realised, if the debtor's estate had been administered at the end of a year after the testator's death. Turner v. Newport, 2 Ph. 14; C. P. Coop., 147. Reversing 14 Sim. 32.

When the trustees of a settlement proved against the estate of the obligor of a bond in an administration suit for the aggregate amount of principal and interest at 5*l.* per cent. per annum, secured by the bond, and recovered a sum less in amount than the principal:—Held, that a calculation back should be made to ascertain what sum with interest at 4*l.* per cent. per annum from the time the principal secured by the bond became payable to the time of the receipt of the sum ultimately recovered, would amount to the sum so recovered, and that the tenant for life was entitled to the difference between these sums. Cox v. Cox, 38 L. J., Ch. 569; L. R. 8 Eq. 343; 17 W. R. 190.

Part of a testator's residuary estate was not recovered until some years after the testator's death. The sum recovered consisted almost entirely of principal moneys:—Held, that as between the tenant for life of the residue and those in remainder, the sum recovered must be apportioned, the tenant for life being entitled to interest at the rate of 3 per cent. per annum as from the expiration of one year from the testator's death. Turner v. Newport (2 Ph. 14) followed. Cleveland's (Duke) Estate, In re, Hay v. Wolmer, 65 L. J., Ch. 29; [1895] 2 Ch. 542; 13 R. 715; 73 L. T. 313.

A testator directed a debt of 25,000*l.* to form part of his residuary estate, and bequeathed that and all his other residuary estate to his executors in trust to raise and collect the same, and from time to time to invest the same, and to pay the interest or annual proceeds among certain other legatees. He afterwards joined in a deed which provided that no interest should be payable on the 25,000*l.* during his life, and postponed the payment of the principal to three years after his death; and agreed that the principal and three years' interest should be payable then by instalments of 2,000*l.* a year, and that if those instalments were punctually paid, no more than the three years' interest should be payable. He afterwards, by a codicil, declared that this arrangement should not affect his will:—Held, that the three years' interest did not form part of the capital sum to be invested, but belonged to the legatees for life. Caulfield v. M'Guire, 8 Ir. Eq. R. 164; 2 Jo. & Lat. 141.

—— Property not actually producing Income.]—The testator left his residuary real and personal estate to trustees upon trust for sale and conversion, with power to postpone conversion and to spend money for the benefit of the estate, and he declared that no property not actually producing income should entitle any party to the receipt of income. A debt due to the testator was not paid to his trustees, but they obtained a mortgage to secure it, and subsequently they bought a prior mortgage on the same security. No interest was ever paid on the debt, and the security eventually realised less than the principal due:—Held, that the balance of the fund, after providing for the expenses of protecting the security, was apportionable between principal and interest, that the sum attributable to interest was income produced by the security, and that the tenant for life was not deprived of it by the clause in the will. Hubbuck, In re, Hart v. Stone, 65 L. J., Ch. 271; [1896] 1 Ch. 754; 73 L. T. 738; 44 W. R. 289—C. A.

—— Annuity.]—Where an annuity for a term of years forms part of a residue, the executors, until they can sell it, must invest the payments, and interest of the investments will belong to the tenant for life of the residue. Crawley v. Crawley, 7 Sim. 427; 4 L. J., Ch. 265.

—— Contingent Reversionary Interest.]—A testator by his will bequeathed his residuary personal estate upon trust, after payment of debts and legacies, to lay out and invest the residue as therein mentioned, and to pay the income to the plaintiff for life, with remainders over. Part of the residuary estate consisted of a contingent reversionary interest in some settled funds. The testator died in 1832, and the reversion first became salable in 1846, but it had never been sold. Since 1846 the reversion had enormously increased in value. Upon an application in effect to have the value of the reversion apportioned as between tenant for life and remainderman:—Held, that the principle of Chesterfield's (Earl) Trusts, In re (24 Ch. D. 643), applied, and that assuming the reversion to have been sold at an agreed price, it must be ascertained what principal sum would, with compound interest from the date of the testator's death, make up the agreed price, and such principal sum alone must be attributed to corpus, and the whole of the rest to income. Hobson, In re, Walker v. Appach, 55 L. J., Ch. 422; 53 L. T. 627; 34 W. R. 70.

—— Where Estate is Insufficient.]—A testator bequeathed a legacy of 10,000*l.* with interest from his death at 4 per cent. per annum to trustees upon trust to pay the income to certain persons during the life of one of them, and after her death upon trust for other persons. The estate was insufficient for payment in full of his legacies, and the realisation of his assets occupied several years :—Held, that moneys from time to time received by the trustees and applicable to the legacy were divisible ratably between capital and income, so as to attribute to income 4*l.* per cent. from the testator's death on the amount attributed to capital. Tinkler's Estate, In re, 45 L. J., Ch. 135; L. R. 20 Eq. 456.

—— Mortgage—Deficient Security.]—A testator bequeathed his residuary personal estate to trustees upon trust for successive tenants for life, with absolute gifts over. After his death his trustees invested 8,000*l.*, part of his residuary personal estate, on mortgage. For some time the interest was regularly paid, but afterwards fell into arrear. After a time the mortgaged property was sold, and realised 7,900*l.* At the time of the sale the arrears of interest amounted to 536*l.* :—Held, that the tenants for life were not entitled to receive compound interest out of the fund, and that the fund must be apportioned between the tenants for life and remaindermen in the proportion which the arrears of interest bore to the original principal sum. Moore, In re, Moore v. Johnson, 33 W. R. 447.

—— Unsalable Property.]—A testator directed that his residuary estate should be sold and converted on a particular day, and that a share of the proceeds should be held upon trust for his wife for life, with remainders over. The residuary estate included a circus, which it was found impossible to sell advantageously, and which had been carried on at a loss by the executors since the day named for the sale and conversion of the estate. In a summons asking for directions how such losses and any future losses (or profits) should be apportioned as between capital and income :—Held, that the amount of annual profit or loss should be apportioned between the capital and the income of the testator's estate by inquiring what sum, put out at interest at 4 per cent. per annum on the day appointed for sale and conversion, and, as regards succeeding years, accumulating at compound interest calculated at the like rate, with yearly rests, would, together with such interest and accumulations, after deducting income-tax, be equivalent, at the end of each year, to the amount of such profit or loss, and by crediting such sum to, or charging it against, the capital of the testator's estate, the rest of such profit or loss being credited to or charged against the income thereof. Hengler, In re, Frowde v. Hengler, 62 L. J., Ch. 383; [1893] 1 Ch. 586; 3 R. 207; 68 L. T. 84; 41 W. R. 491.

—— Where Testator was Mortgagee in Possession—Foreclosure.]—A testator by his will directed his trustees to convert his real and personal estate, and to pay the income to tenants for life; he gave them power to postpone the conversion of any part of his estate. The testator at the date of his death was in possession of a colliery as mortgagee, and there were considerable sums owing to his estate under the mortgage. After his death the trustees commenced a foreclosure action, in which a receiver was appointed, and the trustees finally foreclosed the mortgage. Prior to foreclosure absolute the receiver had paid into court to the credit of the foreclosure action considerable sums of money, which sums had been increased by accumulations of interest. This fund had been transferred to the credit of an action for the administration of the testator's estate. The tenants for life claimed the whole fund as income :—Held, that the accumulations of interest were income, and belonged to the tenants for life; that the rest of the fund paid in before foreclosure absolute must be apportioned between the tenants for life and remaindermen, on the principle that the tenants for life were entitled to the difference between the sum transferred into court and the sum which, with interest at 4 per cent. from the date of the testator's death to the date of the transfer to the credit of this action, would amount to the sum transferred into court; and that the sum so calculated belonged to the estate as capital. Chesterfield's (Earl) Trusts, In re (24 Ch. D. 643) followed. Godden, In re, Teague v. Fox, 62 L. J., Ch. 469; [1893] 1 Ch. 292; 3 R. 67; 68 L. T. 116; 41 W. R. 282.

—— Life Policy Moneys—Mortgage—Premiums.]—A testator gave his residuary estate to a trustee on trust for a person for life with remainder over. The estate comprised an insurance policy on a surviving life, subject to a mortgage. The premiums and instalments of mortgage interest falling due after the testator's death were paid by the trustee out of the income of the estate. On the falling in of the policy :—Held, first, that the tenant for life was entitled as against the remaindermen to be repaid out of the policy moneys the amount of the premiums and mortgage interest paid as aforesaid, with interest thereon at 4 per cent; and secondly, that the respective rights of the tenant for life and remaindermen in the residue of such moneys should be adjusted in accordance with the principle of Chesterfield's (Earl) Trusts, In re (24 Ch. D. 643). Morley, In re, Morley v. Haig, 64 L. J., Ch. 727; [1895] 2 Ch. 738; 13 R. 680; 73 L. T. 151; 44 W. R. 140.

—— Sum Paid out of Estate and subsequently Repaid—Apportionment—Rate of Interest.]—Where the trustees of a will have, under the sanction of an order of the court, paid a sum of money out of the estate, which sum has, in consequence of the variation of the order on appeal, been subsequently repaid, such sum, although consisting of principal only, should, nevertheless, on repayment be apportioned between the tenant for life and remainderman of the beneficial interest in the estate, on the principles expounded in Turner v. Newport (2 Ph. 14), except that 3 per cent. interest should now be substituted for 4 per cent. Cleveland's (Duke) Estate, In re, Hay v. Wolmer, 65 L. J. Ch. 29; [1895] 2 Ch. 542; 13 R. 715; 73 L. T. 313.

—— Mortgage by Trustees for a Term—Repayment by Arrangement in Eighteen Months with Additional Sum representing Interest for a further Year.]—A fund settled by will on a person for life, with remainder to others in fee, was invested by the trustees on mortgage with a covenant that it should remain on the security for ten years. Afterwards an agreement was made under which it was repaid with interest in about eighteen months from the date of the agreement, with an additional sum representing in amount interest for a further year at the old rate:—Held, that the additional sum was capital, not income, and belonged wholly to those entitled in remainder to the fund. Searancke, In re, Simonds v. Huntingdon, 74 L. T. 339.

—— Moneys Paid in Error.]—A tenant for life became a lunatic, and by orders in the lunacy made in 1867 and 1868 annuities were directed to be paid to a remainderman (upon proper security for repayment) out of the income of the settled estates for twenty years. The payments were through some unexplained cause continued beyond this period, and in the meantime the remainderman mortgaged his interest in the estates, and subsequently became bankrupt. On the death of the tenant for life, his personal representative claimed to retain out of the share of the personal estate, to which the remainderman then became entitled, the amount of the excessive payments beyond the period of twenty years, in priority to the remainderman and all persons claiming under him, together with interest thereon:—Held, that the personal representative was entitled so to retain these amounts, together with interest, and that the fact of the estate of the remainderman being in mortgage made no difference. Langham, In re, Otway v. Langham, 74 L. T. 611.

g. Other Matters.

Account of Rents.]—A tenant for life is not liable to account for rents already received in a suit instituted by the obligee of a bond against the personal representatives and devisees of the obligor. Jesson v. Holt, Romilly's Notes of Cases, 153.

Fiduciary Position.]—As a tenant for life, though his consent may be requisite to the exercise of a power of sale, stands in no fiduciary position towards the remainderman, and is as free as anyone else to buy from the trustees, a sale to him cannot be impeached on the ground of the purposes for which he buys, his motives being immaterial to the trustees, provided they sell on terms advantageous to the estate. Dicconson v. Talbot, L. R. 6 Ch. 32; 24 L. T. 49; 19 W. R. 138.

A bill will not lie at the suit of a remainderman to set aside a lease by tenant for life, on the ground of its being accompanied with a loan of money, there being no privity between them, and the remedy being at law. Corbett v. Segrave, 2 Ball & B. 98.

—— Settlement of Leaseholds — Purchase of Reversion.]—There is no case in which the doctrine of Keech v. Sandford (Sel. Cas. Ch. 61) has been applied to leaseholds not renewable by contract or custom, and a tenant for life of leaseholds purchasing the freehold reversion is not a trustee thereof for those entitled in remainder. Longton v. Wilsby, 70 L. T. 770.

—— Statutory Right of Pre-emption.]—The tenant for life of settled property (having a statutory right of pre-emption as adjoining owner) purchased on his own account from turnpike trustees the site of a disused tollhouse, the conveyance being made to himself in fee. He made lasting improvements thereon, and died, having devised the site to the defendants:—Held, that the defendants were trustees of the site for the remaindermen entitled to the settled property, but that the remaindermen could only enforce this equity on the terms of recouping the estate of the tenant for life not only the amount of the purchase-money, but also the value of the lasting improvements. Rowley v. Ginnever, 66 L. J., Ch. 669; [1897] 2 Ch. 503; 77 L. T. 302.

Exchange under Inclosure Act, 1845.]—A remainderman is not bound by an agreement, made by a tenant for life or tenant in tail, to apply for an order effecting an exchange under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 118. Landed Estates Investment Co. v Weeding, 21 L. T. 384; 18 W. R. 35.

Interest on Income in arrear.]—Interest at 4 per cent. allowed to the tenant for life of a trust fund upon the amount found due to her for arrears of interest of the fund. Willcocks v. Butcher, 16 Sim. 366.

D. ESTATE PUR AUTRE VIE.

1. In General.

Limitation of.]—A limitation of real estate to A., during the life of B. and C., without saying, "and during the life of the survivor of them," gives A. an estate during the lives of B. and C., and the survivor. But a limitation of 100 years, if A. and B. shall so long live, is determined by the death of either, because this is a collateral condition. Day v. Day, 1 Kay, 703; 18 Jur. 1013; 2 W. R. 700.

Semble, that these rules apply also to limitations of personal estate. Ib.

A tenant in fee conveyed lands "to H., her heirs and assigns, to hold to H. and her assigns during the life of G." G. was H.'s heir-at-law:—Held, that, after H.'s death, G. was entitled to hold for his life, as special occupant, and that the land did not pass to H.'s executors by the words in the habendum. Doe d. Timmis v. Steele, 4 Q. B. 663; 3 G. & D. 622; 12 L. J., Q. B. 272.

—— Trustees to Preserve, &c.]—Estate limited by deed to trustees and their heirs, to preserve, &c., construed an estate pur autre vie, to effect the general intention of the deed. Beaumont v. Salisbury (Marquis), 19 Beav. 198; 3 Eq. R. 369; 24 L. J., Ch. 94; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 458.

An estate was limited to trustees "and their heirs," to preserve contingent remainders, and it was subsequently, and after another life estate, limited to the same trustees for five hundred years to raise portions. It was held, having regard to the clear intention, that the estate to the trustees "and their heirs" must be controlled, and that they took an estate pur autre vie, so as to give effect to the term of five hundred years. Ib.

Limitations in a deed to trustees "and their heirs" (without words restricting it to the lives of preceding tenants for life), upon trust to preserve contingent remainders:—Held, that although the omission of such word was probably an oversight, yet, the instrument being a deed, the court could not construe the limitation as restricted, notwithstanding an estate in fee was a larger estate than was required for the purposes of the trust, and the limitation was repeated in a subsequent part of the deed, and was followed by a term of years in a third party, upon trust to raise portions, and by a power for the tenants for life to grant leases. Lewis v. Rees, 3 Kay & J. 132; 26 L. J., Ch. 101; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 12; 5 W. R. 96.

To justify the court in restricting such a limitation by deed to an estate pur autre vie, it must be shown that the intention of the parties, as manifested by the deed, cannot be carried into effect unless the limitation be so restricted. Ib.

Distinction in this respect between deeds and wills. In the latter a greater latitude is allowed in the construction of legal terms, the testator being supposed inops consilii. Ib.

Nature and Quality of Estate.]—Where a lessee of lands demised to him, his heirs and assigns, for lives, devised the premises for the residue of the term to W. J. L. and his assigns, who died intestate:—Held, that the premises did not go to the heir of W. J. L., but to his personal representative, under the 29 Car. 2, c. 3, s. 12. Doe d. Lewis v. Lewis, 9 M. & W. 662; 11 L. J., Ex. 305; 6 Jur. 375.

Learning as to the nature and quality of estates pur autre vie. Allen v. Allen, 2 Dru. & W. 307; 1 Con. & L. 427.

A tenant quasi in tail in possession of such an estate has full power over, and may by an act inter vivos, deal with the estate precisely as if there never had been any settlement; but a quasi tenant in tail cannot, without the concurrence of the tenant for life, defeat the subsequent remainders. But if he aliens with the consent of the tenant for life, or obtains a renewal with his concurrence, or if the tenant for life procures a renewal and then conveys to the tenant quasi in tail, this will be sufficient to bar the quasi in tail. Ib.

A., seised to him and his heirs, for the life of B., devised to C. without using words of inheritance:—Held, that, on the death of C., B. living, the heir of A. took as special occupant. Doe d. Jeff v. Robinson, 2 Man. & Ry. 249; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 273. S. C., nom. Doe d. Jeff v. Hunter, 8 B. & C. 296.

If an estate pur autre vie is limited to a man, his heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, and is not devised, it descends to the heir as a special occupant. Atkinson v. Baker, 4 Term Rep. 229; 2 R. R. 366.

A. being seised in fee of several freehold estates, and also possessed of a leasehold rectory for lives, devised all his manors, messuages, lands, tenements, tithes and hereditaments, and all his real estate whatsoever (except what was thereinafter mentioned and devised), to trustees in strict settlement; he charged his leasehold with rent-charges to two of his younger children, and directed that, when any of the lives dropped, the lease should be renewed, and the names of those two children put in, of whom a son was to have the preference; it was held that the rectory did not pass by the general words of the devise, but that A.'s eldest son and heir took as special occupant on the death of A. Sheffield v. Mulgrave (Lord), 5 Term Rep. 571.

A lady, who was domiciled in Hungary, was entitled as tenant in common with her two sisters, to an annuity charged on land in England for the lives of the three sisters and the longest liver of them. By her will made in Hungary she gave all her personal estate to her executors upon certain trusts:—Held, that the interest of the testatrix in the annuity was an estate pur autre vie, applicable by law in the same manner as personal estate within the Legacy Duty Act, 36 Geo. 3, c. 52, s. 20. Chatfield v. Bertcholdt, 41 L. J., Ch. 255; L. R. 7 Ch. 192; 26 L. T. 267; 20 W. R. 401.

Held, also, that though this interest was applicable as personal estate, it was not actually personal estate, but, on the contrary, real estate, and consequently that, notwithstanding her foreign domicil, legacy duty was payable on her interest in the annuity by virtue of s. 20. Ib.

There can be a special occupant of an equitable estate pur autre vie, although the legal estate is in a trustee. Reynolds v. Wright, 2 De G. F. & J. 590; 30 L. J., Ch. 381; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 246; 3 L. T. 531; 9 W. R. 211.

Leasehold estates pur autre vie were devised in trust for A., his heirs, sequels in right, executors, administrators and assigns. A. survived the devisor, and being illegitimate, died without heirs and intestate, living the cestui que vie:—Held, that the devised estates passed under 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 26, s. 6, to A.'s administrator (the nominee of the crown). Ib.

An estate by wrong can never be an estate pur autre vie. Penny v. Allen, 7 De G. M. & G. 409; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 273; 5 W. R. 303.

An estate pur autre vie created by a will passes on the death of the grantee to his executor or administrator under s. 6 of the Wills Act, 1837, unless the will expressly or impliedly designates a special occupant. A devise without words of limitation does not import a designation of the grantee's heir as special occupant. Philpotts v. James (3 Dougl. 425) and Wall v. Byrne (2 Jo. & Lat. 118) explained. Sheppard, In re; Sheppard v. Manning, 66 L. J., Ch. 445; [1897] 2 Ch. 67; 76 L. T. 756; 45 W. R. 475.

If an estate is given to A. simply during the life of B., and A. dies before B., any person getting possession of the land after the death of A. will be entitled to hold it as the general occupant; but if an estate is limited to A. and his heirs during the life of B., a general occupant is not permitted, but the heir will take as special occupant, and not by descent. Northen v. Carnegie, 4 Drew. 587; 28 L. J., Ch. 930; 7 W. R. 481.

Semble, if an estate is given to A. and his executors and administrators during the life of B., and A. dies first, the executor would be capable of taking the estate as special occupant. In the case of an incorporeal hereditament, limited to A. simpliciter pur autre vie, an executor or administrator may be a special occupant, but there can be no general occupant. Ib.

If A., having an estate to himself, his heirs and assigns, during the life of B., conveys the legal interest to trustees, their executors, administrators and assigns, and the trustees die in the lifetime of the cestui que vie, the executors of the trustees will be special occupants, and A. will have no interest in the legal estate. Ib.

If A., tenant pur autre vie, parts with the beneficial interest contingently, and the contingency does not happen, then there will be a resulting trust in favour of A. of the interest, which he has not effectually parted with. Ib.

The estate of a tenant for life in lands held pur autre vie, cannot merge in the possible estate therein of his heir or executor; the latter being an independent estate, less in value than the former, and not taken by the heir or executor as a remainder upon the previous estate, but as a special occupancy upon the death of the tenant for life. Pickersgill v. Grey, 30 Beav.

352; 31 L. J., Ch. 394; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 632; 5 L. T. 706; 10 W. R. 207.

In 1865 B., by a written agreement, let to M. a farm, B. "giving him a lease of three lives for thirty-one years." The agreement did not contain any words of limitation. No lease was ever executed, but the lessee entered, and remained in possession till he died, intestate. His heir then entered. The personal representatives of the lessee brought ejectment. The heir filed a bill for an injunction, and prayed that a lease should be executed to him, his heirs, executors, &c., for three lives to be named by him, and for a concurrent term of thirty-one years:—Held, that, under the circumstances, the personal representatives took, under the statute, the interest of the lessee. M'Dermott v. Balfe, Ir. R. 2 Eq. 440.

—— Copyholds.]—Copyhold estates are liable to special occupancy. Doe d. Lampriere v. Martin, 2 W. Bl. 1148.

But there can be no general occupancy of a copyhold. Zouch d. Forse v. Forse, 7 East, 186; 3 Smith, 191.

The 29 Car. 2, c. 3, s. 12, and 14 Geo. 2, c. 20, s. 9, appropriating estates pur autre vie, where there is no special occupant, do not extend to copyholds. Ib.

2. PRODUCTION OF THE CESTUI QUE VIE.

In what Cases.]—Married woman, tenant for life, with remainders over, ordered to be produced. Grant, Ex parte, 6 Ves. 512.

Proceedings, under the act of 6 Anne, c. 18, to compel production of cestui que vie. St. Aubyn, Ex parte, 2 Cox, 373.

A lessee for years, determinable on lives, having paid an advanced rent during a dispute whether the last cestui que vie, who had been many years absent from the realm, was alive, and a demand of a farther advanced rent being made by the lessor, on a bill by the lessee to recover those payments, a commission to examine witnesses to prove the cestui que vie still living was used, the plaintiff paying into court the arrears and accruing payments of the advanced rent, which he had been accustomed to pay. Brown v. Petre, 2 Swan. 235.

There being no satisfactory proof that the persons were living for whose lives certain hereditaments were held, the court, on the application of the remainderman, made an order under the 6 Anne, c. 18, s. 1, requiring the tenant pur autre vie to produce the persons in question at a time and place specified in the order. Clossey, In re, 2 Sm. & G. 46; 2 Eq. R. 52; 18 Jur. 222; 2 W. R. 183.

Real estate stood limited to D. for life; remainder to A. in fee. D. assigned his life estate. Some time afterwards it became doubtful whether D. was living or not, and there was evidence that when last seen he was apparently hopelessly ill. The court, on the application of A., made an order under 6 Anne, c. 18, requiring the assignees of the life estate to produce D., at the time and place and to the persons mentioned in the order, although there was no allegation in the affidavit that the death of the cestui que vie was concealed by them. Dennis, In re, 7 Jur. (N.S.) 230; 8 W. R. 649.

Where an application is made under the statute 6 Anne, c. 18, s. 1, to the party in possession of an estate for the production of a cestui que vie to the person entitled to the estate in remainder, and the party in possession does not respond to the application, the applicant is entitled to an order for production. Owen, In re, 48 L. J., Ch. 248; 10 Ch. D. 166; 27 W. R. 305.

Under 6 Anne, c. 18, an assignee of the life interest of a tenant for life, can be required to produce his cestui que vie at the bar of the court, and, failing such production, the cestui que vie will be deemed to be dead. Hall, In re, Castledine, Ex parte, 44 L. T. 469; 29 W. R. 521.

When a cestui que vie of a lease for lives was not forthcoming, and there was good reason for supposing him to be dead, the court, on an application of those entitled in remainder, ordered him to be produced by the lessee at the bar of the court; or, for the purposes of the application, to be assumed to be dead. St. John's Hospital, In re, 18 L. T. 112; 16 W. R. 556.

Money was payable to a tenant pur autre vie under a policy, after proof, to the satisfaction of directors of the cestui que vie. An order was made under 6 Anne, c. 72, that the cestui que vie ought to be deemed and taken to be dead under the statute, and the remaindermen entered:—Held, that the directors might reasonably require further evidence of the death of the cestui que vie. Doyle v. City of Glasgow Life Assurance Co., 53 L. J., Ch. 527; 50 L. T. 323; 32 W. R. 476.

Under the statute 6 Anne, c. 18, the court has power to made an order for the production of a cestui que vie as well upon a person having an interest determinable on a life, as on a person having an estate pur autre vie strictly so called. Stevens, In re, 55 L. J., Ch. 433; 31 Ch. D. 320; 54 L. T. 80; 34 W. R. 268.

A testator devised land to A., her heirs and assigns; but in the case she should die without leaving issue living, then to B. A. sold the land to C., and disappeared:—Held, that B. was entitled to call upon C. to produce A., under 6 Anne, 3. 18, notwithstanding that B.'s interest arose under an executory devise, and that it arose, not on A.'s death simpliciter, but on A.'s death without leaving issue living. Pople, In re, Baker, Ex parte, 58 L. J., Ch. 372; 40 Ch. D. 589; 60 L. T. 668; 37 W. R. 554.

The master of the rolls had no jurisdiction under the 6 Anne, c. 18, for the production of the tenant for life. Meyrick v. Lowes, 23 Beav. 449; 5 W. R. 746.

Enlarging Time for Production.]—Where a cestui que vie of a lease for lives, who has been ordered to be produced, was not forthcoming, but there was reasonable evidence of his existence, the court extended the time for his production. St. John's Hospital, In re, 18 L. T. 317; 16 W. R. 670.

Expenses of Production.]—The court has no power to order a remainderman expectant upon the determination of an estate pur autre vie, to pay to the tenant pur autre vie the expenses of producing the cestui que vie under the act 6 Anne, c. 18. Isaac, In re, 4 Myl. & C. 11.

Practice—Course of Proceeding.]—An order was made, ex parte, under the statute 6 Anne, c. 18, on the application of a person entitled in fee, subject to a lease for lives, that the lessee should produce the cestui que vie at a place and time and before persons named in the order. Whalley, Ex parte, 4 Russ. 561. S. P., Owen, In re, supra.

Course of proceeding under 6 Anne, c. 18, to compel a lessee pur autre vie to produce the cestui que vie to the reversioner. Lingen, In re, 12 Sim. 104.

Order to produce cestui que vie before commissioners, or the court, granted on motion, although notice of the motion had not been served on the tenant pur autre vie. Abergavenny (Lord), Ex parte, 6 N. R. 335.

—— Evidence.]—Where an application is made under the statute 6 Anne, c. 18, s. 1, to the party in possession of an estate for the production of a cestui que vie to the person entitled to the estate in remainder, and the party in possession does not respond to the application, the applicant is entitled to an order for production. Owen, In re, 48 L. J., Ch. 248; 10 Ch. D. 166; 27 W. R. 305.

E. ESTATE AT WILL.

Assignment.]—An estate at will is not assignable. Murphy v. Ford, 5 Ir. C. L. R. 19.

F. CUSTOMARY ESTATES.

1. GAVELKIND.

a. General Incidents.

Ouster.]—The possession of one co-heir in gavelkind is not the possession of the other, where he enters with an adverse intent to oust the other. Devonport v. Tyrrel, 1 W. Bl. 675.

A father was entitled in fee to an undivided moiety of gavelkind land, the other moiety of which belonged to his wife in fee. She died in May, 1870, leaving two sons, Samuel and John. John was then an infant. He attained twenty-one in 1877, and died in May, 1884. On the mother's death her moiety descended to her two sons in equal shares, but the father was by that custom entitled to a moiety of the rents so long as he remained a widower. On the mother's death he entered into the receipt of the whole of the rents of her moiety, and continued in possession, without accounting to his sons or acknowledging their title in writing, for more than twelve years. On the death of John in 1884, his interest descended to his brother Samuel as heir of the mother. In February, 1884, the father re-married and died in November 1884:—Held, that, as to one-eighth of the property to which John became entitled in possession on the death of his mother, the father must be taken to have entered into receipt of the rents as bailiff for his infant son, and that consequently the title of John was not barred by the Statute of Limitations, and that his brother Samuel was entitled to that one-eighth. But held, that, as to Samuel's own one-eighth the same presumption did not arise, and that, as there was no evidence that the father had received the rents as agent for Samuel, or had, before the expiration of the statutory period, acknowledged his title in writing, or accounted to him for the rents, the title to that one-eighth was barred by the statute. Consequently, Samuel was entitled to three-eighths of the whole property, and the remaining five-eighths passed under the father's will. Hobbs, In re, Hobbs v. Wade, 57 L. J., Ch. 184; 36 Ch. D. 553; 58 L. T. 9; 36 W. R. 445.

Disgavelling—Evidence.]—As to the evidence to shew that lands had been disgavelled by a private act of parliament, see Doe d. Bacon v. Brydges, 6 Man. & G. 282; 7 Scott (N.R.) 333; 13 L. J., C. P. 209.

Distress.]—One of several co-heirs in gavelkind may distrain for rent due to him and his companions without an actual authority from his companions. Leigh v. Shepherd, 2 Br. & B. 465; 5 Moore, 297; 23 R. R. 516.

Dower.]—The 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 105 (Dower Act), extends to lands of gavelkind tenure. Farley v. Bonham, 2 Johns. & H. 177; 30 L. J., Ch. 239; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 232; 3 L. T. 806; 9 W. R. 299.

Exchange—Gavelkind and Socage Lands.]—Under 8 & 9 Vict. c. 118, s. 47, the inclosure commissioners have power to confirm an exchange of gavelkind lands in Kent for common socage lands in Middlesex. Minet v. Leman, 7 De G. M. & G. 340; 3 Eq. R. 783; 24 L. J., Ch. 545; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 692; 3 W. R. 580.

b. Descent.

In customary descent the ordinary incidents of descents attach to the custom. Therefore, in gavelkind descent, the jus representationis applies to the remoter issue as well as to the sons of the intestate's brothers. Hook v. Hook, 1 H. & M. 43; 1 N. R. 85; 32 L. J., Ch. 14; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 42; 7 L. T. 501; 11 W. R. 105.

An intestate had one brother, who died in his lifetime. The brother (besides a son who died without issue in the intestate's lifetime) had two sons; the elder, who died in the intestate's life, leaving two sons, and the younger who survived the intestate:—Held, that gavelkind lands of the intestate descended, as to one moiety, to the brother's younger son, and as to the other, to the two sons of the brother's eldest son equally. Ib.

c. Law and Custom.

Limitation to Right Heirs.]—A testator seised of lands in common socage, and of other lands in gavelkind, desired everything to remain in its then present position during his wife's life, for her use; and after her decease, devised his real estate to his then male heir and his heirs, in strict tail male:—Held, that the lands in gavelkind, as well as those in common socage, passed to the testator's heir at common law. Thorp v. Owen, 2 Sm. & G. 90; 2 Eq. R. 392; 23 L. J., Ch. 286; 18 Jur. 641; 2 W. R. 208.

On a devise of freehold and leasehold lands in Kent, in strict settlement, with an ultimate limitation to the testator's own right heirs, the will also containing a similar disposition of other leaseholds in Kent, not the subject of the suit, the common law heir is entitled. Sladen v. Sladen, 2 Johns. & H. 369; 31 L. J., Ch. 775; 7 L. T. 63; 10 W. R. 597.

A testator devised gavelkind lands to "William G., the eldest son of my nephew, J. G.," for life with remainder to such issue of William G. as in the will mentioned, and in default of such issue to his own right heirs. The nephew, J. G., had at the date of the will, and at the testator's death, two sons, of whom William G. was the youngest:—Held, that the devise was to William G., and that on his death without issue the land passed to the common law heirs of the testator, and not to his gavelkind heirs. Garland v.

By a voluntary settlement A. and his cousin limited certain gavelkind lands to a relative, C., for life, with remainder to her issue, and for default of such issue, "to the use of the right heirs of E., deceased, and J."—who was then living—"the two sisters of the said A., their heirs and assigns as tenants in common for ever": —Held—the court declining to read the limitation as a limitation to "the right heirs of E., deceased, and of J."—that J. herself took a vested remainder in fee simple in a moiety of the property expectant on the death of C. without issue; and, accordingly, that on the death of C., who survived J., and died without issue, the moiety passed to J.'s co-heirs in gavelkind. Hawes v. Hawes, 14 Ch. D. 614; 43 L. T. 280.

Limitation to Heirs of the Body.]—Testator being seised in fee of lands in gavelkind devised all his real estate to his nephew, T. C., for and during the term of his natural life, and from and after the determination of that estate to trustees to preserve contingent remainders, and from and after the decease of T. C. to and amongst all and every the heirs of the body of the said T. C. as well female as male, such heirs, as well female as male, to take as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, and for default of such issue to trustees for a term of 500 years, upon trust that they should as soon as might be after the decease of T. C., in case he should die without issue of his body lawfully begotten, raise a sum of money to be applied to the maintenance of his niece, and after the determination of the said term of 500 years he devised the same to his T. C. and C. C. for and during their respective natural lives, to take as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, and from and after their respective deceases, unto and amongst all and every the heirs of the respective bodies of the said T. C. and C. C., as well female as male, lawfully begotten or to be begotten, such heirs to take as tenants in common and not as joint tenants, and in default of such issue to his own right heirs for ever:—Held, that T. C. took an estate tail in the devised premises. Doe d. Bosnall v. Harvey, 4 B. & C. 610; 7 D. & R. 78; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 18.

Lands in Kent.]—A rectory in Kent, formerly belonging to one of the dissolved monasteries, having been granted by Henry VIII. to a layman, to be holden in fee by knight's service in capite: —Held, that the lands were descendible according to the custom of gavelkind, but the tithes according to the common law. Doe d. Lushington v. Llandaff (Bishop), 2 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 491; 9 R. R. 682.

Feoffment by Infant.]—A widow was entitled to dower out of gavelkind land of which her three sons (two of whom were infants) were co-heirs. The widow and adult son conveyed by deed to the present vendor, and this conveyance was confirmed by charters of feoffment by the infants on the youngest attaining fifteen years. It appeared that the infants had not received their full share:—Held, that as the two sons were still infants and could not release their rights, the title could not be forced on an unwilling purchaser. Maskell and Goldfinch's Contract, In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 678; [1895] 2 Ch. 525; 13 R. 685; 72 L. T. 836; 43 W. R. 620.

2. BOROUGH ENGLISH.

Descent.]—The custom of a manor was stated to be that all copyholds descended to the youngest son or daughter, brother or sister, uncle or aunt. A tenant died intestate seised of customary lands of the manor, leaving neither son, daughter, brother, sister, uncle, nor aunt; but leaving sons of deceased uncles:—Held, that the youngest son of the youngest uncle was not entitled, and that the heir-at-law was entitled to the lands. Smart, In re, Smart v. Smart, 18 Ch. D. 165; 30 W. R. 43.

According to the custom of descent in the manor of Taunton Deane, a surviving sister is not entitled to inherit in preference to the son of a deceased brother's son. Locke v. Colman, 2 Mylne & C. 635.

The custom of descent in a manor was in the nature of borough English, the youngest son of the person last seised inheriting in preference to the eldest; and if the youngest son were dead without issue, then the next youngest son; and if no son, the daughters as co-parceners; and if no issue, then the youngest brother of the person last seised, and the youngest son of the youngest brother, if such youngest brother were dead, or if such youngest brother were dead without issue, the next youngest brother; and if no brother, the sisters taking as parceners. There was also one entry of descent and admission in favour of the youngest son of the uncle of the person last seised, and one entry of descent and admission shewing the descent to the youngest sons respectively of two sisters, who were heirs parceners to the person last seised:—Held, that there was no evidence to authorise an extension of the custom of descent in favour of so remote a collateral relative as the youngest son of the youngest brother of the great-grandfather, ex parte maternâ, of the person seised. Muggleton v. Barnett, 1 H. & N. 282; 26 L. J., Ex. 47; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1026. Affirmed in the Exchequer Chamber, 2 H. & N. 653; 27 L. J., Ex. 125; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 139; 6 W. R. 182; see 4 Jur. (N.S.) 5, Part 2.

Lands were devised to one for life, remainder to his eldest son, and the legal customary heirs of such eldest or only son for ever, remainder by way of proviso to the daughters as tenants in common in fee, and if the tenant for life left no son or daughter, or issue of a son or daughter living at his death, then over. Part of the property was copyhold, descendible according to the tenure of borough English among issue and collaterals also:—Held, that on the death of one of the daughters of the tenant for life without issue in his lifetime her interests in the copyholds descended to her youngest sister then living, and on the subsequent birth of another sister shifted to her. Rider v. Wood, 1 K. & J. 644; 3 Eq. R. 1064; 24 L. J., Ch. 737.

And see COPYHOLD.

Devise.]—Devise, after a tenancy for life, of borough English lands for sale, and to divide the moneys among all the testator's sons and daughters which might then be living, and to the heir and heirs of them which might be deceased, share and share alike:—Held, that under the gift to the heirs, the common law and not the heirs in borough English took. Polley v. Polley 31 Beav. 363.

Devise of copyholds to W. for life, and after his death to his eldest son, and the legal customary heirs of such eldest or only son for ever provided, that if W. leave no son or issue of a son living at his death, devise to the daughters of W. as tenants in common in fee, and if W. leave no son or daughter, or issue of a son or daughter living at his death, gift over:—Held, that W.'s daughters, during his lifetime, took contingent descendible interests as tenants in common in fee in th edevised estate. Rider v. Wood, 1 K. & J. 644; 3 Eq. R. 1064; 24 L. J., Ch. 737.

Held, also, that the admission of W. did not enure for the benefit of his daughters, so as to bring them within the seisin. Ib.

Another part of the property was copyholds not proved to be descendible according to the tenure of borough English, but by custom the descent was shewn to be to the youngest son or daughter or sister of the copyholder last seised:—Held, that on the death of one of W.'s daughters in his lifetime without issue before she became seised her interest in these copyholds descended, not according to the custom, but to all her sisters as her co-heiresses at law. Ib.

Covenant.]—Borough English lands are not applicable in performance of a covenant in marriage articles to settle freehold lands on the first and other sons of the marriage, for it is not the kind of estate intended by the articles. Pinnel v. Hallett, Ambl. 106.

Law and Custom.]—Settlement before marriage on the husband and wife for life (of a freehold), remainder to the heirs of the husband and wife, and of a copyhold in borough English on the husband and wife for life, remainder to the heirs of their two bodies, in like manner, and to the same uses as the freehold:—The younger son shall succeed as heir in tail to the copyhold. Roe d. Aistrop v. Aistrop, 2 W. Bl. 1228.

G. CO-PARCENERS, JOINT TENANTS AND TENANTS IN COMMON.

1. Co-parceners.

Ouster.]—A feoffment by one parcener, who occupies alone under a general entry, operates as a conveyance of her own purparty, and as a deforcement of her co-parceners. Doe d. Read, or Reed v. Taylor, 2 N. & M. 508; 5 B. & Ad. 575; 3 L. J., K. B. 67.

Descent.]—See cols. 228, 231, ante.

Limitation to Right Heirs.]—Under the ultimate limitation in a settlement the equitable fee in real estate was limited to the "right heirs" of C., who had never had any estate in the property. C. was dead at the date of the settlement, and his right heirs at the date of his death were three sisters and five daughters of a deceased sister. The preceding limitations all failed:—Held, that the persons who were the right heirs of C. at his death took as personæ designatæ, and as joint tenants, and not as co-parceners with descent from them as such. Berens v. Fellowes, 56 L. T. 391; 35 W. R. 356.

Entry.]—Where the entry upon a claim by one of several co-parceners, who make but one heir, is lawful, such entry made will generally vest the seisin in all as the entry of all. Doe d. Gill v. Pearson, 6 East, 173; 2 Smith, 295; 8 R. R. 447. S. P., Doe d. Daniell v. Woodroffe, 10 M. & W. 608; 12 L. J., Ex. 147.

2. Joint Tenants.

Limitation of Estate—By Deed.]—Settlement to permit "all and every the children to take rents, &c., to them and their heirs for ever," they are joint tenants, not tenants in common. Stratton v. Best, 2 Bro. C. C. 233.

Notwithstanding the leaning of late to a tenancy in common, an interest given to two or more, either by way of legacy or otherwise, is joint, unless there are words of severance, as "equally among," &c., or an inference of that sort arises in equity from the nature of the transaction, as in partnership, a joint mortgage, &c. Morley v. Bird, 3 Ves. 628; 4 R. R. 106.

Conveyance to two persons, habendum to them their heirs and assigns as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, to the use of them their heirs and assigns, they are tenants in common and not joint tenants, as the Statute of Uses does not operate. Doe d. Hutchinson v. Prestwidge, 4 M. & S. 178; 18 R. R. 436.

Under the ultimate limitation in a settlement, the equitable fee in real estate was limited to the "right heirs" of C., who had never had any estate in the property. C. was dead at the date of the settlement, and his right heirs at the date of his death were three sisters and five daughters of a deceased sister. The preceding limitations had failed:—Held, that the persons who were the "right heirs" of C. at his death took as personæ designatæ, and as joint tenants, and not as co-parceners with descent from them as such. Berens v. Fellowes, 56 L. T. 391; 35 W. R. 356.

A fund settled on the husband and wife "during their joint and natural lives":—Held, to be construed "during their joint lives, and the life of each of them." Smith v. Oakes, 14 Sim. 122.

Lands are settled to the use of the husband and wife for their lives, remainder to the heirs of both their bodies. The children of this marriage are joint tenants, and if any one dies before severance, his share shall survive to the others. Staples v. Maurice, 4 Bro. P. C. 580.

—— Joint Purchases and Investments.]—A joint purchase by two, to them and their heirs, with equal payments, creates a joint tenancy; and there is therefore a survivorship between them. Aveling v. Knipe, 19 Ves. 441; 13 R. R. 240.

Tenants in common of a mortgage term joining in a purchase of the equity of redemption to them and their heirs are tenants in common of the inheritance. Ib.

At the death of a testator two sums of stock which had been purchased by him and his sister were standing in their joint names. One had been purchased by them equally, but much the greater part of the other had been purchased by the sister, who was still living:—Held, that the sister was entitled, by survivorship, to both sums. Harris v. Fergusson, 16 Sim. 308.

Where two executors are joint tenants of the residue of the testator's personal estate, their employing part of it in trade for their mutual benefit does not amount to a severance as to the whole. Hall v. Digby, 4 Bro. P. C. 577.

If joint tenants of leasehold or freehold lay out money jointly upon it, in the way of trade, there is no survivorship. Lyster v. Dolland, 1 Ves. J. 435.

In the absence of any provision in a deed of settlement to the contrary, the purchase of shares in a bank in the joint names of A. and B., with moneys belonging solely to A., upon the death of A. vests the legal right to the shares in B. Garrick v. Taylor, 29 Beav. 79; 30 L. J., Ch. 211; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 116; 3 L. T. 460; 9 W. R. 181. Affirmed 4 De G. F. & J. 159; 31 L. J., Ch. 68; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1174; 5 L. T. 404; 10 W. R. 49.

Two sisters, spinsters, executrixes, and beneficiaries under their father's will, transferred a portion of the funds bequeathed to them as tenants in common into their joint names, and afterwards, out of the proceeds of that of which they were tenants in common, purchased stock in their joint names. They lived together, had all things in common, and made mutual wills in each other's favour:—Held, first, that the transfer made them joint tenants of the fund transferred. Hughes' Trusts, In re, 24 L. T. 415; 19 W. R. 468.

Held, secondly, that they were joint tenants of the stock afterwards purchased, though purchased out of the proceeds of a fund of which they were tenants in common. Ib.

Where A. and B., sisters, living together, and apparently intending to live always together, having a common source of income, made each, from time to time, investments in new three per cents., which were transferred into their joint names, and on which they received the dividends for their common use:—Held, that the proper inference was (in the absence of any inconsistent circumstances), that a joint tenancy was intended. Rowe, In re, Jacobs v. Hind, 61 L. T. 581—C. A.

On a purchase by two persons contributing equally to the cost of it, parol evidence of surrounding circumstances and of subsequent dealings is, notwithstanding the Statute of Frauds, admissible to prove an intention to hold in severalty. But, semble, parol evidence of statements of intention is not admissible. Harrison v. Barton, 1 J. & H. 287; 30 L. J., Ch. 213; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 19; 9 W. R. 177.

—— By Will.]—See WILL.

—— In other Cases.]—A sum of money was remitted to England to be secured for the benefit of a married woman and her children, so that the same might not come to the hands of her husband:—Held, that they took as joint tenants. Bustard v. Saunders, 7 Beav. 92; 7 Jur. 986.

—— Evidence to prove Tenancy in Common.]—See col. 335, post.

Of Renewable Leaseholds—Fine.]—A fine for the renewal of a lease by one of two tenants, jointly holding see lands, creates a lien on the other moiety, though under settlement. Hamilton v. Denny, 1 Ball & B. 199; 12 R. R. 14.

—— Forfeiture.]—Where A., holding under a lease for lives renewable for ever, containing a covenant, that he should within three months after the fall of each life give notice thereof, in writing, to his landlord, and within six months pay the renewal fine of 40*l.* 12*s.* 6*d.*, on the fall of each life, demised to B., at an increased rent for the same term, and with a similar covenant to pay the same renewal fine:—Held, that it is not sufficient for A., in order to work a forfeiture of B.'s interest, to shew that in a conversation about the renewal after the falling of the lives, B. objected to pay the renewal fines until A. should first procure a renewal from his head landlord; but there should have been a distinct demand upon B., calling upon him to pay the fines: semble, also, that where there are joint tenants, a demand made upon one only will not be sufficient to work a forfeiture of the interest. John v. Armstrong, Ll. & G. t. Plunk. 392.

If a demand be not made on the co-lessee even if proved to have been made on one, will not be sufficient to attach fraud on the other. Ib.

Expenditure—Lien.]—A. and B. were joint owners of a house, and A. had laid out on it moneys he had obtained from B.:—Held, that B. had no lien on the house for the amount. Kay v. Johnston, 21 Beav. 536.

—— Foreclosure.]—When A. and B., jointly interested in a policy of assurance, agreed to keep it up for their mutual benefit, paying the premium in certain proportions, and B. ceasing to pay his portion of the premium, the whole was paid by A.:—Held, that he was entitled to a foreclosure decree against B. Parker v. Anglesea (Marquis), 25 L. T. 482; 20 W. R. 162.

Partition.]—A specific performance of an agreement between joint tenants of copyhold estate for partition enforced, and a decree for mutual surrenders, although no jurisdiction to decree partition of copyholds before 4 & 5 Will. 4, c. 35. Bolton v. Ward, 4 Hare, 530; 14 L. J., Ch. 361; 9 Jur. 591.

Survivorship.]—If joint tenants die at same moment, estate remains in same nature to heirs. Bradshaw v. Toulmin, Dick. 633.

Account.]—In an action of account by a joint tenant, or a tenant in common, against his co-tenant, it is necessary to allege that he has received more than his share of the rent; he is not chargeable as a bailiff at common law. Sturton v. Richardson, 2 D. & L. 182; 13 M. & W. 17; 13 L. J., Ex. 281; 8 Jur. 476.

Severance.]—Where two executors are joint tenants of the residue of the testator's personal estate, their employing part of it in trade for their mutual benefit, does not amount to a severance as to the whole. Hall v. Digby, 4 Bro. P. C. 577.

Joint tenant devises his moiety, and afterwards the jointure was severed; nothing passed by the will. Swift v. Roberts, Ambl. 617; 3 Burr. 1488; 1 W. Bla. 467.

A fine or recovery by one joint tenant severs the joint tenancy, and operates on a moiety. Moody v. Moody, Ambl. 650.

A dormant surrender operates as a severance of a joint tenancy, though it is revocable during the lifetime of the surrenderor. Gale v. Gale, 2 Cox, 136.

Two executors being entitled as joint tenants to a mortgage debt, part of the residue of the testator's estate, one of them pledges the mortgage deed to A., as an indemnity against a future liability:—Held, that this was a severance of the joint tenancy of the executors in this debt. Watkinson v. Hudson, 4 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 213; 27 R. R. 263.

Two women being joint tenants of copyhold lands, one of them and her husband surrendered their estate and interest, to the intent that the lord should regrant the same to such person or persons as the husband should by will appoint. The wife died in the lifetime of her husband and sister. The husband afterwards died, having by his will appointed the surrendered share to his executors :—Held, that there was no severance of the joint tenancy. Edwards v. Champion, 3 De G. M. & G. 202 ; 1 Eq. R. 419 ; 23 L. J., Ch. 123 ; 1 W. R. 497.

The several receipts by joint tenants of a portion of a trust fund does not destroy the joint tenancy as to the remainder of the fund. Leak v. M'Dowall, 32 Beav. 28.

Several legatees entitled to a sum of money as joint tenants in remainder expectant on the decease of a tenant for life, joined in mortgaging the share of one of them to the trustee of the fund, in consideration of an advance, and they jointly and severally covenanted with the trustee that if the money advanced should be more than the mortgage share, the covenanting parties respectively, and their respective heirs, executors and administrators, would not demand from the trustee more than he should have in hand without reckoning the sum advanced, and would indemnify him against all costs or damages in consequence of the advance so made :—Held, that this amounted to a severance of the joint tenancy as regarded all the shares. Williams v. Hensman, 1 John. & H. 546 ; 30 L. J., Ch. 878 ; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 771 ; 5 L. T. 203.

By a marriage settlement to which the intended husband and wife were parties, after reciting that upon treaty for the marriage it had been agreed that the property, "as well real as personal," to which the intended wife "is entitled and may be entitled," should be held upon certain trusts, and that it had been further agreed that the intended husband should enter into a covenant "for settling the last-mentioned real and personal property for the purposes last aforesaid," the indenture witnessed that the intended husband covenanted with the trustees that all the estate and effects, both real and personal, of which the intended wife "is now seised and possessed, or of which she shall hereafter become seised or possessed," should be settled. At the date of the settlement the intended wife and her two sisters were joint tenants in fee of real estate, in reversion expectant on the death without issue of their brother. Similar settlements were made on the marriages of the other two sisters. All three sisters and their husbands died in the lifetime of their brother, who died without issue. No settlements were ever made in fulfilment of the covenants :—Held, that the joint tenancy had been severed by the settlements. Caldwell v. Fellowes, 39 L. J., Ch. 618 ; L. R. 9 Eq. 410 ; 22 L. T. 225 ; 18 W. R. 486.

Leasehold property was given by will to two sisters as joint tenants, and they mutually agreed to bequeath it in trust for each other for life, and for their nieces after the death of the survivor. One sister having died, the survivor made a will giving the property in a different manner :—Held, that the agreement between the sisters, carried out by the making of the wills, severed the joint tenancy, and that the property must be administered on the footing of a tenancy in common. Wilford's Estate, In re, Taylor v. Taylor, 48 L. J., Ch. 243 ; 11 Ch. D. 267 ; 27 W. R. 455.

By their marriage settlement the intended husband and wife each covenanted to settle any personal estate which should, during the coverture, vest in the wife or in the husband in her right. At that time the wife was entitled, as one of two joint tenants, to personal estate in expectancy on the death of a person who died during the coverture :—Held, that the marriage and the covenant to settle each operated to sever the joint tenancy. Baillie v. Treharne, 50 L. J., Ch. 295 ; 17 Ch. D. 388 ; 44 L. T. 247 ; 29 W. R. 729.

A joint tenancy in freeholds and leaseholds is not severed by the marriage of a female joint tenant. A subsequent demise by the husband of such female joint tenant and the other joint tenant will not effect a severance. Palmer v. Rich, 66 L. J., Ch. 69 ; [1897] 1 Ch. 134 ; 75 L. T. 484 ; 45 W. R. 205.

A. and B., being entitled as joint tenants to an equitable interest in a chattel term expectant on the death of X., concurred in a deed by which the entire legal interest in the term was vested in A., in trust for X. for life, with an executory limitation over in favour of A. and B. :—Held, upon the death of X. in the lifetime of A. and B., that the equitable interest in the one undivided moiety to which A. became entitled in possession was absorbed in the legal estate already vested in him, and that the joint tenancy between A. and B. was thereby severed. Conolly v. Conolly, Ir. R. 1 Eq. 376.

Where the portions of land occupied by each of two joint tenants had been separated by a ditch, evidence given after the death of one of them, that the deceased had borrowed a sum of money for a third party, and had "handed him over his share of the land as security—he did it by deed," and that thereupon the lender had entered into possession thereof, and had remained therein for six years, is evidence to go to a jury of a severance of the joint tenancy. Harris v. Harris, Ir. R. 3 C. L. 294.

—— By Covenant.]—Covenant by a joint tenant to sell severs the joint tenancy in equity, though not at law. Brown v. Raindle, 3 Ves. jun. 257.

—— By Parol.]—A letter from A. to B., in which A. engages to secure to B.'s family, in any way B. may desire by his will, a moiety of a fund, in which A. and B. are interested as joint tenants, is a severance of the joint tenancy. Gould v. Kemp, 2 Myl. & K. 304.

—— By carrying over Fund in Court.]—A fund had been carried over in the action to the separate account of the "infant plaintiffs as joint tenants" :—Held, that there had not been any severance of the joint tenancy. Wilks, In re, Child v. Bulmer, 60 L. J., Ch. 696 ; [1891] 3 Ch. 59 ; 65 L. T. 184 ; 40 W. R. 13.

By a marriage settlement made in 1880 the intended husband and wife covenanted to settle the wife's after-acquired property. Under a voluntary settlement executed in 1883 the wife took a share of personal property as joint tenant : —Held, that the covenant to settle after-acquired property severed the joint tenancy created by the subsequent settlement. Hewett, In re, Hewett v. Hallett, 63 L. J., Ch. 182 ; [1894] 1 Ch. 362 ; 8 R. 70 ; 70 L. T. 393 ; 42 W. R. 233.

—— By Contract for Sale.]—Where a contract for sale severed a joint tenancy. See Kingsford v. Ball, 2 Giff. (App.) i.

—— By Infant's Settlement.]—A marriage settlement cantained a proviso for the settlement of the present and after-acquired property of the intended wife, who was an infant. She was then entitled in remainder jointly with two others to a share in bank annuities standing in the names of trustees :—Held, that the joint tenancy was severed. Burnaby v. Equitable Reversionary Interest Society, 54 L. J., Ch. 466 ; 28 Ch. D. 416 ; 52 L. T. 350 ; 33 W. R. 639.

—— Of Income.]—A joint tenancy in income is severed as to each instalment as it becomes payable, without actual payment. Walmsley v. Fowhall, 40 L. J., Ch. 28.

The mere fact that the rents of several properties held in joint tenancy were collected by the husband during his wife's lifetime, and that they were treated as a common fund for the maintenance and benefit of both husband and wife and the other joint tenant, is not a course of dealing sufficient to intimate an intention of constituting a tenancy in common. Palmer v. Rich, 66 L. J., Ch. 69 ; [1897] 1 Ch. 134 ; 75 L. T. 484 ; 45 W. R. 205.

—— By Conduct.]—Construction of will giving a vested interest, though subject to contingent charge, and creating a tenancy in common as to part of the property, and as to the residue a joint tenancy, there being nothing to control the legal effect of the words. Jackson v. Jackson, 7 Ves. 535.

But on appeal, it was held, that though by residuary disposition to testator's two sons, "and the survivor, their or his heirs, executors, &c.," they took, as joint tenants, the leasehold and personal estate embarked in trade, upon all the circumstances, the transactions for twelve years as between themselves, a severance was to be implied, both as to the profits and the capital. S. C., 9 Ves. 591.

Joint tenancy in a residue of personal estate held to have been severed in equity ; all parties having, during their lives, acted with respect to it, under the supposition that they were entitled to it in common. Wilson v. Bell, Ir. R. 5 Eq. 501.

A testator devised certain properties to his sons, A., B., C., D., and E., respectively, as tenants in common, and appointed them residuary legatees :—Held, that they took the residue as joint tenants. For a number of years the dividends of the residue (which had been invested in stock), were paid in one-fifth shares to them, or, as each one of them died, to their personal representatives. E. survived and claimed the entire fund as surviving joint tenant :—Held, that the joint tenancy had been severed. Modes in which a joint tenancy may be severed. Wallis' Trusts, In re, 23 L. R., Ir. 460.

—— Of Chose in Action — Severance by Marriage.]—Marriage will only operate as a severance of a wife's joint tenancy when it would by itself, without the necessity of any act of the husband, have the effect of divesting the wife's property out of her and vesting it in her husband. Consequently, it is no severance of her joint tenancy in a chose in action, whether it be in possession or reversion. Baillee v. Treharne (17 Ch. D. 388) disapproved. Butler, In re, Hughes v. Anderson, 57 L. J., Ch. 643 ; 38 Ch. D. 286 ; 59 L. T. 386 ; 36 W. R. 817—C. A.

Other Matters—Action on a Bond—Plea of Accord and Satisfaction made to one Obligee.]—In equity joint creditors are primâ facie tenants in common. A defence of accord and satisfaction with one of two joint creditors in an action by both is a good answer as an equitable defence to the claim of the joint creditor to whom satisfaction was made ; but it is no answer to the claim of the other. Steeds v. Steeds, 58 L. J., Q. B. 302 ; 22 Q. B. D. 537 ; 60 L. T. 318 ; 37 W. R. 378.

3. Tenants in Common.

Limitation of Estate—In a Deed.]—The words "equally to be divided" in a deed of uses, makes a tenancy in common. Goodtitle d. Hood v. Stokes, 1 Wils. 341.

Conveyance to two persons, habendum to them, their heirs and assigns as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, to the use of them, their heirs and assigns, they are tenants in common and not joint tenants, as the Statute of Uses does not operate. Doe d. Hutchinson v. Prestwidge, 4 M. & S. 178 ; 16 R. R. 436.

Tenants in common of a mortgage term, joining in a purchase of the equity of redemption to them and their heirs, are tenants in common of the inheritance. Aveling v. Knipe, 19 Ves. 441 ; 13 R. R. 240.

Notwithstanding the leaning of late to a tenancy in common, an interest given to two or more, either by way of legacy or otherwise, is joint, unless there are words of severance, as "equally among," &c., or an inference of that sort arises in equity from the nature of the transaction, as in partnership, a joint mortgage, &c. Morley v. Bird, 3 Ves. 628 ; 4 R. R. 106.

On articles previous to the marriage of W. with R., the father of W. bound the whole of the farm of, &c., as a marriage portion to his son W., along with R., the one half of said farm to be the right, title and interest of the issue, whether son or daughter, if begotten on the body of R. by W. The issue take as tenants in common. Taggart v. Taggart, 1 Sch. & Lef. 84 ; 9 R. R. 19.

A. having been indebted to the estate of B., in a sum of money, but from which he had been discharged under a commission of bankruptcy, voluntarily executed to C., the widow of B., a bond for the payment of part of such debt, for the use of herself and children but at her disposal. Two years afterwards A. executed to C. another bond for the payment of the remainder of such debt, for the use and benefit of herself and children only, in what proportion among the latter she may think proper to direct, but for no other use, purpose or intent whatsoever :—Held, that the principal, after the widow's decease, became payable among the children, in such manner, and in such proportions, as she should direct, and the widow having made an exclusive appointment in favour of two of her children, it was held that such appointment was void, and that all the children took as tenants in common. Though generally speaking an instrument must be construed by the provisions contained in it, and not by anything dehors, yet under the circumstances of this case :—Held, that the court might call the language of the second bond in to aid in construing the effect of the first. Where there is a general power of appointment among children, and the appointment from any circumstance becomes void, the children take as tenants in common. Fowler v. Hunter, 3 Y. & J. 506.

Settlement to permit "all and every the children to take rents, &c., to them and their heirs for ever," they are joint tenants, not tenants in common. Stratton v. Best, 2 Bro. C. C. 233.

Leaseholds were conveyed to trustees, and it was declared, that when the settlor's eldest son attained twenty-one, they should be in trust for him, and that the same should be assigned accordingly; but so that the settlor's wish that his other children "might be allowed by the eldest son to participate with him in the same," should be observed by him:—Held, that the younger children were entitled to equal shares with the eldest as tenants in common. Liddard v. Liddard, 28 Beav. 266; 29 L. J., Ch. 619; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 439; 2 L. T. 200.

—— In a Will.]—See WILL.

—— Admissibility of Evidence.]—To establish a tenancy in common by use and enjoyment, acts of ownership by all the alleged tenants in common, in various parts of the lands indifferently, must be proved. Tisdall v. Parnell, 14 Ir. C. L. R. 1.

Parol evidence, to be admissible to shew that a contract to purchase apparently as joint tenants was in reality a contract to purchase as tenants in common, must be confined, as evidence to vary an instrument is, to facts in pais, as distinguished from statements of intention. Harrison v. Barton, 1 J. & H. 287; 30 L. J., Ch. 213; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 19; 9 W. R. 177.

A. directed that his two sons should have the option of purchasing his property at a specified price upon signifying in writing within a certain time their acceptance of the privilege. The sons wrote a joint letter signifying their acceptance of the option to purchase. No conveyance was executed, but instructions were given, and a draft prepared for a conveyance to the sons as tenants in common. Voluntary settlements were simultaneously executed by the sons, each giving an option to the trustees of such settlement to invest the moneys in purchase of a moiety of the property; and after the death of one of the sons, his widow received the rents of a moiety of the property:—Held, that notwithstanding the joint nature of the contract contained in the letter, the legal presumption of a joint tenancy was refuted by the circumstances, and that the property was taken by the sons as tenants in common. Ib.

Two sisters carried on business as farmers. They had a joint account at their bankers' and an establishment and purse in common. They invested part of their money in the purchase of consols, in their joint names, and they had a balance due to them on their banking account, besides a sum due to them from their bankers on deposit notes:—Held, on the death of one, that the two sisters were joint tenants of the consols, and tenants in common of the balance and of the deposit notes. Bone v. Pollard, 24 Beav. 283.

Where stock has been purchased in the joint names of two, out of money standing to their joint account in a bank, it is not necessarily to be considered in equity as held in joint tenancy; but the origin of the money, and the acts and intentions of the parties, may be looked to, and a conclusion in favour of a tenancy in common drawn from the circumstances. Robinson v. Preston, 4 K. & J. 505; 27 L. J., Ch. 395; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 186.

Two sisters being tenants in common of real estates, had money arising from the rents standing to their joint account in a bank. Part of the money was, from time to time, invested in the purchase of stock, in their joint names, and part on mortgage, the mortgaged premises being conveyed to them as tenants in common. Each sister, by will, affected to dispose of her share of the stock:—Held, that they were entitled to the stock as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants. Ib.

Mortgages in fee were taken in the name of three sisters as joint tenants, each of the deeds containing a clause by which it was declared that the mortgage-money belonged to the mortgagees on a joint account in equity as well as at law. The money advanced on the security of the mortgages formed part of the proceeds of the estate of a brother, to which the three sisters were, under his will, entitled as tenants in common. Having regard to this fact and the other facts in evidence:—Held, that notwithstanding the insertion of the joint account clause the mortgagees were entitled to the mortgage-money as tenants in common. Jackson, In re, Smith v. Sibthorpe, 56 L. J., Ch. 593; 34 Ch. D. 732; 56 L. T. 562; 35 W. R. 646.

Ouster.]—Possession of some owners is possession of all. Machell, Ex parte, 2 Ves. & B. 216; 1 Rose, 447.

Thirty-six years' sole and uninterrupted possession by one tenant in common, without any account to, or demand made, or claim set up by his companion, is a sufficient ground for a jury to presume an actual ouster of the co-tenant. Doe d. Fisher v. Prosser, Cowp. 217.

One tenant in common levying a fine on the whole and taking the rents and profits afterwards without account for five years is no evidence from whence the jury should be directed (against the justice of the case) to find an ouster of his companion at that time on the fine levied; and consequently the latter may maintain ejectment without making an actual entry. Peaceable d. Hornblower v. Read, 1 East, 568.

When two persons are tenants in common of a field, the merely putting, by one of them, a lock upon the gate, not shewn to be kept locked, will not constitute an ouster so as to enable the co-tenant in common to maintain trespass against the other. There must, for such a purpose, be other circumstances attending the act. Jacobs v. Seward, 41 L. J., C. P. 221; L. R. 5 H. L. 464; 27 L. T. 185. Affirming 18 W. R. 953—Ex. Ch.

In order to enable one tenant in common to maintain trover against another, there must not merely be a carrying away of the property, but such a carrying away of it as will disable the party complaining from having the lawful use or benefit of the property, or there must be the destruction of it. Ib.

There can be no ouster between tenants in common in possession; and, therefore, if one takes more than his share of the rents, the only remedy is account, either by action under the 4 Anne, c. 16, s. 27, or by a bill in equity. Denys v. Shuckburgh, 4 Y. & C. 42; 5 Jur. 21.

But one tenant in common can maintain trespass against another for an actual expulsion from premises of which they are tenants in common. Murray v. Hall, 7 C. B. 441 ; 18 L. J., C. P. 161 ; 13 Jur. 262.

The plaintiff's mother and the defendant were tenants in common in fee. She died in 1851, and her interest descended on the plaintiff, her heir (an infant). The defendant, who had previously occupied the estate, continued in possession, and thenceforward excluded the plaintiff. The plaintiff attained twenty-one in 1857 :—Held, that the defendant was accountable to the plaintiff for the whole period, and ought to be charged with an occupation rent. Pascoe v. Swan, 27 Beav. 508 ; 29 L. J., Ch. 159 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1235 ; 1 L. T. 17 ; 8 W. R. 130.

A., being at the time abroad, became a tenant in common with B., and died fifteen years afterwards, without having been during that period in England, and being all the time ignorant of her right as tenant in common ; B. continued all along in possession and receipt of the rents and profits of the premises :—Held, that B.'s possession did not amount to an ouster. Johnson v. Burslem, 2 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 168 ; 26 R. R. 212.

Motion for a receiver by one tenant in common against his co-tenant, on the ground that the latter had given notice to the tenants to pay their rents to him only, and had advertised the estate for sale, refused, because the conduct complained of did not amount to an exclusion. Tyson v. Fairclough, 2 Sim. & S. 142 ; 25 R. R. 175.

Liability for Rent.]—Mere occupation by one of several tenants in common of an estate, if unaccompanied by exclusion, does not make him liable for rent to his co-tenants. M'Mahon v. Burchell, 2 Ph. 127 ; C. P. Cooper, 457. Varying 3 Hare, 97. S. P., Griffies v. Griffies, 8 L. T. 758 ; 11 W. R. 943.

A tenant in common occupying the premises held in common, not excluding his co-tenants in common, is not chargeable by such co-tenants with an occupation rent. S. C., 5 Hare, 322.

Joint Lease.]—Tenants in common cannot make a joint lease. Heatherley d. Worthington v. Weston, 2 Wils. 232.

To a declaration for arrears of rent, stating that the plaintiff and S., deceased, were seised in fee, and demised to the defendant from year to year, rendering a certain rent to the plaintiff and S., which had fallen into arrear since the death of S., it is a good plea that the plaintiff and S. were tenants in common. Burn v. Cambridge, 1 M. & Rob. 539.

Lease to Co-Tenant—Action for Use and Occupation.]—Where one tenant in common has by lease demised his interest to his co-tenant in common, if the tenant in common who was lessee continues in occupation as tenant at sufferance after the expiration of the lease, he will be liable in an action for use and occupation at the suit of his co-tenant in common who was lessor. Leigh v. Dickeson, 54 L. J., Q. B. 18 ; 15 Q. B. D. 60 ; 52 L. T. 790 ; 33 W. R. 538—C. A.

Where premises had been demised by two tenants in common, and the rent for a time paid to the agent of both, but afterwards the tenant had notice to pay a moiety of the rent to each of the two, and the rent was so paid accordingly, and separate receipts given :—Held, that it then became a question of fact for the jury to say, whether it was the intention of the parties to enter into a new contract of demise, with a separate reservation of the rent to each. Powis v. Smith, 5 B. & Ald. 850 ; 1 D. & R. 490 ; 24 R. R. 587.

Other Leases.]—One tenant in common may bring an action for the double value of his moiety, under 4 Geo. 2, c. 28. Cutting v. Derby, 2 W. Bl. 1077.

A terre-tenant, holding under two tenants in common, cannot pay the whole rent to one after notice from the other not to pay it ; and if he do, the other tenant in common may distrain for his share. Harrison v. Barnby, 5 Term Rep. 246 ; 2 R. R. 584.

Reversion after Demise.]—One tenant in common of a reversion is entitled to maintain an action for injury to the reversion without joining his co-tenants as plaintiffs. Roberts v. Holland, 62 L. J., Q. B. 621 ; [1893] 1 Q. B. 665 ; 5 R. 370 ; 41 W. R. 494.

An action may be maintained by one tenant in common of a reversion for breach of a covenant running with the land without joinder of his co-tenants in common as plaintiffs, where the severance of the reversion takes place after the demise. Ib.

Upon a lease by tenants in common, the survivor may sue for the whole rent ; although the reservation be to the lessor's account to their respective interests. Wallace v. McLaren, 1 Man. & Ry. 516 ; 31 R. R. 334.

Distress Damage Feasant.]—One tenant in common cannot avow alone for taking cattle damage feasant, but he ought also to make cognisance as bailiff to his co-tenant. Culley v. Spearman, 2 H. Bl. 386 ; 3 R. R. 420.

Exchange.]—Tenants in common altogether make but one party, and may exchange estates. Anon., Lofft, 414.

Partition.]—The estate of a tenant in common cannot be so settled on marriage of one as to prevent the right of the others to make partition. Abel v. Heathcote, 2 Ves. J. 98 ; 2 R. R. 171.

Repairs.]—One tenant in common of a house who expends money on ordinary repairs, not being such as are necessary to prevent the house from going to ruin, has no right of action against his co-tenant for contribution. Leigh v. Dickeson, 54 L. J., Q. B. 18 ; 15 Q. B. D. 60 ; 52 L. T. 790 ; 33 W. R. 538—C. A. S. P., Heath v. Bostock, 5 L. J., Ex. Eq. 20.

In a partition action a tenant in common will not be entitled to an allowance in respect of repairs and improvements unless he submits to be charged with an occupation rent. Teesdale v. Sanderson, 33 Beav. 534.

Improvements.]—In fixing a tenant in common with an occupation rent, in lieu of rents and profits under 4 Anne, c. 16, the court directed that he should be allowed for lasting improvements. Pascoe v. Swan, 27 Beav. 508 ; 29 L. J., Ch. 159 ; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1235 ; 1 L. T. 17 ; 8 W. R. 130.

The owner of a moiety of property who was also tenant for life of the whole, and the tenant for life in remainder of the other moiety concurred in raising a sum of 900*l.* by a mortgage, which was expended in permanently improving the property :—Held, in a participation action, that the present value of the improvements, but not exceeding the amount raised, must be paid out of the proceeds of sale of the whole property. Jones, In re, Farrington v. Forrester, 62 L. J., Ch. 996 ; [1893] 2 Ch. 461 ; 3 R. 498 ; 69 L. T. 45. And see Watson v. Gass, 51 L. J., Ch. 480 ; 45 L. T. 582 ; 30 W. R. 286.

The owner in fee of one moiety of a property (subject to a paramount mortgage), who was also tenant for life of the whole, borrowed money on mortgage, which was expended in permanently improving the whole property. After her death the property was sold by the paramount mortgagee under his power of sale :—Held, that in distributing the surplus proceeds of sale, one-half of the present value of the improvements (not exceeding the amount actually expended) must be charged against the owner of the other moiety. Cook's Mortgage, In re, Lawledge v. Tyndall, 65 L. J., Ch. 654 ; [1896] 1 Ch. 923 ; 74 L. T. 652 ; 44 W. R. 646.

Money had and received.]—One tenant in common of real property cannot maintain an action for money received against his co-tenant, his remedy being by an action of account. Thomas v. Thomas, 5 Ex. 28 ; 1 L. M. & P. 229 ; 19 L. J., Ex. 175 ; 14 Jur. 180.

Chattels.]—When goods of different owners become by accident so mixed together as to be undistinguishable, the owners of the goods so mixed are tenants in common of the whole of the goods in the proportions which they have severally contributed to them. Spence v. Union Marine Insurance Co., 37 L. J., C. P. 169 ; L. R. 3 C. P. 427 ; 18 L. T. 632 ; 16 W. R. 1010.

One tenant in common of a chattel cannot maintain trover for it against his companion, unless the latter have so disposed of it as to render it impossible that the plaintiff should ever take and use it. Fennings v. Grenville (Lord), 1 Taunt. 241 ; 9 R. R. 760.

The conversion of a chattel by a tenant in common to its general and profitable application, though it change the form of the substance, is not such a destruction of the subject-matter as to prevent the plaintiff from taking and using it in its altered state ; therefore it creates no right of action. Ib.

Account.]—One tenant in common of real property cannot maintain an action for money had and received against his co-tenant, his remedy being an action of account. Thomas v. Thomas, 5 Ex. 28 ; 1 L. M. & P. 229 ; 19 L. J., Ex. 175 ; 14 Jur. 180.

Mortgagee of the share of one tenant in common of a mine may maintain a bill for an account against the mortgagor and the co-tenants in common. On a bill for an account of the dealings and transactions of a mining partnership, it is not necessary to pray for a dissolution of the concern. Bentley v. Bates, 4 Y. & C. 182 ; 9 L. J., Ex. Eq. 30 ; 4 Jur. 552.

A., being at the time abroad, became a tenant in common with B., and died fifteen years afterwards, without having been during that period in England, and being all the time ignorant of her right as tenant in common ; B. continued all along in possession and receipt of the rents and profits of the premises :—Held, that B.'s possession did not amount to an ouster ; and that A.'s representative could sustain a bill for an account against B., without previously recovering the possession. Johnson v. Burslem, 2 L. J., (o.s.) Ch. 168 ; 26 R. R. 212.

There can be no ouster between tenants in common in possession ; and, therefore, if one takes more than his share of the rents, the only remedy is account either by action under the statute of Anne, or by bill in equity. Denys v. Shuckburgh, 4 Y. & C. 42 ; 5 Jur. 21.

In an action of account by a joint tenant, or tenant in common, against his companion, it is necessary to allege that he has received more than his share of the rent ; he is not chargeable as a bailiff at common law. Storton v. Richardson, 2 D. & L. 182 ; 13 M. & W. 17 ; 13 L. J., Ex. 281 ; 8 Jur. 476.

A., on behalf of herself and her infant children, filed a bill against B., who was tenant in common with her husband C., alleging that on his death B. entered into receipt of the entire rents, claiming the whole, and kept possession of the title deeds, for want of which the plaintiffs could not proceed at law ; and praying that they might be put in possession of C.'s moiety, and an account of the rents of it since his death, and for the title deeds. A. did not make affidavit that the deeds were not in her possession :—Held, that such affidavit is not necessary in a case where the plaintiffs have a right to sue in equity aliunde, and that a demurrer for want of it was bad in substance, that the demurrer not stating specifically the parts of the statement or relief to which it applied, was bad in form ; that though the bill could not be sustained for an account between tenants in common, yet that the infant plaintiffs were entitled to such account against the defendant ; and that the mother being co-plaintiff was no misjoinder. M'Carthy v. Hatch, 9 Ir. Eq. R. 206.

—— In Equity.]—A tenant in common of a farm may sustain a suit in equity for an account against his co-tenant, who has alone occupied it and cultivated it, for a moiety of the profits. Leake v. Cordeaux, 4 W. R. 806.

Where one co-tenant receives more than his share of the rents of a property, his co-tenant can compel an account, and payment, by suit in equity. Montgomery v. Swan, 9 Ir. Ch. Rep. 131.

Decree against licensee of two of three tenants in common for an account of the value at the pit's mouth of coal raised, less the cost of getting and raising, and for payment of one-third to the plaintiff. Job v. Potton, 44 L. J., Ch. 262 ; L. R. 20 Eq. 84 ; 32 L. T. 110.

—— When Co-Tenant Answerable as Bailiff.]—There is no relationship of trust or agency in one co-owner of a property towards the other ; and where one collects the rents of the whole he does so not in the capacity of agent, but in that of owner. Kennedy v. De Trafford, 66 L. J., Ch. 413 ; [1897] A. C. 180 ; 76 L. T. 427 ; 45 W. R. 671—H. L. (E.)

If there are tenants in common, and one tenant alone occupies the property, he is answerable as bailiff to his co-tenant in an action of account if he receives more than comes to his share, but not otherwise. And he is answerable only for what he receives more than comes to his just share. Henderson v. Eason, 17 Q. B. 701 ; 21 L. J., Q. B. 82 ; 16 Jur. 518—Ex. Ch.

He receives more than his just share if he receives money or something else, given or paid by another, which the co-tenants are entitled to simply by their being tenants in common, and if the amount which he so receives and keeps is more than in proportion to his interest as such tenant. Ib.

He does not receive more than comes to his just share if he merely has the sole enjoyment of the property, even though by the employment of his own industry and capital he makes a profit by the enjoyment, and takes the whole of such profit. Ib.

A. and B., tenants in common in fee, made a joint demise of land to C., with a general reddendum, not saying to whom the rent was payable. A. died on the 15th of March, 1848, and B. received the half-year's rent due at Lady-day, less 12*s.* 6*d.*, which he deducted as the share of A.'s heir for the period between A.'s death and the time the half year's rent became due:—Held, that although the words of the demise were joint, the reversions were several, and the rent followed the reversion, and consequently that the heir of A. was entitled to the moiety of the half year's rent accruing at Lady-day, 1848, and might maintain an action against B. as bailiff for receiving more than his just share. Beer v. Beer, 12 C. B. 60; 21 L. J., C. P. 124; 16 Jur. 223.

Held, also, on motion in arrest of judgment, that the declaration was good without an averment that a reasonable time had elapsed between the request to account and the commencement of the action. Ib.

In an action by a merchant against his partner, as tenant in common and bailiff, the defendant in substance pleaded plene computavit. To satisfy such a plea, the defendant must prove an account rendered, shewing an agreed balance between the plaintiff and the defendant; an account in which the defendant charges himself as factor for the whole, instead of charging himself as factor for one moiety and as owner of the other, thereby making himself liable for a moiety of the losses arising from the sale of the whole, is insufficient. Baxter v. Hozier, 7 Scott, 233; 5 Bing. (N.C.) 288; 1 Arn. 519; 8 L. J., C. P. 169.

—— Claim for Arrears—Statute of Limitations.]—Two, being tenants in common, one entered into possession in 1827, with the consent of the other, upon an understanding that he should pay an occupation rent when called upon to do so. The tenant in possession died in 1839. The survivor claimed six years' rent:—Held, that the claim must be allowed, and that 4 Anne, c. 16, was not repealed by 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27. Henderson v. Eason, 15 L. J., Ch. 457; 10 Jur. 821.

—— Pleading.]—In an action of account, nothing can be pleaded before auditors contrary to what has been pleaded to the action and found by verdict. Godfrey v. Saunders, 3 Wils. 73, 94.

A plea by a merchant against his partner, as tenant in common and bailiff, that after selling goods and merchandises the defendant rendered to the plaintiff a reasonable account of his goods and merchandises, and of the proceeds and profits, is in substance a plea of plene computavit. Baxter v. Hozier, 7 Scott, 233; 5 Bing. (N.C.) 288; 1 Arn. 519; 8 L. J., C. P. 169.

To satisfy such a plea, the defendant must prove an account rendered, shewing an agreed balance between the plaintiff and the defendant; an account in which the defendant charges himself as factor for the whole, instead of charging himself as factor for one moiety and as owner of the other, thereby making himself liable for a moiety of the losses arising from the sale of the whole, is insufficient. Ib.

A declaration stated that L., being seised in fee by deeds of lease and release and settlement, conveyed tenements to the use of himself for life, with remainder to the use of the plaintiff and defendant, his children by his late wife, in such shares as he should by deed or will appoint, and in default of such appointment to the plaintiff and the defendant, as tenants in common. Averment, that L. died without having made any appointment, and that thereby the plaintiff became seised in fee tail of one moiety of the tenements in common with the defendant. First plea, that, in pursuance of the power in the deed of settlement, L., by deed, appointed to A. and B. the tenements, upon certain trusts; and thereby made a valid appointment, under and by virtue of the power in the deed of settlement. Second plea, that, in pursuance of the power in the deed of settlement, L., by will, appointed the tenements, subject to the term created by the deed of appointment, to certain uses:—Held, that the allegation in the declaration, that L. died without having made an appointment, was premature, and therefore the defendant was not bound to traverse it; and that if it was not necessary in the declaration to allege that the power had not been exercised, the defendant was obliged to shew how and to whom the appointment was made, in order to shew that the plaintiff and defendant were not tenants in common; and therefore, that the pleas were good. Rickets v. Loftus, 14 Q. B. 482; 19 L. J., Q. B. 94; 14 Jur. 839.

A declaration by a plaintiff that the defendant was his tenant in common, and received in respect of rent, 48*l.* 15*s.* more than came to his just share and proportion, is bad for want of an averment of a request and refusal to render an account, and for being framed for a liquidated sum instead of laying as a breach the not accounting. Purcell v. Harding, 15 W. R. 128 Ir. Ib.

Held, also, that an averment of receipt, as bailiff, is also necessary. Ib.

—— Practice—Parties.]—Semble, that where several parties are tenants in common, an action of account may be brought by one against another without joining the rest. Sturton v. Richardson, 2 D. & L. 182; 13 M. & W. 17; 13 L. J., Ex. 281; 8 Jur. 476.

—— Payment into Court.]—A defendant can now pay money into court. Anon., Bull. N. P. 128. See Tomkins v. Willshear, 1 Marsh. 115; 5 Taunt. 431; 15 & 16 Vict. c. 76, s. 70; and Cresswell v. Hedges, 1 H. & C. 421; 31 L. J., Ex. 497; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 767; 10 W. R. 777.

And see further PRACTICE (PAYMENT INTO COURT).

—— Taking the Account.]—Two principal officers of the court were appointed auditors after judgment of quod computet. Smith v. Smith, 2 Chit. 10.

A rule to appoint auditors is absolute in the first instance. Archer v. Pritchard, 3 D. & R. 596.

In an action of account, the defendant having suffered judgment by default, the court granted a rule, calling on him to shew cause why he should not appear and consent to the appointment of auditors, or why a capias ad computandum should not issue against him. No cause was shewn, and the court made the rule absolute in the alternative. Pryor v. Pettingell, 2 D. (N.S.) 755; 12 L. J., Ex. 219; 7 Jur. 132.

In an action of account, nothing can be pleaded before auditors contrary to what has been pleaded to the action and found by verdict. Godfrey v. Saunders, 3 Wils. 73, 94.

Injunction.]—Injunction between tenants in common against destruction not against pure equitable waste. Hole v. Thomas, 7 Ves. 589; 6 R. R. 195.

Injunction against waste between tenants in common on the ground that one was occupying tenant to the other; otherwise not except as to destruction. Twort v. Twort, 16 Ves. 128; 10 R. R. 141.

The court will restrain one tenant in common from the wilful destruction of the common property, but where a railroad company had obtained a lease from five out of six tenants in common, and had, contrary to the wishes of the remaining tenant in common, constructed a railroad on the property which at law had been held to be an ouster, the court refused to interfere by injunction to prevent the dissenting tenant in common removing the rails, &c., though the rent agreed to be paid by the company was three times the former rent. Durham and Sunderland Ry. v. Wawn, 3 Beav. 119; 4 Jur. 764.

A husband, seised in right of his wife, concurred with the other tenants in common in a partition of estate and mines, but no fine was levied. He died in 1828; after which his widow acquiesced in the arrangement, and took the benefit of it. She and her lessee afterwards proceeded to get coal under the land awarded to other parties, and defended that proceeding on the ground that the husband's acts were invalid, and that the parties were still tenants in common of the whole. The court restrained her by injunction. Maden v. Veevers, 5 Beav. 503.

Where three out of forty-seven tenants in common filed a bill for an injunction to restrain the digging of stone on the common property, objection for want of parties not allowed. Ackroyd v. Briggs, 13 L. T. 521; 14 W. R. 25.

Destruction.]—It is not destructive waste for a tenant in common of a coal mine to get, or license to get, the coals, he, the working tenant or licensee, not appropriating to himself more than his share of the proceeds. Job v. Potton, 44 L. J., Ch. 262; L. R. 20 Eq. 84; 32 L. T. 110.

Lien.]—When a person seised in trust for himself and another in common in fee retains the entire rents, the debt arising in favour of the co-tenant will not be charged on the trustee's beneficial interest as against a purchaser, without notice from him. British Mutual Investment Co. v. Smart, 44 L. J., Ch. 695; L. R. 10 Ch. 567; 32 L. T. 849; 23 W. R. 800.

Other Matters.]—Abatement by the death of one of the plaintiffs, tenants in common. Bill of revivor by his representative. The survivor, if not co-plaintiff, must be made a defendant. Fallowes v. Williamson, 11 Ves. 306.

To a bill by a party for his share of a legacy given in common, the co-legatees are not necessary parties. Hughson v. Cookson, 3 Y. & C. 578; 8 L. J., Ex. Eq. 68.

I. SEISIN AND DISSEISIN.

Proof of Seisin.]—A father, who died in 1760, made a general devise of freeholds and copyholds to his daughter in tail. His grandson was in 1783 admitted to the copyholds as tenant in tail, and was proved to have been in 1833 in possession of the copyholds and of certain freeholds then held therewith. He made a will purporting to devise these freeholds and the copyholds, and died in 1840. His brother and heir in 1841 executed a deed purporting to be for the purpose of barring any estates tail in the freeholds, whereby he conveyed the freeholds to the devisee under the will, and covenanted to surrender the copyholds. This deed was not enrolled, but the devisee was admitted to the copyholds. The devisee died intestate, and his brother succeeded him as his heir, and made a will purporting to devise the freeholds and the copyholds in fifths, the plaintiff taking one-fifth and the defendant another fifth. The defendant afterwards agreed to buy the plaintiff's one-fifth, and a conveyance was made by her conveying to the defendant her one-fifth and all her estates and shares in the land, neither of them being aware of the earlier title. Four years afterwards the deed purporting to bar the estate tail was found, and thereupon the defendant requested the plaintiff, who was heir in tail of the original testator, to confirm the sale, and sent to her the draft of a deed reciting that the original testator was seised in fee of the freeholds and devised them, and that she was tenant in tail. She then filed a bill to have her conveyance set aside and to be declared tenant in tail of the freeholds:—Held, that the conveyance by the plaintiff of the fee in the whole when she had intended to convey one-fifth only might embarrass her in proceeding at law, and that the court must determine the question; but that the plaintiff was bound to shew that the original testator was seised in fee of the freeholds claimed by her, and that as she had not done so, her bill must be dismissed; and that, under the circumstances, the sending by the defendant of the draft deed stating that the original testator was seised in fee was not an admission by the defendant of the fact. The defendant had conveyed his estate to mortgagees, and they, as purchasers for valuable consideration without notice, could not be interfered with. Bulley v. Bulley, 44 L. J., Ch. 79; L. R. 9 Ch. 739; 30 L. T. 848; 22 W. R. 779.

Livery of seisin of land cannot be presumed from a feoffee's possession of less than twenty years. Doe d. Wilkins v. Cleveland (Marquis), 9 B. & C. 864; 4 Man. & Ry. 666; 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 74; Doe d. Lewis v. Davies, 2 M. & W. 503; M. & H. 98; 6 L. J., Ex. 176.

A person's being assessed to the land-tax for certain lands is not evidence of his seisin of those lands. Doe d. Stansbury v. Arkwright, 5 Car. & P. 575.

A good title may be made to an estate, although the origin cannot be shewn by any deed or will;

but it must be shewn that there has been such a long uninterrupted possession and enjoyment of and dealing with the property as afford a reasonable presumption that there is an absolute title in fee-simple. Cottrell v. Watkins, 1 Beav. 361; 3 Jur. 283.

In ejectment, evidence that the shutters of the house claimed were repaired and a wash-house built on the premises, and that this was paid for by A., is evidence to go to the jury of his seisin. Doe d. Loscombe v. Clifford, 2 Car. & K. 448.

The heir and executor of T. having disputed whether certain estates of which T. died seised or possessed, was real or personal estate, all that appeared was that P., the original owner, through whom both claimed, so far as was known, died seised of the freehold. The heir-at-law of P. having sued T., the litigation was compromised by the execution of a deed conveying to T., his heirs and assigns all the estate and right of such heir and no other claim was ever heard of, nor was T. disturbed in his possession:—Held, that assuming that P. died seised of the fee, and that all the interests of the other claimants were conveyed to T., the presumption was that T. also impliedly acquired the fee. Tudury v. de Pinna, 7 L. T. 115—P. C.

Sufficiency of.]—Livery of seisin is not invalidated by omitting to remove from the house or land a child found there, unless that child is part of the family of a person having an immediate estate or interest in the premises, placed there for the purpose of continuing the possession of such person. Doe d. Reed v. Taylor, 2 N. & M. 508; 5 B. & Ad. 575; 3 L. J., K. B. 67.

A power of attorney contained in a deed to A. empowered him to give and deliver seisin of premises according to the form and effect of the deed:—Held, that he need not make livery of seisin on the day of the date of such deed, but that his power may be well executed afterwards. Roe d. Heale v. Rashleigh, 3 B. & Ald. 156.

The assent of a tenant at will is not necessary in order to perfect a livery of seisin. Doe d. Hindmarsh v. Oliver, 1 Car. & K. 543.

A. died seised, leaving two infant daughters by different venters:—Held, that an entry generally, by the mother of the youngest daughter, as her guardian in socage, constituted a sufficient seisin in the eldest infant daughter, to carry the descent of her moiety, on her death, to her heirs. Doe d. Barnett v. Keen, 7 Term Rep. 386.

Being born on one part of the premises, and receiving rent for the rest by the hands of his mother and guardian, was a sufficient seisin by a posthumous son (who died at five weeks old) to bar the descent to his sister of the half-blood, and convey it to a collateral heir. Goodtitle d. Newman v. Newman, 3 Wils. 516; 2 W. Bl. 938. S. P., Forder v. Wade, 4 Bro. C. C. 521.

A. devised premises to an infant daughter of his sister; the infant died before entry and before obtaining any actual seisin or possession:—Held, that she had such a seisin in law of the premises devised as to enable her heir to take them from her by descent. Doe d. Parker v. Thomas, 4 Scott. (N.R.) 449; 3 Man. & G. 815; 11 L. J., C. P. 124.

To a plea in bar of a fine, a direct positive averment of seisin is necessary. Dobson v. Leadbeater, 13 Ves. 230. And see Leach v. Jay, 47 L. J., Ch. 876; 9 Ch. D. 42; 39 L. T. 242; 27 W. R. 99—C. A.

Livery of seisin not having been made according to the terms of a joint power contained in a feoffment, and one of the parties to whom the power was given to deliver seisin having refused to execute it, the court doubted whether authority could be given to deliver seisin, as to part only. Att.-Gen. v. Pearson, 3 Mer. 416; 17 R. R. 100.

Disseisin.]—The doctrine of relation applies only as between disseisor and disseisee, in which case the re-entry has relation back to prior occupation by the owner, and remits him to his original rights. Litchfield v. Ready, 5 Ex. 939; 20 L. J., Ex. 51.

A lease by a stranger, and entry by the lessee, is not a disseisin in fact, without an entry by force, or an avowed intention to disseise. Jerritt v. Weare, 3 Price, 575; 18 R. R. 665. And see Doe d. Souter v. Hull, 2 D. & R. 38.

A person entering under an instrument which operates under the Statute of Uses, or a deed to which he is a consenting party, is nevertheless capable of being remitted to any more ancient title he may have, and that a person is remitted nolens volens. Doe d. Daniell v. Woodroffe, 10 M. & W. 608; 12 L. J., Ex. 147.

A. enters under the lease of B., who acknowledges the entry as by his command. A. is a disseisor, and B. also is chargeable as such. Hovenden v. Annesley, 2 Sch. & Lef. 621; 9 R. R. 119. And see Taylor d. Atkyns v. Horde, 1 Burr. 60.

Possession gained under a title consistent with that of the person having right, and who was in possession, as where a lessee at will makes a lease for years, and the lessee for years enters; this, though the estate at will did not warrant the lease for years, is only a disseisin at election. Ib.

R., being seised of freehold houses, died intestate in 1864, leaving A. his sole heiress-at-law. Upon R.'s death his widow wrongfully entered into possession, and retained possession till her death in 1869, when her devisees entered. A. died in 1871, without ever having entered into possession, having devised to L. "all real estate (if any) of which she might die seised." An action having been brought by L. against the widow's devisees for recovery of possession, the devisees demurred to the statement of claim, on the ground that A.'s devise did not pass the property or any right of entry therein to L.:—Held, that "seised" being a purely technical word must be construed according to its technical meaning; and that as the seisin in law which A. had on R.'s death had been destroyed, and she had not at her death any seisin either in law or in fact, the property did not pass under her devise. Leach v. Jay, 47 L. J., Ch. 876; 9 Ch. D. 42; 39 L. T. 242; 27 W. R. 99—C. A.

—— Chattel Interest.]—A conveyance of a chattel interest by lease and release cannot work a forfeiture or disseisin. Secus, if it were by feoffment; but in that case the party entitled to take advantage of the forfeiture is not bound to do so till the expiration of the lease. Saunders v. Annesley, 2 Sch. & Lef. 99.

—— Trust Estate.]—Upon a bare trust, no estate can be gained by disseisin, abatement, or intrusion, while the trust estate continues. Cholmondeley v. Clinton, 2 Mer. 358; 16 R. R. 167. But see 2 Jac. & Walk. 1; 4 Bligh, 1; 22 R. R. 83, 84.

J. DISCLAIMER.

By Devisees.]—A devisee in fee may, by deed under his hand and seal, disclaim an estate devised to him, without a formal disclaimer in a court of record. Townson v. Tickell, 3 B. & Ald. 31; 22 R. R. 291; Preface vii.

After such a disclaimer he has no interest in the estate. Begbie v. Crook, 2 Bing. (N.C.) 70; 2 Scott, 128; 4 L. J., C. P. 264.

Quære, whether a devise of an estate can be waived by parol. Doe d. Smyth v. Smyth, 6 B. & C. 112; 9 D. & R. 136; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 13; 30 R. R. 258.

Where the devisee of an estate refused to take it, saying that she was entitled as heir-at-law, and would not accept any benefit by the will of the devisor:—Held, that this was not such a disclaimer as prevented her from afterwards bringing an ejectment, and relying on her title as devisee. Ib.

Quære, whether a verbal assent to a devise is sufficient to prevent the party from afterwards disclaiming the devise. Doe d. Chidgey v. Harris, 16 M. & W. 517; 16 L. J., Ex. 190.

Quære, whether a devisee in trust can disclaim by deed after a previous assent to the devise in words. Ib.

A devisee in trust, on the reading of the will after the testator's death, stated that he ought to have had 5*l.* for being trustee:—Held, that these words were so ambiguous that they ought not to have been left to the jury as evidence of his assent to the devise. Ib.

A. devised a copyhold tenement to B., C. and D. upon trust, and appointed them executors, who all proved the will and acted under it. C. and D. refused to be admitted tenants, and by deed made between them and B., reciting that C. and D. were desirous of releasing their estate and interest in the copyhold to B., to the intent that B. alone might be admitted tenant, to hold the same upon the trusts of the will, C. and D. granted, released and confirmed the copyhold to B., to the intent that B. might be solely seised. B. claimed to be admitted to the entirety of the copyhold, and to pay a single fine. The lord claimed a treble fine:—Held, that the deed should be construed, according to the intention of the parties, as a renunciation by C. and D. of their right to be admitted; that their having acted in the trusts of the will would not prevent this operation, and that B. became sole tenant, and the lord only entitled to a single fine. Wellesley (Viscount) v. Withers, 4 El. & Bl. 750; 3 C. L. R. 1187; 24 L. J., Q. B. 134; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 134.

By Trustee in Bankruptcy.]—See BANKRUPTCY.

K. EXCHANGE.

Between whom.]—Proprietors of lands in a parish having agreed upon an inclosure under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 115, two of such proprietors, A. and B., signed and sent to the commissioner mutual consents to give up certain closes, designated by the numbers attached to them in the commissioner's map, in exchange for such other lands of equal value as the commissioner might consider desirable for them, with an undertaking to ratify and confirm what the commissioner might do in the premises; upon which the commissioner prepared and signed a schedule, specifying the closes to be exchanged, which he produced at a public meeting convened under the act. The parties took possession of, cultivated and demised the closes exchanged, agreeably to the schedule. The commissioner not having published his award:—Held, that ejectment might be maintained by A., to recover from B. a close, given up by A. to, and taken possession of by, B. under the exchange. Doe d. Beaufort (Duke) v. Neeld, 3 Man. & G. 271; 3 Scott (N.R.) 618; 10 L. J., C. P. 266; 5 Jur. 751.

An exchange can only be between two parties; and if three mutually grant reciprocal estates to each other, viz. A. to C., B. to A., and C. to B.; and A. is evicted of the tenements granted to him by B., A. cannot recover of C. the tenements granted to him by A. Eton College v. Winchester (Bishop), 2 W. Bl. 936; 3 Wils. 468, 483; Lofft, 401.

Under an agreement of exchange between A., who held lands under a college-lease, and B., the owner of an adjoining estate, B. occupied part of the college lands, and A. occupied along with the residue of the leasehold, part of B.'s estate. A. having become bankrupt, the college leasehold was sold, and was described in the particulars of sale as "late the residence of A.":—Held, that the purchaser was not to be considered as having implied notice of the agreement of exchange, and that he had a right to recover by ejectment that portion of the leasehold which was in B.'s occupation. Miles v. Langley, 2 Russ. & M. 626.

L. ESTATE PASSING BY DEED.

1. FREEHOLDS.

What passes under.]—A tenant in tail in possession of hereditaments and premises, subject to an outstanding term, by indenture, in order to bar the estate tail and all remainders expectant thereupon, and to limit the same to himself in fee, and in consideration of 10*s.*, granted, bargained and sold the hereditaments and premises, and the reversion, &c., thereof to A. and B., their heirs and assigns, to hold to them, A. and B., to the use of A., that he might become tenant of the freehold of the premises, in order to suffer a recovery. The deed was afterwards duly inrolled as a bargain and sale:—Held, that it operated as a grant of the reversion to A. and B., and that A. became solely seised of the premises, so as to be a good tenant of the freehold of the entirety. Haggerston v. Hanbury, 5 B. & C. 101; 7 D. & R. 723; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 269; 29 R. R. 176.

Where the owner of certain lands, by deed describing them as in the possession of himself and A. B., granted, assigned, transferred, and set over, directed, limited and appointed the same to C. D. for life, but no livery of seisin was made:—Held, that the deed operated as a valid grant of the reversion of the part of the premises in the occupation of A. B. Doe d. Ware v. Cole, 7 B. & C. 243; 1 Man. & Ry. 33; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 20.

A. being seised in fee of a moiety of lands, and B. being seised for life of the other moiety, they, in 1805, by indenture, reciting that they were entitled thereto as tenants in common and that they had agreed to grant a perpetual lease thereof to C., his heirs, &c., granted, demised, &c., the same to C., "his heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, for ever," to hold from a day then past, unto and to the use of C., his heirs, executors, administrators and assigns, for ever, yielding and paying therefor, yearly and every year, to A. and B., their heirs, &c., the clear yearly rent of 120*l.* half-yearly. The deed contained all the covenants usually found in ordinary leases :—Held, that, in the absence of proof, at the date of the deed the premises were in the occupation of tenants, so that a reversion could only pass ; and the expressed intention of the parties precluding the court from presuming that there had been livery of seisin, the deed could not operate as a conveyance of the fee, subject to a rent-charge, but created only a tenancy from year to year. Doe d. Roberton v. Gardiner, 12 C. B. 319 ; 21 L. J., C. P. 222.

Grant (before A. D. 1209) "of that pasture which is called B. to feed their animals," and that the grantees should "have in that pasture 100 cows." By deed of 25 Edw. 3, the owner of the fee granted all his right, and that it should be lawful for the grantees "to inclose the pasture, and to reduce it to cultivation, or to make any other profit thereof" :—Held, that the grantees were to be presumed to have been in possession at the time of the second grant, and that it operated as a release of the fee. Doe d. Dearden v. Maden, 1 N. & M. 533 ; 4 B. & Ad. 880.

A deed of release containing the words "all lands, &c., belonging, used, occupied and enjoyed, or deemed, taken, or accepted as part thereof," will pass leasehold lands which answer that description, as well as freehold ; especially against the releasor. Doe d. Davies v. Williams, 1 H. Bl. 25 ; 2 R. R. 703.

A lease for a year being made between A. and B., the release, stating B. to be a trustee for C., granted the premises unto C., then in his possession by virtue of an indenture of lease, bearing date the day before the release, and to his heirs, habendum to B. and his heirs, to such uses as C. should appoint :—Held, that the release was sufficient to convey the premises to B. ; and that the words in the granting part, "unto C.," &c., might be rejected as surplusage. Spyve v. Topham, 3 East, 115 ; 6 R. R. 559.

—— Subsequently Acquired Right.]—A., B. and C., being tenants in common in tail, B. released to A. and C. and their heirs all his undivided part, and all his estate and interest therein, habendum to them, their heirs and assigns, as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, to the use of them, their heirs and assigns ; and B. covenanted with A. and C., their heirs and assigns, that he, his heirs, &c., would warrant and for ever defend the premises to A. and C. (without the word "heirs"), against all persons, and that A. and C., their heirs and assigns, should quietly enjoy :—Held, that the release passed the interest of B. to A. and C. as tenants in common, and not as joint tenants, and that the warranty annexed to the release created a discontinuance of B.'s estate tail, and barred B. and those claiming under him, as against those claiming under the release, of a subsequently-acquired right in fee. Doe d. Hutchinson v. Prestwidge, 4 M. & S. 178 ; 16 R. R. 436.

Covenant to Stand Seised.]—A deed which may take effect as a covenant to stand seised is good, though the use is to arise after the decease of the covenantor, and though he does not affect thereby to dispose of the freehold in the meantime. Doe d. Dyke v. Whittingham, 4 Taunt. 20 ; 13 R. R. 554.

The plaintiff in ejectment on a demise of the 12th October, 1850, claimed under the following deed : "In consideration of the love and affection which I have towards my son W. S. (the lessor of the plaintiff), I have given and granted, and by these presents do give and grant to W. S. all that, &c., and W. S. is to take possession of the same at Michaelmas day next (1850). I have delivered him, W. S., all the premises absolutely at Michaelmas day next without further condition" :—Held, that supposing such deed to be void as a grant of the freehold in future, still the day named having passed, the plaintiff was entitled to recover, the deed amounting to a covenant to stand seised to the use of W. S. Doe d. Starling v. Prince, 20 L. J., C. P. 223 ; 15 Jur. 632.

The 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 4, which enacts, "that the word 'give,' or the word 'grant,' in a deed shall not imply a covenant in law" :—Held, inapplicable. Ib.

Immediate Freeholds.]—By lease and release before 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 2, H. conveyed to W. and to his heirs and assigns certain freehold and copyhold premises, to hold the same unto W., his heirs and assigns, from and immediately after the death of H. to, for and upon the several uses, ends, intents and purposes thereinafter mentioned :—Held, that by the premises an immediate estate of freehold was given to W., and that the habendum had not the effect of rendering the deed void, or giving a freehold in future. Goodtitle d. Dodwell v. Gibbs, 5 B. & C. 709 ; 8 D. & R. 502 ; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 284 ; 29½ R. R. 366.

Contingent Rights.]—On the 31st March, 1852, H. demised to B. for ninety-nine years a piece of land, with four unfinished houses upon it, B. covenanting that he would complete the houses on or before the 25th June, 1852. Proviso for re-entry on default made. Upon the 31st March, 1852, B. mortgaged the premises to the plaintiff, and gave up possession to him after the 25th June, 1852, without having completed the houses. By deed of the 30th July, 1852, H. assigned to the defendant the premises, and all his estate, right, title and interest in, to or out of the premises. Whilst the plaintiff was in possession, and after the 30th July, 1852, the defendant entered into the premises :—Held, that even if the right of entry for condition broken was capable of passing by assignment by virtue of 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 6, yet that express words were necessary to pass such right of entry, and that the general words, "all the estate, right, title and interest," in the deed of the 30th July, were not sufficient. Hunt v. Remnant, 9 Ex. 635 ; 23 L. J., Ex. 135 ; 18 Jur. 335 ; 2 W. R. 276—Ex. Ch.

Sale of Right of Entry—Vendor out of Possession—32 Hen. 8, c. 9, s. 2.]—Although 32 Hen. 8, c. 9, s. 2, cannot be said to have been repealed by 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 6, nevertheless, since the passing of the latter statute a grant of lands to which the grantor has a title existing in fact, but of which he has never been in possession, and on which he is entitled only to a right of entry, will be valid, even although at the time of the grant a litigation is pending as to the title to the lands. A. sought to recover by ejectment certain lands ; the person in possession, amongst other defences, alleged that one-fourth share thereof belonged to B., who had never been in possession. Thereupon A., for the sum of 10*l*., took from B. a conveyance dated the 4th July, 1877, of his share, containing covenants for title and quiet enjoyment. The actual value of B.'s share was 500*l*. A. then recovered possession of the lands. Before the date of the conveyance B. had been bankrupt, and after A. had recovered possession of the lands, B.'s trustees in bankruptcy recovered possession from A. of the one-fourth share which had been conveyed by B. to A. In an action by A. against B. for damages for breach of the covenants for title and quiet enjoyment:—Held, that the conveyance to A. from B. was not rendered void by 32 Hen. 8, c. 9, s. 2. Jenkins v. Jones, 51 L. J., Q. B. 438; 9 Q. B. D. 128; 46 L. T. 795; 30 W. R. 668—C. A.

Held, also, that A. was entitled to recover from B. the sum of 500*l*. as damages. Ib.

Under Acts of Parliament.]—A deed of conveyance made under the authority of an act of parliament must be read as if the sections of the act were incorporated in it. A conveyance granting land for a special purpose must be construed as conveying all the rights necessarily incident to the due execution of that purpose. Elliott v. North Eastern Ry., 10 H. L. Cas. 333; 2 N. R. 87; 32 L. J., Ch. 402; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 555; 8 L. T. 307; 11 W. R. 604.

Whether the conveyance is a voluntary bargain between the parties, or is made because the act gives the grantee the power of compelling a grant, these rules are applicable. Ib.

Nuisance.]—See Nuisance.

Who is Reversioner.]—The term "owner" as well as that of "proprietor" of premises, may mean any one who has the whole legal interest in the premises, so that no one else has any estate in possession or reversion, or it may mean one who has a subsisting estate at the time of the wrong complained of, or one who is the owner of the whole, or of some interest as distinguishable from that of the tenant in possession. Chauntler v. Robinson, 4 Ex. 163; 19 L. J., Ex. 170.

When Action is Maintainable by—For Injury to Chattel.]—An owner of a chattel, e.g. a barge, which is out on hire for an unexpired term, may maintain an action against a third person for a permanent injury thereto. Mears v. L. & S. W. Ry., 11 C. B. (N.S.) 859; 31 L. J., C. P. 220; 6 L. T. 190.

—— For Injury to Land.]—There must be some injury to the land, to enable a reversioner to support an action on the case. Baxter v. Taylor, 1 N. & M. 14; 4 B. & Ad. 72; 2 L. J., K. B. 65.

—— Wrongful Entry on Land.]—A reversioner cannot maintain an action against a stranger, for merely entering upon his land held by a tenant on lease, though the entry is made in exercise of an alleged right of way; such an act during the tenancy not being necessarily injurious to the reversion. Ib.

—— Excavating Coal.]—The plaintiff having demised a cottage without exception of mines:—Held, that he might sue for an injury occasioned to the cottage by a stranger who had excavated coal; though it was not clear whether the injury resulted from excavation under the cottage, or under an adjoining house in the occupation of the plaintiff. Raine v. Alderson, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 702; 6 Scott, 691; 1 Arn. 329; 7 L. J., C. P. 273; 2 Jur. 327.

—— For Injury to the Inheritance.]—But an action lies by a reversioner for any injury done to the value of the inheritance. Jesser v. Gifford, 4 Burr. 2141. S. P., Shadwell v. Hutchinson, M. & M. 350.

—— Not keeping House in Repair.]—A house was devised to A. for life, she keeping the same in good repair, remainder to B.:—Held, that the court had no jurisdiction to enforce the condition at the suit of B. Kinnersley v. Williamson, 39 L. J., Ch. 788; 23 L. T. 39; 18 W. R. 1016.

Necessity of Proving Damage.]—An action against the sheriff for selling the reversionary interest of the plaintiff in goods in the possession of an execution debtor, cannot be supported unless actual damage has been sustained. Tancred v. Allgood, 4 H. & N. 438; 28 L. J., Ex. 362.

If the plaintiff declares as a reversioner for an injury done to his reversion, the declaration must allege it to have been done to the damage of his reversion, or must state an injury of such a permanent nature as to be necessarily injurious to his reversion; otherwise the want of such allegation will be cause for arresting the judgment. Jackson v. Pesked, 1 M. & S. 234; 14 R. R. 417.

A declaration by a reversioner, after stating that he had a right of way for the tenants of his close over the close of the defendant, averred that he wrongfully locked, chained, shut and fastened a gate across the way, by means of which premises the plaintiff was injured:—Held, that the declaration disclosed a good cause of action. Kidgell v. Moor, 1 L. M. & P. 131; 9 C. B. 364; 19 L. J., C. P. 177; 14 Jur. 790.

A declaration for an injury to a reversionary interest by obstructing ancient lights, is sufficient if it shews an obstruction which may operate injuriously to the reversion, either by its being of a permanent character or by its operating in denial of the right. Metropolitan Association for Improving Dwellings v. Petch, 5 C. B. (N.S.) 504; 27 L. J., C. P. 330; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1000.

A count, stating the plaintiff to be reversioner of premises occupied by his tenants, and abutting on a public navigable river; and that he and all the liege subjects of her majesty were accustomed of right to have free navigation and passage on the river for boats, and he was accustomed of right to have, for the enjoyment of the premises by his tenants, free use and navigation of that part of the river near to the same, and free passage for all persons in boats to approach the same, and pass to the premises, from the river, and unload the boats on the premises, without obstruction; but that the defendant fixed barges and planks in that part of the river near the premises, and thereby obstructed the use and navigation of that part, and hindered persons from passing to the premises, from the river, and hindered the unloading of boats on the premises; and, by means thereof, the plaintiff was injured in his reversionary interest—is bad in arrest of judgment, as not shewing a damage to the reversionary interest. Dobson v. Blackmore, 9 Q. B. 991; 16 L. J., Q. B. 233; 11 Jur. 556.

So a count which states that certain messuages were in the possession of tenants of the plaintiff, and alleges a similar obstruction, and that the plaintiff was injured thereby in his reversionary interest, is bad, as shewing no act which, per se, imports any damage to his reversionary interest. Ib.

What may be a Defence.]—An action may be maintained by a reversioner for an injury done to the inheritance by an erection, which may be removed before his estate becomes one in possession. Jesser v. Gifford, 4 Burr. 2141.

In an action by a reversioner for an injury to the reversion, it is no answer that the injury complained of was caused by the wrongful act of the tenant, for which he might be liable to an action. Egremont v. Pulman, M. & M. 404.

In an action, by a reversioner, for an injury to a house and land in the occupation of his tenant, by reason of the defendant not cleansing a watercourse on his own land, which it was his duty to do, it is no answer to plead that the obstruction of the watercourse was caused by the neglect of the tenant to repair a wall on the demised land, and in consequence it fell into the watercourse and caused the damage, and that the defendant removed the obstruction within a reasonable time after the notice; because the plea ought, at all events, to shew an obligation on the tenant to repair the wall; and also, because the removal, after notice, or even as soon as possible after the injury, would not make the defendant the less bound to compensate for neglect of an unqualified legal duty. Bell v. Twentyman, 1 G. & D. 223; 1 Q. B. 766; 10 L. J., Q. B. 278; 6 Jur. 336.

To a declaration for breaking and entering rooms in the occupation of the tenant of the plaintiff, and tearing down the ceiling over the landing of the staircase, the roof over the same, and the chimneys, and demolishing the windows, the defendant justified under a deed of assignment in trust for creditors, from H. (who was shewn to be the lessee of the premises before the accrual of the title of the plaintiff), whereby a right of entry was given to take and sell furniture:—Held, that the plea was bad, as confessing more than it avoided, inasmuch as the right to enter did not give a right to tear down the ceiling, &c., unless an entry could be obtained in no other way; which was not averred. Foulkes v. Scarpe, 1 D. (N.S.) 691; 4 Man. & G. 126; 4 Scott (N.R.) 713; 11 L. J., C. P. 247.

To an action by a reversioner for an injury to his reversionary interest, a plea by the defendant that he was the occupier of the adjoining house and wall, and that, whilst he was repairing his dwelling-house, by accident and against his will, and without any default on his part, it fell down, and in falling fell upon the adjoining wall and close to the plaintiff, and threw the plaintiff's wall down; that thereupon the defendant, within a reasonable time, rebuilt the wall at his own expense, and in so doing committed the grievances mentioned—is bad, for not shewing that he had the leave and licence of the tenant, or of some party having authority to allow him to come on the land. Taylor v. Stendall, 3 D. & L. 161; 7 Q. B. 634; 14 L. J., Q. B. 301; 9 Jur. 1096.

In an action by a reversioner, for the removal of the eaves from his house, and the erection of a building with eaves and a gutter overhanging his wall, evidence of a diminution of the saleable value of the premises in consequence of the nuisance was rejected; and it appearing that the cost of replacing the tiles which had been removed would not exceed 30*s.*, and the defendant having paid 40*s.* into court on account thereof, the jury was directed to find for the defendant, if they thought the sum paid into court was sufficient to cover the actual damages sustained by the plaintiff:—Held, that the evidence tendered was properly rejected, and the direction right, the true measure of damages being, not the diminution in the saleable value, although the nuisance might be of a permanent character, but such damages as the jury might think sufficient to compel the defendant to abate the nuisance. Battishill v. Reed, 18 C. B. 696; 25 L. J., C. P. 290; 4 W. R. 603.

For the portions of the wharf occupied by his two tenants, B. was to be paid a certain royalty on all coals sold; the minimum royalty to be paid by one being 200*l.* per annum, and by the other 180*l.*; and B. was, at the time of the obstruction complained of, in treaty with a third person for letting him the remaining portion of the wharf at 300*l.* per annum:—Held, that the jury was warranted in taking these sums into their consideration in estimating the amount of damage B. had sustained from the obstruction of a right of way. Bell v. Midland Ry., 10 C. B. (N.S.) 287; 30 L. J., C. P. 273; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 1200; 4 L. T. 293; 9 W. R. 612.

And see further specific titles, NUISANCE, TRESPASS, &c.

Liability of Reversioner.]—If the owner of a house is bound to repair it, he, and not the occupier, is liable to an action on the case for an injury sustained by a stranger from the want of repair. Payne v. Rogers, 2 H. Bl. 350; 3 R. R. 415.

An action lies against a reversioner who has demised his premises with the chimneys in a ruinous condition and in danger of falling, they being known by him to be so at the time of the demise, and in consequence of their condition, falling during the demise, and injuring the building of another person. Todd v. Flight, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 377; 30 L. J., C. P. 21; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 291; 3 L. T. 325; 9 W. R. 145.

A nuisance of a permanent character having been created on land in the occupation of a tenant from year to year, the reversioner is liable for damage caused by it, if it is shewn that since the creation of the nuisance and before the damage he might have determined the tenancy and did not, such continuing of the tenancy being equivalent to a re-letting; and it is no defence that he had no notice or knowledge of the existence of the nuisance. Gandy v. Jubber, 5 B. & S. 78; 33 L. J., Q. B. 151; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 652; 9 L. T. 800; 12 W. R. 526. Upon appeal the case was compromised. See 5 B. & S. 485; 13 W. R. 1022. The Court of Exchequer Chamber was prepared to reverse the judgment in Queen's Bench. See 9 B. & S. 15, where the judgment is set out.

In an action for damages against the landlord of premises let on a weekly tenancy, by a person who has sustained injuries through an accident which took place on the premises, it is a question for the jury whether the accident was caused by a structural defect existing at the time of the original letting, or whether it was caused by the negligence of the tenant. Bowen v. Anderson, [1894] 1 Q. B. 164; 10 R. 47; 42 W. R. 236.

3. In Remainder.

Apportionment between Tenant for Life and Remainderman.]—See col. 261, et seq., ante.

Cross-remainders.]—Cross-remainders cannot be implied in a deed, and can only be raised by proper words of limitation, however plainly expressed the intention of the parties may be. Doe d. Foquett v. Worsley, 1 East, 416; 6 R. R. 303. S. P., Edwards v. Alliston, 4 Russ. 78; 6 L. J., (o.s.) Ch. 30; 28 R. R. 9. Doe d. Tanner v. Dowell, 5 Term Rep. 518; 2 R. R. 662. Meyrick v. Whishaw, 2 B. & Ald. 810; 21 R. R. 501.

Cross-remainders may lie between more than two, where the intent is plain. Wright v. Cadogan (Lord), Cowp. 31. Perry v. White, 1 Dougl. 53, n.; Cowp. 777. Phiphard v. Mansfield, 1 Dougl. 53, n.; Cowp. 797. Doe d. Burden v. Burville, 1 Dougl. 53, n.; 2 East, 47, n. Doe d. Gorges v. Webb, 1 Taunt. 234; 9 R. R. 754. Maden v. Taylor, 45 L. J., Ch. 569.

Leaseholds for life were settled by a deed on the parents for life, with remainder to the children of the wife equally and the heirs of their bodies, and if but one child then to such child and the heirs of his body, and in default of such issue to the heirs of the wife:—Held, that there were no cross-remainders between the children, and that on the death of a child without issue, and without having made any disposition, his share went to the heir of the wife. Bainton v. Bainton, 34 Beav. 563.

The limitations in a deed were to trustees to the use of A. and B. for their lives, remainder to the use of the child or children of B. in tail as tenants in common, "and in case any such child or children should die without issue of his, her or their bodies, then the part of such child should be and remain to the use of the surviving child or children of B., and the heirs of his, her or their bodies issuing; and in case all the said children should die without issue, &c., then to A. in fee":—Held, that the deed created cross-remainders between the children of B.; and that on the death of one without issue, his share vested in a surviving child, and the heir of one deceased, as tenants in common. Doe d. Watts v. Wainewright, 5 Term Rep. 427; 2 R. R. 634.

—— In Marriage Settlement.]—A., by marriage settlement, conveyed estates to trustees, with remainder to his children of the marriage, share and share alike as tenants in common; and for default of such issue, and if any of such children, there being more than one, should happen to die without issue before twenty-one, that in every such case the share of such child should go to the survivors, as tenants in common; and in case all such children should die without issue, then to the use of the settlor in fee:—Held, that there were no cross-remainders between the children of the marriage, except in the case of a child having died without issue, and under twenty-one, and that one of the children having died without issue, but after twenty-one, his share vested in the settlor, and not the survivor. Meyrick v. Whishaw, 2 B. & Ald. 810; 21 R. R. 501.

Settlement of the wife's estate on herself for life, remainder to the husband for life, if any issue of the marriage so long lives, remainder, if she dies without issue, of one moiety to him in fee, and of the other to the wife's relations: his remainder in fee does not arise, unless he survives his wife. Monkhouse v. Wainhouse, 1 W. Bl. 638.

If an estate is limited by deed to husband and wife, and the heirs on the body of the wife by the husband to be begotten, both have an estate tail. Denn d. Trickett v. Gillot, 2 Term Rep. 431; 1 R. R. 516.

But if the remainder is limited to the heirs of the body of the wife by the husband to be begotten, the estate tail vests in the wife solely. Ib.

Settlement to C. for life, remainder to the heirs on the body of his wife, the male to be preferred to the female, is an estate in tail male in the first instance. Denn d. Creswick v. Hobson, 5 Burr. 2609.

A settlement made on the marriage of H. W. and A. D. (after giving the husband and wife respectively estates for life, with powers of appointment, which were not exercised), contained the following limitation in default of any such appointment:—"To the use of all and every the child and children of the marriage, both sons and daughters equally, part and share alike, if more than one as tenants in common, and not as joint-tenants, and of the heirs of the body and bodies of all and every such child and children lawfully issuing; and in case there shall be more children than one of the said intended marriage, and any such child and children shall happen to die under the age of twenty-one years, without issue of his or their body or bodies lawfully issuing, then so often as to the part and share, parts and shares of all and every such child and children, to the use of the surviving children, part and share alike, if more than one as tenants in common and not as joint-tenants, and to the heirs of the body of every such child and children, until every such child and children should be dead; and in case there should be but one child only of the marriage, or one only surviving child, then to the use of such surviving child in tail, and for default of issue of the marriage, and in case there should be issue who should all die without issue under the age of twenty-one years, then to the heirs and assigns of the survivor of H. W. and A. D. in fee." The marriage between H. W. and A. D. having taken place, H. W. died intestate, leaving his widow and two children, Joseph and Ann. The widow died, leaving the two children, Joseph and Ann, who both attained the age of twenty-one years. Ann married, and Joseph died shortly after, having by his will devised to her in fee all his lands in the county of K. or elsewhere:—Held, that Ann, who was already tenant in tail of one moiety of the lands comprised in the settlement, became, as heir-at-law of J. W., tenant fee of the other moiety. Levin v. Weatherall, 1 Br. & B. 401; 21 R. R. 669.

Amount of Estate.]—Settlement to the use of G. for life, remainder to the use of the first son of the body of G. by A., his intended wife; and for default of such issue, to the use of the second, third and other sons of the body of G. by A., severally and successively as they shall be in seniority of age, and of the several heirs male of their several bodies; and for default of such issue, then in case A. should be enceinte by G., to the use of P. till A. should be delivered, in trust for the after-born child or children; and in case such should be a son or sons, to the use of such after-born son or sons, severally and successively as they should be in priority of birth: and the heirs male of the body and bodies of such after-born son or sons:—Held, that the first son of G. by A., born during his life, took an estate tail. Galley v. Barrington, 2 Bing. 387; 10 Moore, 21; 27 R. R. 663.

An estate to A. for life in a deed, and a limitation of the estate to the heirs of the body of A. in a will (though the estate by the deed was voluntary, and moved from the testator and is recited in the will), do not unite so as to give A. an estate tail, but the heirs of his body take by purchase. Doe d. Fonnereau v. Fonnereau, 2 Dougl. 487.

A limitation in a deed, to the use of A. for life, with remainder to the first son of the body of A. lawfully issuing, and for default of such issue to the second, third and other sons of A., and of the several heirs male of the body and bodies of all and every such son and sons respectively issuing, gives an estate in tail male to the first son of A. Owen v. Smyth, 2 H. Bl. 594; 3 R. R. 513.

Where a marriage settlement conveyed an estate to trustees for the use of the settlor for life, then to the use of his wife for life, and then for the use of his first son and the heirs of such first son, and from and immediately after the determination of that estate for the use of his second, third, and all and every other son and sons, and their several and respective heirs; and for default of such issue, then to the use of all and every his daughter and daughters, and their heirs, to take as tenants in common, and not as joint-tenants; and for want of such issue, then for the right heirs of the survivor of himself and his wife for ever:—Held, that under these limitations the sons took successively estates tail, and the daughters an estate in fee. Doe d. Littledale v. Smeddle, 2 B. & Ald. 126; 20 R. R. 377.

By a marriage settlement, land was conveyed to trustees to the use of the husband for life, and from and after his decease, in case the wife survived him, to the use and intent that the wife should receive 14*s.* per week; and subject thereto that the trustees should, from time to time, and at all times thereafter, stand possessed of the residue to the use of all and every the child and children of his former wife, viz. A., B., C., D. and E., and their issue lawfully begotten, equally to be divided amongst them in equal shares and proportions, as tenants in common, and not as joint-tenants, and his, her or their respective issues:—Held, that the five children took estates for life, and that no estate was taken by grandchildren born after the settlement and before the death of the settlor, the husband, or by grandchildren born after his death. Wheeler v. Duke, 1 C. & M. 210; 3 Tyrw. 61; 2 L. J., Ex. 33.

—— Trust Estates.]—By deed and fine, an estate was limited to the use of the husband for life, remainder to trustees and their heirs during his life, to preserve contingent remainders, remainder to the wife for life, remainder to the trustees and their heirs (not saying during her life), in trust to support the contingent uses and estates thereinafter limited, remainder to the first and other sons in tail, remainder to the wife in tail, remainder in default of issue to such persons and for such estates as she should appoint:—Held, that the trustees took a legal estate in fee after the determination of the wife's life estate, and that all the subsequent limitations were trust estates. Venables v. Morris, 7 Term Rep. 342, 436; 4 R. R. 455.

B. devised to his only son, E., for life, remainder to his issue in tail, remainder to B.'s two daughters in tail, remainder to B.'s right heirs: the two daughters suffered recoveries to the use of E.; and by an act of parliament reciting the will, the recoveries, and that E. had no issue, trustees were empowered to sell the estates devised, and to lay out the purchase-money in the purchase of other estates, to be settled to such of the uses in the will of B. as should be existing, undetermined, or capable of taking effect at the time of the sale: the trustees sold, and bought with the purchase-money an estate, which, by a conveyance reciting the will of B. and the act, was conveyed to them to such of the uses in the will of B. as were then existing, undetermined, and capable of taking effect:—Held, that under the conveyance the trustees took a fee. Wortham v. Mackinnon, 8 Bing. 564; 1 M. & Sc. 543.

Heirs Male.]—By a marriage settlement, Whiteacre was limited to A. for life; remainder to trustees during the life of A. to preserve contingent remainders; remainder to B. for life; remainder to the trustees during the life of B. to preserve, &c.; remainder to the sons of B. by D. successively in tail male; remainder to the right heirs male of B. for ever. By the same deed Blackacre was limited to B. for life; remainder to trustees, during the life of B., to preserve, &c.; remainder to D. for life, for raising out of the rents an annuity, and subject thereto to the sons of B. by D. successively in tail male; remainder to the trustees to the use of the issue female of B. by D., for raising portions and maintenance until twenty-one; and after raising such sums, or in default of issue female, to the use of the right heirs male of B. for ever:—Held, first, that the words "heirs male" were words of limitation, and gave B. the ultimate remainder in fee, and that even if they were words of purchase, they created a remainder contingent during B.'s life, which upon his death vested in his heir, by whom it was devisable. Secondly, that the trustees took at most a limited fee, determinable on the portions being raised, and that after twenty years' adverse possession as against them, their right must be presumed to have been satisfied or released. Doe d. Brune v. Martyn, 2 Man. & Ry. 485; 8 B. & C. 487; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 60; 32 R. R. 459.

Estates were limited to C. for his life, remainder to such one or more of his children as he should appoint; remainder, in default of appointment, to D., the first son of C., and the heirs of D.'s body. C. appointed to D. for D.'s life, remainder to a daughter of C. for her life. It being admitted that all the limitations were to be read as one conveyance, quære, whether the life estate, when vested in D., united with the estate limited to O. and the heirs of his body, under the rule in Shelley's Case. Semble, per Lord Denman, C.J., Littledale, J., and Patteson, J., that the rule does not apply to such a limitation. Doe d. Nicholson v. Welford, 12 A. & E. 61; 4 P. & D. 77; 9 L. J., Q. B. 334; 5 Jur. 38.

But held, that, if the rule was applicable, the limitations did not so unite as to displace the ntervening estates; and therefore D. could not bar these by a recovery. Ib.

Shares.]—Prior to the marriage of E. and B., lands, of which E. H., the mother of E., was seised in fee, were settled to the use of B., the husband of E., for his life, and then with remainder to the use of E., his intended wife, for her life, with remainder to the use of all and every the children of the body of B. on the body of E., to be begotten, to be equally divided among them, share and share alike, to take as tenants in common, and not as joint-tenants, and of the heirs of the bodies of all and every such children lawfully issuing; and in case one or more of such children should happen to die without issue of his or their body or bodies, then as to the share or shares of him or them so dying without issue, to the use of the survivors or others of them, share and share alike, to take as tenants in common, not as joint-tenants, and the heirs of their bodies lawfully issuing; and in case all such children but one should happen to die without issue, or if there should be but one such child, then to the use of such surviving or only child and of the heirs of his or her body lawfully issuing; and for default of such issue, then to the use of E., the wife of W. H., and of her heirs and assigns for ever. The marriage was duly solemnised. There was issue of it eight children, three of whom died in infancy, unmarried, and in the lifetime of their parents. E., the wife of B., survived both W. H. and his wife, E. H.:—Held, that the word "share" included every interest which each child took under the limitations of the settlement, and that cross-remainders were created by apt words as well in respect of the accruing as of the original shares. Doe d. Clift v. Birkhead, 4 Ex. 110; 18 L. J., Ex. 441.

Grant by Crown.]—An estate, granted by the Crown to a subject as tenant in tail for services, is not barred so as to destroy the reversion of the Crown, although two private acts of parliament may have been passed, confirming a settlement by the tenant in tail, purporting to pass such reversion, the Crown being a party to neither of such acts, and each of them containing a saving clause, by which its rights were expressly reserved. Mitford v. Elliott, 1 Moore, 434; 8 Taunt. 1.

Contingent Remainders.]—Where by a marriage settlement, lands were conveyed to the use of the settlor for life, remainder to his wife for life, remainder, if there should be only one child of the marriage living at the death of the survivor of the settlor and his wife, and no such child dead leaving issue, to such surviving child in fee; but if, at the death of the survivor of the settlor and his wife there should be more than one child living, or a child or children should have died leaving issue, then, to such surviving child or children and such children's children, as tenants in common in tail, with cross-remainders, and for default of all such issue, to the defendant in fee. The settlor and his wife died without leaving any child or children, or issue of child or children them surviving, and all the preceding limitations failed:—Held, that the remainder to the defendant was an independent remainder and took effect, and that it was not contingent upon the preceding limitations in tail, and dependent on their having vested. Doe d. Lees v. Ford, 2 El. & Bl. 979; 2 C. L. R. 654; 23 L. J., Q. B. 53; 18 Jur. 420.

By an indenture in 1804, hereditaments were settled to the uses of such persons as the settlor should by deed or will appoint; and in default of appointment to the use of the settlor in tail general: remainder to J. L., the second son of the late Sir J. L., for life; remainder to the eldest son, J. L., in tail male; remainder to the second, third, fourth, fifth, and all and every other, the son and sons of the body of J. L. in tail male; remainder to L. C. for life, with remainders over: subject to a proviso, "that in case J. L., or any issue male of his body, shall become entitled to the possession or to the receipt of the rents and profits of the family estates of Sir J. L., deceased, then and in every such case the uses and estates hereinbefore limited, expressed and declared of and concerning the hereditaments to or for the benefit of him or them who shall so become entitled to the possession or the receipt of the rents and profits of the family estates of Sir J. L., and to and for the benefit of the issue male of such person or persons so becoming entitled, shall cease, determine, and be absolutely null and void: and then and in every such case, all and singular the premises shall immediately thereupon, from time to time, divest out of the person or persons so becoming entitled, and shall go over in such and the same manner to all intents and purposes, as if such person or persons so becoming entitled were actually dead without issue male." J. L., as the second son of the late Sir J. L., became entitled to the possession of the family estates mentioned in the proviso, in the lifetime of the testator, who afterwards died without issue, and without having exercised the power of appointment. At the time of his death there were living J. L. (then Sir J. L., who had become entitled to the family estate), J. H. L., the eldest son of Sir J. L., the son, H. L., his second son and four other sons; also L. C. mentioned in the indenture:—Held, that the remainders to the sons of J. L. were destroyed; and that L. C. took an estate for life. Morrice v. Langham, 8 M. & W. 194; 10 L. J., Ex. 289.

—— Limitations under 10 & 11 Will. 3, c. 16.]—An estate which, by virtue of settlement, devolves on a posthumous heir as tenant in tail by descent, is not a settled estate within the operation of this enactment. Richards v. Richards, Johns. 754; 29 L. J., Ch. 836; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1145.

Mortgage — Recovery of Interest against Remainderman — Laches.] — Incumbrancer is entitled to arrears of interest against remainderman, though by laches he omitted to obtain it against tenant for life. Roe v. Pogson, 2 Madd. 457. And see McKiernan v. Kernan, Fl. & K. 352; 4 Ir. Eq. R. 269.

De Ventre inspiciendo.]—A writ of de ventre inspiciendo may be had by a devisee as well as by an heir-at-law. A writ of de ventre inspiciendo is always applied for by petition. Bellett, Ex parte, 1 Cox, 297.

Writ de ventre inspiciendo ordered to issue against a married woman, whose husband had been ten years abroad, on the application of a devisee, there being a limitation in the will, that if she had a male child within forty weeks after testator's decease, it should take previous to the devisee; but to lie in the office fourteen days, and if she be submitted to an examination of midwife in the meantime, not to go; otherwise to issue. Wallop, Ex parte, 4 Bro. C. C. 90; Dick. 781.

A writ de ventre inspiciendo may be had by devisee, as well as by an heir-at-law. Ib.

A writ de ventre inspiciendo ordered in a case where the child or children would be entitled to a sum of money to be raised, under the trusts of a term of years, out of a real estate. Blakemore, In re, 14 L. J., Ch. 336.

4. OTHER MATTERS.

An estate was settled by deed, after several preceding estates tail, to the use of all and every the nearest of kin in equal degree to A., at the time of her decease without issue, of the name of B.:—Held, that a person who at the time of A.'s death was her nearest of kin born with the name of B., but who was not her nearest of kin, and who had, previously to her death, married and assumed her husband's name, was not entitled to take under the deed. Doe d. Wright v. Plumptre, 3 B. & Ald. 474.

Strangers.]—Before 8 & 9 Vict. c. 106, s. 5, a deed inter partes could not operate as a release to strangers. Storer v. Gordon, 3 M. & S. 308; 15 R. R. 499.

A right of entry could not be reserved to a stranger to the estate. Doe d. Barber v. Lawrence, 4 Taunt. 23.

A. GENERAL PRINCIPLES.

Definition.]—An estoppel may be said to exist where a person is compelled to admit that to be true which is not true, and to act upon a theory which is contrary to the truth. This formula nearly approaches a correct definition of estoppel. Simm v. Anglo-American Telegraph Co. (per Bramwell, L.J.), 49 L. J., Q. B. 392; 5 Q. B. D. 188, at p. 202; 42 L. T. 37; 28 W. R. 290; 44 J. P. 280—C. A.

Estoppel is quaintly defined stopping of man's mouth from speaking truth, but legal definition of it contains much good sense. Law cannot be known until facts are ascertained, and facts can never be ascertained unless some evidence is allowed to be of such a nature as cannot be contradicted, and therefore it is that estoppels are allowed. Estoppels may be pleaded or given in evidence; jury, however, is not bound by estoppel, arising by act in pais, or by matter of writing, when given in evidence, but they may find such estoppels, and if they will find, court is bound to give judgment accordingly. "Estoppels being specially found by jury, court must judge according to special matter, for albeit estoppel ought to be regularly pleaded and relied upon by apt conclusion, and jury is sworn to find veritatem facti, yet, when they find estoppel, court must judge according to law." 1 Inst. 227. But, if estoppel arises by matter of record, and is given in evidence, jury is bound to find accordingly, under peril of an attaint. Needlar v. Winton (Bishop), Hob. 227.

Does not apply to Act of Parliament.]—The doctrine of estoppel cannot be applied to an act of parliament. Estoppel only applies to a contract inter partes and it is not competent to parties to estop themselves or anybody else in the face of an act of parliament. Stapleford Colliery Co., In re, Barrow's Case, 49 L. J., Ch. 498, at p. 501; 14 Ch. D. 432, at p. 441; 41 L. T. 755; 28 W. R. 270.

Consent Judgment—Estoppel inter partes.]—A judgment by consent operates as an estoppel inter partes as much as if the case had been fought out. It makes no difference that the court has not exercised its mind on the matters in controversy. South American and Mexican Co., In re, Bank of England, Ex parte, [1895] 1 Ch. 37; 12 R. 1; 71 L. T. 594; 43 W. R. 131—C. A. But see Jenkins v. Robertson, L. R. 1 Sc. App. 117.

Where a judgment by consent for a sum of money proceeded on the ground that an agreement under which the money was payable was a valid one, the court held that parties to the judgment were estopped from disputing the validity of the agreement. Ib. And see Parker v. Simpson, 18 W. R. 204.

B. BY RECORD.

1. General Principles.

Same Matters and Parties.]—The judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction is, as evidence, conclusive as to the matters at issue, whenever the same matters shall be afterwards in question between the same parties in another court. Flitters v. Allfrey, 44 L. J., C. P. 73; L. R. 10 C. P. 29; 31 L. T. 878; 23 W. R. 442.

Decrees of the court, though erroneous, are binding until set aside on rehearing, or in a suit for the purpose. Clanmorris v. Clanmorris, 14 Ir. Ch. R. 420.

The judgments of courts of concurrent jurisdiction are evidence only where the very same matter comes distinctly in issue between the same parties. Mackintosh v. Smith, 4 Macq. H. L. 913.

The judgments of courts of exclusive jurisdiction are evidence, whether the matter arises incidentally, or is the matter directly in issue. Ib.

The validity of a defence of res judicata depends upon whether the case made by the plaintiff in the subsequent suit is the same as in the former suit, and therefore, although the relief prayed by both bills is substantially the same, if the case presented is different, the defence would not avail. Hunter v. Stewart, 4 De G. F. & J. 168; 31 L. J., Ch. 346; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 317; 5 L. T. 471; 10 W. R. 176.

One of the criteria of the identity of two suits, in considering a plea of res judicata, is the inquiry whether the same evidence would support both. Ib.

When a record is an estoppel to the party, it must be direct and in point to the fact, which the party is estopped from proving contrary to the record concerning that fact. S. C., Co. Litt. 352.

There are only two ways of taking advantage of an estoppel. If the estoppel appear on the record the party may demur, or if not on the record he may plead. Ib. 69.

After issue joined, publication passed, and the cause heard, the same matter or the same title shall not be drawn into question again by another original bill. Peterborough v. Germaine, 6 Bro. P. C. 1. See Hawkins v. Miles, 4 L. J. (O.S.), Ch. 139.

Semble, a plea of res judicata is of no effect unless between the same parties, and as to same subject-matter; and semble, that a party to a suit is not bound to amend at a late stage which would introduce a new state of circumstances. National Bolivian Navigation Co. v. Wilson, 5 App. Cas. 176; 43 L. T. 60.

If estoppel appears upon record, and issue is joined, if jury find fact against estoppel, yet judgment shall be given according to estoppel, and not according to verdict, because, says the Year Book, 11 Hen. 6, c. 42, verdict is nothing to purpose, being mere jeofail to try a matter contrary to the record. Hume v. Burton, 1 Ridgw. P. C. 247; 1 Bridg. 658.

Court must have Concurrent or Exclusive Jurisdiction.]—To establish the plea of res judicata, the judgment relied on must have been pronounced by a court having concurrent or exclusive jurisdiction directly upon the matter in question. Att.-Gen. for Trinidad and Tobago v. Eriché, 63 L. J., P. C. 6; [1893] A. C. 518; 1 R. 440; 69 L. T. 505—P. C.

Judgment Necessary.]—One personal action not going on to judgment is no bar to another for the same cause. Hitchin v. Campbell, 2 W. Bl. 831; 3 Wils. 304; Lofft, 208.

Same Thing to be Recovered.]—To constitute a plea of res judicata, it must be shewn that the former suit was one in which the plaintiff might have recovered precisely that which he seeks to recover in the second suit. Nelson v. Couch, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 99; 33 L. J., C. P. 46; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 366; 8 L. T. 577; 11 W. R. 964.

Where, therefore, a plaintiff had under a decree of the Admiralty Court in a suit for a collision obtained the whole proceeds of the sale of the defendant's vessel:—Held, that such recovery was no bar to a subsequent action in a court of common law, the amount so recovered in the Admiralty Court being insufficient to cover the damage the plaintiff had sustained. Ib.

Pleadings—Contents of.]—The facts actually decided by an issue in any suit cannot be again litigated between the same parties, and are conclusive evidence between them; so are the material facts alleged by one party, which are directly admitted by the opposite party, or indirectly admitted by making a traverse on some other facts, if the traverse is found against the party making it. But the statements of a party in a declaration or a plea, though for the purposes of the cause he is bound by those that are material, ought not, it should seem, to be treated as confessions of the truth of the facts stated. Boileau v. Rutlin, 2 Ex. 665; 12 Jur. 899.

Decree and Pleadings considered.]—The verdict on issues in a suit between predecessors in title does not, in itself, create an estoppel. The decree and the pleadings must be taken into consideration. Robinson v. Duleep Singh, 48 L. J., Ch. 758; 11 Ch. D. 798; 39 L. T. 313; 27 W. R. 21—C. A.

Failure to get Interlocutory Injunction.]—The plaintiffs having failed to get an interlocutory injunction, discontinued that action, and paid the costs. Semble, that is not a res judicata, nor can it be pleaded or dealt with as res judicata. All it amounts to is, that the Vice-Chancellor did not then think that a case had been made out for the interference of the court upon interlocutory application. Massam v. Thorley's Cattle Food Co., 14 Ch. D. 748; 42 L. T. 851; 28 W. R. 966.

Grounds of Decision.]—A judgment is not only conclusive with reference to the actual matter decided, but also with reference to the grounds of the decision, provided that the grounds of the decision can be clearly discovered from the judgment itself. Bank of Hindustan, China, and Japan, In re, Alison's Case, 43 L. J., Ch. 1; L. R. 9 Ch. 1; 29 L. T. 524; 22 W. R. 113.

An estoppel by record is not of any matter incidentally cognisable, nor of any matter to be inferred by argument from the judgment. Much less, therefore, is either side estopped by the reasons which the judge assigns for the conclusion that he comes to. It is the conclusion that constitutes the estoppel. Allsop and Joy, In re, 61 L. T. 213.

A., tenant in tail in remainder, mortgaged the estate by demise to B. for ninety-nine years, if A. should so long live. A. next, by deed not inrolled, conveyed to X. and Y., their heirs and assigns, by way of security. Some time afterwards, in 1849, A., with the consent of the protector, disentailed the estate, and as part of the same transaction and for valuable consideration, the estate was by a separate deed settled (subject to the prior life estate) to the use of A. for life, remainder to W. in fee, W. covenanting to pay B.'s mortgage. A. next, suppressing all the above transactions except the security to X. and Y., borrowed money from C., who paid off X. and Y., and the estate was conveyed to him by A., X. and Y., by way of security, the deed being inrolled as a disentailing assurance. W. afterwards, without notice of C.'s security, bought A.'s life estate and took a transfer of B.'s security to a trustee for himself. C. filed a bill against W., alleging that the deed of 1849 had the effect of enlarging the estate of X. and Y. into an absolute fee, which was now vested in C., and that the settlement of 1849, so far as it was for the benefit of W., was voluntary and void as against C., and that B's security was merged, and C. the first incumbrancer; and by his bill C. offered to redeem if the court should hold B.'s security still subsisting and prior to his. This bill was dismissed at the hearing, A. being still living. After the death of A., W. filed his bill for an injunction to restrain C. from bringing ejectment, on the ground that the order of dismissal had determined the right of W. to the estate:—Held, that such bill could not be sustained, for that the order of dismissal in the former suit could only have proceeded on the ground that there was no equity to deprive W. of the benefit of the term of ninety-nine years, determinable on the death of A., which was vested in his trustee, and did not decide who was the rightful owner of the estate. Waine v. Crocker, 3 De G. F. & J. 421; 31 L. J., Ch. 285; 5 L. T. 702; 10 W. R. 204. And see South American and Mexican Co., In re, Bank of England, Ex parte, col. 362.

Judgment-roll erroneously made up—Estoppel in Subsequent Proceedings — Injunction.]—Where the judgment-roll in an action, as made up, does not accurately represent that which really was found at the trial, a court of equity ought not, in a subsequent proceeding between the same parties, to grant the plaintiff an injunction to enforce a right which was not established by any finding of the jury in the former proceedings notwithstanding what appears on the face of the judgment-roll. Want v. Moss, 70 L. T. 178—P. C.

Point actually Decided though not then in Issue.]—A judgment concludes not merely as to the point actually decided, but as to a matter which it was necessary to decide, and which was actually decided as to the groundwork of the decision itself, though not then directly the point at issue. Reg. v. Hartington Middle Quarter (Township), 4 El. & Bl. 780; 3 C. L. R. 554; 24 L. J., M. C. 98; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 586; 3 W. R. 285.

Fact distinctly put in Issue.]—If a verdict is found on any fact or title distinctly put in issue in an action, such verdict may be pleaded by way of estoppel in another action between the same parties or their privies, in respect of the same fact or title. Outram v. Morewood, 3 East, 346; 7 R. R. 473. S. P., Strutt v. Bovingdon, 5 Esp. 58; 8 R. R. 834.

When an allegation of a matter of fact has been once fairly investigated between the litigating parties, before a competent judicature, the unsuccessful party not having been taken by surprise, nor being able to allege mistake, accident or any subsequent discovery of a material kind, the investigation should be considered sufficient, and the judgment thereupon conclusive as between those parties. Waters v. Waters, 2 De G. & Sm. 591.

When issues have been directed in a suit between the parties' predecessors in title, the findings upon the issues will not alone create an estoppel, but must be considered in connection with the order directing the issues and the decree made upon the findings. Robinson v. Duleep Singh, 48 L. J., Ch. 758; 11 Ch. D. 798; 39 L. T. 313; 27 W. R. 21.

To an action on a deed, whereby the defendant covenanted to pay 600*l.* with interest, on a certain day, the defendant pleaded, by way of estoppel, that the plaintiff had impleaded him in a former action on a bond, conditioned in the penal sum of 1,200*l.* for payment of 600*l.* and interest, being the same principal sum and interest as were secured to the plaintiff by a deed of even date with the bond; in which action the defendant pleaded an usurious agreement made between the plaintiff and himself, and averred that the bond was given in pursuance of the agreement. The plaintiff traversed the latter allegation; and thereupon issue was joined, and found for the defendant. The plea then alleged the identity of the deed in this and in the former action mentioned, and of the 600*l.* and interest in this and the former action mentioned:—Held, no estoppel, inasmuch as the existence of an usurious agreement was not directly in issue in the former action, but only the question, whether the bond was given in pursuance of the agreement alleged in the plea; and that the admission of the usurious agreement on the record in that action was not sufficient to estop the plaintiff from contesting it in this action. Carter v. James, 13 M. & W. 137; 2 D. & L. 236; 13 L. J., Ex. 373; 8 Jur. 912.

A plaintiff discounted for the defendant a bill for 250*l.*, drawn by the latter upon A., the defendant and A. at the same time signing the following memorandum, addressed to the plaintiff: "Sir,—In consideration of your discounting the undermentioned bill, we do hereby, jointly and severally, undertake, if the same is not wholly paid at maturity, to pay as interest thereon, 20*l.* for each month, any portion of which shall have elapsed after maturity of the bill, and until the same is wholly paid and satisfied." At the foot of this memorandum was written, "250*l.*, Jennings on A., at three months." The bill not having been paid at maturity, the plaintiff sued the defendant thereon, claiming by the particulars indorsed on the writ, interest at the rate of 20*l.* per month, as per agreement, but declaring only on the bill, and obtained a verdict and judgment thereon. The plaintiff afterwards brought another action against the defendant, upon the agreement for the stipulated interest of 20*l.* per month :—Held, that the former judgment was no answer to the claim for interest accruing before such judgment, but that the plaintiff was not entitled to recover in the second action interest accruing since the judgment. Florence v. Jennings, 22 C. B. (N.S.) 454 ; 26 L. J., C. P. 274 ; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 772.

Meaning of Doctrine as to Res Judicata.]—The doctrine of res judicata does not apply only where there is a record. It is one of the most fundamental doctrines of all courts that there must be an end to litigation, and that the parties have no right of their own accord after having tried a question between them and obtained a decision of the court, to start that litigation over again on precisely the same questions. Per Lord Esher, M.R. May, In re, House, Ex parte, 54 L. J., Ch. 338 ; 28 Ch. D. 518 ; 52 L. T. 79 ; 33 W. R. 917.

Same Litigant setting up opposite Constructions of Deed.]—Where a litigant has obtained the decision of the court on the construction of a deed in his favour, he cannot ask the court in a subsequent action to put an opposite construction on the same deed. Gandy v. Gandy, 54 L. J., Ch. 1154 ; 30 Ch. D. 57 ; 53 L. T. 306 ; 33 W. R. 803—C. A. See also Roe v. Mutual Loan Fund Association, 56 L. J., Q. B. 541 ; 19 Q. B. D. 347 ; 35 W. R. 723—C. A.

Same matter in Issue—Forgery of Will—Revocation of Probate.]—In an action in the Probate Division, T. and G. propounded an earlier, and P. a later will. The action was compromised, and by consent verdict and judgment were taken for establishing the earlier will. Subsequently P. discovered that the earlier will was a forgery, and in an action in the Chancery Division, to which T. and G. were parties, obtained a verdict of a jury to that effect, and judgment that the compromise should be set aside. In another action in the Probate Division for revocation of the probate of the earlier will :—Held, that T. and G. were estopped from denying the forgery. Priestman v. Thomas, 53 L. J., P. 109 ; 9 P. D. 210 ; 51 L. T. 843 ; 32 W. R. 842—C. A.

Demand Substantially the same.]—A judgment recovered is a bar in another action, even of a different nature, if the demand in each action is substantially the same : and it is so, if the whole amount sought to be recovered in the second action was or might have been recovered in the first, even although the second action is against a different defendant, and is founded on a different matter of fact. And it makes no distinction that the sum sought in the second action is for a larger sum than was recovered in the first : and the former recovery is a good bar even to the difference. Buckland v. Johnson, 15 C. B. 145 ; 2 C. L. R. 704 ; 23 L. J., C. P. 204 ; 18 Jur. 775 ; 2 W. R. 565.

So judgment recovered, though without satisfaction, against one, in an action for a conversion of goods by wrongfully selling, is a bar to an action for money had and received, against another, for the proceeds of the same sale, whether he is a party to the conversion or a stranger. Ib. And see Bowden v. Beauchamp, 2 Atk. 82.

Main Object of Second Bill Different.]—Plea of decree, dismissing a former bill, overruled, on the ground, that although the new bill in part prayed the same relief, yet that its main object must be taken to be different. Rattenbury v. Fenton, Coop. t. Brougham, 60. Moore v. Battie, Ambl. 372 ; 1 Eden, 273.

New Bill brought in different Right.]—Plea of bill being for same matter overruled, where the last was brought in a different right. Higgins v. York Building Co., 2 Atk. 44 ; Barnard, 83.

Consent Judgment—No Examination by Court.]—A decree obtained by arrangement between the contending parties, the court bestowing no judicial examination on the merits of the question can never be res judicata. Jenkins v. Robertson, L. R. 1 H. L. Sc. 117.

—— Estoppel inter partes—Company—Winding-up.]—A judgment by consent operates as an estoppel inter partes as much as a judgment which has been arrived at by the court after exercising its mind on the matters in controversy. Where a judgment by consent for a sum of money proceeds on the ground that an agreement, under which the money was payable, was a valid one, the parties to the judgment are estopped from disputing the validity of the agreement. South American and Mexican Co., In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 189 ; [1895] 1 Ch. 37 ; 12 R. 1 ; 71 L. T. 594 ; 43 W. R. 131—C. A.

And see Ribble Joint Committee v. Croston Urban Council, 66 L. J., Q. B. 384 ; [1897] 1 Q. B. 251 ; 45 W. R. 348.

Judgment against two of three Joint Debtors.]—An action, and a judgment against two persons who had borrowed money from the plaintiffs (though the judgment is unsatisfied), constitute a bar to another action brought by the same plaintiffs against a third person, who is afterwards discovered to have been really interested, as a partner, with the two debtors in the business for the purposes of which the money had been borrowed. King v. Hoare (13 M. & W. 494) adopted. Kendall v. Hamilton, 4 App. Cas. 504 ; 48 L. J., C. P. 705 ; 41 L. T. 418 ; 28 W. R. 97.

Technical Defect.]—A. brought an action for an attorney's bill against B., but only recovered a small sum for money lent, as there had been no bill delivered :—Held, that A. might recover the amount of the attorney's bill in another action, brought after the bill was delivered, although this was a part of his demand in the first action ; and that it was not necessary that he should have been nonsuited in the first action to entitle him to bring the second. Heming v. Wilton, 5 Car. & P. 54.

Improper Direction to Jury.]—In an action for malicious prosecution for larceny, the defendant pleaded that the plaintiff before action sued him for assault and imprisonment upon a false and unreasonable assertion that he the plaintiff had committed felony ; that the defendant pleaded in that action not guilty, and a justification that the plaintiff had committed felony, and that at the trial the judge directed the jury to consider whether the defendant had falsely and maliciously and without reasonable or probable cause charged the plaintiff with the felony ; that the jury found for the plaintiff, and assessed damages accordingly, and that the plaintiff afterwards recovered judgment upon the verdict, with costs :—Held, that the direction to the jury in the former action was improper, and that the facts pleaded afforded no answer to the action. Guest v. Warren, 9 Ex. 379; 2 C. L. R. 979; 23 L. J., Ex. 121; 18 Jur. 133; 2 W. R. 159.

Pleading Matters not Raised in Previous Action.]—A defendant, by allowing judgment to go by default in an action to which he has a good defence, is not estopped from pleading such defence in a subsequent action against him by the same plaintiff, if such defence is not inconsistent with any traversable averment in the declaration in the former action. Howlett v. Tarte, 10 C. B. (N.S.) 813; 31 L. J., C. P. 146; 9 W. R. 868.

Therefore where, in an action in which judgment by default was obtained, the declaration was for nonpayment of rent which had accrued due under an agreement to grant a lease, and the plaintiff, in a subsequent action, sued the defendant for further rent under the agreement, he is not estopped from pleading in such action that a yearly tenancy had, by agreement between the parties, been substituted for the defendant's interest under the agreement declared on, and that such yearly tenancy had been duly put an end to before the accruing of the cause of action. Ib.

If, when a plaintiff could reply an avoidance of the release, instead of doing so, he confesses such plea and receives the costs of the cause up to the time of pleading such plea, as he is entitled to do by rules 22 and 23, Reg. Gen., T. T. 1853, he is estopped from bringing any fresh action for any claim which he might have thus set up in the first action; for the effect of such confession is not that of a mere nolle prosequi, but of a final judgment for the defendant. Newington v. Levy, 39 L. J., C. P. 334; L. R. 5 C. P. 607; 23 L. T. 70; 18 W. R. 1198. Affirmed on appeal, 40 L. J., C. P. 29; L. R. 6 C. P. 180; 23 L. T. 595; 19 W. R. 473—Ex. Ch.

New Charges of Fraud.]—For the purpose of having a contract of sale of a concession set aside on the ground of fraud, and repayment of the purchase-money, 65,000*l.* with interest, a company filed a bill of complaint in the English Court of Chancery. At the same time it lodged a claim to be ranked, for the same sum, upon the estates of a firm carrying on business in Edinburgh and London, which had been sequestrated in Scotland. In the claim, the company described the debt as owing under the circumstances set out at length in the bill in chancery "produced and held as repeated brevitatis causâ." To the chancery suit the trustee of sequestrated estates was a party. The trustee having rejected the claim, the Lord Ordinary ordered a condescendance and proof. The proof was adduced on the 16th of June, 1874. The Court of Session, and ultimately the House of Lords, held that the claimants were not entitled to the debt claimed against the sequestrated estates, and refused to sist the proceedings in the sequestration pending the issue of the chancery suit (1 App. Cas. 780). The bill in chancery as filed alleged certain indicia of fraud. Afterwards additional evidence of fraud was discovered, in time to have it inserted by way of amendment. The bill was finally amended on the 3rd of March, 1874. Subsequently a decree was made by the Vice-Chancellor and affirmed by the Court of Appeal rescinding the contract, and ordering repayment of the 65,000*l.*; and a declaration was added, that plaintiff company should be at liberty to prove in the sequestration suit in Scotland for the 65,000*l.* (L. R. 5 Ch. D. 394). Founding on this decree the company lodged another claim with the trustee in Scotland. Again the trustee rejected the claim; and again a condescendance was made up. The company this time put its claim upon the allegations contained in the bill in chancery as finally amended on the 3rd of March, 1874. The trustee relied on the plea of res judicata:—Held, that the plea of res judicata prevailed, because (1) the new allegations of fraud in the amended bill in chancery did not constitute a new medium concludendi; (2) the alleged facts were within the knowledge of the claimants before the proof was adduced in the former action, and might have been inserted by amendment in their closed record in Scotland. Phosphate Sewage Co. v. Molleson, 4 App. Cas. 801.

Held, also, that no question arose as to the validity, or examinability, of a foreign judgment. Ib.

Semble, a party who has been unsuccessful cannot be allowed to reopen the litigation merely by saying, since the former litigation there is another fact, going exactly in the same direction with the facts stated before, and leading up to the same relief asked for before, but it being in addition to those facts, it ought now to be allowed to be the foundation of a new litigation, and he should be allowed to commence a new litigation merely upon the allegation of this additional fact. The only way on which that could possibly be admitted would be if the litigant were prepared to say—"I will shew you that this is a fact which entirely changes the aspect of the case, and further I will shew you that it was not and could not by reasonable diligence be obtained by me before." Ib.

New Facts brought before the Court.]—In determining whether a decision of a court of competent jurisdiction operates as an estoppel, the court in a subsequent case is entitled to consider what facts were before the court in the former case, and to give effect to any fresh facts that had subsequently taken place. Heath v Weaverham Overseers, 63 L. J., M. C. 187; [1894] 2 Q. B. 108; 10 R. 274; 70 L. T. 729; 42 W. R. 478; 58 J. P. 557.

Where Judgment stands it cannot be impeached by subsequent Action.]—A judgment which has been regularly and in good faith signed, though for an amount greater than is actually due, although it is afterwards set aside, furnishes a defence to an action brought against the party who causes the defendant to be arrested under a ca. sa. sued out upon it. Secus, if the judgment has been signed irregularly or in bad faith. Smith v. Sydney, 39 L. J., Q. B. 144; L. R. 5 Q. B. 208; 22 L. T. 16; 18 W. R. 628.

In order to determine whether the party who causes the arrest is a wrongdoer, the court will look and see what were the grounds on which the judgment was set aside. Action for false imprisonment. Plea, a justification under a ca. sa. upon a judgment for 34*l.* 9*s.* Replication, that the judgment was irregularly signed for 34*l.* 9*s.*, there being only 16*l.* 1*s.* due, as the parties who sued out the ca. sa. well knew, and that for that cause it was set aside by the master, and the money paid in excess of the amount due ordered to be repaid. Rejoinder, that the judgment was regularly signed on the non-appearance of the defendant to a writ specially indorsed, and was not set aside for irregularity:—Held, that the judgment having been regularly signed, and not having been set aside for bad faith, an action could not be maintained against the defendant, who had caused the plaintiff to be arrested under the ca. sa. issued upon it. Ib.

Finding not Necessary—Decision—Domicil of Testator.]—A native of Chili made his will in London and died. A caveat having been entered on behalf of his daughter, the executors propounded the will in solemn form, alleging that the testator was domiciled in England. The daughter pleaded that the deceased was at the date of the will and until his death domiciled in Chili, and that the will was not duly executed according to the law of Chili. Upon this plea (inter alia) the executors took issue. The judge of the Probate Court made a decree by which he pronounced for the validity of the will, found that the deceased was at the date of the will and at his death a domiciled Englishman, and decreed probate to the executors. The daughter afterwards filed a bill against the executors, alleging that the testator was a domiciled Chilian, that his will being executed in England according to English law was good by the law of Chili, but so far only as the testator could by the law of Chili dispose by will of one-fourth of his personal estate, and that the other three-fourths belonged to the daughter. The executors by answer set up the decree of the Probate Court as a bar. An order having been made for inquiry as to the testator's domicil, in an administration suit under circumstances (which it was contended) made it equivalent to an order in the suit by the daughter against the executors, the question whether the order was right was litigated between the daughter and the residuary legatee:—Held, that the decree of the Probate Court was not conclusive in rem as to the domicil, because the finding as to the domicil was not necessary to the decree:—Held, also, that for the same reason the decree of the Probate Court was not conclusive inter partes as to the domicil, as between the daughter and the residuary legatee, for the executors could not, by litigating in the probate suit a question of domicil which it was not necessary to decide for the purposes of that suit, conclude the residuary legatee as to the testator's power of disposing of his property, and that as the residuary legatee was not bound, the daughter could not be bound, since estoppel must be mutual. Concha v. Concha, 56 L. J., Ch. 257; 11 App. Cas. 541; 55 L. T. 522; 35 W. R. 477—H. L. (E.)

Action for Rectification of Agreement already construed by Court.]—C. built a ship for B., and a considerable sum remained due to them, for which they had a lien on the ship. M. had made advances to B. An agreement was made between the three parties for sale of the ship by C., and for the distribution of the proceeds. The agreement was very obscure, and left it doubtful in what order the claims of C. and of M. were to be paid. After the sale M. sued C. for an account of the proceeds, and judgment was given in the Court of the County Palatine for carrying into execution the trusts of the agreement, and for the requisite account. On taking the account before the registrar, C. claimed to be allowed his debt, but the registrar held that M. had priority. The proceeds were amply sufficient to pay M.'s claim, but not C.'s also. The vice-chancellor affirmed the view of the registrar, and made an order for C. to pay M.'s claim. C. appealed, but the appeal was dismissed, and the money was paid to M. After this C. brought an action to rectify the agreement by making it provide that C.'s claim should have priority over that of M. M. pleaded that the agreement having been executed, and the money paid under the order of the Palatine Court, C. was not entitled to any relief:—Held, on appeal, that the action must be dismissed, for that although the question of rectification not having been before the Palatine Court, there was no res judicata, C. could not come to have the agreement rectified after it had been worked out, and the fund distributed, under the order of the court in the Palatine action. Caird v. Moss, 55 L. J., Ch. 854; 33 Ch. D. 22; 55 L. T. 453; 35 W. R. 52; 5 Asp. M. C. 565—C. A.

Proof that Actions are the same—Pleadings.]—In order to raise the defence of res judicata it is not necessary to set forth in detail in the defence the pleadings in the other action the judgment in which is said to operate as res judicata, but, in order to judge whether the same questions were at issue in the first action as in the second, the court will look at the pleadings in the first action, though they were not set forth in the defence in the second action. Houstoun v. Sligo (Marquis), 29 Ch. D. 448; 52 L. T. 96.

Judgment in First Action pending Second Action.]—Whether a judgment obtained in one action before the trial of another can operate by way of estoppel as res judicata, unless the judgment was obtained before the issue of the writ in the second action, quære. Ib.

Judgment against Agent set aside—Action against Principal.]—The plaintiff had supplied goods, on K.'s order, to a theatre, and had obtained judgment against K. for the price. Whilst the judgment was still standing the plaintiff commenced an action against the lessee of the theatre for the price of the same goods. The lessee objected that the matter was res judicata. The judgment against K. was set aside before the hearing of an appeal to the Divisional Court:—Held, that as the judgment had been set aside, the action was rightly brought against the lessee. Partington v. Hawthorne, 52 J. P. 807.

Judgment for one of several Demands.]—Though an action be brought for several demands, and a judgment for one only, it is as much a judgment as if there had been a particular determination on each. Gregory v. Molesworth, 3 Atk. 627.

Purchaser—Previous Suit—Determination as to Title.]—Where a purchaser pleads a former suit, he must shew it was res judicata, and absolutely determined by the court that plaintiff had no title. Brandlyn v. Ord, 1 Atk. 571.

A bill, dropped for want of prosecution, cannot be pleaded as a decree of dismission. Ib.

Matters subsequently arising.]—A record works an estoppel only as to those matters capable of being controverted between the parties at the time of the proceedings in the action; and therefore, although a deed may have been proved to be valid in one action, yet it may be shewn in a subsequent suit to have become invalid, if the circumstances avoiding it have happened after the determination of the earlier

To a declaration on a bill of exchange by the plaintiff, as indorsee, the defendant, the acceptor, pleaded by way of estoppel, setting out the proceedings in a former action by the plaintiff upon the same bill of exchange, in which former action the defendant had pleaded to the further maintenance a composition deed executed after action, by which the defendant's creditors, including the plaintiff, agreed to release him from their debts in consideration of his agreement to pay a composition by two instalments, with a proviso that, on default in payment of the composition, the release was to become null and void. The plea then set forth that the plaintiff had replied to such plea in the first action the nonpayment of the first instalment under the deed, and that the defendant had rejoined, on equitable grounds, a mistake in nonpayment on the proper day and a subsequent tender; that, thereupon, the plaintiff struck out the replication, confessed the plea, and taxed his costs under the rule of Trinity Term, 1853, which were paid, and that such determination of the first action estopped the plaintiff from bringing the present action. Replication, that after the proceedings in the first action, and before the present action, a second instalment under the deed became payable; that the defendant had made default in payment of it, and that thereby the release in the deed became null and void:—Held, that the replication was good. Ib.

On the 24th of March an application to commit a person for contempt was made and refused on the ground of privilege as a member of parliament:—Held, that this refusal was no bar to an application on the 15th of April after the privilege had expired. Anglo-French Co-operative Society, In re, 49 L. J., Ch. 388; 14 Ch. D. 533; 28 W. R. 580.

The plaintiffs having failed to get an interlocutory injunction, discontinued that action, and paid the costs. That is not a res judicata, nor can it be pleaded or dealt with as res judicata. All it amounts to is, that the vice-chancellor did not then think that a case had been made out for the interference of the court upon interlocutory application. Per James, L.J. Massam v. Thorley's Cattle Food Co., 14 Ch. D. 748; 42 L. T. 851; 28 W. R. 966—C. A.

Relief Claimed Omitted in Former Decree.]—If a case is made for a bill for specific relief, and proof gone into by the parties in respect of it, and the right to it is a question which is fairly raised and may properly be decided at the hearing, and if a decree is pronounced in which no notice is taken of this portion of the case, while relief is given in respect of other matters in controversy, then, in a suit subsequently instituted to obtain the relief so omitted, it must be assumed that the claim to it in the former suit was either waived by the plaintiff at the hearing or refused by the court. Blake v. O'Kelly, Ir. R. 9 Eq. 54.

B.'s executors filed a bill against K., as executor de son tort, for an administration of B.'s personal estate, raising issues as to the validity of the transfer of a sum in bank stock from B.'s name to the joint names of B. and K., and also as to B.'s mental capacity at the time of the transfer. At the hearing it was objected that relief of such a nature could not be given, and an ordinary decree for administration was pronounced. B.'s executor subsequently filed a bill raising the same issues, and also impeaching a second transfer from B. to B. and K., and praying that both transfers should be declared null and void:—Held, that the former suit or decree did not bar the relief sought for. Ib.

Matter must be Adjudicated on.]—It was agreed between A. and B. (partners), that the former should relinquish to the latter his share of the business; B. agreeing to give A. a promissory note, payable by instalments; and in case a mortgage on property of A.'s should be called in before the note should be fully paid, to pay the whole amount which should remain due, or provide a fresh mortgage. A. (after the mortgagee had given notice to redeem the mortgage) sued B. upon this agreement, alleging for breach the nondelivery of the note. This cause was terminated by a judge's order, directing a certain note and securities to be given. A. afterwards brought a second action upon the agreement, alleging for breach damages resulting from the calling in of the mortgage:—Held, that a plea setting up the recovery in the former action afforded no answer, such former action being brought in respect of a different breach. Bristowe v. Fairclough, 1 Scott (N.R.) 161; 1 Man. & G. 143; 9 L. J., C. P. 245.

The having included a demand in a declaration for another cause of action, to which the evidence was confined on a writ of inquiry, and on which only the verdict was taken, will not prevent the plaintiff from bringing another action for the demand to which the evidence and verdict did not apply. Seddon v. Tutop, 6 Term Rep. 607; 1 Esp. 401; 3 R. R. 274.

It is no bar to an action for goods sold that the plaintiff had, in a previous action, recovered one demand from the same defendant, and in which he might have recovered the present demand, but it was not made a subject of inquiry in the first action. Ib.

Aliter, if the present demand had been inquired into in the former action. Ib.

A testator directed his trustees to hold certain real and residuary personal estate upon trust, to pay thereout to his widow for life such an annual sum as, together with the income of a settled fund of 10,000*l.*, "shall produce to her a clear annual income of 1,500*l.*," and declared that "no deduction shall be made from any of the legacies given by this my will for the legacy tax, or any other matter, cause or thing whatsoever." The testator's estate had been administered by the court, and by orders made in 1861 and 1863, the trustees had been directed to pay the annuity to the widow during her life, or until further order, free of all deductions except income tax. On petition by the widow, in 1882, that the income tax, which had been deducted from her annuity during the previous years, might be repaid to her out of the testator's estate:—Held, that the orders of 1861 and 1863 were final as to the rights of the parties, and could not now be reconsidered. Peareth v. Marriott, 52 L. J., Ch. 221; 22 Ch. D. 182; 48 L. T. 170; 31 W. R. 68—C. A.

Justices made an order in bastardy, directing the putative father to pay until the mother married, and the father accordingly made payments, some of which were made within a year from the birth. Afterwards the mother married, but her husband died, and thereupon on her application justices made a second order on the putative father to pay:—Held, that the matter was res judicata, and therefore the order was invalid. Williams v. Davies. 52 L. J., M. C. 87; 11 Q. B. D. 74; 47 J. P. 581.

Conditions of sale represented that a deed under which C. claimed an interest in the estate was a forgery, and that the vendor had made his affidavit to that effect, and that the purchaser therefore should not take any objections to the title by reason of the deed. The purchaser afterwards refused to complete the purchase, brought an action for his deposit, and obtained a verdict, the jury declaring the deed to be genuine. In this state of circumstances, it was held by a court of law that the purchaser was precluded from rescinding the contract on the ground that the statement of the vendor turned out to be untrue; and by a court of equity, that the vendor in case he could make a good title in other respects was entitled to a decree for specific performance. Cattell v. Corrall, 3 Y. & C. 413. S. C., Corrall v. Cattell, 4 M. & W. 734; 8 L. J., Ex. 225.

The plaintiff, a sheriff, levied upon goods in the possession of the defendants, who were agents for their sale, and who proceeded with the sale which had then been advertised. The defendants, by inadvertence, failed to appear upon an interpleader summons taken out by the sheriff in the action concerning which he was obeying the writ of fi. fa., and the defendants were barred. They subsequently attempted to rescind the order, but failed, and their appeal to the court was also dismissed. This action was brought to recover the proceeds of the sale:—Held, that the defendants could not set up as a defence to the action the facts by which they claimed to be entitled to the goods upon which the sheriff had levied. Williams v. Richardson, 36 L. T. 505.

I cannot imagine anything more unsafe than to attempt to cut down the effect of judgments distinct and absolute on the face of them, on a surmise that the case was imperfectly considered or that the court had not proper materials for a judgment. Especially does it appear to me unsafe to enter on such speculations after the lapse of nearly a century, when every source of information except what is written in the judgment, has been dried up by lapse of time. Per Cairns, L.C. Dundas v. Waddell, 5 App. Cas. 263.

In an action by A. against B. for breaking and entering A.'s land, and building thereon a wall and a cornice, the issue on the plea of liberum tenementum was found in B.'s favour. In a subsequent action by B.'s devisees against A. and his wife, the plaintiffs declared for an injury to their reversion by the wife in pulling down part of a wall and a cornice built on land in the occupation of the plaintiff's tenant, and described as in the former action. The defendants denied that the reversion was the plaintiffs'. At the trial, the plaintiffs having put the record of the former action in evidence, the defendants admitted that the wife had no title but her husband's, but proposed to shew that in the former action the land overhung by the cornice was not in litigation:—Held, first, that the plaintiffs could not have replied to the plea by way of estoppel. Whittaker v. Jackson, 2 H. & C. 926; 33 L. J., Ex. 181; 11 L. T. 155.

Held, secondly, that the record was conclusive as to the title to the land overhung by the cornice at the period to which the plea of liberum tenementum referred, and that the evidence tendered was rejected rightly. Ib.

A declaration stated that A. had in a former action issued a writ of summons against H., specially indorsed for 28*l.*, and that, although H. paid 10*l.* before judgment, thereby reducing the debt to a sum under 20*l.*, A. maliciously, and without reasonable or probable cause, signed judgment for 28*l.* and costs (as appeared by the then record), and issued a ca. sa. and arrested him, and compelled him to pay 35*l.*:—Held, that while the judgment in the former action subsisted in its entirety, no averment by either party could be admitted to controvert it; and that, therefore, H. could not maintain this action against A. Huffer v. Allen, 4 H. & C. 634; 36 L. J., Ex. 17; L. R. 2 Ex. 15; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 930; 15 L. T. 225; 15 W. R. 281.

Judgment not to be Varied by Evidence in Second Action.]—A record, as evidence only of what is in issue and appears on the record, ought to be conclusive of the matter; therefore evidence is not admissible to shew that any matter occurred at the trial not appearing on the face of the record. Sintzenick v. Lucas, 1 Esp. 44.

In an action of ejectment the defendant, in order to shew a surrender, by operation of law, of a tenancy, previously subsisting in the plaintiff, proposed to give parol evidence that a previous action between the same parties, but not affecting the land, had been compromised by their counsel:—Held, that as the postea in the former action contained nothing from which it could be inferred that the verdict in that action had been taken by consent, no foundation was laid for the reception of such evidence as explanatory of the record; and that the evidence tended to contradict the record, and was inadmissible. Keane v. O'Brien, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 531.

Validity of Rule or Order.]—A party who has accepted costs under a judge's order cannot subsequently question the validity of the order. Tinkler v. Hilder, 7 D. & L. 61; 4 Ex. 187; 18 L. J., Ex. 429; 13 Jur. 684.

Action for breaking and entering the plaintiff's house and seizing his goods. Plea, that the defendant brought an action against the plaintiff, which was referred to arbitration by an agreement, afterwards made a rule of court; that the arbitrator awarded a certain sum to be due to the defendant, and ordered the plaintiff to pay it on a certain day, which he refusing to do, the defendant issued a fi. fa., and levied on the plaintiff's goods. Replication, that, by a rule of court, it was ordered, that the writ should be set aside for irregularity. Rejoinder (by way of estoppel), that after the making of that rule of court, the plaintiff ruled the sheriff to return the fi. fa.:—Held, that the replication was good, and that it was unnecessary to aver that the rule of court was acted on. Jones v. Williams, 8 M. & W. 349; 9 D. P. C. 702; 10 L. J., Ex. 253; 5 Jur. 895.

Held, also, that the plaintiff, by ruling the sheriff to return the writ, was not estopped from shewing that it was not a good writ, and, therefore, that the rejoinder was bad. Ib.

Fraud—Plea of Decree.]—On suggestion of a gross fraud, the court will, upon an original bill, overrule a plea of a decree, and a report made and confirmed thereon, if the suggestion of fraud be not denied. Lloyd v. Mansell, 2 P. W. 73.

Onus of shewing Res judicata.]—Where defendant pleads former suit, it must be shewn that it was res judicata. Brandlyn v. Ord, 1 Atk. 571.

2. In What Cases.

Breach of Agreement.]—The dismissal of a bill to restrain breaches of an agreement is no bar to the institution of a fresh suit for the same purpose, unless either the dismissal was for want of equity, or the facts alleged and proved in the first suit were the same as those on which the second suit is founded. Moss v. Anglo-Egyptian Navigation Co., 35 L. J., Ch. 179; L. R. 1 Ch. 108; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 13; 14 W. R. 150.

Dismissal—Want of Prosecution—Effect of.]—Dismission of a bill for non-prosecution is no bar to a new suit. It amounts to nothing. It has no effect even on the running of time. But a bill dismissed by defendants after publication passed, is different from a bill dismissed for non-prosecution. Byrne v. Frere, 1 Moll. 157.

A bill dropped for want of prosecution cannot be pleaded as a decree of dismission. Brandlyn v. Ord, 1 Atk. 517.

—— Consent Order.]—An order by consent, in the absence of an agreement to compromise the cause of action, to dismiss an action for want of prosecution, is no bar to the institution of a fresh action. In this respect the practice of the old Court of Chancery remains unchanged. Magnus v. National Bank of Scotland, 57 L. J., Ch. 902; 58 L. T. 617; 36 W. R. 602.

The plaintiffs in an action, wherein the same parties were respectively plaintiffs and defendants, and the same relief was sought as in the present action, had paid the defendants' costs and consented to an order, made on summons taken out by the defendants, dismissing the action for want of prosecution. The plaintiffs subsequently brought the present action, whereupon the defendants moved that the question of law might first be tried whether the plaintiffs were not estopped from bringing the present action by reason of the consent order made in the previous action:—Held, that the motion must be dismissed. Ib.

The dismissal of a bill by consent, as well as adversely, is a bar to a second suit for the same object, and the defendant may avail himself of this defence by a motion to stay proceedings, or, semble, by a motion to take the bill off the file. Parker v. Simpson, 18 W. R. 204. And see col. 368.

—— On Merits.]—When a bill is dismissed on the merits, the insertion of a clause that the dismissal shall be without prejudice to any question but that specifically put in issue by the pleadings, is superfluous; for the dismissal of the bill without such reservation would only be a bar as to matters in issue in that suit between the same parties, and the court has no power to interfere with the effect which such a decree may have as a matter of evidence in any future proceeding in which it might without such reservation be legitimately used as evidence. Rochester Corporation v. Lee, 1 Macn. & G. 467.

—— Different State of Circumstances.]—The dismissal of a bill does not prejudice the right to file another for the same purpose under a different state of circumstances. Liverpool Corporation v. Chorley Waterworks Co., 2 De G. M. & G. 852.

Plea of decree, dismissing a former bill, overruled, on the ground, that although the new bill in part prayed the same relief, yet that its main object must be taken to be different. Rattenbury v. Fenton, Coop. t. Brough. 60.

A plea of a former decree overruled, the same matter not being in issue in the former suit. Moore v. Battie, Ambl. 372; 1 Eden, 273.

—— Want of Evidence.]—Plea of a former suit and decree signed and inrolled in the Court of Chancery, in respect to the same matters, allowed, though the bill in the Court of Chancery was dismissed, not on the merits, but for want of evidence. Jones v. Nixon, Younge, 359.

—— Without Prejudice.]—The dismission of a suit without prejudice, either in law or equity, is no bar to a suit for same matter in another court. Seymour v. Nosworthy, 1 Ch. Ca. 155.

Reasons for not declaring the dismissal of the bill to be without prejudice to another suit. Gloucester Corporation v. Wood, 3 Hare, 148.

—— Decree not Inrolled.]—A decree of dismission may be pleaded in bar to a new bill, though it is not signed and inrolled. Prettyman v. Prettyman, 1 Vern. 310. But see Kinsey v. Kinsey, 2 Ves. 577; 1 Atk. 809; and Joly v. Swift, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 410.

—— Fraud.]—A plaintiff, charging fraud as to various matters, sought to set aside an order made in a former suit, in which he was likewise plaintiff, on the same ground of fraud. Three pleas were put in by different defendants pleading in bar the order sought to be impeached. A preliminary objection was taken, that the order sought to be impeached was not signed and inrolled, on the authority of Kinsey v. Kinsey, (2 Ves. 579):—Held, that that case does not apply, and objection overruled. Pearse v. Dobinson, 35 L. J., Ch. 110; 13 L. T. 519; 14 W. R. 121.

Fresh Bill en autre droit.]—Plea of bill being for same matter overruled, where the last was brought in a different right. Higgins v. York Building Co., 2 Atk. 44; Barnard, 83.

Legatee not able to Investigate Executor's Accounts in First Suit.]—Under a decree in a legatee's suit to take the usual accounts, A. B. went in and claimed the residue which the master found him entitled to, but the residue was not then ascertained, and no order was made in respect of it:—Held, that A. B. was not precluded from afterwards asking relief against the executor in respect of an alleged breach of trust in a suit of his own, he not having, in the first suit, been in a situation to investigate the accounts of the executor, or to claim the relief which he asked in the second. Guidici v. Kinton, 6 Beav. 517.

Annuity—Application to Set Aside Refused.]—The refusal of a summary application to set aside an annuity, is no objection to the same ground being taken again upon an attempt to enforce it. Bromley v. Holland, 5 Ves. 610; 7 Ves. 3; Coop. 9.

Award — Effect on Subsequent Breach.]—Where the parties to a contract have referred the question of its construction to an arbitrator, his award is conclusive evidence as to the construction in a subsequent action brought for other breaches of the same contract. Gueret v. Audouy, 62 L. J., Q. B. 633—C. A.

Assignment of Debts—Bankruptcy—Claim by Trustee — Interpleader.]—An assignee of book debts sued a debtor for the debt assigned and the assignor's trustee claimed the money; an interpleader issue was ordered, and at the trial the trustee disputed the assignment on the ground of notice of an act of bankruptcy:—Held, that after the issue was decided against the trustee, he could not set up any other ground upon which the assignment could be impeached. March, Ex parte, Hilton, In re, 67 L. T. 594; 9 Morrell, 286.

Calls—Action for—Application to place on List of Contributories.]—By the articles of association of a dairy company, it was provided that a director's qualification should be the holding in his own right of not less than ten shares. P., a medical man, not being a shareholder, was invited by the directors to take a seat at the board and the office of medical examiner, and he accepted this offer by letter, and acted as a director during a short period, but no shares were ever allotted to him. He subsequently resigned, but his resignation was declined, and an action, afterwards dismissed for want of prosecution, was brought against him to recover calls due on the qualification shares. The company having gone into liquidation:—Held, that the action for calls was no bar to the liquidator's claim to place P. on the list of contributories for the qualification shares, that his acceptance of the offer was, at the least, equivalent to an application for the shares, and that his name must be placed upon the list accordingly. Hampshire Co-operative Milk Co., In re, Purcell's Case, 29 W. R. 170.

River Pollution—Mistake as to Facts—Subsequent Proceedings to enforce Order—Consent Order.] — Where an order of a county court, good upon the face of it, declaring that a defendant has committed an offence under ss. 3 and 10 of the Rivers Pollution Prevention Act, 1876, by permitting sewage matter to flow into a river, and requiring him to construct such sewage works as may be necessary, is drawn up by consent, the defendant is estopped in a subsequent action brought to recover penalties for breach of the order from shewing that the part of the river comprised in the order was in fact tidal water, and that therefore the order with respect to such part was beyond the jurisdiction of the court, even though at the time of consenting to the order the defendant was unaware that such part of the river was in fact tidal water. Ribble Joint Committee v. Croston Urban Council, 66 L. J., Q. B. 384: [1897] 1 Q. B. 251; 45 W. R. 348. And see Goucher v. Clayton, 34 L. J., Ch. 239; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 107; 13 W. R. 336.

Damage to Person and Property— Distinct Causes of Action.]—Damage to goods, and injury to the person, although they have been occasioned by one and the same wrongful act, are infringements of different rights, and give rise to distinct causes of action; and therefore the recovery in an action for compensation for the damage to the goods is no bar to an action subsequently commenced for the injury to the person. The plaintiff brought an action in a county court for damage to his cab occasioned by the negligence of the defendant's servant, and having recovered the amount claimed, afterwards brought an action in the High Court of Justice against the defendant, claiming damages for personal injury sustained by the plaintiff through the same negligence:—Held, by Brett, M.R., and Bowen, L.J. (Lord Coleridge, C.J., dissenting), that the action in the High Court was maintainable, and was not barred by the previous proceedings in the county court. Brunsden v. Humphrey, 53 L. J., Q. B. 476; 14 Q. B. D. 141; 51 L. T. 529; 32 W. R. 944; 49 J. P. 4—C. A.

A ship, A., and her cargo, belonged to the same owners, and the plaintiffs advanced 1,000*l.* as a loan to such owners, and received as security, in conformity with the agreement made between them and the borrowers, the bill of lading, on which the master indorsed a receipt for 1,000*l.* as advanced freight, and also a policy of insurance on advanced freight. Ship A. was lost through a collision with the defendant's vessel, whose negligence was admitted. It was proved that the difference between the value of the cargo at the port of destination and at the port of loading would have considerably exceeded 1,000*l.* In an action by the holders of a bill of lading for 1,300*l.* against the defendant's ship:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the sum, and that the fact that a sum in respect of disbursements for ship A. on her voyage and wages paid in advance had been awarded to the owners of the A. by the registrar and merchants was no bar to the plaintiffs' right to recover in this action. The Thyatira, 52 L. J., P. 85; 8 P. D. 155; 49 L. T. 406; 32 W. R. 276; 5 Asp. M. C. 147.

Consignment of Goods—Separate Actions for Injuries to part of same.]—In September, 1883, the plaintiffs (a firm of millers) delivered to the defendant railway company a quantity of flour to be carried on the railway, nine sacks being consigned to D., and the remainder being consigned to the plaintiffs themselves. Some of the flour, comprising one of the sacks received by the plaintiffs and the greater portion of that delivered to D., was damaged in the carriage. D. used up two and a half sacks of the injured flour, and then he returned five sacks to the plaintiffs and claimed damages for the two and a half sacks which he had used. The plaintiffs notified to the defendants the damage sustained, and proceeded to recover damages for the injury to six sacks of the flour, but did not claim in respect of the two and a half sacks used up by D., and they obtained decree against the defendants on the 31st October, 1883. D., on the 17th December, 1883, issued a civil bill against the plaintiffs for the damage to the two and a half sacks, and obtained a decree against them on the 17th April, 1884, which was affirmed on appeal, and the amount was paid by the plaintiffs to D. The defendant railway company were served by the present plaintiffs with notice of D.'s civil bill and the appeal from the decree, and invited to attend on the hearing. The plaintiffs afterwards sued the defendant railway company by civil bill to recover the amount which they had been obliged to pay to D. for damages and costs under the decree of 19th April, 1884:—Held, that the injury to the two and a half sacks being an integral part of the cause of action arising from the defendant's negligence in the carriage of flour and for which the plaintiffs sued in the first process, the second action was not maintainable. Russell v. Waterford and Limerick Ry., 16 L. R., Ir. 314.

—— Tort not a Continuing Cause of Action.]—The plaintiff, who had obtained damages in the county court for a misrepresentation under which he had been induced to enter into a contract, brought an action in the High Court for further damages accrued since judgment in the county court:—Held, that a tort not being a continuing cause of action, no further damages could be obtained. Clarke v. Yorke, 52 L. J., Ch. 32; 47 L. T. 381; 31 W. R. 62.

Flow of Stream — Interference — Continuing Damage — Nemo bis vexari debet pro eadem causa.] — In 1887 the defendants entered upon the bed of a stream which formed the boundary between the lands of the plaintiff and of an adjoining owner, and they dug holes in, and deepened the bed of, the stream for their own purposes. The plaintiff averred that in consequence of the defendants' acts the stream flowed past his land more rapidly and at a less depth, so that the plaintiff's lands were liable to trespass of cattle. The plaintiff had brought an action against the defendants for trespass, which resulted in March, 1892, in a verdict for damages for 40*l.*, on which judgment was entered. No further acts of trespass had since been committed by the defendants. The present action was brought in November, 1892, for a continuing lowering of the stream and interference with its natural flow. At the trial the jury found for the plaintiff with 15*l.* damages, and leave was reserved to either party to apply for judgment:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to judgment. Clarke v. Midland G. W. Ry., [1895] 2 Ir. R. 294—C. A.

Joint Debt—Judgment against one Defendant—Right to proceed against other.]—On an application under Ord. XIV. r. 1, in an action against two joint debtors, one of the defendants consented to judgment being entered against him, and the other obtained leave to defend. The defendant who had consented to judgment paid the plaintiff half of the debt:—Held, that under Ord. XIV. r. 5, the plaintiff was entitled to proceed with his action against the other defendant; the principle laid down in King v. Hoare (13 M. & W. 494) and Kendall v. Hamilton (4 App. Cas. 504) not applying to such a case. Weall v. James, 68 L. T. 515; 4 R. 356—C. A.

Previous Findings of Adultery, Cruelty and Collusion—Rescission of Decree—Second Suit.]—A verdict of cruelty and adultery against a husband upon a wife's petition in the Divorce Court for dissolution of marriage, followed by a decree nisi which is afterwards rescinded on grounds dehors the verdict and wholly unconnected therewith, is conclusive evidence of the husband's guilt in a subsequent suit between the same parties, where the husband seeks similar relief against the wife. Butler v. Butler (No. 2), 63 L. J., P. 1; 1 R. 535; 69 L. T. 545; 42 W. R. 49—C. A.

On motion by the Queen's Proctor to dismiss a husband's petition for divorce on the ground that in former proceedings he had been found guilty of adultery and collusion, the court held that, although the fact of the petitioner's adultery could not be again disputed, yet it would be open to the petitioner to shew such circumstances as would get rid of its effect, and that "collusion" referred to in s. 30 of the Matrimonial Causes Act, 1857, means collusion in the suit pending. Butler v. Butler (No. 1), 62 L. J., P. 105; [1893] P. 185; 1 R. 521; 69 L. T. 54.

Nullity — Previous Marriage to Domiciled Englishman—Divorce in Scotland — Fictitious Domicil—Fraud on Scotch Courts.]—M., a domiciled Englishman, obtained a divorce in the Scotch courts on the ground of his wife's adultery with B., by fraudulent representations as to his domicil and otherwise, to which B. was a party. The wife then went through a form of marriage with B. during the lifetime of M. B. afterwards brought a suit to have such subsequent marriage declared null and void:—Held, that the Scotch divorce had not dissolved the marriage, that B. was not estopped from taking advantage of the fraud to which he was a party, and the court declared the subsequent marriage null and void. Bonaparte v. Bonaparte, 62 L. J., P. 1; [1892] P. 402; 1 R. 490; 67 L. T. 531.

Personal Earnings of Bankrupt — Judgment of County Court—Application in Bankruptcy.]—In an interpleader issue between the trustee in bankruptcy and the bankrupt, commenced in the High Court and remitted to the county court, the county court judge decided that certain royalties were in the nature of personal earnings. In a subsequent application by the trustee in the High Court, claiming to be entitled to the royalties:—Held, that the trustee was estopped from denying that the royalties when paid were in the nature of personal earnings. Graydon, In re, Official Receiver, Ex parte, 65 L. J., Q. B. 328; [1896] 1 Q. B. 417; 44 W. R. 495.

Patent Action—Dismissal—Agreement not to Appeal—Amendment of Specification — Subsequent Action.]—An action was brought by H. against S. for infringement of a patent. During the course of the trial, H. stated that he would be content with the decision of the judge on the question of disconformity between the provisional and the complete specifications. The action was dismissed on the ground that the patent was invalid for want of novelty in the invention, and also on the ground that there was disconformity between the specifications. Thereupon H. amended his complete specification to meet the objection of want of novelty, but not that of disconformity. Several years afterwards H. commenced a fresh action against S. for infringement of the patent as amended. S. then moved to dismiss the action as being frivolous and vexatious, and an abuse of the process of the court. Kekewich, J., dismissed the action on the ground that the question of the validity of the patent was res judicata by reason of the judgment in the former action. The plaintiff appealed:—Held, without deciding the point on which Kekewich, J., based his judgment, that what took place at the trial of the former action amounted to an undertaking on the part of H. that, as between himself and S., the decision of the judge on the question of disconformity should be treated as final; and that therefore, on that ground, the action should be dismissed as a vexatious proceeding. Horrocks v. Stubbs, 74 L. T. 58—C. A.

Patent—Certificate of Validity.]—On a trial for infringement of a patent the defendant contested its validity and denied infringement. The issue as to validity was found against him, and the court directed the defendant to pay the costs of that issue, and granted the plaintiff a certificate of validity. The issue of infringement was found against the plaintiff, and he was directed to pay the costs of that issue. In a second action between the same parties on the same patent:—

Held, that the defendant could not reopen the question of validity, on the ground that he had, since the first action, discovered further anticipations. Shoe Machinery Co. v. Cutlan, 65 L. J., Ch. 314; [1896] 1 Ch. 667; 74 L. T. 166.

—— Infringement—Revocation.]—A finding in an action for infringement of a patent, that is adverse to the plaintiff, is no estoppel upon him in a subsequent petition for revocation presented by the defendant in that action. Deeley's Patent, In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 480; [1895] 1 Ch. 687; 12 R. 272; 72 L. T. 702; 43 W. R. 517—C. A.

—— Validity of Patent admitted—Denial of Validity not allowed.]—In 1876 the plaintiff took out a patent for improvements in mariners' compasses, and in 1885 commenced an action against the defendant for infringement, in which action an order was made with the defendant's consent restraining him from such infringement. The defendant subsequently adopted another form of making compasses which the court held to be an infringement of the plaintiff's patent, and the plaintiff moved for an attachment for disobedience to the order of 1885:—Held, that the defendant was estopped by the order made in 1885 from denying the validity of the plaintiff's patent, that the plaintiff was entitled to the relief sought, and that a fresh action was not necessary. Thomson v. Moore, 23 L. R., Ir. 599—C. A.

—— Action for Infringement — Consent Judgment — Subsequent Suit for Infringement.]—Judgment was given by consent before declaration in an action by a patentee against the members of a partnership for an infringement, and they immediately took a licence to use the invention. A suit to restrain a subsequent alleged infringement having been brought by the patentee against the same members at law and two fresh partners:—Held, that the defendants in equity were not estopped by the judgment from disputing the validity of the patent. Goucher v. Clayton, 34 L. J., Ch. 239; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 107; 13 W. R. 336.

Restitution Suit — Former Cause between same Parties.]—To a petition by a wife against her husband for restitution of conjugal rights, the respondent, by his answer and cross-petition for a divorce, pleaded cruelty on the part of the petitioner. Reply, that previously to the filing of the present petition the now petitioner filed a petition for a divorce on the ground of cruelty, and the now respondent filed his answer preferring charges of cruelty against the petitioner extending over the same period mentioned in his present answer, and prayed for a divorce; that the charge of cruelty in his former answer was the same as the charge alleged in the present answer and petition; that the former case was set down to be heard before the judge and a jury, and the issues were, first, whether the respondent was guilty of cruelty; secondly, whether the petitioner was guilty of cruelty; that the said issues were tried, and the respondent gave in evidence the several allegations of cruelty set forth in the present answer and cross-petition; and that thereupon the claim of the now respondent to a divorce a mensa et thoro was refused; and further, that after the evidence was so given, the judge asked the respondent's counsel whether they required to have any question left to the jury on the second issue, and the counsel replied that they did not, and abandoned the claim on the former cross-petition, and the jury were thereupon discharged from finding on the second issue; and that the respondent was estopped and concluded by the proceedings had in the former suit, and by the said issue, and by acts and admissions of his counsel at the trial:—Held, on demurrer, that the reply was bad, the facts stated by it not amounting to an estoppel on the respondent. Carnegie v. Carnegie, 17 L. R., Ir. 430—Affirmed in C. A.

Prohibition in previous Action.]—The plaintiff's solicitor, who carried on business within the jurisdiction of the Mayor's Court, wrote to the defendant demanding payment of 7*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.* for goods sold and delivered. The defendant wrote to the plaintiff's solicitor (which he received within the jurisdiction) admitting that he owed to the plaintiff 5*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.* The plaintiff brought an action in the Mayor's Court for 7*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.*, and the defendant obtained a writ of prohibition staying proceeding therein, as the contract was entered into and the plaintiff and defendant resided out of the jurisdiction. The plaintiff then commenced a second action to recover 5*l.* 6*s.* 6*d.* on an account stated, and the defendant obtained a second writ of prohibition:—Held, that the prohibition in the first action was not an estoppel against bringing the second action. Grundy v. Townsend, 36 W. R. 531—C. A.

Probate—Fresh Action on Fresh Evidence.]—The next of kin of a testator instituted a suit for administration with a will annexed, bearing date 1868, of which the sole executor and universal legatee was the testator's wife, who predeceased him. The opposition parties claiming to be legatees set up the contents of a later will, alleged to have been executed in 1877 or 1878, but which could not be found. The Court of Appeal, reversing the judgment of the Probate Division, decided that there was not sufficient evidence of the contents of the second will, and their decision was affirmed in the House of Lords. A fresh suit for probate of the second will was then commenced by the executor of the testator and residuary legatee of the will of 1877-8, who had been the confidential solicitor of the deceased, and who had acted as solicitor for the legatees all through the litigation. The suit was founded upon fresh evidence of the contents and execution of the second will:—Held, that although the plaintiff had been privy to the prior action, an application to stay the proceedings generally could not be granted, but that the proceedings ought to be stayed until the costs of the plaintiffs in the prior action had been paid. Peters v. Tilly, 55 L. J., P. 75; 11 P. D. 145; 35 W. R. 183.

Stock—Petition for Re-transfer.]—Where a petition for the re-transfer of stock has been heard on the merits, and is dismissed on the ground that the petitioner has failed to make out his title, he cannot on the subsequent discovery of fresh evidence to support it, present a fresh petition for the same object without the leave of the court previously obtained. May, In re, House, Ex parte, 54 L. J., Ch. 338; 28 Ch. D. 518; 52 L. T. 79; 33 W. R. 917—C. A.

Second Action for same Cause—Prayer for "further or other Relief."]—In March, 1881, the plaintiff handed to one Bird, a broker, shares in a mining company, with a transfer signed (a blank being left for the name of the transferee), for the purpose of sale. Bird died; and it was then discovered that he had, without the knowledge or authority of the plaintiff, lodged the shares with the defendant's firm as security for an advance. Having received notice from the company that they were about to register the shares in the name of the defendant, the plaintiff commenced an action in the Chancery Division of the High Court to restrain the defendant's firm and the company from parting with the shares, or registering the defendant as transferee — concluding with the usual prayer for "such further or other relief as the nature of the case might require." On the 23rd of February, 1882, the defendant in that action consented to an order for the delivery up of the shares to the plaintiff forthwith. The order directed that, "upon delivery of the deed or form of transfer, and the securities representing the same, and upon payment of costs to the plaintiff and the mining company, all proceedings in the said chancery action should be stayed." The shares were not delivered up to the plaintiff until the 28th of April, 1882, when they were sold at a considerable loss. In an action against the defendant in the Queen's Bench Division to recover damages for this detention, the jury found that the plaintiff did not authorise Bird to pledge the shares for his own debt, or lend them to him for that purpose:—Held, that the plaintiff was estopped by the consent order made in the chancery action on the 23rd of February, 1882, from recovering in this action damages for such detention, and that the defendant was not responsible for the detention of the shares by the mining company after the order had been made in the suit in the Chancery Division. Serrao v. Noel, 15 Q. B. D. 549—C. A.

Same Facts—Two Offences.]—On 5th March B. was charged under 1 & 2 Will. 4, c. 32, s. 30, with trespass in pursuit of game, but acquitted for want of corroboration of a witness. On 14th May, B. was charged under s. 23 with unlawfully using a dog for taking game, he having no licence. The facts were precisely the same, but on the second occasion the witness was corroborated and the justices were satisfied, but B. was discharged on the ground of res judicata:—Held, that the justices were wrong, and that there was no res judicata as the offences were not inconsistent. Bollard v. Spring, 51 J. P. 501.

Application technically Different.]—Where a divisional court has decided against an applicant on one application, a divisional court consisting of other judges will not overrule or review that decision on a second application by him, which though technically different from the first, raises the identical point again. Reg. v. Eardley, 49 J. P. 551.

Same Charge.]—L. was charged with night poaching under 9 Geo. 4, c. 69, and, in course of cross-examination of prosecutor's witnesses, the justices considered he had been illegally arrested, and discharged him. L. was again summoned for the same offence, on the same facts, when the justices held that they had no jurisdiction, as the former discharge was res judicata:—Held, that the justices were right. Reg. v. Brackenridge, 48 J. P. 223.

Counterclaim in County Court—Action in High Court.]—Where in an action in a county court a defendant has relied upon a cause of action by way of counterclaim, upon which he has obtained a verdict for an amount beyond the jurisdiction of the county court, and judgment has been entered for the defendant, but no relief has been given in respect of the balance in excess of the plaintiff's claim, the defendant is not estopped from afterwards bringing an action in the High Court upon the same cause of action. Webster v. Armstrong, 54 L. J., Q. B. 236; 1 Cab. & E. 471.

The defendant in the High Court is estopped by the verdict and judgment of the county court from denying the cause of action of the plaintiff in the High Court, and the only question to be decided in the High Court is the amount of damages. Ib. See 47 & 48 Vict. c. 61, s. 18.

Declarator of Marriage.]—In 1842 a suit for declarator of marriage was brought against a lady, but after trial was dismissed in 1846. In 1875, after the lady's death, a second suit was brought for declarator of the same marriage, and for reduction of the former decree. In 1876 the second suit was held to have been barred by the plea of res judicata, and this decision, on appeal, was affirmed by the House of Lords.—Per Lord Cairns, Lord Chancellor: The appellant has not alleged any new matter whatever coming to his knowledge which should entitle him to get rid of the former proceedings.—Per Lord Hatherley: I do not apprehend that we need go further than to say that this gentleman—who had the opportunity of having his case fairly heard thirty years ago—cannot now, after the death of the person principally concerned, be in a position to ask that the principle of res judicata shall not be pressed to its fullest and furthest results.—Per Lord Selborne: When there is res judicata the original cause of action is gone; and it would be destructive of all certainty in the administration of law, in the status of families, and in the enjoyment of rights, if it were not held incumbent on any one attempting to get rid of a solemn judgment to shew that he comes forward to do so with reasonable promptitude and diligence.—Per Lord Blackburn: The object of the rule of res judicata is always put upon two grounds; the one, public policy, that there should be an end to litigation; the other, the hardship on the individual that he should be vexed twice for the same cause. It seems to me that nothing is here alleged that would have been ground for a new trial before, and à multo fortiori there is nothing alleged that would be ground for a new trial, after judgment pronounced thirty years ago.—Per Lord Gordon: It would be lamentable for the law of Scotland, especially with reference to the marriage law, if it were competent for parties to come forward again after a lapse of thirty years and ask for a new trial with reference to matters which must have been within their own knowledge when the cause was originally tried. Lockyer v. Ferryman, 2 App. Cas. 519.

Estoppel by Decree in Equity.]—As to estoppel by decree in equity. See Collier v. Walters, 43 L. J., Ch. 216; L. R. 17 Eq. 252, and col. 410.

If a case is made for a bill for specific relief and proof gone into by the parties in respect of it, and the right to it is a question which is fairly raised and may properly be decided at the hearing, and if a decree is pronounced in which no notice is taken of this portion of the case, while relief is given in respect of other matters in controversy, then, in a suit subsequently instituted to obtain the relief so admitted, it must be assumed that the claim to it in the former suit was either waived by the plaintiff at the hearing or refused by the court. Blake v. O'Kelly, Ir. R. 9 Eq. 54.

B.'s executors filed a bill against K., as executor de son tort, for an administration of B.'s personal estate, raising issues as to the validity of the transfer of a sum in bank stock from B.'s name to the joint names of B. and K., and also as to B.'s mental capacity at the time of the transfer. At the hearing it was objected that relief of such a nature could not be given, and an ordinary decree for administration was pronounced. B.'s executor subsequently filed a bill raising the same issues, and also impeaching a second transfer from B. to B. and K., and praying that both transfers should be declared null and void:—Held, that the former suit or decree did not bar the relief sought for. Ib.

Policy void at Law.]—A plaintiff in equity filed his bill stating that a policy had become void at law, and claiming to have it treated as valid in equity. After bill dismissed the plaintiff sued at law on the policy:—Held, that a bill would lie to restrain the action, and injunction granted accordingly. Tredegar (Lord) v. Windus, 44 L. J., Ch. 268; L. R. 19 Eq. 607.

Verdict for Debt impeachable in Bankruptcy.]—A verdict is only primâ facie evidence of a debt which the creditors of the bankrupt are at liberty to impeach, and into the circumstances of which, if impeached, the commissioners are bound to inquire. Butterfill, Ex parte, 1 Rose, 192.

Legatee's Suit for Account.]—Under a decree in a legatee's suit to take the usual accounts, A. B. went in and claimed the residue which the master found him entitled to, but the residue was not then ascertained, and no order was made in respect of it:—Held, that A. B. was not precluded from afterwards asking relief against the executor in respect of an alleged breach of trust in a suit of his own, he not having, in the first suit, been in a situation to investigate the accounts of the executor, or to claim the relief which he asked in the second. Guidici v. Kinton, 6 Beav. 517.

Settlement of Account in Previous Action—One of co-Plaintiffs bound by.]—The bill sought a general account of the estate of a testator who died in 1807. One of the co-plaintiffs being held bound by a settlement of accounts in 1822:—Held, that in this suit, all the other co-plaintiffs were equally bound by that settlement, and that in this suit the accounts could only be directed on the footing of such settlement. Lambert v. Hutchinson, 1 Beav. 277; 8 L. J., Ch. 196.

Estates Subject to Ancient Rent—Sale of One—Indemnity.]—Estates A. and B. were subject to an ancient rent. A. being sold, the vendor (Lord T.'s ancestor) covenanted to indemnify the purchaser (C.'s ancestor), and paid the entire rent since 1766. In a suit against Lord T. it was decided that so much only of the rent as was payable out of B. could be recovered, and a decree was made for so much, the amount of which was defined. In a subsequent suit against Lord T. and C. to recover the remainder of the rent payable out of A.:—Held, that the former suit afforded no defence to Lord T., and that he was a proper party to the new suit, either as claiming a part of the lands charged, or in respect of the remedy over against him. Dublin (Archbishop) v. Trimleston (Lord), 12 Ir. Eq. R. 251.

Judgment by Confession against old Corporation—New Corporation.]—A judgment obtained by confession against an old corporation subsequently to the 16th February, 1836, is not conclusive against the new corporation in a case where the court is doubtful whether the demand upon which the judgment was obtained was within the terms of the 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 100, and it was held, upon an information filed by two of the burgesses of the new corporation to stay the issuing of execution against the goods of the corporation, upon that judgment, that they were entitled to have an issue to try whether or not it was originally such a demand as came within the provisions of that act. Att.-Gen. v. Dublin Corporation, 1 Dr. & War. 545.

Legacy—Action against Executors—Equity Suit—Statute of Limitations.]—H. died in 1811, having bequeathed a legacy to a woman who afterwards married the plaintiff. In December, 1825, the two executors of H. gave the plaintiff a written acknowledgment, whereby they separately and jointly acknowledged that they owed the plaintiff 150*l.* for the legacy, and 50*l.* for interest. In 1835 the plaintiff's wife died; matters of business having occurred between the plaintiff and the executors, in which mutual demands and accounts arose, the plaintiff, in September, 1839, brought an action against the executors to recover what he alleged to be due on those accounts, including the 200*l.* mentioned in the memorandum, and interest thereon. In this action the defendants pleaded separately, and one of them paid 46*l.* into court, which the plaintiff received, and abandoned the action as to him. The plaintiff then filed a bill against both defendants for payment of the legacy, and, in defence to the bill, the defendants amongst other things insisted by their answers on the Statute of Limitations (stat. 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27), and that the action was a bar to the demand in equity:—Held, that the proceedings in the action did not necessarily amount to an estoppel of the suit in equity, but, that, in order to determine the efficacy of the suit, it was competent for this court to inquire on what account the 46*l.* was paid into court in the action. Holland v. Clark, 1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 151.

Widow and Daughter—Indian Estate.]—A decree in a suit by A. against B., claiming as widow to succeed to her husband's estate, in preference to B., his nephew, on the ground of the family being divided, does not operate as res judicata, or as capable of being pleaded in bar to a suit by C., a daughter, claiming to succeed to her father's estate on A.'s death, on the ground that the property was self-acquired by her father. Such judgment determines only an issue raised concerning a particular person, and is not a judgment in rem, but simply a judgment inter partes. Katama Natchiar v. Shivagunga (Rajah), 9 Moo. Ind. App. 539, 540.

Bill to Redeem—Decree of Foreclosure.]—Bill to redeem, mortgage being overpaid, decree of foreclosure, signed and inrolled, is good plea in bar. Mallock v. Galton, Dick. 65.

Incumbrancers' Suits — Consolidation.] — Several incumbrancers' suits having been consolidated, a decree was made in them all, directing certain incumbrances to be kept down, and the several plaintiffs' costs to be added to the debts :—Held, that a party to one of the suits was estopped by the decree from disputing the validity of one of the incumbrances directed to be kept down. Ford v. Tynte, 3 N. R. 559.

Tithes.]—Decree in former suit cannot be pleaded to bill for tithes of any subsequent year. St. Paul's Minor Canons v. Crickett, Wightw. 30.

Plea of former decree for payment of tithes, where a modus and lands alleged to be covered by it were improperly stated, so that the court could not direct an issue, it is not a good plea in bar to bill brought for establishing the modus. Collins v. Gough, 7 Bro. P. C. 94.

Suit by Husband and Wife—Suit by Wife and Next-of-Kin.]—Suit by husband and wife against trustees of latter's separate property cannot be pleaded in bar to a subsequent suit by her and her next friend against her trustees and husband, although the relief prayed in both suits is the same. Reere v. Dalby, 4 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 117; 2 Sim. & S. 464.

Lease—Relief against Fraud—New Bill.]—A. filed his bill in the Court of Chancery in Ireland, to be relieved against a long lease granted by his ancestors, on the foot of fraud, but not giving sufficient evidence of the fraud, his bill was dismissed with costs. Some years after, A. filed a new bill for the same purpose, charging fresh proofs of the fraud, which were not discovered pending the former suit. Upon hearing this second cause, the lease was set aside; and on an appeal, this decree was affirmed, but varied by consent. Cotter v. Barrymore (Earl), 4 Bro. P. C. 203.

Writ of Right—Trial—Bill for Discovery.]—Plea that a writ of right has been tried and determined against the plaintiff, a good plea for a bill for discovery of matter relative to the title. Leicester v. Perry, 1 Bro. C. C. 305.

Execution of Power—Decision of Ecclesiastical Court.]—Where, in a marriage settlement, a power of appointment by will, signed, sealed, published, and declared, in the presence of two witnesses, is given to the wife notwithstanding her coverture, and an instrument afterwards executed by the wife is proved as a will, this court is concluded, by the decision of the Ecclesiastical Court, that the instrument propounded is a will, and is bound to consider it as a valid execution of the power, if the instrument be proved in this court to have been executed with the formalities prescribed by the power. Douglas v. Cooper, 3 Myl. & K. 378.

Judgment examinable in what Court.]—Bill to be relieved against a bond, and judgment thereon, suggesting that same was irregularly obtained. Defendant pleaded the judgment, and demurred, for that the validity of the judgment was examinable only in the court where it was pronounced. Plea and demurrer allowed. Huddleston v. Asbugg, Rep. t. Finch, 204.

Judgment for Salvage in Admiralty Court—Action against Underwriter—Defence that Loss did not arise from Perils insured against.]—The captain of a steamer that had during a voyage run short of coal engaged a steam trawler to tow her to her port of discharge. The owner of the trawler brought an action in the Admiralty Court and recovered a sum of money for salvage. In an action by the owner of the steamer to recover, from an underwriter who had insured the ship against perils of the sea, the amount paid under the judgment :—Held, that the defendant was not concluded by the judgment of the Admiralty Court from setting up that the loss did not arise from any of the perils insured against. Ballantyne v. Mackinnon, 65 L. J., Q. B. 616; [1896] 2 Q. B. 455; 75 L. T. 95; 45 W. R. 70; 8 Asp. M. C. 173—C. A.

Dismissal of Bankruptcy Petition—Second Petition grounded on Non-payment of same Judgment Debt.]—The court of bankruptcy has no jurisdiction, upon the hearing of a bankruptcy petition grounded on non-compliance with a bankruptcy notice to pay a judgment debt, to go behind the judgment and decide that there is not a good petitioning creditor's debt, except for the purpose of exercising its discretion upon that petition; and the dismissal of such a petition is not, therefore, a bar to the presentation by the same judgment creditor of a second petition founded on non-compliance with a second bankruptcy notice to pay the same judgment debt. Vitoria, In re, Vitoria, Ex parte, 63 L. J., Q. B. 795; [1894] 2 Q. B. 387; 9 R. 536; 71 L. T. 48; 42 W. R. 529; 1 Manson, 236—C. A. And see Larrard, In re, Yeomans & Heap, Ex parte, 3 Manson, 317.

Petition to supersede Bankruptcy.]—A bankrupt is not estopped from petitioning to supersede, although he has surrendered to his commission, interfered as in choice of assignees and the disposition of the estate, and also passed his last examination, and endeavoured to obtain his certificate. A bankrupt is not bound by acts of acquiescence, when he is ignorant of his rights. A judgment at law, establishing the validity of a commission, is not conclusive on the Great Seal, on a subsequent petition to supersede; and the court is bound to look into all the circumstances of the case, as affecting the requisites to support the commission. Chambers, Ex parte, 1 Deac. 197.

Dismissal of Charge on First Hearing a Bar to subsequent Conviction.]—The appellant was charged with non-compliance, on the 21st August, 1889, and ten days thereafter, with an order made by justices under s. 2 of the Dogs Act, 1871, requiring him to keep a dangerous dog under proper control. No evidence was given to support the charge except as to the 21st August, and the charge was dismissed on the ground that the offence had not been made out. Subsequently the appellant was charged with not keeping the dog under proper control on the 21st August simply; this charge was proved and the appellant was convicted:—Held, that as the appellant was put in peril and might have been convicted on the first hearing, the matter was res judicata on the second hearing, and the maxim Nemo bis vexari debet applied. Ryley v. Brown, 62 L. T. 458; 17 Cox, C. C. 79; 54 J. P. 486.

Fund carried to a Separate Account—Charge—Stop Order by Incumbrancers—Undisclosed prior Claim—Contribution.]—By an order made on further consideration, funds were carried over to "the account of the perpetual annuity of the defendant and her issue," with a direction to pay the dividends thereon to the defendant for life. The defendant charged her interest in this fund, and the incumbrancers obtained stop orders thereon. Subsequently it was discovered that at the time the order was made the defendant was jointly and severally liable with the testator for breaches of trust which had been wholly made good out of the testator's estate. The order was made in the presence of the plaintiff, who was not at the time aware of the defendant's liability in respect of the breach of trust. On a motion by the plaintiff to obtain contribution from the defendant to the extent of a moiety of this liability, and to have this claim satisfied out of the funds carried over to the defendant's separate account, notwithstanding the stop orders:—Held, that though the defendant was liable to contribute towards making good the loss occasioned by her breach of trust, and could take nothing beneficially from the testator's estate until she had done so, still, as between the plaintiff and incumbrancers, the matter was res judicata, and that the incumbrancers were entitled to priority over the claim now made for contribution for breach of trust. Jervoise, In re (12 Beav. 209), followed. Eyton, In re, Bartlett v. Charles, 59 L. J., Ch. 733; 45 Ch. D. 458; 63 L. T. 336; 39 W. R. 135.

Liability of Husband for ante-nuptial Debt of Wife—Prior unsatisfied Judgment against Wife's separate Estate.]—The plaintiff, having done work for the defendant's wife before her marriage, recovered judgment against her separate estate after the marriage for the amount of his debt. The judgment was unsatisfied, the wife having no separate estate. The plaintiff then commenced an action for the debt against the defendant, who admitted having received with his wife assets sufficient to satisfy the debt:—Held, that the prior judgment against the wife was no bar to the action. Beck v. Pierce, 58 L. J., Q. B. 516; 23 Q. B. D. 316; 61 L. T. 448; 38 W. R. 29; 54 J. P. 198—C. A.

Compromise of Former Action.]—One of several cestuis que trust brought an action against the trustees of a settlement claiming execution of the trusts, and that the trustees might be charged with any loss on alleged improper investments. Judgment was given for execution of the trusts and inquiries as to investments. Certain other cestuis que trust (infants) were served with the judgment, and had leave to attend. Before certificate a compromise was effected, which on a petition in the action was sanctioned on behalf of the infants. The petition did not refer to the alleged improper investments, but the fact of the investment complained of having been made appeared in the answers of the trustees to interrogatories administered to them in that action. After the infants came of age they brought an action against the trustees on the same grounds as those relied upon by the plaintiff in the former action:—Held, that the question as to the breach of trust was not res judicata, and that the plaintiffs in the second action were not estopped by the former proceedings. Worman v. Worman, 43 Ch. D. 296; 61 L. T. 637; 38 W. R. 442.

Action by Executors after Originating Summons.]—Executors handed over their testator's residuary estate, including the certificates of certain shares in a limited company, to a married woman entitled for her separate use, but did not execute a transfer of the shares. Subsequently a call was levied, which the executors paid. They then took out an originating summons against the married woman, claiming a lien over the shares in respect of the call and in respect of their costs, charges and expenses in relation to the shares incurred subsequently to the distribution of the estate, and the shares were sold, but the proceeds proving insufficient to indemnify them, they commenced a second action against the married woman to recover the balance out of her separate estate:—Held, that the first action was not a bar to the second, and that the executors were entitled to recover. Kershaw, In re, Whittaker v. Kershaw, 60 L. J., Ch. 9; 45 Ch. D. 320; 63 L. T. 203; 39 W. R. 23—C. A.

Action by Executor for Damage to Personal Estate—Previous Action under Lord Campbell's Act.]—A passenger on a railway was injured by an accident, and after an interval died in consequence. The executrix brought an action under Lord Campbell's Act for his death, which suit was settled for 750*l*. The executrix now sued for damage to his personal estate, caused during his lifetime by medical expenses and loss from inability to attend to business:—Held, that the former action was no bar to the present one. Bradshaw v. Lancashire & Yorkshire Ry. (L. R. 10 C. P. 189) followed and approved. Daly v. Dublin, Wicklow & Wexford Ry., 30 L. R., Ir. 514—C. A.

Libel—Second Action for same Libel, but in respect of different Passages.]—In an action brought by the plaintiff against the defendant for libel in respect of the publication of a pamphlet purporting to be the judgment delivered in court in a certain action between the parties, the jury found that the pamphlet was a fair, honest and accurate report of the judgment, and was published without malice, and judgment was accordingly entered for the defendant. The plaintiff afterwards commenced a second action for libel in respect of the same pamphlet, but relying upon defamatory passages in the pamphlet other than those relied upon in the first action. The different defamatory statements, however, relied upon in both actions were all spoken of the plaintiff in the same character:—Held, that the subject-matter of the second action was res judicata, and that an order striking out the statement of claim and dismissing the action was rightly made. Macdougall v. Knight, 59 L. J., Q. B. 517; 25 Q. B. D. 1; 63 L. T. 43; 38 W. R. 553; 54 J. P. 788—C. A.

Teinds—Res Judicata.]—The minister of the parish of B., Scotland, in 1875 raised an action of augmentation, modification and locality, against the heritors. A scheme of locality was prepared, D. lodged objections to the scheme, in so far as it localled minister's stipend on eighty-one acres of his land, alleging that these eighty-one acres were held under titles cum decimis inclusis et nunquam antea separatis, and that in respect of certain judicial proceedings in 1795 and 1807 it was res judicata that these lands were so held. The proceedings relied on were as follows:—In 1795 the then minister of B. raised an action of augmentation, &c., and produced a rental of the whole lands in the parish, in which he included the eighty-one acres in question as liable for teinds. The ancestor of D. "and the other heritors" lodged a minute stating, inter alia, that these eighty-one acres were held cum decimis inclusis, and craving that they might be struck out of the rental. On the 2nd of December, 1795, the teind court pronounced an interlocutor ordering them to be struck out. Rectified schemes of locality were prepared, and objections lodged by other heritors, but the proceedings were not carried out to a final decree. In 1807 the same minister raised a new action of augmentation, &c., which, after certain objections were disposed of, proceeded to a final decree. In none of the schemes of locality since 1795 were the eighty-one acres included: —Held, that the plea of res judicata was well founded. Dundas v. Waddell, 5 App. Cas. 249 —H. L. (Sc.)

Detention of Goods—Order of Metropolitan Police Magistrate—Subsequent Proceedings for Damages.]—An order made by a magistrate under s. 40 of the Metropolitan Police Courts Act, 1839, for the delivery up of goods detained without just cause, is no bar to a subsequent proceeding for damages arising out of the same detention. Midland Ry. v. Martin, 62 L. J., Q. B. 517; [1893] 2 Q. B. 172; 5 R. 480; 69 L. T. 353; 17 Cox, C. C. 687; 58 J. P. 39.

Ejectment.]—Since the Common Law Procedure Act, 1853 (Ireland), a judgment by default in ejectment is not an estoppel; and, therefore, in an action for mesne rates, is not conclusive as to the time at which the plaintiff's title accrued. Kenna v. Nugent, Ir. R. 7 C. L. 464—Ex. Ch.

To an action for mesne profits the defendants pleaded title to the lands in themselves during the time for which mesne profits were claimed. The plaintiff replied, by way of estoppel, as to so much of the mesne profits as had accrued since a certain day named, that he sued out a writ of ejectment, for the purpose of recovering possession of the lands, wherein he claimed to be entitled from such day, and that thereupon such proceedings were had that he recovered the lands and possession of them:—Held, that the judgment in ejectment did not operate as an estoppel with respect to the duration of the plaintiff's title, and the replication was therefore bad. Harris v. Mulkern, 45 L. J., Ex. 244; 1 Ex. D. 31; 34 L. T. 99; 24 W. R. 208.

A plaintiff in ejectment, who enters judgment by default against several, is not estopped by the record from shewing that some of them were not in possession, and were unnecessary parties. Le Clerc v. Greene, L. R. 7 Eq. 371.

Validity of Execution against Bankrupt.]—The right of an execution creditor to enforce an execution against the estate of a bankrupt depended on whether the bankrupt had or had not been a trader. In an action by the creditor against the sheriff for wrongfully withdrawing from possession of the goods which he had seized under the execution, judgment passed for the sheriff, on the ground that the bankrupt was a trader, and that therefore the goods belonged to the trustee in bankruptcy:—Held, that the creditor was precluded from raising the question of the validity of his execution in an application against the trustee in the Court of Bankruptcy. Harper, Ex parte, Bremner, In re, 44 L. J., Bk. 57; L. R. 10 Ch. 379; 32 L. T. 317; 23 W. R. 433.

Proof in Bankruptcy—Election of Remedy.]—A stockbroker was employed to purchase and sell stocks and shares for the plaintiff, and purchased certain shares of which transfers were never executed, but the certificates of which were deposited by the stockbroker as security for moneys advanced to him by the defendant. The plaintiff was not aware of this deposit, and on the stockbroker's bankruptcy proved for the value of these shares. The defendant sold the shares under the order of the Bankruptcy Court, and paid the balance to the trustee in bankruptcy. The plaintiff received a dividend on his proof, and afterwards having discovered the deposit of the certificates, commenced an action against the defendant to have him declared a trustee of the shares:—Held, that the plaintiff was estopped by the bankruptcy proceedings from pursuing his remedy by action. Hone v. Boyle, 27 L. R., Ir. 137—C. A.

A creditor tendered a proof for the balance of a judgment, signed against the debtor by default, for bets won by the creditor from the debtor. It was alleged that the trustee was estopped by a letter from the debtor's solicitors to the creditor requesting him to prove his debt and vote for the scheme:—Held, that the letter from the debtor's solicitor to the creditor did not operate as an estoppel between the creditor and the trustee. Seaton, Ex parte, Deerhurst, In re, 60 L. J., Q. B. 411; 64 L. T. 118; 8 Morrell, 97.

In Action against Executor by Creditor.]—A creditor of a testator having recovered judgment for his debt in an action against the executor after issue found in favour of the creditor on a plea of plene administravit, sued the executor in an action on such judgment, suggesting a devastavit:—Held, that the executor could not shew that the acts of waste complained of were committed by him before such judgment with the concurrence of the creditor, as that would amount to no assets as between him and the executor, and would therefore negative the judgment, which the executor was estopped from doing. Jewesbury v. Mummery, 42 L. J., C. P. 22; L. R. 8 C. P. 56; 27 L. T. 618; 21 W. R. 270—Ex. Ch.

Master and Servant.]—A fire-iron forger, in the employment of fire-iron manufacturers at Sheffield, was summoned before a magistrate, for having absented himself from their service without just cause or lawful excuse, under the Master and Servant Act, 1867 (30 & 31 Vict. c. 141), s. 9 (repealed). An order was made directing him to pay 11*l.* 14*s.* as compensation to the complainants. On February 25th, 1871, the servant agreed to work for his employers for the term of five years. On April 1st, 1873, he was summoned for absenting himself, and ordered to pay 11*l.* 8*s.*, with costs, and the money not being paid he was ordered to be imprisoned in the house of correction for three months. On June 6th, 1873, he was again summoned for not returning to his work, and was ordered to find security to fulfil his contract; in default was again sentenced to three months' imprisonment. After his liberation he continued to absent himself, and a fresh summons was taken out, and the order appealed against made:—Held, that the previous orders were not a bar to the subsequent complaint, and the order made upon it. Cutler v. Turner, 43 L. J., M. C. 124; L. R. 9 Q. B. 502; 30 L. T. 706; 22 W. R. 840.

Collision—Disbursements—Advanced Freight.]—A ship A. and her cargo belonged to the same owners, and the plaintiffs advanced 1,000*l.* as a loan to such owners, and received as security, in conformity with the agreement made between them and the borrowers, the bill of lading, on which the master indorsed a receipt for 1,000*l.* as advanced freight, and also a policy of insurance on advanced freight. Ship A. was lost through a collision with the defendants' vessel, whose negligence was admitted. It was proved that the difference between the value of the cargo at the port of destination and at the port of loading would have considerably exceeded 1,000*l.* In an action by the holders of the bill of lading for 1,000*l.* against the defendants' ship:—Held, that a sum in respect of disbursements for ship A. on her voyage and wages paid in advance which had been awarded to the owners of the A. by the registrar and merchants was no bar to the plaintiffs' right to recover. The Thyatira, 52 L. J., P. 85; 8 P. D. 155; 49 L. T. 406; 32 W. R. 276.

Action for Rent—Action for Quarrying.]—A landlord sued his tenant for rent, and on the money counts, and gave particulars on the count for money had and received for a quantity of stone quarried and carried away by the defendant. At the trial he took a general verdict, but for the amount of rent only. The plaintiff brought another action against the defendant for quarrying and carrying away the stone, and a few days before the trial of the first action, delivered a particular in the second action for the same stone, exactly corresponding with the particular delivered on the count for money had and received in the first action:—Held, that the recovery in the first action was no bar to the plaintiff's recovery in the second. Hadley v. Green, 2 C. & J. 374; 2 Tyr. 390; 1 L. J., Ex. 137.

Note Payable in Instalments.]—A promissory note, on the face of it payable on demand, was given to the trustee of a building society to secure certain instalments, fines and interest. The payee having sued upon the note, took a cognovit for the instalments then due and costs, which were afterwards paid; and he gave a receipt as for debt and costs in the action:—Held, that he could not maintain another action on the note for instalments which subsequently became due. Siddall v. Rawcliffe, 1 C. & M. 487; 1 M. & Rob. 263; 2 Tyr. 441; 2 L. J., Ex. 237.

Bond to replace Stock—Separate Breaches.]—A. advanced to B. bank stock, for which B. executed a bond conditioned for the replacing of the stock on a day certain, and the payment to A. of all dividends, bonuses and profits, which would have arisen from the same in the meantime. B. made default. A. recovered judgment with damages assessed upon both breaches:—Held, that a plea of judgment recovered was a good bar to a sci. fa. Saville v. Jackson, M'Clel. 377; 11 Price, 343; 13 Price, 715.

Trover—Money had and received.]—A judgment for the defendant in trover is not a bar to an action against him for money had and received for the plaintiff's use. —— v. Campbell, 3 Wils. 240. See Buckland v. Johnson, 15 C. B. 145.

Set-off in another Action.]—A. having obtained a verdict against B. in a case in which B. pleaded a set-off:—Held, that B. was estopped from suing A. in another action for the subject-matter of the set-off. Eastmure v. Hawes, 5 Bing. (N.C.) 444; 7 Scott, 461; 7 D. P. C. 431; 2 Arn. 54; 8 L. J., C. P. 236; 3 Jur. 460.

If a defendant in the county court plead a set-off and the plaintiff has judgment, the action is barred in respect of the matter of the set-off, notwithstanding no evidence has been received in respect of it, the judge having improperly rejected the only witness who was prepared to prove it. Danks v. Harley, 1 W. R. 291.

B. to an action by A. pleaded a set-off exceeding A.'s claim. An award under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 77, awarded to B. the amount of the excess. B. sues A. for this. A. pleads judgment recovered:—Held, that the plea was no answer. Jones v. Jones, 22 W. R. 577. And see Munro v. Ennis and Athenry Ry., 15 W. R. 255.

Verdict and Judgment.]—A verdict and judgment in law may be pleaded in bar to a bill seeking relief. Pitt v. Broadway, Rep. t. Finch, 70. S. P., Hellam v. Grave, Ib. 265.

To a bill for discovery of title, and perpetuating testimony of witnesses, defendant pleaded two verdicts and judgment in ejectment, obtained by his father. Ib. And see Lee v. Boles, 2 Ch. Ca. 95; and Sewell v. Freeston, 1 Ch. Ca. 65.

—— Bill to supply Defective Execution of Power to Lease.]—To a bill to supply a defective execution of a power to make leases, defendant pleaded a special verdict and judgment, under which the leases made under the power were declared void. Temple v. Baltinglass, Rep. t. Finch, 275.

Verdict in Action of Crim. Con.—Divorce Suit.]—A verdict obtained by a husband in an action of crim. con. against the alleged adulterer, is so far from being conclusive against the wife as to the adultery in a suit for divorce in the Ecclesiastical Court, that it is not even considered as furnishing any confirmation or corroboration of the charge, the wife being no party to the proceeding at common law, which is thus res inter alios acta. Evans v. Evans, 1 Rob. 165. And see Jenkyn v. Jenkyn, 5 W. R. 43; and Fraser v. Fraser, 5 N. C. 20.

Order for Maintenance not Conclusive as to Infant's Life.]—Semble, the existence of an order for the maintenance of an infant out of the income of a fund does not prevent the court, in a subsequent proceeding in which the title to the principal comes directly in question, from making an order negativing the infant's title to the fund. Saunders v. Vautier, Cr. & Ph. 240; 10 L. J., Ch. 354. Affirming 4 Beav. 115.

Unskilfulness in erecting Kitchen Range—Plaintiff having paid no Estoppel.]—To an action against the defendant for unskilfully erecting a kitchen range in the plaintiff's house, he pleaded that the plaintiff ought not to be admitted to allege that he did not use due skill in constructing the range, because, after the supposed grievance, the now defendant commenced an action against the now plaintiff for work and labour in constructing the range, and for the price thereof, and that the now plaintiff pleaded payment of money into court, which the now defendant took out of court in full satisfaction:—Held, that the plea did not amount to an estoppel, and afforded no answer to the action. Rigge v. Burbidge, 16 M. & W. 598; 15 L. J., Ex. 309.

Warrant—Negligent Representation—Estoppel.]—Goods were in 1875 stored by brokers with wharfingers, who issued a warrant for the same. In 1885 the servants of the defendant, who had taken over the wharf and business, delivered the goods by mistake to certain persons instead of goods to which they were entitled, and the defendant was not made aware of the mistake. The warrant had been negotiated, and was in January, 1886, in the possession of B. and E. In that month, no rent having been paid for the goods since 1880, the defendant wrote two letters to the plaintiff, who had previously taken over the business of the brokers and carried it on under their name, informing him, as the supposed holder of the warrant, and as the person presumedly interested in the goods, that the goods were in hand, that rent was due, and that, unless it was paid, the goods would be sold to cover the amount due. The plaintiff made no reply, but afterwards, and in consequence of receiving these letters, he bought the warrant from B. and E. and applied to the defendant for the goods, when the defendant first discovered that they were no longer in his possession. In an action to recover damages for a wrongful conversion of the goods:—Held, that the defendant was liable, being estopped from denying that he had the goods specified in the warrant, because he had by his negligent misrepresentation led the plaintiff to believe that the goods were in his possession, and such misrepresentation was the cause of the plaintiff's loss, the plaintiff having purchased the warrant in consequence of the same. Seton v. Lafone, 56 L. J., Q. B. 415; 19 Q. B. D. 68; 57 L. T. 547; 35 W. R. 749—C. A.

Judgment in rem and in personam—Distinction.]—The distinction between a judgment in rem and a judgment in personam is that the judgment in rem binds everybody, though not parties to the litigation; the judgment in personam binds parties and privies. Simpson v. Fogo, 29 L. J., Ch. 657; 32 Ib. 249; 1 H. & M. 195; 8 L. T. 61; 11 W. R. 418; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 403.

A judgment in rem is an adjudication upon the status of the thing adjudicated upon. Cammell v. Sewell, 3 H. & N. 617; 5 Ib. 728; 27 L. J., Ex. 447; 29 Ib. 350; 2 L. T. 799; 8 W. R. 639. And cols. 411, 412.

The sentence in a foreign court of admiralty, decreeing a ship to be lawful prize, is conclusive. Hughes v. Cornelius, Shower, 495. See INTERNATIONAL LAW.

An order to wind up a company is not a judgment in rem, and if made improperly is not binding on strangers. Bowling and Welby's Contract, In re, 64 L. J., Ch. 427; [1895] 1 Ch. 663; 72 L. T. 411; 43 W. R. 417.

Judgment obtained by Fraud.]—See JUDGMENT.

3. AGAINST WHAT PARTIES.

Same Parties.]—A judgment is conclusive between the same parties. Kingston's (Duchess of) Case, 2 Sm. L. Cas. 713; 20 How. St. Tr. 537: Reg. v. Inhabitants of Harlington, 4 E. & B. 780; Outram v. Morewood, 3 East, 346.

A judgment obtained by A. in an action for use and occupation, against B. and C., is no evidence to charge B. in a subsequent action brought by A. against him alone, for the use and occupation of the same premises for a subsequent period. Christy v. Tancred, 9 M. & W. 438; 11 L. J., Ex. 109.

But a judgment in a former action for use and occupation between the same parties, given in favour of the plaintiff, is evidence of the defendant's having occupied, but is not conclusive. Jones v. Reynolds, 7 Car. & P. 335.

On an issue whether the churchwarden ought to be elected by the select vestry, a record of a trial between the former churchwarden and another person is admissible. Berry v. Banner, 1 Peake, 212; 3 R. R. 674.

In ejectment for lands in Kent, the plaintiff's case depended upon shewing that the lands had been disgavelled by a private act, which was alleged to have been passed in 2 & 3 Edw. 6. The act, after proper search, could not be found. As secondary evidence of its contents, there was produced an office copy of a special verdict returned upon the trial of a feigned issue in H. T. 13 & 14 Car. 2, wherein the jury found that, at a parliament, &c., holden, &c., it was enacted, &c. The act was then set out, whereby certain lands in Kent, including some held by T., were disgavelled. There was evidence to identify the lands with those held by a person of that name at the time the act was stated to have passed:—Held, that the special verdict, being res inter alios acta, was not admissible per se, and that it was not receivable as containing an authenticated copy of the act, inasmuch as it was strictly the finding of a matter of fact, not professing to set forth a copy of the act according to its tenor, nor stating the title of the act so as to identify it with the lost act. Doe d. Bacon v. Brydges, 6 Man. & G. 282; 7 Scott (N.R.) 333; 13 L. J., C. P. 209.

To a replication taking issue on a plea of a public right of way to a declaration for trespass, the defendant rejoined by way of estoppel, that P. and others, being seised in fee of the locus in quo, were indicted and convicted for a nuisance in obstructing the way, and on proof of the abatement were fined; and that the plaintiff afterwards took possession of the land as trustee for P. and others, and was prior in estate to them, and that the defendant was one of the prosecutors of the indictment:—Held, that the rejoinder was bad, the indictment not operating by way of estoppel on the plaintiff. Petrie v. Nuttall, 11 Ex. 569; 25 L. J., Ex. 200. And see Hacking v. Lee, 9 W. R. 70.

Where in an action improperly brought against an administratrix, she pleaded in abatement that others were jointly liable, which she failed to prove, in consequence of which the plaintiff recovered a verdict, with one shilling damages :—Held that such a verdict did not amount to satisfaction, so as to bar the plaintiff from recovering against the others. Godson v. Smith, 2 Moore, 157 ; 19 R. R. 553.

All Parties to Suit.]—All original parties to the suit, or those that are made parties thereto, or to the decree, of full age, and such as claim under them pendente lite, are regularly bound by the decree. Style v. Martin, 1 Ch. Ca. 152.

Persons not Parties to Agreement.]—A decree for the execution of an agreement to inclose a common, parties having an interest in the common, but not parties to the agreement, shall not be bound. Thirreton v. Collier, 1 Ch. Ca. 48. Anon., 3 Ch. Rep. 13 ; Nel. 79.

Decree against Lord of Manor not binding on Copyholders.]—A decree against the lord of a manor will not bind copyholders in fee or freeholders for life where they are not parties. Poore v. Clarke, 2 Atk. 516.

As between Copyhold Tenants themselves.]—How far tenants of manor, who are not parties to decree against other tenants shall be bound by it. Brown v. Howard, 1 Eq. Abr. 163.

Decree in Chancery on Matter of Right.]—Decree of Court of Chancery determining matter of right, is good evidence of that right as to all persons claiming under party against whom decree was made, though at ever so great a distance of time. Borough v. Whichcote, 3 Bro. P. C. 595.

Real Estate Abroad—Unregistered Litigants.]—A judgment in a suit between A. and B. in respect to real estate in Natal registered in C.'s name as purchaser, holding the transaction fraudulent, is res inter alios acta as to C., in a subsequent suit by A. against C. Natal Land and Colonization Co. v. Good, 5 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 132 ; L. R. 2 P. C. 121 ; 16 W. R. 1086.

Incumbrancers' Suits — Consolidation.]—Several incumbrancers' suits having been consolidated, a decree was made in them all directing certain incumbrances to be kept down, and the several plaintiffs' costs to be added to their debts :—Held, that a party to one of the suits was estopped by the decree from disputing the validity of one of the incumbrances directed to be kept down. Ford v. Tynte, 3 N. R. 559.

Where same Person practically both Plaintiff and Defendant in First Suit.]—The defendants pleaded in bar to an action to recover a penalty for breach of 21 Geo. 3, c. 49, a judgment in favour of a third party for the same penalty. That judgment was obtained in an action which was commenced in the name of R., with his consent, while the plaintiff's action was pending, and was carried through to judgment by the intervention of a solicitor employed by the defendants and without the interference of R. : it was commenced for the protection of the defendants from any action brought or to be brought in respect of the penalty claimed in it ; and also for the purpose of taking the home secretary's opinion whether he would remit the penalty :—Held, that the judgment recovered was no bar to an action for the same offence by a different plaintiff.—By Brett, L.J., on the ground that the judgment had been recovered in an action in which the present defendants were, in truth, both plaintiffs and defendants.—By Thesiger, L.J., on the ground that the judgment had been obtained by covin and collusion.—By Cotton, L.J., on both grounds. Girdlestone v. Brighton Aquarium Co., 48 L. J., Ex. 373 ; 4 Ex. D. 107 ; 40 L. T. 473 ; 27 W. R. 523—C. A.

Privity by Act of Law.]—In replevin between the assignees of a bankrupt (who was formerly tenant to A.) and the bailiff who distrained, one issue was whether the assignees were tenants to A. A verdict against the assignees on this issue is conclusive as to the tenancy of the assignees in an action by A. for rent. Hancock v. Welsh, 1 Stark. 347.

Action by assignees of a bankrupt for goods sold by the bankrupt ; and upon an account stated with the assignees : plea, a former action brought by the bankrupt, upon the same promises, before his bankruptcy, and still pending :—Held, that the plea was bad ; first, because the former action could not be brought upon the account stated with the assignees ; secondly, because the assignees could not continue the former suit even if they wished it. Biggs v. Cox, 7 D. & R. 409 ; 4 B. & C. 920 ; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 58.

Privity of Estate.]—An unsatisfied judgment recovered by a vestry for the expenses of paving a street under the metropolis local management acts against a former owner of tenements, is no bar to an action for these expenses against a tenant under a succeeding owner of the tenements. Bermondsey Vestry v. Ramsey, 40 L. J., C. P. 206 ; L. R. 6 C. P. 247 ; 24 L. T. 429 ; 19 W. R. 774.

A judgment of ouster against one corporator is conclusive evidence against another who derives title under him. Rex v. York Corporation, 5 Term Rep. 66.

In an action by A. and B., for diverting water from their works, it appeared that A., when in the sole possession of the same works, had brought a former action for a similar injury, against the same defendants, in which he had recovered a verdict and judgment against them ; and it being proved that A. and B. were in possession of the same works :—Held, that this was abundant primâ facie evidence, that they were privy in estate to the former plaintiff, and that the verdict and judgment in the former action were admissible against the same defendants in this action. Blakemore v. Glamorganshire Canal Co., 2 C. M. & R. 133 ; 1 Gale, 78 ; 5 Tyr. 603.

A suit was instituted in the Court of Chancery by the plaintiffs on behalf of themselves and all other occupiers of lands and tenements within Epping Forest, against the lord of a manor within that forest and two grantees from that lord of part of the wastes of the manor. The plaintiffs claimed to be entitled to rights of common over the wastes of the manor, and alleged that the lord of the manor in question inclosed or authorised the inclosure of large portions of the waste, so as to interfere with the rights of common, and had granted other portions of the waste to persons who made similar inclosures, and that such persons were too numerous to be made parties to the suit, but were sufficiently represented by the two grantees made defendants thereto. A decree was made establishing the right of common claimed, and granting an injunction. After the judicature acts came into operation the same plaintiffs filed a supplemental statement of claim against another grantee from the same lord, seeking to have the benefit of the decree against him, and an injunction:—Held, that the defendant was bound by the decree in the suit so that he could not litigate the right of common thereby established. Sewers Commissioners v. Gellatly, 45 L. J., Ch. 788; 3 Ch. D. 610; 24 W. R. 1059.

Held also, that the proceedings for enforcing the decree against him were not merely supplemental, but in the nature of original proceedings. Ib. See also Reg. v. Blackmore, 2 Den. C. C. 410; 21 L. J., M. C. 60; 16 Jur. 154.

—— Decree against Lessee — Surrender to Reversioner.]—A decree against the lessee, and all claiming under him. He surrenders to him in reversion who was held to be bound by the decree for so long a time as the lease would have continued. Chapman v. Bissow, Toth. 61.

—— Person assisting to pay Costs in former Action.]—Debentures issued by an American company purported to be charged on land in Mexico, and were secured by a trust deed dated March 10, 1888. The debenture-holders had power under the deed by special resolution to sanction any modification or compromise of their rights against the company or its property. In 1889 an English company was formed, to which all the assets and liabilities of the American company were, subject to the debentures, transferred by a notarial deed of transfer dated May 11, 1889, and the English company covenanted to indemnify the American company against all claims and liabilities. Registration of the transfer was, according to Mexican law, necessary to complete the title of the English company, and such registration was not completed until 22nd September, 1891. At a meeting of the debenture-holders in the American company, held on March 4, 1889, a special resolution was duly passed that all the rights of the debenture-holders against the American company should be compromised by the acceptance of fully paid-up shares in the English company. The plaintiffs, who were debenture-holders in the American company and opposed to the resolution, did not attend the meeting, and brought an action against the American company to recover interest due in respect of their debentures. On July 3, 1891, judgment was given for the plaintiffs on the ground that the resolution was not binding upon them. The English company assisted the American company in their action and paid their costs. The plaintiffs then brought this action against the English company, the trustee, and the debenture-holders' committee under the trust deed, to enforce their charge against the land in Mexico:—Held, that the English company, not having been parties to the action against the American company, were not estopped by the judgment in that action, notwithstanding the assistance they had given to the American company; that the English company were not bound as "privies in estate" of the American company, inasmuch as there was at the time of the prior action no charge on the land binding according to the laws of Mexico, the plaintiffs merely seeking in that action to enforce a personal claim in this country against the American company. Mercantile Investment and General Trust Co. v. River Plate Trust Loan and Agency Co., 63 L. J., Ch. 366; [1894] 1 Ch. 578; 8 R. 791; 70 L. T. 131; 42 W. R. 365.

—— Conversion of Leaseholds into Fee.]—A judgment inter partes is an estoppel against privies in estate only where the estate has been acquired by the person sought to be estopped subsequently to the date of the judgment. The conversion of an existing renewable leasehold into a fee farm grant is not the acquisition of a new estate for this purpose. De Burgho's Estate, In re, [1896] 1 Ir. R. 274.

Persons whose Interests not quite Identical.]—If parties litigate a question in a court of competent jurisdiction, and a final decision is given thereon, such parties or those claiming through them cannot afterwards re-open the same question in another court. This restriction does not extend to other persons whose interest is almost identical with that of one of the parties to the first suit if they do not actually claim through such party. Spencer v. Spencer, 40 L. J., P. 45; L. R. 2 P. 230; 24 L. T. 513; 19 W. R. 703.

Will—Construction—Decision in respect of another Fund—Person interested, but not Party accepting Benefit of Decision.]—A person interested under a will who has accepted, with reference to a particular fund, the benefit of a construction put on the will by the court in an action to which he was not formally made a party, but of which he had full knowledge, is, in the absence of special circumstances, bound by the decision of the court, and the court will not allow such a person to dispute its decision by commencing a fresh action in respect of another fund arising under the will under a different interest, but in identical circumstances. Lart, In re, Wilkinson v. Blades, 65 L. J., Ch. 846; [1896] 2 Ch. 788; 75 L. T. 175; 45 W. R. 27.

Trustees not Parties to Administration Suit.]—Trustees of property assigned to them for the benefit of younger children cannot in any way be bound by orders in chancery made in an administration suit to which they are not parties. Such orders are irregular. Muskerry v. Skeffington, L. R. 3 H. L. 144.

Orders in Administration Suit—Maintenance.]—A testator, in 1823, directed his trustees to apply such part of a moiety of the surplus rents, as they in their discretion should see fit, for the maintenance, &c., of his younger children during his widow's life, and, at her decease, to pay them 1,000*l.* apiece. Subject thereto, A. B. was absolutely entitled to the estate. In a suit for the performance of the trusts, the estate was sold, and a fund was set apart to provide for the widow's dower, which was ordered to be charged with the legacies, payable at her death, and A. B. was declared entitled to the remaining fund. The widow died in 1854, and no provision having been made for the children's maintenance under the discretionary direction, a younger child sought to obtain payment out of the dower fund, but the court held, that whatever his rights may be, they had been concluded by the previous orders made in this cause. Livesey v. Harding, 21 Beav. 227.

Representative Class — Right Fairly Contested.]—When a general right is fairly contested and established against a representative class, parties not actually parties are still bound by representation, so far as the general right is tried and established. Sewers Commissioners v.

Gellatly, 45 L. J., Ch. 788; 3 Ch. D. 610; 24 W. R. 346.

Foreclosure in England—Bill for, in Ireland.]—A mortgagee of part of estate in Ireland files his bill of foreclosure in Court of Chancery in England, and obtains the usual decree. A mortgagee of other part of same estate files bill of foreclosure in Ireland, and on hearing of cause desired that decree of English chancery might be read, to intent that decree in Irish chancery might be made agreeable thereto. But refused, because present plaintiff, though defendant in former cause, was not brought to hearing in that cause, and consequently was no party to that decree. Everard v. Ashton, 3 Bro. P. C. 561.

Charitable Gift—Decree distributing among Parishes.]—A testator devised his real estates, in trust to dispose of the rents for the benefit of the poor of the city of R., and the limits and precincts thereof. The trustees having applied the rents for the benefit of the poor of one only of the parishes in the city, an information was filed on behalf of two other parishes, claiming to participate in the charity, and a decree was made in 1680 directing that the rents should for ever thereafter be divided amongst the three parishes in certain proportions. In 1808 an information was filed on behalf of a fourth parish, for a similar purpose, and that parish was decreed to be entitled to a share of the rents, in the proportion of its extent and the population of the three other parishes; but the proportions, as between those parishes, were not to be altered. An information was afterwards filed on behalf of one of those three parishes, claiming an increased share of the rents, on account of its population having increased more than the population of the other parishes. But the information was dismissed, the decree of 1680 being final. Att.-Gen. v. Rochester Corporation, 6 Sim. 273.

Debt due by Decree binds Heir with Assets.]—A debt due by decree in equity, though but a personal demand, will bind the heir or devisee having assets, and such heir or devisee refusing to perform a decree against him, will be subject to an attachment. Connor v. Browne, 1 Ridgw. P. C. 139.

Actions by Persons in different Capacities.]—An action by an administratrix for damage caused to the personal estate of the intestate through the negligence of the defendant in causing his death, is not brought in the same right as an action under Lord Campbell's Act (9 & 10 Vict. c 93), to recover compensation to the family of the deceased for his death, and an admission in the latter action creates no estoppel in the former. Leggett v. G. N. Ry., 45 L. J., Q. B. 557; 1 Q. B. D. 599; 35 L. T. 334; 24 W. R. 784. And see Hacking v. Lee, 9 W. R. 70.

Feme Covert.]—Feme covert not entitled to a day to shew cause against a decretal order, as an infant; but it is binding till reversed. Burke v. Crosbie, 1 Ball & B. 503.

A feme covert is as much bound by a decree as a feme sole. Ib. 502. And see Turner v. Turner, 2 De G. M. & G. 28; 21 L. J., Ch. 422.

Husband and Wife—Action by.]—In February, 1881, Mrs. N., by her next friend, brought an action of N. v. N. against her husband for specific performance of an ante-nuptial agreement to settle on her a share of property given to her by her father's will. In March of the same year the husband brought the action N. v. L. in his own and his wife's name against the trustees of her father's will for an account of the said share. The trustees in their defence pleaded that the plaintiff's right to an account depended upon the facts which were in issue in the action of N. v. N. Before the hearing of N. v. L. judgment was delivered in N. v. N., establishing Mrs. N.'s right to a specific performance of the agreement to settle:—Held, that the action of N. v. L. must be regarded as that of the husband alone, and the judgment against him in N. v. N. was an estoppel in fact to him setting up any right to an account of the share which that judgment had decided did not belong to him. Defries, In re, Norton v. Levy, 48 L. T. 703; 31 W. R. 720. And see col. 406.

Held, also, that the pleading of the pendency of the action prevented any failure of the estoppel from the judgment not having been pleaded. Ib.

Executor's Claim—Priority of Charge.]—A. and B. had charges on a plantation and the slaves. In 1834 an issue was tendered in a suit between them as to their priority on the slave compensation money. B. withdrew his claim, and the bill was, on motion, dismissed sixteen years afterwards, when the witnesses were dead. B.'s executors raised the same question of priority in regard to the plantation itself:—Held, that they were concluded by the transactions of 1834. Bushby v. Ellis, 17 Beav. 279.

In Creditors' Administration Suit.]—In a creditors' suit for administration of the real and personal estate of a testator, a judgment recovered against the executors (who were also trustees of the real estate) is primâ facie evidence of a debt as against the persons interested in the real estate; but they will be at liberty to adduce rebutting evidence. Harvey v. Wilde, 41 L. J., Ch. 698; L. R. 14 Eq. 438; 27 L. T. 471.

Ejectment—Parties not in Possession.]—A plaintiff in ejectment, who enters judgment by default against several, is not estopped by the record from shewing that some of them were not in possession, and were unnecessary parties. Le Clere v. Greene, Ir. R. 7 Eq. 371; 22 W. R. 428.

Validity of Execution.]—The right of an execution creditor to enforce an execution against the estate of a bankrupt depended on whether the bankrupt had or had not been a trader. In an action by the creditor against the sheriff for wrongfully withdrawing from possession of the goods which he had seized under the execution, judgment passed for the sheriff, on the ground that the bankrupt was a trader, and that therefore the goods belonged to the trustee in bankruptcy:—Held, that the creditor was precluded from raising the question of the validity of his execution in an application against the trustee in the court of bankruptcy. Harper, Ex parte, Bremner, In re, 44 L. J., Bk. 57; L. R. 10 Ch. 379; 32 L. T. 317; 23 W. R. 433.

Order in Administration Suit—Subsequent Petition.]—A testator directed his trustees to hold certain real and residuary personal estate upon trust, to pay thereout to his widow for life such an annual sum as, together with the income of a settled fund of 10,000*l.*, shall produce to her a clear annual income of 1,500*l.*, and declared that "no deduction shall be made from any of the legacies given by this my will for the legacy tax, or any other matter, cause, or thing whatsoever." The testator's estate had been administered by the court, and by orders made in 1861 and 1863, the trustees had been directed to pay the annuity to the widow during her life, or until further order, free of all deductions except income tax. On petition by the widow, in 1882, that the income tax, which had been deducted from her annuity during the previous years, might be repaid to her out of the testator's estate:—Held, that the orders of 1861 and 1863 were final as to the rights of the parties, and could not now be reconsidered. Peareth v. Marriott, 52 L. J., Ch. 221; 22 Ch. D. 182; 48 L. T. 170; 31 W. R. 68.

Contracts of Indemnity.]—A judgment in an action inter partes is only binding on the parties to the action and those claiming under them, except in a case where there is an express contract by C. to indemnify B. against an action brought against him by A. In such a case judgment in the action by A. against B. will be conclusive in an action by B. against C. upon the contract of indemnity, because that is the real meaning of such a contract. Parker v. Lewis, 43 L. J., Ch. 281; L. R. 8 Ch. 1035; 29 L. T. 199; 21 W. R. 923, 928.

A. had guaranteed the payment to B. of two bills of exchange accepted by C., and afterwards handed over the amount of the bills to B. A fiat having issued against C., his assignees, in an action, recovered the money from B., as having been paid by way of fraudulent preference. In an action by B. against A. upon the guarantee, A. pleaded that C. paid, and B. received, the money in satisfaction of the bills; which allegation was traversed:—Held, that the verdict and judgment in the action by the assignees against B., although evidence to explain the transaction, were not conclusive against A. that the money had been received by B. to the use of the assignees. Pritchard v. Hitchcock, 6 Man. & G. 151; 6 Scott (N.R.) 851; 12 L. J., C. P. 322.

In an action on a bond to save the plaintiff harmless from any loss he might incur in being surety for S., who had been appointed collector of taxes, the defendant pleaded non damnificatus; to which the plaintiff replied, "that, during the time S. was collector there came to his hands as such collector large sums of money, amounting in the whole to 500*l.*," and alleged that S. had not duly paid the sums to the receiver-general of taxes, by which the plaintiff was forced to pay to the receiver-general 500*l.*, and had so incurred loss:—Held, that a judgment which was signed against the plaintiff in a suit against him by the receiver of taxes for the money so due from S., was not evidence against the defendant of the amount the plaintiff had been obliged to pay through the default of S. King v. Norman, 4 C. B. 884; 17 L. J., C. P. 23; 11 Jur. 824.

Joint Contractors or Debtors.]—One of three joint covenantors gave a bill of exchange for part of a debt secured by a covenant, on which bill judgment was recovered:—Held, that such judgment was no bar to an action on the covenant against the three, such bill not being averred to have been accepted in satisfaction, or to have produced it in fact. Drake v. Mitchell, 3 East, 251; 7 R. R. 449.

The defendant being jointly interested with W. & Co. in a contract in respect of which they were indebted to the plaintiff, the plaintiff recovered judgment against W. & Co. W. & Co. afterwards became bankrupt. The plaintiff proved against their estate, and then brought an action on the contract against the defendant:—Held, that the judgment obtained against W. & Co. was a bar to the action. Kendall v. Hamilton, 48 L. J., C. P. 705; 4 App. Cas. 504; 41 L. T. 418; 28 W. R. 97—H. L. (E.)

Partnership debts are not necessarily joint as well as several, the liability of the estate of a deceased partner on a partnership contract being based on the ground that where there is no survivorship of interest there ought not to be survivorship of liability. Ib.

A judgment (without satisfaction) recovered against one of two joint debtors, is a bar to an action against the other. King v. Hoare, 13 M. & W. 494; 2 D. & L. 382; 14 L. J., Ex. 29.

Secus, where the debt is joint and several. Ib.

A judgment recovered by one of several joint debtors cannot be pleaded as a defence to a subsequent action against the other joint debtors in respect of the same cause, unless the plea shews that the judgment was recovered on a ground which operated as a discharge of all. Phillips v. Ward, 2 H. & C. 717; 33 L. J., Ex. 7; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1182; 9 L. T. 345; 12 W. R. 106.

In an action against one of several joint contractors, he cannot plead in abatement the pendency of another action for the same cause against another co-contractor; but he should plead in abatement the non-joinder of the joint contractor; and if a second action is brought against all, the pendency of the former action against the other joint contractor may be pleaded. Henry v. Goldney, 4 D. & L. 6; 15 M. & W. 484; 15 L. J., Ex. 298; 10 Jur. 439.

Where the master of a ship signs a bill of lading in his own name, and is sued upon it, and judgment is obtained against him, an action will not lie against the owner of the ship upon the same bill of lading, although satisfaction has not been obtained on the judgment against the master. Priestley v. Fernie, 3 H. & C. 977; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 813; 13 W. R. 1089.

Two partners, acting by one of them, bought goods, and afterwards the vendor, with notice of the partnership, brought an action and recovered judgment against the one partner alone, and issued execution which was however, defeated by an adjudication of bankruptcy against him, followed by an adjudication against his partner:—Held, that the original debt was merged in the judgment, and that there could be no proof upon it against the joint estate. Higgins, Ex parte, Tyler, In re, 3 De G. & J. 33; 27 L. J., Bk. 27; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 595; 6 W. R. 406.

—— Judgment against Husband — Action against Wife, a Joint-Contractor.]—H. sued C. N. for breach of an agreement to let a furnished house for a year with the option of purchasing the furniture and effects, and obtained judgment for 30*l.* damages. C. N. only satisfied this judgment in part, and became bankrupt. H. then commenced an action against the wife of C. N., upon the same contract and for the same breaches:—Held, that H. was properly nonsuited in the second action: for the judgment already obtained against the husband in respect of the same cause of action must be treated as a judgment against one of two joint contractors; and the ordinary rule of law that a judgment (although unsatisfied) against one of two joint-contractors is a bar to a subsequent action for the same breach against the other joint-contractor was applicable. Hoare v. Niblett, 60 L. J., Q. B. 565; [1891] 1 Q. B. 781; 64 L. T. 659; 39 W. R. 491; 55 J. P. 664.

—— Judgment against one of two Joint-Contractors—Application to set aside by Consent—Adding other Joint Contractor as Defendant.]—An application was made, by consent of the plaintiff and defendant, to set aside a judgment, and to add as a party to the suit another person alleged to be a joint-contractor with the defendant:—Held, that the plaintiff's rights against the defendant's joint-contractor having been extinguished by the judgment, the consent of the parties thereto could not be allowed to revive them, and that the application must be refused. Hammond v. Schofield, 60 L. J., Q. B. 539; [1891] 1 Q. B. 453.

Against one of several Tortfeasors.]—Final judgment recovered against one of two joint wrong-doers is a bar to an action against the other for the same cause of action, although such judgment is unsatisfied, but unless it is satisfied, the property in goods obtained by the wrong-doer is not changed so as to vest it in the person against whom such judgment was obtained. Brinsmead v. Harrison, 40 L. J., C. P. 281; L. R. 6 C. P. 584; 24 L. T. 798; 19 W. R. 956. Affirmed 41 L. J., C. P. 190; L. R. 7 C. P. 547; 27 L. T. 99; 20 W. R. 784—Ex. Ch.

Status of Legitimacy—Attorney-General—Interest of Crown.]—In a petition under the Legitimacy Declaration Act, the citation of parties between whom and the petitioner there already exists a judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction upon the subject now in suit does not afford ground for a plea of res judicata. The Attorney-General is by the act a necessary respondent, and the court is bound therefore to decide the personal question of status as between the Crown and the petitioner. Shedden v. Attorney-General, 30 L. J., P. 217.

Agents or Principals.]—When an agent (his principal being undisclosed) makes a contract in his own name, and the contractor sues the agent for breach of that contract, and obtains judgment against him, he, the contractor, cannot afterwards, upon discovery of the principal, sue the latter in respect of the same breach of contract, although the judgment recovered against the agent remains unsatisfied. Priestley v. Fernie, 3 H. & C. 977; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 813; 13 W. R. 1089.

Effect of Mistake.]—A verdict against one defendant in trespass upon an issue of a justification of a public right of way, negativing such right, is evidence in an action for breaking and entering the same close against another defendant, who justifies under the same right; and the latter cannot shew that such verdict was entered upon that particular plea by mistake of the officer, there having been no evidence given on either side in respect of that issue on the former trial; the record being conclusive as to the fact of such finding, though not as to the truth of it between other parties. Reed v. Jackson, 1 East, 355; 6 R. R. 283.

Where Public are Interested.]—A plaintiff claimed tolls throughout the port of Padstow:—Held, that a record of K. B. of 7 Ric. 2, of a cause removed by certiorari from the maritime court of Aldestowe, was receivable for the plaintiff, although that cause was trespass for taking a ship, and the present plaintiff and defendant did not claim under either of the parties to it; evidence was allowed to be given by the witness who produced it, that he had ascertained from records that Aldestowe and Padstow are different names for the same place. Brune v. Thompson, Car. & M. 34.

A right of ferry is a matter in which the public is interested, and as to which, therefore, a verdict or a judgment of a court of competent jurisdiction touching the same right is evidence, although between other parties. Pim v. Curell, 6 M. & W. 234.

In an action by the lord of a manor against a copyholder, for trespassing on a free warren of the lord, a judgment on a quo warranto against a former owner of the manor, in which the attorney-general confessed a prescriptive title to the franchise of free warren, as appurtenant to the manor, is evidence for the plaintiff in support of a prescriptive right of free warren. Carnarvon (Earl) v. Villebois, 13 M. & W. 313; 14 L. J., Ex. 233.

Where an information charged a usurpation of the franchise over the lands of tenants as well as demesne lands, and the court gave judgment for the defendant as to both, the record was held to be evidence of a prescriptive right over both, although the plea set forth a title over demesne lands only, and the attorney-general confessed the title as pleaded. Ib.

A judgment in a former action against another copyholder, for a trespass on the plaintiff's free warren, is also admissible. Ib.

Privity between Incumbent of Benefice and Patron.]—An incumbent who comes into a benefice is a privy in law to the patron who appointed him, so as to be entitled to the benefit, and subject to the burden, of the same estoppel as the patron. R., the incumbent of a living, sent in his resignation of the benefice to the bishop, on the understanding that the resignation was not to be formally accepted, nor the benefice declared vacant, until a date agreed upon between himself and the bishop. Before that date arrived R. withdrew his resignation, but the bishop refused to accept the withdrawal, and at the time agreed upon declared the benefice vacant, after which the patrons appointed another incumbent, who was duly instituted and inducted into the benefice. R. brought an action against the bishop to have his resignation declared null and void. To this action the patrons of the living were parties, and the sole question was whether the resignation was effectual, and it was decided against R. that the resignation was effectual and complete. R. refused to give up the parsonage-house and glebe lands, and in an action brought against him by the new incumbent, for an injunction to restrain him from continuing in wrongful possession of the premises and for trespass, R. set up, substantially, the same defence as in the former action, namely, that his resignation was not effectual:—Held, that, as the question of the effectuality of the resignation was raised and disposed of in the former action to which the patrons were parties, and as R. would have been estopped from raising that question again in any proceedings between himself and the patrons, he was also estopped from raising the same question as a defence against the incumbent, who, as being a privy in law to the patrons, was entitled to take advantage of the same estoppel. Magrath v. Reichel, 57 L. T. 850.

Lord of Manor and Corporation.]—In a dispute between a lord of the manor and the corporation of an adjoining port as to the right of foreshore, a decision between the parties in an action tried 150 years ago, followed by a long enjoyment on the part of the winner, and long acquiescence on the part of the loser, is primâ facie binding on the latter. Tomline, Ex parte, Walton-cum-Trimley Manor, In re, 28 L. T. 12 ; 21 W. R. 475.

Partners — Judgment against One — Action against other Partners Barred.]—An unsatisfied judgment against one joint contractor on a bill of exchange, given by him alone for the joint debt, is a bar to an action against the other joint contractor on the original contract. The plaintiffs sold goods to a partnership consisting of the defendant and W. After the sale the partnership was dissolved. The plaintiffs, who were not aware of the dissolution, drew bills for the price of the goods, which were accepted by W. in the partnership named. The plaintiffs sued W. in the partnership named on the bills, and recovered judgment, which was not satisfied. The plaintiffs afterwards sued the defendant for the price of the goods :—Held, that the case was within the principle of Kendall v. Hamilton (col. 406), and the judgment against W. on the bills was an answer to the action. Drake v. Mitchell (3 East, 251 ; 7 R. R. 449), distinguished. Cumbefort v. Chapman, 56 L. J., Q. B. 639 ; 19 Q. B. D. 229 ; 57 L. T. 625 ; 35 W. R. 838 ; 51 J. P. 455.

—— Proof against Estate of One—Action against other Partner.]—Although by the law as settled by King v. Hoare (13 Mee. & W. 494) and affirmed by Kendall v. Harrison (4 App. Cas. 504), a judgment obtained against one or more of the members of a firm of co-contractors precludes recourse to any other person not joined in the action, an exception to that rule has been long established in courts of equity—namely, that a surviving partner, or the estate of a deceased partner, is still liable to creditors of the partnership. Hodgson, In re, Beckett v. Ramsdale, 55 L. J., Ch. 241 ; 31 Ch. D. 177 ; 54 L. T. 222 ; 34 W. R. 127—C. A.

Executors of Executrix de son tort.]—J. being indebted to the plaintiff in the sum of 360*l.*, died on November 2, 1882, intestate. His widow, A., without obtaining letters of administration, intermeddled with his assets, and the plaintiff having sued her as executrix of her husband for the sum of 360*l.*, she consented to judgment, and the plaintiff thereupon signed judgment against her as executrix for his debt and costs. After her death he brought an action against her executors to recover 372*l.* 5*s.*, suggesting a devastavit by A. of her husband's assets :—Held, that the judgment against A. was conclusive as against her to shew that she then had assets of J. to satisfy the amount of the debt, viz. 372*l.* 5*s.*, and that to the extent of the difference between that amount and the sum of 154*l.*, found by the jury to be remaining at her death, a devastavit must be presumed to have been committed by her, for which her assets in the hands of the defendants were liable. Ennis v. Rochford, 14 L. R., Ir. 285.

Right of Common—Supplemental Suit.]—A suit was instituted in the Court of Chancery by the plaintiffs on behalf of themselves and all other occupiers of lands and tenements within Epping Forest, against the lord of a manor within that forest and two grantees from that lord of part of the wastes of the manor. The plaintiffs claimed to be entitled to rights of common over the wastes of the manor, and alleged that the lord of the manor in question inclosed or authorised the inclosure of large portions of the waste, so as to interfere with the rights of common, and had granted other portions of the waste to persons who made similar inclosures, and that such persons were too numerous to be made parties to the suit, but were sufficiently represented by the two grantees made defendants thereto. A decree was made, establishing the right of common claimed, and granting an injunction. After the Judicature Acts came into operation the same plaintiffs filed a supplemental statement of claim against another grantee from the same lord, seeking to have the benefit of the decree against him, and an injunction :—Held, that the defendant was bound by the decree in the suit so that he could not litigate the right of common thereby established. Sewers Commissioners v. Gellatly, 45 L. J., Ch. 788 ; 3 Ch. D. 610 ; 24 W. R. 1059.

Held, also, that the proceedings for enforcing the decree against him were not purely supplemental, but in the nature of original proceedings. Ib.

4. Judgments of what Courts.

Court known to the Law.]—Upon the trial of an issue in prohibition, whether the usurpation of office, in a quo warranto information mentioned, was committed out of the jurisdiction of the county palatine and within the city of Chester, a document from the remembrancer's office of the Court of Exchequer was produced, purporting to be a decree made (after the hearing of a complaint against the citizens of Chester, and their answer) by the lord high treasurer of England, the chancellor of the exchequer, the under-treasurer, and the chief baron, with the advice and assent of the Queen's attorney and solicitor-general, and others of the same court :—Held, that this document was not admissible as a decree, because it was not a decree of the Court of Exchequer, nor of any court known to the law at the time when it purported to have been made ; nor as an award, because there appeared no voluntary submission of the parties ; nor as evidence of reputation, because the parties making the decree had no knowledge of the subject, except that which they derived in the course of the proceedings. Rogers v. Wood, 2 B. & Ad. 245.

Proceedings in Equity.]—The dismissal of a bill, seeking equitable relief in respect of an instrument on which a party can sue at law, is no bar to an action upon the same instrument, although the decree does not state the dismissal to have been without prejudice. Beere v. Fleming, 13 Ir. C. L. R. 506.

Declaration for injury to a wall. Plea, that the plaintiff commenced proceedings in chancery against the defendant for the very same rights and claims for which the action was brought, and that proceedings were had, and the Court of Chancery determined the same, and decreed in favour of the defendant, which decree is in force. Replication, that the Court of Chancery dismissed the bill of the plaintiff in the plea mentioned, reserving to the plaintiff the right of proceeding at law:—Held, that the plea and replication were both good. Longmead v. Maple, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 255; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 177; 12 L. T. 143; 13 W. R. 469.

In an action to recover damages for a fraudulent representation, the defendant, having obtained leave to demur, and to plead legal defences, asked leave to plead, for defence on equitable grounds, that the plaintiff had filed a bill in chancery for the very same alleged grievances and causes of action, which court gave judgment in favour of the defendant, and that the plaintiff had no right to maintain that suit against him. The court thought this decision in chancery no estoppel, and refused to allow the plea unless all the rest were abandoned. Collins v. Cave, 27 L. J., Ex. 146; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 31.

Judgment was given by consent before declaration in an action by a patentee against the members of a partnership for an infringement, and they immediately took a licence to use the invention. A suit to restrain a subsequent alleged infringement having been brought by the patentee against the same members at law and two fresh partners:—Held, that the defendants in equity were not estopped by the judgment from disputing the validity of the patent. Goucher v. Clayton, 34 L. J., Ch. 239; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 107; 13 W. R. 336.

A plaintiff in equity filed his bill, stating that a policy had become void at law, and claiming to have it treated as valid in equity. After bill dismissed the plaintiff sued at law on the policy:—Held, that a bill would lie to restrain the action, and injunction granted accordingly. Tredegar (Lord) v. Windus, 44 L. J., Ch. 268; L. R. 19 Eq. 607; 32 L. T. 596; 23 W. R. 511.

Compensation Cases.]—By a canal act commissioners were appointed for settling, determining and adjusting all questions, matters and differences between the company and the owners of lands prejudiced by the execution of any of the powers thereby granted; and the amount of compensation was to be assessed by a jury, and the commissioners were to give judgment for the sum so assessed, which was to be binding, and conclusive to all intents and purposes:—Held, that the verdict and judgment were conclusive as to the amount, but not as to the claimant's right to compensation. Barber v. Nottingham and Grantham Ry., 15 C. B. (N.S.) 726; 33 L. J., C. P. 193; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 260; 9 L. T. 829; 12 W. R. 376.

The verdict and judgment upon an inquisition under the compensation clauses of the Lands Clauses Act, 1845, do not estop the company, in an action upon the judgment, from denying that the lands in respect of which the damage has been assessed, and the plaintiff's interest therein, were damaged and injuriously affected by their works. But where the damages claimed and awarded exceed 50*l.*, the company is estopped from denying that the claimant is entitled to compensation to an amount exceeding 50*l.* Read v. Victoria Station and Pimlico Ry., 1 H. & C. 826; 32 L. J., Ex. 167; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1061; 11 W. R. 1032.

In rem, in the Exchequer.]—A judgment of condemnation in rem in the exchequer is conclusive as to the legality of a seizure of the goods, in a subsequent action to recover them from the seizing officer. Cooke v. Sholl, 5 Term Rep. 255.

The record of condemnation is admissible, on a defence to an action for the price of rum sold, to prove that the rum was adulterated, being a proceeding in rem. Hart v. M'Namara, 4 Price, 154, n.; 18 R. R. 690.

But the record of a conviction for penalties, as it is a proceeding in personam, is not evidence in any case where the parties are different. Ib.

A record of condemnation of goods seized, for an act of forfeiture created by one statute, is not evidence on a charge of an offence against the same party, with respect to the same goods, created by another statute. Att.-Gen. v. King, 5 Price, 195. See col. 397, and INTERNATIONAL LAW.

Courts of Concurrent or Exclusive Jurisdiction.]—The judgments of courts of concurrent jurisdiction are evidence only where the very same matter comes distinctly in issue between the same parties. Mackintosh v. Smith, 4 Macq. H. L. 913.

The judgments of courts of exclusive jurisdiction are evidence, whether the matter arises incidentally, or is the matter directly in issue. Ib.

Admiralty Court.]—To an action for negligence in causing a collision between the defendant's and the plaintiff's vessels on the river Thames, a plea that the merits had been tried in the Court of Admiralty, and, "after due proceedings taken in that court, and in due form of law, determined in favour of the defendant," it was held that the collision occurred through the plaintiff's negligence, and not by the defendant's negligence, is a bad plea, for not shewing that the collision occurred within the jurisdiction of the Admiralty; and the allegation "that due proceedings were taken, and in due form of law determined," does not cure the defect. Harris v. Willis, 15 C. B. 710; 3 C. L. R. 609; 24 L. J., C. P. 93; 3 W. R. 238. And see Roberts v. Hartley, 1 Bro. C. C. 57.

Bankruptcy Court.]—The file of procedings in bankruptcy is not a record, but may be questioned. Bacon, Ex parte, Bond, In re, 17 Ch. D. 447; 44 L. T. 834; 29 W. R. 574—C. A.

A creditor who had proved a debt, and voted in respect of it, subsequently discovered that he had omitted to state and value a certain mortgage security. He obtained leave to withdraw his proof and file an amended one upon certain conditions. Having appealed against the order, and the appeal having been dismissed, no further steps were taken by the creditor. The trustees in the bankruptcy obtained an order declaring that they were entitled to the proceeds of the mortgage security which had been omitted from the original proof:—Held, that the matter was not res judicata, and that as there had been a bonâ fide mistake on the part of the proving creditor in the omission of his mortgage security, he was entitled to have it rectified and to amend his proof. Whitton, Ex parte, Greaves, In re, 43 L. T. 480.

Colonial Court.]—If a bill is filed in the Court of Chancery in England, praying the same relief as a bill previously filed by the plaintiff in a colonial court of concurrent jurisdiction, an adverse decree in the former suit cannot be pleaded as a defence, unless the grounds on which the subsequent claim is made are identical with those alleged in the former suit. Hunter v. Stewart, 31 L. J., Ch. 346; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 317; 10 W. R. 176.

County Courts.] — A servant in husbandry having been hired from 1st of August, 1858, to Martinmas next ensuing, for the wages of 5*l.*, entered the service, and continued in it till 7th of September, 1858, when her master discharged her. Thereupon she sued him in a county court claiming damages for the discharge, as having been without reasonable cause. The judge of the county court gave a verdict for the master. Afterwards, in May, 1859, the servant took out a summons before justices against the master, to recover 5*l.* wages:—Held, that the question for decision in the county court and by the justices being substantially identical, namely, whether the discharge of the servant was without just cause, the justices were bound to treat the decision of the county court, a court of concurrent jurisdiction, upon it, as conclusive between the parties; although the form of the claim in the summons varied from that made in the plaint in the county court. Routledge v. Hislop, 2 El. & El. 549; 29 L. J., M. C. 90; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 398; 2 L. T. 53; 8 W. R. 363.

By Ord. XVI. r. 17, of county court orders, 1875, "any judgment of nonsuit, unless the judge otherwise directs, shall have the same effect as a judgment upon the merits for the defendant." Such rule is a copy of Ord. XLI. r. 6, of the judicature orders, and was made by a committee of county court judges, with the approval of the lord chancellor, under the authority of s. 32 of the County Courts Act, 1856 (19 & 20 Vict. c. 108), which authorises such county court judges, with such approval to frame rules and orders "for regulating the practice of the courts and forms of proceedings therein":—Held, that unless rule 17 of the county court orders was ultra vires, a judgment of nonsuit in a county court not appealed against nor set aside, was a bar to an action by the plaintiff for the same debt in the superior court. Poyser v. Minors, 50 L. J., Q. B. 555; 7 Q. B. D. 329; 45 L. T. 33; 29 W. R. 773; 46 J. P. 84—C. A.

The plaintiffs being summoned to appear before justices of the peace to answer a complaint that they had refused to pay the amount of a church-rate, appeared, and upon the hearing gave notice that they disputed the validity of the rate, and required the justices to forbear from, and not to give judgment in respect of the matter of complaint. They, nevertheless, being of opinion that the objection to the rate was not bonâ fide, made an order for payment, and subsequently issued a distress warrant, under which the plaintiffs' goods were seized. The plaintiffs brought an action against the justices in respect of the seizure, and the plaintiffs having levied a plaint of replevin in a county court against the churchwardens in respect of the seizure, and recovered damages and costs in respect thereof:—Held that such recovery was a bar to the recovery of damages as against the justices. Pease v. Chaytor, 3 B. & S. 620; 32 L. J., M. C. 121; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 664; 8 L. T. 613; 11 W. R. 563.

The judgment of a county court as to matters within its jurisdiction, is by virtue of 9 & 10 Vict. c. 95, s. 89, of equal validity for the purposes of evidence with the judgment of a superior court, although the record in the county court may not shew upon what issues or upon what grounds the decision was given. Flitters v. Allfrey, 44 L. J., C. P. 73; L. R. 10 C. P. 29; 31 L. T. 878; 23 W. R. 442.

F. was tenant to A. of a cottage. A. treated F. as a weekly tenant, and gave him one week's notice to quit. As F. remained in the cottage, A. obtained a warrant of justices under 1 & 2 Vict. c. 74 (Small Tenements Act), and evicted F. from the cottage. Afterwards A. sued F. in a county court for rent of the cottage, claimed to be due upon the weekly tenancy. F. alleged that his tenancy was from year to year, and that at the time of his eviction a year of his holding had not expired, and no rent was due. The judge held that the tenancy was from year to year, and gave judgment for F. Thereupon F. sued A. in the superior court for trespass in wrongfully evicting him from the cottage by the warrant of the justices, and he again contended that as he was tenant from year to year his tenancy had never been lawfully determined. The jury found that F.'s tenancy was from week to week:—Held, that despite of the finding of the jury F. was entitled to have the verdict entered for him; for the judgment of the county court was, as evidence, conclusive, between F. and A. as to the tenancy, in this court; that the tenancy must be assumed to have been from year to year, and that the eviction of F. from the cottage must be taken to have been unlawful. Ib.

As to a consent judgment in the county court, see Ribble Joint Committee v. Croston Urban District Council, 66 L. J., Q. B. 384; [1897] 1 Q. B. 251; 45 W. R. 348.

Consular Courts.]—A judgment of a British consular court, established abroad under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 94, in an action of debt properly brought by the plaintiff in that court, together with payment by the defendant to the plaintiff of the sum awarded to the latter by such judgment, forms a good bar to an action in a court here for the same subject-matter. Barber v. Lambe, 8 C. B. (N.S.) 95; 29 L. J., C. P. 234; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 981; 2 L. T. 238; 8 W. R. 461.

Divorce Court.]—A married woman, living apart from her husband, incurred a debt for necessaries. The husband being sued, pleaded never indebted, and gave in evidence an account of proceedings instituted by himself against the wife for adultery, in which the jury found in the affirmative, judgment being entered accordingly. As it was proved that the husband had also committed adultery, the judge dismissed his petition:—Held, that the judgment in the divorce court was merely the finding of the jury, and though it might bind the parties themselves, it did not affect strangers. Needham v. Bremner, 1 H. & R. 731; 35 L. J., C. P. 313; L. R. 1 C. P. 583; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 434; 14 L. T. 437; 14 W. R. 694.

Ecclesiastical Courts.] — A sentence in an ecclesiastical court in a matter properly cognizable there, is conclusive evidence where the same matter comes in question collaterally in a court of law or equity. Meadowes v. Kingston, (Duchess), Amb. 756.

A sentence of jactitation of marriage was not conclusive evidence of its validity: and might be impeached as having been obtained by fraud.

Kingston's (Duchess) Case, 1 Leach, C. C. 146; 1 East, P. C. 468. And see Harrison v. Southampton Corporation, 22 L. J., Ch. 372; 1 W. R. 422.

If the sentence of an ecclesiastical court in a suit for administration turns upon the question of which of the parties is next of kin to the intestate, such sentence is conclusive upon that question in a subsequent suit in the Court of Chancery between the same parties for distribution. Barrs v. Jackson, 1 Ph. 582; 14 L. J., Ch. 433; 9 Jur. 609.

Indian Court.]—The plaintiff, resident in England, carried on business in India and England in partnership with the defendant, who resided in India. Questions having arisen between them, the plaintiff filed a bill in the Supreme Court of Equity at Calcutta against the defendant for an account, and for an injunction, and a revivor. Pending the suit, the defendant left India and came to, and resided permanently in England; and eventually the bill was taken pro confesso, and a decree was made referring it to the master to take the accounts. The plaintiff then filed his bill in this country, alleging that by reason of the absence from India of the defendant the suit there could not be prosecuted, and praying relief here similar to that sought in the suit in India. The defendant, answering such parts of the bill as sought discovery of documents, pleaded the existence of the decree in the court in India, and the present existence of the proceedings before the master there, in bar to the substantial parts of the plaintiff's bill:—Held, that the plea must be overruled. Ostell v. Lepage, 5 De G. & Sm. 95; 21 L. J., Ch. 501; 16 Jur. 404.

Privy Council.]—A second incumbrancer filed a bill in Granada, to which the mortgagor and first incumbrancer were parties, defendants, impeaching one of the deeds under which the first incumbrancer claimed, and praying that the equity of redemption of the mortgaged premises might be sold. By a decree made in that suit, the court in Granada declared the impeached deed void, the effect of which was to reduce considerably the claim of the first incumbrancer; he, therefore, appealed from that decree to the privy council, who reversed the decree of the court in Granada, and established the deed in question. Before that suit was finally concluded, the mortgagor filed a bill here against the first incumbrancer for redemption, praying that the same deed which had been affirmed by the privy council might be declared void. His bill was dismissed with costs, on the ground that he was concluded by the decree of the privy council from raising in a new suit, the question as to the validity of that instrument. Farquharson v. Seton, 5 Russ. 45.

Inferior Courts.]—A sentence of expulsion, unappealed from, may be given in evidence on an indictment for assaulting a member of a college in the University of Cambridge, by turning him out of the college gardens, and is conclusive for the defendant. Rex v. Grundon, Cowp. 315.

Where a cause is removed by habeas corpus from an inferior court after judgment by default, that judgment is not evidence against the defendant in the superior court. Bottings v. Firby, 9 B. & C. 762; 4 M. & Ry. 566; 7 L. J. (O.S.), K. B. 329.

To an action for money had and received, the defendant pleaded a recovery by foreign attachment at the suit of a creditor of the plaintiff, and that the creditor had execution of the sum recovered according to the custom of London; the plaintiff insisted that no execution was executed; on which the defendant joined issue:—Held, that the jury was not precluded by a record of satisfaction in the former attachment from finding the real facts of the case. Magrath v. Hardy, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 782; 6 Scott, 627; 6 D. P. C. 749; 1 Arn. 352; 7 L. J., C. P. 299; 2 Jur. 594.

Orders of the commissioners of sewers requiring land-owners to repair and alter sea-walls, are admissible as adjudications by a court of competent jurisdiction, without proof of their having been acted on. Reg. v. Leigh, 2 P. & D. 357; 10 A. & E. 398.

After a considerable lapse of time (as seventy years), the court will presume that such orders were executed. Ib.

Where a plaintiff sued his steward in an inferior court for 4,000*l.*, which was a less sum than he knew to be due to him, and upon the final investigation of the defendant's accounts, and upon judgment by default verified 3,400*l.* only:—Held, upon a plea of judgment recovered in answer to a second action for the balance due, that the plaintiff was concluded by the action brought in the inferior court. Bagot (Lord) v. Williams, 5 D. & R. 87; 3 B. & C. 235; 27 R. R. 340.

—— Lord Mayor's Court.] — Plea, that a verdict and judgment in the Lord Mayor's Court had been obtained by the defendant against the plaintiffs in the same matter in respect of which relief was sought by the bill, allowed, the Lord Mayor's Court being a court of competent jurisdiction to decide the matter in dispute between the parties, and that matter in dispute, if not finally decided by the judgment, being in a proper course for decision. Behrens v. Pauli, 1 Keen, 456.

Proceedings before Justices.]—An application to justices by a local board under the Public Health Act, 1875, for the recovery of a proportion of the expenses of sewering a street from the owner of premises abutting thereon, was dismissed by the justices, on the ground that the street was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large. The local board some years afterwards made an application against the same person for the recovery of a proportion of paving expenses subsequently incurred in respect of the same street, and a stipendiary magistrate made an order for the payment of such expenses:—Held, that the adjudication of the justices that the street was a highway repairable by the inhabitants at large on the first application was beyond the jurisdiction of such justices, which was only to make or refuse the order for the expenses claimed, and that, therefore, such adjudication on the first application did not estop the local board from claiming the expenses they claimed on the second application, and consequently that the magistrate might make the order which he made for their payment. Reg. v. Hutchins, 50 L. J., M. C. 35; 6 Q. B. D. 300; 44 L. T. 364; 29 W. R. 724; 45 J. P. 504—C. A.

Order of Quarter Sessions when a Decision "on Merits."]—Upon the hearing of an appeal to quarter sessions against an order of affiliation, it appeared that the respondent and her witnesses were not present, having mistaken the day of hearing, and her counsel applied for an adjournment till the following morning, offering to pay the costs of the day. The appellant having declined to accede to this proposal, the sessions directed the case to proceed, and quashed the order, no evidence having been adduced on the part of the respondent:—Held, that the order of quarter sessions was not a decision upon the merits, and that fresh proceedings in respect of the same matter might be taken before justices. Reg. v May, or Essex JJ., 49 L. J., M. C. 67; 5 Q. B. D. 382; 42 L. T. 772; 28 W. R. 918.

Police Magistrate.]—By 2 & 3 Vict. c. 71, s. 40, metropolitan police magistrates are empowered, upon a complaint to them of the unlawful detention of goods of less value than 15*l.*, to summon the person complained of, and to inquire into the title thereto, or to the possession thereof, and to order the goods to be delivered up to the owner either absolutely or upon certain terms, provided that no such order shall bar any person from recovering possession of the goods so delivered by action at law. To an action for the conversion of goods the defendant pleaded an estoppel, setting up the above statute, and alleging that the plaintiff had complained of the detention of the goods to a metropolitan police magistrate, who summoned the defendant before him, and after inquiring into the title to the goods, dismissed the summons, and thereby adjudicated in his favour:—Held, that such dismissal and adjudication did not bar the action, and that, therefore, the plea was bad. Dover v. Child, 45 L. J., Ex. 462; 1 Ex. D. 172; 34 L. T. 737; 24 W. R. 537.

W. was injured by the furious driving of the defendant's servant. The driver was summoned by the police, and W. attended as a witness. The driver was fined, and was ordered by the magistrate to pay to W. 5*l.* by way of compensation, under the provisions of 6 & 7 Vict. c. 86, s. 28. He was asked by the magistrate if that sum would compensate him, and he said it would not, but nevertheless he took it. In a subsequent action for damages by W. against the driver's employers:—Held, that the order of the magistrate was a bar to the action, inasmuch as W. must be taken to have accepted the 5*l.* in full satisfaction of his claims in respect of his injuries. Wright v. London General Omnibus Co., 46 L. J., Q. B. 429; 2 Q. B. D. 271; 36 L. T. 590; 25 W. R. 647.

Conviction of Injury to Person when a Bar to Action brought subsequently for Injuries.]—See CRIMINAL LAW, ante, vol. IV., col. 1475.

Convictions on Indictments.]—A record of an indictment for an assault to which the defendant pleaded guilty, is admissible against him in an action for damages for the same assault. Anon., 1 Phil. Evid. 320.

But a verdict of guilty, and judgment thereon in an indictment for obstructing a public highway, cannot be pleaded as an estoppel in an action brought by the party convicted against a third party for using the way. Petrie v. Nuttall, 11 Ex. 569; 25 L. J., Ex. 200.

Indictment against a township for not repairing an ancient highway. On the trial an indictment against an adjoining township, for non-repair of a part of the same line of road to which that township had submitted, was received:—Held, that it was properly received as evidence that the whole highway was ancient. Reg. v. Brightside Bierlow, 13 Q. B. 933; 19 L. J., M. C. 50.

An indictment for non-repair of a highway charged the defendant as liable to repair by reason of his tenure of S. P. field. He pleaded not guilty. On the trial, evidence was given on the part of the prosecution of the conviction in 1801, of S., a former owner of S. P. field, for the non-repair of the highway, the liability being charged as arising in respect of the tenure of the S. P. field. Proof was also given of repairs done since 1801 by the owners of the field. For the defendant, evidence was adduced of an agreement and award previously to 1801, which found, in effect, that the owner of S. P. field was liable to repair the road, and directed that S. should plead guilty to an indictment for non-repair ratione tenuræ. The jury convicted the defendant; but the court reserved the question, "Whether the usage or liability in respect of which the defendant was charged in the indictment was established?"—Held, that the defendant was estopped from denying his liability, in consequence of the conviction of S., with whom he was a privy in estate. Reg. v. Blaemore, 2 Den. C. C. 410; 21 L. J., M. C. 60; 16 Jur. 154.

Indictment for non-repair of a highway against the inhabitants of a township, averring them to be liable by prescription to repair such highways in the township, as the inhabitants of the parish, but for the prescription, would have been liable to repair, with an averment that the highway was in the township. The prosecutors gave in evidence a record of the presentment by a justice, under 13 Geo. 3, c. 78, on his view, that the road in question was out of repair, averring that it was in the township, and that the inhabitants of that township ought to repair it. The record shewed a plea of guilty by two inhabitants of the township, a conviction before the sessions, and a sentence of fine:—Held, that this conviction was conclusive evidence against the township, that the road was in that township; and that, though the presentment might be bad on error for not shewing how the township was liable, the conviction being before a competent tribunal and being unreversed, was not the less an estoppel. Reg. v. Haughton, 1 El. & Bl. 501; 22 L. J., M. C. 89; 17 Jur. 455; 1 W. R. 164.

Held, also, that it was not necessary to shew that the fine had been levied, the conviction not being impeached on the ground of fraud or collusion. Ib.

Foreign Courts.]—See INTERNATIONAL LAW.

Lis alibi pendens creates no Estoppel.]—In an action of collision a judgment of a foreign court given in a cause between the same parties cannot be pleaded as an estoppel unless such judgment was obtained prior to the institution of the action in this country; there being no res judicata, but lis alibi pendens, when the plaintiff instituted his action here, he can claim to proceed to judgment in this country if he chooses. The Delta, 45 L. J., P. 111; 1 P. D. 393; 35 L. T. 376; 25 W. R. 46.

5. PLEADING AND PROCEEDINGS THEREON.

a. Generally.

Plea.]—A plea raised in Chancery of proceedings in another court of competent jurisdiction, must shew not only that the same issue was joined as in the suit in the Court of Chancery, but that the subject-matter was the same, and that the proceedings in the other court were taken for the same purpose. Behrens v. Siereking, 2 Myl. & C. 602.

The 10th rule of Hilary term, 1853, does not apply to a plea of judgment recovered against an executor. Power v. Izod, 1 Bing. (N.C.) 304; 1 Scott, 119; 3 D. P. C. 140; 4 L. J., C. P. 5.

A plea to an action for money lent, that the plaintiff is estopped from suing in consequence of his having, in a former action brought against him by the defendant, pleaded the demand sued on by way of set-off, which was negatived by the jury, is not a plea of judgment recovered within this rule. Brokenshir v. Morgan or Monger, 9 M. & W. 111; 11 L. J., Ex. 90; 5 Jur. 1200.

To a count in an action on a covenant on an annuity with a breach for non-payment of the annuity on the 15th June, 1834, the defendant pleaded a judgment recovered against him by the plaintiff in an action of debt, for the sum of 2,000*l.*, of Easter term, 1832, concluding with an averment that the causes of action in the two suits were identical:—Held, a bad plea on general demurrer. Few v. Backhouse, 1 P. & D. 34; 8 A. & E. 789; 1 W. W. & H. 658; 8 L. J., Q. B. 30.

To an action for work done by the plaintiff as a correspondent for the defendant in New York. Plea, as to 50*l.*, part of the claim, that an action had been brought against the plaintiff in the Supreme Court of New York for a sum exceeding 50*l.*; that by process duly issued out of that court, and executed on the defendant, that sum due and owing from the defendant to the plaintiff, was attached in the defendant's hands, according to the laws of that state, to satisfy the demand in the action; that judgment was afterwards recovered in that court, and execution issued to the sheriff of New York, whereupon the defendant was obliged, by the laws of the state, to pay and did pay over to the sheriff the value of the 50*l.*, deducting the necessary expenses of the attachment. The plea alleged, that the plaintiff and the defendant were citizens of the state, and the defendant was resident there and subject to the jurisdiction and process of the court, and that by the laws of the state the defendant was discharged and acquitted of the 50*l.*:—Held, that the plea was a good defence pro tanto. Gould v. Webb, 4 El. & Bl. 933; 24 L. J., Q. B. 205; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 821; 3 W. R. 399.

A plea of a former recovery for the same offence, to a penal action, must allege that the plaintiff in the former action had priority of suit, or it will be bad. Jackson v. Gisling, Bull. N. P. 179.

—— Amendment.]—A plea of judgment recovered in general terms, but alleging that the debt was satisfied, will not be ordered to be amended, or set aside as embarrassing. Lawler v. Robertson, 1 F. & F. 307

Replication.]—In an action by the indorsee against the acceptor of a bill of exchange, he pleaded a plea of judgment recovered by him in a former action brought by the plaintiff, on the same bill. The plea set out the pleadings, the finding of the jury and the judgment of the court in the former action. It alleged the plea therein was, that the plaintiff and the defendant had agreed that if the defendant dishonoured the bill when due the plaintiff should extend the time for the payment of the amount till the 25th of December, 1848, and the defendant should execute a warrant of attorney for the payment of the amount with charges and interest, on that day; and that the defendant, having dishonoured the bill, offered to execute the warrant of attorney, which the plaintiff refused to accept. That the plaintiff replied de injuriâ to that plea, and that the defendant had judgment. To the present plea of judgment recovered, the plaintiff replied that he did not extend the time for the payment of the bill till the 25th of December, 1848; that that day had elapsed before the commencement of the present suit, and that the defendant did not execute the warrant of attorney:—Held, that the replication was bad, and the plea a good plea of judgment recovered, containing all necessary details of the judgment. Overton v. Harvey, 1 L. M. & P. 233; 9 C. B. 324; 19 L. J., C. P. 256; 14 Jur. 902.

Where a declaration set out a libel in which it was alleged that the plaintiff was tried for murder, and that "it was understood that the counsel for the prosecution were in possession of a damning piece of evidence, viz., that he had spent nearly the whole of the night preceding the duel in practising pistol firing," and the plea stated that the plaintiff had committed murder:—Semble, that, a replication by way of estoppel, stating that the plaintiff was tried and acquitted, is not good. Helsham v. Blackwood, 11 C. B. 111; 20 L. J., C. P. 187; 15 Jur. 861.

Where a plea to a declaration for goods sold and delivered stated that the plaintiff sued the defendant in an inferior court for the same causes of action in the declaration mentioned, and that the defendant recovered against the plaintiff by the judgment of that court, and that such judgment remained in full force; and the plea proceeded to set out the declaration in the court below, in which it was not stated that the goods were sold, or that the consideration for the promise arose within the jurisdiction of that court; and the plaintiff in his replication alleged that both he and the defendant, at the time of levying the plaint in the court below, and the latter obtaining judgment, resided out of the jurisdiction of that court; and that the cause of action arose out of such jurisdiction:—Held, that the replication was sufficient, on the ground that the proceedings in the court below were coram non judice, and altogether void. Briscoe v. Stephens, 9 Moore, 413; 2 Bing. 213; 3 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 257; 27 R. R. 597.

Whether Pleading is necessary.]—A verdict which, if pleaded in bar, would be an estoppel, when given in evidence under the general issue is not conclusive, but only evidence to go to the jury. Vooght v. Winch, 2 B. & Ald. 622; 21 R. R. 446. S. P., Stafford v. Clark, 9 Moore, 724; 2 Bing. 377; 1 Car. & P. 24, 403. Doe v. Huddart, 2 C. M. & R. 316; 5 Tyr. 846; 4 D. P. C. 437.

Estoppels by record and by deed must, in order to make them binding, be pleaded if there be an opportunity; otherwise the party omitting to plead it waives the estoppel and leaves the issue at large, on which the jury may find according to the truth: aliter of estoppels in pais. Freeman v. Cooke, 2 Ex. 654; 6 D. & L. 187; 18 L. J., Ex. 114; 12 Jur. 777. See Reg. v. Haughton, 1 El. & Bl. 501; 22 L. J., M. C. 89; 17 Jur. 455; 1 W. R. 164.

An administrator being sued for a debt due from the intestate, pleaded no assets: replication, that he had assets. Issue thereon and verdict for the plaintiff. Judgment was entered and execution issued, and nulla bona returned. The plaintiff declared in debt setting forth these proceedings and alleging that the defendant had at the time of the recovery, assets to be administered, and had eloigned and wasted them. Plea, that at the time of the recovery, the defendant had fully administered, &c., without this, that he eloigned or wasted, &c. Issue thereon :—Held, that the defendant could not prove that all assets which had come to his hands at the time of the former recovery had been duly administered, and that the plaintiff might take this objection without having replied the former recovery as an estoppel. Dawson v. Gregory, 7 Q. B. 756 ; 14 L. J., Q. B. 286 ; 9 Jur. 688.

b. Nul Tiel Record.

Effect of.]—A plea of nul tiel record to a declaration in scire facias, on a judgment more than a year and a day old, puts in issue only the recovery of the judgment. Phillips v. Smith, 2 D. (N.S.) 688 ; 12 L. J., Q. B. 187 ; 7 Jur. 491.

Pleading after Decision.]—A defendant may plead puis darrein continuance after judgment has been given for the plaintiff, upon an issue tried by the record. Wagner v. Imbrie, 2 L. M. & P. 333 ; 6 Ex. 380 ; 20 L. J., Ex. 235 ; 15 Jur. 405.

Replication to Plea of former Judgment.]—A replication of nul tiel record to a plea of a former judgment recovered, in respect of the same causes of action, against a joint contractor with the defendant, is a proper form of pleading, where such judgment has been reversed in error, although the former action and judgment were against a different defendant, and it appears from the record that such reversal was by the consent of the parties. Baily v. Turner, 6 D. & L. 730 ; 18 L. J., Q. B. 232 ; 14 Jur. 432.

Proof of.]—A plaintiff brought an action against the defendant for words imputing a felony, and had a verdict against him. In a second action, the declaration contained an averment that the plaintiff was a trader, and alleged that the words (which were not precisely the same as those in the first action) were spoken of him in the way of his trade. Upon an issue of nul tiel record :—Held, that as the record, when produced, did not shew on the face of it that the cause of action might be the same, judgment must be for the plaintiff. Wadsworth v. Bentley, 1 B. C. C. 203 ; 23 L. J., Q. B. 3 ; 2 C. L. R. 127 ; 17 Jur. 1077 ; 2 W. R. 56.

When a plaintiff declares on a judgment generally to which the defendant pleads nul tiel record, it is no variance that the judgment is alleged, in the record produced, to have been by default in consequence of the defendant not having paid the debt by instalments, as directed by a judge's order obtained by consent. Hopkins v. Francis, 2 D. & L. 664 ; 13 M. & W. 668 ; 14 L. J., Ex. 207 ; 7 Jur. 250.

A declaration on a judgment described it as obtained in the court of our lady the Queen, of her Bench at Westminster, in the county of Middlesex. Plea, that there is not any record of the recovery remaining in the court of our lady the Queen, of her Bench at Westminster. Replication, that there is such a record of the recovery remaining in the court of our lady the Queen, of her bench :—Held, that the issue was proved by the production of a judgment of the Common Pleas. Bradley v. Grey, 4 De G. & Sm. 458 ; 3 C. B. 726 ; 16 L. J., C. P. 26.

In an action against husband and wife, the declaration alleged that the plaintiff recovered judgment against the female, by the name of E. R., on promises made by her dum sola ; to which the defendants pleaded nul tiel record. On the record being produced, the judgment appeared to have been recovered against her and others :—Held, no variance. Cocks v. Brewer, 11 M. & W. 51 ; 2 D. (N.S.) 759 ; 12 L. J., Ex. 225 ; 7 Jur. 218.

A declaration on a replevin bond for not prosecuting a suit with effect, according to the condition, stated (after setting out the bond) that the plaintiff made his plaint at the Whitechapel county court, and that it was adjudged by that court that the plaintiff should take nothing by his plaint. Plea, nul tiel record. Replication, there is such a record. The order made in the minute-book of the county court was struck out for want of jurisdiction, a disputed title having been sworn to :—Held, that the entry did not support the allegation in the declaration of a judgment against the plaintiff in the county court, and that the defendant was entitled to judgment. Tubby v. Stanhope, 5 D. & L. 781 ; 5 C. B. 790 ; 17 L. J., C. P. 190 ; 12 Jur. 357.

An action brought in a superior court under 6 & 7 Vict. c. 96, s. 8, to recover the costs sustained by the plaintiff upon the trial of an indictment for libel, preferred against him at the assizes by the defendant, upon which trial a verdict of "not guilty" was returned and judgment was given for the plaintiff, who was duly discharged, is a "proceeding" in which under s. 13 of the Evidence Amendment Act, 1851 (14 & 15 Vict. c. 99), a certified copy of the record of such trial and acquittal under the hand of the proper officer of the court of assize is admissible in evidence in proof of such trial and acquital in answer to a plea of "nul tiel record." Richardson v. Willis, 42 L. J., Ex. 15 ; L. R. 8 Ex. 69 ; 27 L. T. 828 ; 12 Cox C. C. 298.

The issue of nul tiel record is tried by the court and not by a jury. Ib.

Colonial Judgment.]—A plea of nul tiel record cannot be pleaded to an action on a colonial judgment. Chapman v. Sherrie, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 36. S. P., Philpott v. Adams, 7 H. & N. 885 ; 31 L. J., Ex. 421.

Trial.]—On the trial of an issue of nul tiel record, when the defendant begins he is entitled to reply. Cocks v. Brewer, 11 M. & W. 51 ; 2 D. (N.S.) 759 ; 12 L. J., Ex. 225 ; 7 Jur. 218.

Amendment.]—Upon a trial by the record the court amended the declaration by inserting therein the true amount recovered by the judgment. Hunter v. Emmanuel, 15 C. B. 290 ; 24 L. J., C. P. 16.

So where there was a variance as to the date between the record produced and that stated in the declaration, the court allowed the latter to be amended. Noble v. Chapman, 14 C. B. 400 ; 23 L. J., C. P. 56 ; 18 Jur. 44 ; 2 W. R. 154.

Formerly the amendment was the subject of a separate application. Billing v. Hitchings, 2 Ex. 297 ; 18 L. J., Ex. 192.

Production of Record.]—An action being brought in the Exchequer against the plaintiff and his attorney for causing the defendant's goods to be taken in execution under a fi. fa. upon a judgment which a judge afterwards set aside for irregularity, without imposing it as a condition that no action should be brought, and the defendant in the action in the Exchequer having pleaded a justification under the judgment in Common Pleas, the plaintiff replied nul tiel record, and a day being given to produce the record, and the plaintiff in the action in the Common Pleas ruled to carry in the roll, his attorney delayed it until the day before that appointed for the trial by the record in the Exchequer, and then carried it in without any suggestion that the judgment had been set aside, and in that state caused the transcript to be returned under a writ of certiorari into the Exchequer. The Common Pleas made absolute a rule for quashing the judgment with costs, to be paid by the plaintiff or his attorney. Nash v. Swinburn, 4 Scott (N.R.) 562; 1 D. (N.S.) 190; 3 Man. & G. 853.

Where in an action upon a judgment to which the defendant pleaded nul tiel record, a motion was made under 43 Geo. 3, c. 46. s. 5, for judgment upon the production of the record of the original judgment and costs, the court refused to grant a rule absolute in the first instance, as costs were demanded, although notice of the motion had been given. Fraser v. Moses, 1 D. (N.S.) 705; 4 Scott (N.R.) 749.

C. BY DEED.

1. Generally.

Inconsistent with Document.]—No estoppel can be raised on a document inconsistent with the document itself. Colonial Bank v. Hepworth, 56 L. J., Ch. 1089; 36 Ch. D. 36; 57 L. T. 148; 36 W. R. 259.

2. Parties.

Grantor.]—In an action on a deed for the payment of an annuity, the grantor is estopped from pleading that the annuity was granted for the fraudulent purpose of multiplying votes. Phillpotts v. Phillpotts, 10 C. B. 85; 20 L. J., C. P. 11.

A grantor by his deed is estopped from saying that he had no interest. Fairtitle v. Gilbert, 2 Term Rep. 171; 1 R. R. 455.

—— Unless Acting under Statute.]—Unless he is a trustee for the public, deriving his authority from an act of parliament. Ib.

By an act for building a bridge, commissioners were empowered to borrow money by way of mortgage, and every mortgage was to be in a form given by the act, whereby the commissioners were to grant and convey, by deed, to the lender, the bridge, toll-houses and tolls, until the principal should be repaid with interest, and the "several persons to whom any such mortgages shall be made, shall be entitled, in proportion to the annual amount of the interest of the moneys borrowed on mortgage, to the tolls and revenues of the commissioners, without any preference by reason of the priority of date of any such security." Against an ejectment by a mortgagee, the commissioners set up a prior mortgage still subsisting:—Held, that although they were commissioners acting in execution of a statute, they were estopped by their mortgage to the plaintiff from saying that their whole estate had been conveyed to the prior mortgagee, so that no estate passed to the plaintiff. Doe d. Levy v. Horne, 3 G. & D. 239; 3 Q. B. 757; 12 L. J., Q. B. 72; 7 Jur. 38.

Privies.]—B., who had, in 1832, been admitted for life by the benchers of the society of Lincoln's Inn (the owners of the fee) to chambers in that inn, by indenture of July, 1833, reciting that he was "seised or well entitled to an estate for his own life in or to the said chambers," conveyed them to the plaintiff, to secure an annuity, and in Michaelmas term, in the same year, surrendered them to the society with a view to the admission thereto of the defendant, who was accordingly let into possession:—Held, that, inasmuch as the defendant did not claim by, through, or under B., he was not estopped by the recital of July, 1833, from denying that B. had a life estate in the premises. Doe d. Marchant v. Errington, 8 Scott, 210; 6 Bing. (N.C.) 79; 9 L. J., C. P. 9; 3 Jur. 1126.

B. conveyed Blackacre in fee to L. in 1827, and the wife of B. was a party to the deed. It was agreed at the time of executing the conveyance, that B. should continue to occupy till he or L. died. L. died, and his heir gave B. notice to quit. A few days after the notice to quit expired, B. died, and his widow continued in possession. On ejectment by the heir against the widow:—Held, that she could not set up a prior mortgage of Blackacre by B., for her possession accrued through B., and therefore she was estopped by the conveyance of 1827. Doe d. Leming v. Shirrow, 7 A. & E. 157; 2 N. & P. 123; W. W. & D. 517.

W. purchased from the assignees of D. lands which had been devised to G. as freehold, and which were described as freehold in the conveyance to W.:—Held, that W. was not estopped by the deed, as against the widow of G., from shewing that the lands were not freehold, and consequently not chargeable with dower. Gaunt or Grant v. Wainman, 3 Scott, 413; 3 Bing (N.C.) 69; 2 Hodges, 186; 5 L. J., C. P. 344.

A plaintiff in ejectment, claiming under a mortgagee, gave in evidence the deed executed by the mortgagor and mortgagee, which recited that the mortgagor was seised in fee. The defendant was no party to the deed, but had subsequently endorsed upon it this memorandum:—"The within premises were charged by me, W. S. (defendant), the purchaser of the equity of redemption thereof, with the payment of the further sum of 325*l.*":—Held, that the memorandum was evidence for the jury, that the defendant came in under the mortgagor, and that, if so, he was estopped from setting up an adverse title prior to the date of the deed. Doe d. Gaisford v. Stone, 3 C. B. 176; 15 L. J., C. P. 234; 10 Jur. 480.

The Westminster improvement commissioners were authorised by acts of parliament to borrow such sums of money as they should think necessary for the purposes of the act, and to give bonds for the same, and which bonds were assignable. In an action by a transferee of one of such bonds, the condition of which recited that the commissioners had in pursuance of the acts borrowed of P. 5,000*l.* for enabling them to carry the acts into execution, they pleaded that they did not borrow the sum of P., or any part thereof, for the purposes of the acts, and that they were not authorised to make the bond, and that the same was made contrary to the provisions of the acts, of which P. and the plaintiff had notice at the time when the bond was made and transferred to the plaintiff:—Held, upon general demurrer, that the plea was bad. Horton v. Westminster Improvement Commissioners, 7 Ex. 780; 21 L. J., Ex. 297.

The commissioners also pleaded that before the bond was made, C. M. and W. M. were entitled to receive from them bonds; that P. and others conspired fraudulently to procure for P. one of the books to which C. M. and W. M. were entitled, and by means of such conspiracy and fraud they procured C. M. and W. M. to authorise the commissioners to give to P. one of the bonds they were so entitled to; and that the bond sued upon was thereupon given to P. by the commissioners, and that they had never borrowed any sum of money from P., of all which premises the plaintiff at the time of the transfer to him of the bond had notice:—Held bad, because the commissioners could not set up as a defence the fraud that had been committed upon C. M. and W. M., by whose directions they had in pursuance of their contract with them given the bond to P. Ib.

By Person claiming under Instrument.]—A deed of inspectorship and composition made between a debtor and his creditors in Great Britain contained a covenant that in a certain event the debtor would, if required by the inspector, assign all his property to the inspector for the benefit of the creditors; that upon such assignment the inspector should give a certificate that the debtor had so assigned, and that thereupon the debtor should be released from his debts. The deed contained a proviso that it should "cease, determine and be void" if all the creditors in Great Britain to a certain amount did not execute it within six months from its date. The debtor was duly required by the inspector to execute an assignment, and did so, and received a certificate:—Held, that the deed was not void, but voidable only; that the release constituted a good defence against a creditor who had executed the deed, and who, having had notice that all the creditors had not signed the deed, had endeavoured to obtain payment of a dividend out of the property assigned to the inspector. Dunn v. Wyman, 51 L. J., Q. B. 623.

Entry on Land under Deed or Will—Tenant for Life and Remainderman—Title.]—Where a person who has no title, or an imperfect title, to land, purports by deed or will to settle it to the use of one for life with remainders over, and the tenant for life enters under the settlement and remains in possession long enough to bar any claim by the true owner, he, and persons claiming under him, are estopped as against the remaindermen from disputing the validity of the settlement. Board v. Board, infra, approved. Dalton v. Fitzgerald, 66 L. J., Ch. 604; [1897] 2 Ch. 86; 76 L. T. 700; 45 W. R. 685—C.A.

A tenant by the curtesy of premises, devised them by his will to trustees for his daughter Rebecca for life, with remainder to his grandson. Upon the death of the testator, Rebecca entered into possession of the premises purported to be devised, and paid for some years the annuities charged by the will upon the premises, and was suffered by the heir-at-law to remain in possession undisturbed for more than twenty years. The grandson conveyed his remainder to the plaintiff. Rebecca, after she had been in possession more than twenty years, conveyed the premises in fee to the defendant, who, upon her death took possession. The plaintiff, the assignee of the grandson, the remainderman, having brought ejectment:—Held, that Rebecca having entered under the will, the defendant claiming through her was estopped as against all those in remainder from disputing the validity of the will, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Board v. Board, 43 L. J., Q. B., 4; L. R. 9 Q. B. 48; 29 L. T. 459; 22 W. R. 206.

By indenture of the 6th February, 1845, W., equitable tenant for life in possession, under the will of the Earl of Burlington, of, amongst other hereditaments, the land demised by the said indenture, granted a lease to S., the defendant, and to Y. and B. (whose estate the defendant now has), of a piece of land for a term of eighty years, at a yearly rent of 5*l.* by the following description, viz.: "All that piece or parcel of ground part of Hide farm, within the hamlet of Beard, in the county of Derby, containing by admeasurement 1,198 square yards, being forty yards long and thirty yards wide, or thereabout, bounded on the north and east by lands belonging to the said W., on the south by a public road leading from Disley to Hayfield, and on the west by another public road leading from Disley to New Mills, together with cottages and buildings thereon, and with the right of a carriage road from the said piece or parcel of ground to the works of the said S., Y. & B. at New Mills, aforesaid, the ground plot whereof is shewn in the margin of these presents," and the lessees thereby covenanted to build certain houses on the demised land. At the date of the lease S. and Y. & B. were owners respectively of certain mills and works at New Mills, and the trustees under the said will held the fee simple and inheritance of the lands on each side of the said two public roads for a considerable distance. Several houses, occupied as private residences, and called Beard Terrace, had since the date of the lease been erected on the demised land by the lessees, who had also since the same date made the said carriage road upon land, parcel of the hereditaments comprised in the said will, and other than the said demised land, and erected a stone bridge over the river there at the north-west end of the said carriage road, to connect the same with the said mills and works. This carriage road did not communicate directly with the demised land, but ran from the said bridge southward into the said public road from Disley to Hayfield, having the other public road from Disley to New Mills on the east, between it and the demised land. In October, 1865, the defendant and the other lessees assigned the demised land to the Midland Railway Company for the residue of the term, subject to the said yearly rent, but expressly reserving out of the assignment the before-described right of carriage road; and by an indenture of the 26th December, 1865, to which W. was a party, the trustees of Earl B.'s will conveyed the same land to the said company in fee simple. In 1875 the trustees put up to auction and sold, and by indenture dated the 29th September, 1875, to which W. was a directing party, conveyed to the plaintiff in fee, amongst other lands, the carriage road in question by the following description: "A road to the works and premises of Messrs. S., B. & Y., situate in New Mills, for which Messrs. S., B. & Y. pay an acknowledgment of 1*s.* per annum. Number on plan, 173; quantity, 29 perches," and by the 8th condition of sale it was stated that "every lot was sold subject to all rights of way and other easements charged and subsisting thereon." After the assignment and conveyance to the Midland Railway Company, the defendant continued to use the said road up to the date of this action, and since the said conveyance to the plaintiff entered upon and passed over the road, not only for going to or from Beard Terrace or the land demised by the lease of 1845, but also for going to and from and for the carriage of goods between his said works and the Midland Railway station, which is not on any part of the said demised land, and also for going to and from collieries and other places in connection with his works, and he claimed to use, and then still used the said road by himself and servants and persons employed at his said works for all purposes connected therewith. On the 28th September, 1875, a six months' notice was given by W. and the trustees to the defendant to give up all hereditaments held by him in the county of Derby as yearly tenant, and since the 26th March, 1876, payment of the 1*s.* per annum in respect of the user of the said road was demanded by the plaintiff of the defendant, and refused by the latter, and it was admitted that such acknowledgment had never been paid by the defendant, or any lessee under the lease of 1845, but up to the assignment to the Midland Railway Company the rent reserved by that lease was duly paid to and received by W. The plaintiff had no knowledge or notice of the existence of the lease of 1845, or of the defendant's claim to any right of way other than was expressed in the said conditions of sale and the conveyance to the plaintiff, or as might be inferred therefrom, and from the existence of the road itself leading from the highway to the defendant's premises. In an action by the plaintiff to recover damages from the defendant for his wrongful entry upon and user of the said carriage road:—Held, that whether W. had, or not, power to grant the lease for 80 years, yet as he was a party to the conveyance of September, 1875, to the plaintiff, both he and the plaintiff, who claimed through him, were estopped from disputing during W.'s lifetime the grant of land and roadway contained in the said lease, and that although the plaintiff, even if without notice, could not claim title to the lands except subject to any charge or burden created by W., yet having had notice sufficient to put him upon inquiry he could not be deemed a purchaser for value without notice. Summer v. Scholfield, 43 L. T. 763.

3. By Recital.

Not Conclusive in Collateral Proceedings.]—Estoppel on the ground of any statement in a deed only operates in a proceeding upon the deed containing such statement. In any collateral proceeding upon some other deed or contract, though between the same parties, the statement contained in the first deed is evidence, but not conclusive evidence, of the fact, so as to estop the parties from denying it. Carter v. Carter, 3 Kay & J. 618; 27 L. J., Ch. 74; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 63.

A mortgagee agreed to assign her security on payment of principal, interest and costs. An excessive claim being made for costs by the mortgagee, who refused to execute the transfer unless the sum was paid, the assignee, with the sanction of the mortgagor, paid the sum claimed under protest:—Held, that the mortgagor might recover the excess as a payment made involuntarily under undue pressure; and that the mortgagor was not estopped from setting up his claim by the recital in the assignment, that the sum paid was due for principal, interest and costs; because, a recital, although an estoppel to the parties to the deed, where the matter of the deed itself is in dispute, is not so in a matter which is collateral to the deed. Fraser v. Pendlebury, 31 L. J., C. P. 1; 10 W. R. 104.

By a deed between a railway company and contractors, claims by the latter (specified in a schedule), under the contract, for losses by reason of delay in obtaining possession of the land, were referred. The deed recited that, with the exception of the claims contained in the schedule, the company and the contractors had "settled, adjusted and mutually satisfied every other account, claim, or demand which the parties had against each other arising out of the contract, or any other account, matter, or thing whatsoever, as the company and the contractors thereby admitted and acknowledged":—Held, that this recital was not an estoppel to an action by the company on a bond entered into by the contractors, conditioned for the performance of their original contract, alleging as a breach the non-execution and completion of tunnels according to the contract. S. E. Ry. v. Warton, 6 H. & N. 520; 31 L. J., Ex. 515.

A., mortgagor, and B., mortgagee, before 22 & 23 Vict. c. 35, jointly demised to C., with a proviso that either might re-enter if C. assigned without the consent of the mortgagor. Various assignments took place with A.'s consent. Before the expiration of the term, A. and the last assignee jointly conveyed to D., by a lease, reciting the former one, and containing a condition that A. should re-enter if the premises were assigned without the mortgagor's consent:—Held, that the second lease did not create an estoppel on D., to prevent him showing that A. was not the reversioner; and, therefore, A. could not enforce the condition. Saunders v. Merryweather, 3 H. & C. 902; 35 L. J., Ex. 115; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 665; 13 W. R. 814.

Recitals in a deed do not operate as an estoppel against a party to the deed in an action not founded on the deed, but collateral to it. Morgan, Ex parte, Simpson, In re, 45 L. J., Bk. 36; 2 Ch. D. 72; 34 L. T. 329; 24 W. R. 414.

When Creating an Estoppel.]—When a person claims a benefit under any document, he cannot be heard to say he was ignorant of any fact noticed in it, or which he might, when his title thereunder was acquired, have discovered by enquiries, to which he would naturally have been put, if he had known of the existence of the document, and seen it then. Joyce v. Rawlins, 40 L. J., Ch. 105; 11 L. R. Eq. 153; 23 L. T. 756; 19 W. R. 217. And see Steele v. Mitchell, 1 Dr. & Wal. 568; 3 Ir. Eq. R. 1.

A recital in a lease, professing it to be made under a leasing power in a will devising an estate tail, does not estop the person accepting the lease from shewing that the estate tail was barred. Blackhall v. Gibson, 2 L. R., Ir. 49.

Assignment.]—An assignor, by executing the assignment in which the original lease is recited, is precluded in an action by the assignee from calling upon him to prove the lease. Nash v. Turner, 1 Esp. 217.

—— By Husband and Wife.]—Where husband and wife assign a share of an ascertained fund, in which the wife has a vested interest in remainder expectant on the death of a tenant for life, who outlives the husband, if the wife, after her husband's death, executes an assignment of the fund, which recites the former assignments, and purports to be made subject to them, she does not thereby recognise or confirm them. Honner v. Morton, 3 Russ. 65 ; 27 R. R. 15. S. P., Watson v. Dennis, 3 Russ. 90.

—— Insolvent, by—Deed Voluntary or for Value.]—An insolvent having several executions in his house, at the suggestion of one of his creditors, executed an assignment to him of all his effects for the benefit of such creditors as should come in and sign the deed. The deed recited that the insolvent had proposed the assignment. The execution creditors were accordingly paid their claims, and the assignee, taking possession of the goods and premises, carried on the business for some time, when he sold the whole concern for a larger amount than it would have realised if it had been disposed of by the sheriff. The deed was signed by several of the execution creditors. The insolvent, within three months from the assignment, went to prison, and afterwards obtained his discharge under the Insolvent Act :—Held, that this deed was not voluntary within 7 Geo. 4, c. 57, s. 32, and that the assignee was not estopped by the recital in the deed of assignment from contending that the deed was not voluntary. Knight v. Fergusson, 2 H. & H. 59 ; 5 M. & W. 389.

—— Possibility—Deed Conveying.]—Where the truth appears by recitals in a deed, professing to convey a possibility, the party conveying is not barred by estoppel, although he has received the purchase-money. Doe d. Lumley v. Scarborough (Earl), 4 N. & M. 724 ; 3 A. & E. 2 ; 4 L. J., K. B. 172. See S. C., 3 A. & E. 897—Ex. Ch.

There may be an estoppel by matter of recital. Bowman v. Taylor, 2 A. & E. 278 ; 4 N. & M. 264 ; 4 L. J., K. B. 58.

Recitals in other Deeds.]—But a party to a deed of conveyance is not estopped by recitals contained in other deeds through which the title so conveyed is derived. Doe d. Shelton v. Shelton, 4 N. & M. 857 ; 3 A. & E. 265 ; 1 H. & W. 287 ; 4 L. J., K. B. 167.

Recital Unilateral or Agreed.]—Where a recital in an instrument under seal is intended to be a statement which all the parties to the deed have mutually agreed to admit as true, it is an estoppel upon all, whether they are parties to the deed by executing it, or only by accepting it. But when it is intended to be the statement of one party only, the estoppel, though all have executed the deed, is confined to that party. The intention is to be gathered from construing the instrument. Stroughill v. Buck, 14 Q. B. 781 ; 19 L. J., Q. B. 209 ; 14 Jur. 741.

Devise — Recital — Effect of.]—In 1869 G. mortgaged lands in fee to O. In 1877, on the death of O., the trustees for sale under O.'s will by assignment of the mortgage of 1869, conveyed the lands to C. G. (who had, in 1872, demised them to H. for ten years, from 1870 to 1880), joining in the deed as a granting and confirming party. After 1880 H. continued in possession, paying the old rent to G. In March, 1887, C. demanded possession, and served a writ to recover possession of the land on the title. At the trial C. failed to prove the will of O., but proved the deed of 1877, which contained a recital of the devise to trustees for sale contained in O.'s will :—Held, that the recital of the devise by O. to trustees contained in the deed of 1877 was sufficient evidence of that devise, and that H., claiming through G., was estopped from denying that recital. Clarke v. Hall, 24 L. R., Ir. 316—C. A.

Mortgage — Settlement.]—A husband mortgaged property which was afterwards put into settlement. The settlement executed by the husband and his wife contained a recital that the mortgage debt was 1,200*l*., whereas it was in fact 1,400*l*. The wife had admitted the error and acted on the assumption that the true sum was 1,400*l*. After the death of the mortgagee and his wife :—Held, that parties claiming under the husband were not estopped by his execution of the settlement from disputing its accuracy. Scholefield v. Lockwood, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 738 ; 8 L. T. 409 ; 11 W. R. 555.

Transfer of Mortgage — Receipt for Costs — Taxation.]—A third mortgagee took a transfer of the first and second mortgages, the transfer containing a recital that a gross sum was due in respect of the mortgage securities. A receipt for the money was given, which specified that a certain sum, part of the gross sum, was paid in respect of costs ; "the accounts thereof to be hereafter adjusted." The solicitor of the first and second mortgagees, who had also acted as the solicitor for the mortgagor, afterwards delivered his bill of costs, containing items which were properly chargeable against the mortgagor only. The third mortgagee applied to have the bill taxed :—Held, assuming his right to relief, that he was upon this application estopped by the deed from disputing the amount. Forsyth, In re, 11 Jur. (N.S.) 213 : 11 L. T. 616 ; 13 W. R. 307. Affirmed, 12 L. T. 687 ; 13 W. R. 932—L.JJ.

Covenant for Title—Fraud.]—By an indenture after reciting that the testator, of whose real estate the defendants were the trustees, being at the date of his will, and so continuing till the time of his death, seised in fee simple, free from incumbrances, of certain real estate, of which the plot thereby granted formed part, made his will, and thereby devised his real estate unto the defendants, their heirs and assigns, upon certain trusts, and also reciting that the testator died without having revoked or altered his will, and also reciting that the defendants in exercise of a power in the will, had agreed with T. for the absolute sale to him of the plot of land and premises intended to be thereby granted, and the inheritance thereof, in fee simple in possession, free from incumbrances, at a certain price, and also reciting that H., one of the defendants, as beneficial owner of the plot of ground subject to the power of sale, had agreed to concur in the indenture, it was witnessed that the defendants did grant and convey, and the defendant H. did grant and confirm, the plot of ground unto and to the use of T., his heirs and assigns, for ever. The indenture contained a covenant that the defendants and the defendant H. respectively had not incumbered, and also a covenant that the defendant H., together with the defendants, had good right to convey :—Held, that the statements as to title were not sufficiently precise to raise an estoppel against the defendants so as to prevent them from denying that in fact they had no title to convey and from setting up the true facts. Onward Building Society v. Smithson, [1893] 1 Ch. 1; 41 W. R. 53—C. A.

Undisclosed Mortgage—Solicitor Trustee.]—Two trustees, one of whom was a solicitor, advanced money on mortgage. The mortgagor, with the concurrence of the solicitor trustee, sold part of the mortgaged property without disclosing the mortgage. Regular conveyances in fee to the purchasers were executed by the mortgagor, containing a recital that he was seised or otherwise well and sufficiently entitled in fee simple. The solicitor trustee received the purchase-money, and retained it. Eleven years afterwards both trustees executed a reconveyance of the property so sold, the other trustee believing, on the representation of the solicitor trustee, that the property was then about to be sold by the mortgagor. Soon afterwards the solicitor trustee absconded, and the other trustee then filed a bill against the mortgagor and the purchasers, praying for foreclosure against them:—Held, that under the form of conveyance adopted, neither the plaintiff nor the mortgagor was estopped from denying that the legal estate had passed by the conveyance to the purchasers. Heath v. Crealock, 44 L. J., Ch. 157; L. R. 10 Ch. 22; 31 L. T. 650. Affirming 23 W. R. 95.

Deed intended to be Executed but not Recognised.]—R., after some negotiations, contracted with the assignees of Messrs. E. for the purchase of certain claims of the bankrupts against the estate of G. He represented that he acted on behalf of himself and M., who was clearly cognisant of the negotiations and contract. Several documents passed between the parties, and finally a draft of a deed was prepared, which recited that the contract was a joint purchase by R. and M. This was submitted to M., who approved of it; and at that time he was willing to adopt the contract, but subsequently, upon an alteration of circumstances, M. objected to the contract, and refused to join in the purchase:—Held, that there was no evidence that M. had entered into any agreement, or that R. acted as his agent; and that the recital of an agreement in a document intended to be executed would not bind a party who had done nothing to recognise it, though at one time it was apparent that he was willing to execute it, and the bill was dismissed against M. with costs; but as R. admitted the plaintiff's case, a decree was made against him without costs. Foligno v. Martin, 22 L. J., Ch. 502.

In Settlement.] — A marriage settlement contained a recital that B. was "seised of or otherwise well entitled to" certain messuages, the whole deed shewing the meaning to be that B. was entitled in one shape or other to the fee simple of all the property therein conveyed:—Held, a sufficient estoppel as to the part of the property in which at the date of the settlement B. had no interest whatever, but as to which her interest accrued subsequently. Horton, In re, Horton v. Perks, 51 L. T. 420.

4. Landlord and Tenant.

In what Cases.]—Action on a lease, yielding rent to the lessor, his heirs and assigns, with a covenant for payment of the rent to the lessor, his heirs and assigns, by the devisee of the reversion against the lessee, alleged that the reversion of and in the demised premises belonged to the lessor and his heirs. Plea, that the reversion of and in the premises did not belong to the lessor and his heirs. Replication, by way of estoppel, that the lease was an indenture executed by the defendant, and that he entered and enjoyed the premises by virtue of the indenture; that it did not appear by the indenture that the lessor was not seised in fee, or that he had any estate or interest other than a fee simple; nor did the indenture contain anything to shew that the reversion did not belong to the lessor and his heirs:—Held, that the plea was good, as traversing a material allegation, in the declaration, and that the replication was bad, as it did not shew any estoppel. Weld v. Baxter, 1 H. & N. 568; 26 L. J., Ex. 112; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 91; 5 W. R. 113—Ex. Ch.

If a copyholder makes a lease for years which is not according to the custom of the manor, the lease is good between the lessor and the lessee, and all others except the lord of the manor. Doe d. Tressider v. Tressider, 1 Q. B. 416; 10 L. J., Q. B. 160.

A lessee who executes the counterpart of a lease cannot dispute its validity on the ground of the original not being stamped. Paul v. Meek, 2 Y. & J. 116; 31 R. R. 559.

A lessee, after executing a lease, cannot dispute the title of either of his lessors. Wood v. Day, 1 Moore, 389; 7 Taunt. 646.

But he may shew that his landlord's title has expired. Neave v. Moss, 1 Bing. 360; 8 Moore, 389; 2 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 25; 25 R. R. 650.

Upon non est factum pleaded, the lessee in possession cannot controvert the title of his lessor to demise. Friend v. Eastabrook, 2 W. Bl. 1152.

The defendant held, as tenant from year to year to the plaintiff, two distinct holdings—one at a rent of 63*l.* and the other of 21*l.*—the gale days of both being the same; the plaintiff granted his estate by way of mortgage, but continued in possession and receipt of the rents, and, afterwards, in his rent-books consolidated the two holdings into one, at an increased bulk rent of 103*l.*, which was paid by the defendant. The plaintiff served notice to quit in his own name alone and brought an ejectment in his own name, without joining the mortgagee:—Held, that these facts afforded no evidence of the creation, after the mortgage, of a new tenancy, so as to estop the defendant from shewing that the plaintiff's title had passed from him to the mortgagee. Delmege v. Mullins, Ir. R. 9 C. L. 209—Ex. Ch.

In 1864, A. granted to B. a lease for twenty-one years of a house "together with all edifices . . . lights . . . easements, advantages and appurtenances thereto belonging, or therewith held, used, or enjoyed." At the date of the lease A. held, for the residue of a term expiring at Christmas, 1868, an adjoining house, over which most of the light came to the back windows of the house leased to B. On the expiration of his lease A. purchased a fee simple of the adjoining house, and in 1872 he pulled down that house with the intention of rebuilding it to a greater height than its former height. B., whose lights were not ancient lights, filed a bill to restrain A. from raising the new house to a greater height than the old house:—Held, that the lease to B. only amounted to a grant of the light coming over the adjoining house during A.'s term in it, and that on subsequently acquiring the fee simple of the adjoining house A. was not estopped either at law or in equity from dealing with the house in such a way as to interfere with B.'s lights. Booth v. Alcock, 42 L. J., Ch. 557; L. R. 8 Ch. 663; 29 L. T. 231; 21 W. R. 743.

A tenant covenanted in a lease to deliver up, at the expiration of his term, certain fixtures on the premises. The term expired on the 1st April. On the 10th, the landlord demanded possession. On the 13th, the tenant received notice from a mortgagee that he was entitled to possession, and that he demanded payment of the rent; and on the same day the tenant bought the mortgagee's interest. The landlord having afterwards brought an action for breach of the covenant, in not delivering up the fixtures:—Held, that the tenant was not estopped from denying the landlord's title to the fixtures. Watson v. Lane, 11 Ex. 769; 25 L. J., Ex. 101; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 119; 4 W. R. 293.

A lessor in an ejectment brought to recover a cellar, is not estopped by his deed from going into evidence to shew that the cellar was not intended to be demised. Doe d. Freeland v. Burt, 1 Term Rep. 701; 1 R. R. 367.

Lease — Nuisance — Derogation from Grant.]—Where a lessor by working engines on land adjoining premises demised by him to a tenant has caused such vibration as to destroy a house standing on and demised with those premises, it is no defence to an action by the lessee for a nuisance to shew that the house was at the time of its destruction, and also at the date of the demise, in a weak and unstable condition. The lessor is estopped from setting up such a defence, because to give effect to it would be to allow him to derogate from his own grant. Grosvenor Hotel Co. v. Hamilton, 63 L. J., Q. B. 661; [1894] 2 Q. B. 836; 71 L. T. 362; 42 W. R. 626.

—— Rent—Mutuality.]—The estoppel which enables a landlord who is mortgagor without the legal estate to sue for rent, is mutual, and renders him liable on the covenants in the lease. Harteup v. Bell, 1 Cab. & E. 19.

—— Gavelkind — Lease by Co-parcener of whole of Land—Tenant estopped from denying Title of Heir of Lessor who is privy in Blood—Deduction of Title.]—Where a person entitled as co-parcener to a portion of the rents and profits of land makes a lease of the whole, under which the tenant enters and pays rent as for the whole until the lessor's death, the tenant is estopped from denying that the heir and privy in blood to the lessor is entitled to the whole of the land. H., J. and M., three brothers, were entitled as coparceners in gavelkind to a garden and messuage. H. being in possession made a lease of the whole to the defendant, who entered and paid rent to H. as for the whole up to the latter's death. J. having also died, M. claimed the land as heir-at-law of his brothers, H. and J., and of his father. The defendant, except as to one-third of the property, H.'s share, set up the Statute of Real Property Limitation, under which he claimed to be entitled to the shares of J. and M., to which they had made no claim for over twelve years:—Held, that the defendant would have been estopped from denying the title of H. to the whole of the land, and was equally estopped from denying that of M., the heir and privy in blood to H.:—Held, further, that the mode of finding a privy in blood is not affected by the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 106, s. 2, which makes descent traceable from the last purchaser. Deduction of title is one thing. Privity in blood is another. Weeks v. Birch, 69 L. T. 759.

—— Assignee.]—An assignee of a void lease, who has, on coming into possession, had notice that the lease was held under a particular person, to whom the former tenant has paid rent, is estopped from disputing the title of that person in replevin. Johnson v. Mason, 1 Esp. 89.

Lands were demised in 1861 by lease, with a covenant against alienation or sub-letting without the consent of the landlord. A deed, purporting to assign the tenancy to A., was executed by the personal representatives of the lessee, but the consent of the landlord to such assignment was not obtained. A. afterwards sub-let the premises to the defendant, as tenant from year to year, who came into and continued in possession of the lands. The rent, under this sub-letting, being in arrear, an ejectment was brought against A. and others claiming under him, for non-payment of rent, in which the defendant, the sub-tenant, took defence, denying that there was any subsisting tenancy in respect of the lands between himself and the plaintiff or any other person:—Held, first, that as the assignment to A. was void and no estate passed to A. thereunder, his sub-tenant (the defendant) was estopped from disputing A.'s title, and that it was no defence, to shew that the term of the lease so ineffectually assigned had expired after the sub-letting and before the commencement of the action. Wogan v. Doyle, 12 L. R., Ir. 69.

Lease by Parole—Assignment by Deed.]—R., who had possession, but no title, let lands by parole to the defendant for a term of two years, within which period R. by deed assigned the lands to the plaintiff, who, before the expiration of the two years, demanded possession from the defendant and brought an ejectment against him:—Held, that the defendant was estopped from denying the title of R., under whom the plaintiff derived his title, and that the plaintiff was entitled to recover. Ward v. Ryan, Ir. R. 10 C. L. 17—Ex. Ch.

An assignee of a lease by indenture is estopped by the deed which estops his assignor. Taylor v. Needham, 2 Taunt. 278; 11 R. R. 572.

Where A. claimed to hold lands under B. as a security for a debt:—Held, that he could not defend an ejectment by the assignees of B. after his bankruptcy on the ground that the grant under which B. derived his title from the Crown was void. Doe d. Biddle v. Abrahams, 1 Stark. 305.

Ejectment—Person defending as Landlord.]—In ejectment, a person defending as landlord is bound by the same estoppel as the tenant in possession. Doe d. Manvers v. Mizen, 2 M. & Rob. 56.

If B. claiming under A. lets land for a year to C. and dies, and A. afterwards brings an ejectment against C., C. cannot dispute the title of A. Barwick d. Richmond Corporation v. Thompson, 7 Term Rep. 488; 4 R. R. 499. And see Bryan d. Child v. Winwood, 1 Taunt. 208; 9 R. R. 751.

Tenant with Notice.]—Where a tenant occupied apartments in a house belonging to a wife, and paid rent to the husband, who subsequently granted a lease of the whole house to the plaintiff.—Held, that having occupied with notice of the lease, he could not impeach its validity, nor controvert the plaintiff's title. Rennie v. Robinson, 1 Bing. 147; 7 Moore, 539; 1 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 30; 25 R. R. 604.

Attornment to Party from whom Possession not received.]—A tenant who attorns to a party from whom he did not receive possession, is not estopped from shewing want of title in such party. Cornish v. Searell, 1 M. & Ry. 703; 8 B. & C. 471; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 254. See Gravenor v. Woodhouse, 7 Moore, 289; 1 Bing. 38; 25 R. R. 582.

5. MORTGAGES AND DEBENTURES.

Fictitious Deeds — Legal Estate — Incumbrancers without Notice.]—In 1873, D., in order to carry out a fraudulent scheme, obtained a transfer to himself of mortgages of freehold property, and after various dealings with it the legal estate was, in September, 1875, conveyed by a mortgagee to H. in trust for M., and in March, 1876, by H. to M. M. was alleged to have been an accomplice of and trustee for D. In August, 1874, in pursuance of this scheme, T., claiming to be entitled to this property under a fictitious lease for ninety-eight years, purporting to have been granted to him in March, 1870, by a merely fictitious freeholder (an agent and accomplice of D.), demised the property by way of mortgage to A. In November, 1874, M., claiming to be entitled to the same property under a fictitious lease for ninety-nine years, also dated March, 1870, and purporting to be granted to him by T., demised the property by way of mortgage to B., the mortgage deed being executed by M. only. In January, 1877, M. (to whom the legal estate had been conveyed in March, 1876) deposited the genuine title deeds of the property with C., upon a memorandum charging his estate and interest in the lands comprised in the deeds and a statutory declaration of title; and further advances were made to M. and D., who came forward and stated that M. was merely a trustee for him of the property. In 1878, D., M. and T. were convicted and sentenced to penal servitude for forgery and fraud in connection with this property, and C., as equitable mortgagee, entered into possession. In an action by A. to settle the priorities of himself, B. and C. as encumbrancers on the property:—Held (1), that, assuming T. to have been the agent of D., so that his representations to A. of having a good title were binding on D., such representations, followed by the acquisition of the property beneficially by D., did not bind the estate so as to give A. a prior equitable charge as against subsequent purchasers for value without notice; (2) that the like representations of M. to B., followed by the acquisition, first, of the equitable, and afterwards of the legal estate by M., did not put B. in any better position, and that the doctrine of estoppel did not apply so as to convert the fictitious title acquired by B. from M. in November, 1874, into a valid legal title ab initio upon the conveyance of the legal estate to M. in March, 1876; (3) that as purchaser for value without notice by deposit of the genuine title deeds, C., though subsequent in date, was entitled in priority over A. and B. Keate v. Phillips, 50 L. J., Ch. 664; 18 Ch. D. 560; 44 L. T. 731; 29 W. R. 710.

Description that Premises Unincumbered.]—Where a conveyance to a mortgagee describes the premises as unincumbered, in the absence of fraud, it is conclusive evidence to shew that the amount of a prior mortgage was paid. Jones v. Williams, 2 Stark. 52.

How far an Estoppel.]—One of the canons of the Queen's chapel of St. George, at Windsor, demised by way of mortgage for ninety-nine years, if he should so long live and continue a canon, to the plaintiff, "all that the canonry of him, R. A. M. of the Queen's free chapel of St. George, at Windsor, and all glebe and other lands, messuages, tenements and hereditaments belonging thereto; and all the rights, rents, emoluments and appurtenances to the canonry belonging." On ejectment by the mortgagee:—Held, that he was not estopped by the mortgage deed from shewing that the house in question did not belong to the canonry. Doe d. Butcher v. Musgrave, 1 Man. & G. 625; 1 Scott (N.R.) 451; 9 L. J., C. P. 318.

A., having an equitable fee in lands, mortgaged the same to B. by lease and release. The release recited that A. was legally or equitably entitled to the premises conveyed; and the releasor covenanted, that he was lawfully or equitably seised in his demesne of and in, and otherwise well entitled to, the same. The legal estate was subsequently conveyed to A., and he afterwards for a valuable consideration conveyed the same to C. Upon ejectment brought by B. against C.:—Held, first, that there being in the release no certain and precise averment of any seisin in A., but only a recital and covenant that he was legally or equitably entitled, C. was not thereby estopped from setting up the legal estate acquired by him, after the execution of the release. Right d. Jeffreys v. Bucknell, 2 B. & Ad. 278.

Held, secondly, that the release did not operate as an estoppel by virtue of the words "granted, bargained, sold, aliened, remised, released," &c., because the release passed nothing but what the releasor had at the time, and A. had not the legal title in the premises at the time of the release. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that this case did not fall within the rule, that a mortgagor cannot dispute the title of his mortgagee, because C. claimed as a purchaser for a valuable consideration without notice of a legal interest which was not in A. at the time of the mortgage to B., A. having only then an equitable interest, which passed to B., whose title as to that was not disputed. Ib.

—— Termors.]—An owner in fee of land, prior to mortgaging it for a term of years, put A. into possession. A. occupied for twenty-five years without payment of rent or written acknowledgment of the mortgagor's title. A. then conveyed in fee to the plaintiff, and after attorning to him as his tenant gave up possession for a sum of money to B., the representative of the mortgagor, and to C. the executor of the mortgagee (whose mortgage had been kept alive by payment of interest). B. and C. afterwards joined in a conveyance of the premises to the defendants:—Held, in ejectment, first, that the defendants were not estopped from setting up their title to the premises; secondly, that they were persons claiming under a mortgage within 7 Will. 4 & 1 Vict. c. 28, and consequently that the 3 & 4 Will. 4, c. 27, did not operate to bar their title. Ford v. Ager, 2 H. & C. 279; 32 L. J., Ex. 269; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 804; 8 L. T. 46; 11 W. R. 1073.

Proviso that one Party a Surety only.]—A., B. and C. executed to D. a mortgage of B.'s lands (comprised in the petition for sale), and of C.'s lands, to secure 2,914*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.*, of which 900*l.* was B.'s debt, and the remainder C.'s debt. The mortgage contained a proviso that, as between A., B. and C., A. was a surety only, and that B. and C. respectively were sureties only for portion of the said sum; yet, with regard to D., they were to be considered as principal debtors, so as not to be released by time being given to any other or others of them, or by any act or omission of D., whereby, as sureties only, they would be released. B. subsequently executed to D. two other mortgages of the lands comprised in the petition. A. having paid D. the full amount of the debt secured by the first mortgage, claimed to stand in D.'s place for 900*l.*, being B.'s debt, and the moiety of 2,014*l.* 9*s.* 9*d.*, being C.'s debt, for which both he and B. were joint sureties, and to be placed on the final schedule on foot of, and in the priority of, the first mortgage:—Held, that A.'s claim was valid, and that he was not estopped by the special proviso of the mortgage from relying on his equitable rights of surety. Kirkwood's Estate, In re, 1 L. R., Ir. 108.

Covenant for Title — Mortgage — Fraud — Innocent Misrepresentation.]—The owner in fee by purchase from the defendants of certain land mortgaged it. He subsequently by fraud obtained a second conveyance from the defendants of the same land, containing the usual covenant for title (the bona fides of the defendants being unquestioned), and again mortgaged the land to the plaintiffs. In an action for breach of the covenant for title:—Held, that the statements as to title in the second conveyance were not sufficiently precise to raise an estoppel and prevent the defendant from setting up the true facts; that the defendants were not liable to the plaintiffs on the grounds—(i.) that the plaintiffs were in no better position as against the defendants than the mortgagor, and (ii.) that the misrepresentation by the defendants was an innocent one; and that the defendants could not have set up a plea of non est factum. Onward Building Society v. Smithson, 62 L. J., Ch. 138; [1893] 1 Ch. 1; 2 R. 106; 68 L. T. 125; 41 W. R. 53—C. A.

Covenants for Title.]—The covenants for title in a mortgage of a freehold estate, whether read in connection with the word "grant" or not, do not amount to that precise averment that the mortgagor is seised of the legal estate, which is necessary to create an estoppel as against him and persons claiming under him. General Finance, Mortgage and Discount Co. v. Liberator Permanent Benefit Building Society, 10 Ch. D. 15; 39 L. T. 600; 27 W. R. 210.

Recitals, Absence of.]—A., by deed, purported to grant a freehold estate to B. by way of mortgage. The deed contained no recitals, but there were the usual mortgagor's covenants for title, including a covenant that the mortgagor "had power to grant the premises in manner aforesaid." The mortgage was accepted by B. on the faith of certain forged title deeds produced and handed to him by A. At the date of the mortgage A. had not the legal estate nor any interest whatever in the property. Subsequently, however, A. acquired the legal estate and mortgaged it to C.:—Held, that, inasmuch as the mortgage to B. contained no precise averment that A. was seised of the legal estate, no estoppel had been created in favour of B. as against C. Ib. See also MORTGAGE and col. 427.

Debentures — Validity of Issue — Right of other Holders.]—The secretary of a company, by direction of the directors, caused debentures payable to bearer to be prepared, sealed and stamped. They were then placed in a box that was kept at the company's London office, which was also the office of T., one of the directors. Some of the debentures were delivered to an agent, N., with instructions to issue them to the public. After the commencement of the winding-up of the company, N., who had been unable to issue the debentures, returned them to T., who, previously to the commencement of the winding-up had made large advances to the company. T. gave some of the debentures to R. and Co., his creditors (in satisfaction of their claims), and they took them, supposing that they had been regularly issued to T.:—Held, that the holders of valid debentures were not estopped from disputing the validity of those held by R. and Co. Mowatt v. Castle Steel and Iron Works Co., 34 Ch. D. 58; 55 L. T. 645—C. A. And see COMPANY.

Son Covenanting as to Father's Title.]—A son who, under a voluntary settlement executed by his father, was entitled in remainder to an estate for life with remainder to his first and other sons in tail, subsequently to his marriage joined his father in two mortgages, which recited that his father was seised in fee, and covenanted that he was so seised; the father and the two mortgagees executed a subsequent mortgage in fee (to pay them off and raise a further sum), which the son did not execute, but was aware of and joined in a collateral deed for the purpose of barring all possible estates tail and vesting the fee in his father; part of the money raised by all the mortgages being for, and applied to, the use of the son:—Held, that he was estopped from setting up against his own acts any estate which he had at the time of the mortgages, and that, therefore, the mortgage was a good charge on his life estate. Guardian Assurance Co. v. Avonmore, 6 Ir. Eq. R. 391.

Married Woman.]—A married woman restrained from anticipation cannot by an admission raise an estoppel against herself so as to bind her interest. Bateman (Lady) v. Faber, 66 L. J., Ch. 721; [1897] 2 Ch. 223; 77 L. T. 71. See HUSBAND AND WIFE.

6. IN OTHER CASES.

By Description.]—A party having executed a bond describing himself as "T. B. of C., in the county of N., Esq.":—Held, on judgment of outlawry and error assigned thereon, that by his own description of himself in the bond he was estopped from saying that he was not properly described in the writ, "of a town, hamlet, or place," within the words of the Statute of Additions, 1 Hen. 5, c. 5. Bonner v. Wilkinson, 1 D. & R. 328; 5 B. & Ald. 682.

For the purposes of stamp duty it is requisite to ascertain the legal effect and meaning of an instrument, and the description of it given by the parties thereto is immaterial, and there can be no estoppel. Limmer Asphalte Paving Co. v. Inland Revenue Commissioners, 41 L. J., Ex. 106; L. R. 7 Ex. 211; 26 L. T. 633; 20 W. R. 610.

Valued Policy, how far an Estoppel.]—For the purpose of the contract of insurance, and for the purpose of all rights arising from that contract, it may well be that the valuation in a valued policy is conclusive. Whenever it is sought to set up an estoppel, founded upon the valuation for any purpose going beyond that which I have endeavoured to indicate, the law does not justify such a use of it; therefore, for every other purpose collateral to the contract, there is no reason for holding the valuation to be conclusive between the parties—per Selborne, L.C. Burnand v. Rodocanachi, 51 L. J., Q. B. 548; 7 App. Cas. 335; 47 L. T. 277; 31 W. R. 65.

Lease and Release.]—A conveyance by lease and release does not operate by estoppel. Right d. Jeffreys v. Bucknell, 2 B. & Ad. 278; overruling Bensley v. Burdon, 2 Sim. & S. 519; 4 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 164; 25 R. R. 258. See Lloyd v. Lloyd, 4 Dr. & W. 354; 2 Con. & L. 592 (Ir.).

Validity of Securities]—By an act for improving a town, commissioners were empowered to raise money by a rate, and to borrow money upon the credit of the rate. The act gave a form of mortgage security, and for the transfer of such security by the holder. No person while a commissioner was capable of entering into contracts with the body of the commissioners, but in 1835 H., who was one of them, agreed to supply the rest of the body with a quantity of bricks, which were required for building purposes. It was arranged that he should receive securities for 100*l.* each in consideration of the supply of bricks. The transaction was carried out, and he received securities in the form given by the act, and which respectively purported to be granted "in consideration of 100*l.* advanced and lent by" D. Subsequently these securities were transferred in the manner provided by the act, and were assigned to the plaintiff, who took proceedings upon them, demanding that the commissioners should apply the money in their hands that had been raised by rates, or which should thereafter be so raised, in payment of the interest payable on the securities:—Held, that the commissioners were estopped from disputing the validity of the securities, and that they could not set up as a defence that they had been granted in consideration of the bricks supplied, instead of, as they purported to be, in consideration of money advanced and lent. Webb v. Herne Bay Commissioners, 39 L. J., Q. B. 221; L. R. 5 Q. B. 642; 22 L. T. 745; 19 W. R. 241.

Barring Entail.]—A son who, under a voluntary settlement executed by his father, was entitled in remainder to an estate for life with remainder to his first and other sons in tail, subsequently to his marriage joined his father in two mortgages, which recited that his father was seised in fee, and covenanted that he was so seised; the father and the two mortgagees executed a subsequent mortgage in fee (to pay them off and raise a further sum), which the son did not execute, but was aware of, and joined in a collateral deed for the purpose of barring all possible estates tail and vesting the fee in his father; part of the money raised by all the mortgages being for, and applied to, the use of the son:—Held, that he was estopped from setting up against his own acts any estate which he had at the time of the mortgages, and that, therefore, the mortgage was a good charge on his life estate. Guardian Assurance Co. v. Avonmore (Viscount), Ir. R. 6 Eq. 391.

Forgery—One Joint Holder Estopped—Right of other to Sue.]—One of two executors, at various periods, some of which were more than six years before the commencement of the action, forged his co-executor's signature to transfers of stock, which were duly registered. He applied the proceeds of the transfers to his own purposes, but continued to pay the amounts of the dividends to the persons entitled. The other executor, on discovery of the fraud, informed the railway company that the transfers were invalid, and demanded that the stock should be registered in the names of herself and another who had been appointed trustees of the will. The railway company declined to accede to this request, and the present action was brought that the company might be ordered to register the plaintiffs as owners of the stock:—Held, that though the fraudulent executor was estopped by his own action from denying the validity of the transfers, such estoppel did not affect his innocent co-executor; and that the innocent executor had in equity a sufficient interest in the stock to enable her to sue her fraudulent co-executor and the railway company. Barton v. North Staffordshire Ry., 57 L. J., Ch. 800; 38 Ch. D. 458; 58 L. T. 549; 36 W. R. 75.

By Negligence.]—B., a trustee, advanced trust money to A. in 1851, on a legal mortgage of lands held by A. in fee, the mortgage deed reciting the trust. By collusion with B., A. in 1856 obtained the title deeds, and also a re-conveyance of the legal estate, containing a reference to the mortgage, and then, suppressing the mortgage and re-conveyance, conveyed, as under his original title, the legal estate to C., by way of mortgage. In a suit by B.'s cestui que trust:—Held, that C., although he acted bonâ fide, and was wholly unaware of the dealings between A. and B., and, in fact, never heard of the mortgage or re-conveyance till after the commencement of the suit, could not be heard to aver ignorance of the facts which he would have discovered upon inquiries, to which he would have been put if he had seen the deeds of mortgage and re-conveyance before he advanced his money, inasmuch as he was obliged to rely upon those deeds for his legal title; therefore that the plaintiff's mortgage had priority over C.'s. Joyce v. Rawlins, 40 L. J., Ch. 105; L. R. 11 Eq. 53; 23 L. T. 756; 19 W. R. 217. And see col. 474.

Trustee not Estopped.]—The owner of the equity of redemption in a mortgaged estate demised the estate to a trustee for a term, upon certain trusts, and afterwards devised the same estate in fee. The devisees having contracted to sell the estate to a purchaser, paid off the mortgage, took a re-conveyance to the uses of the will, and conveyed the estate to the purchaser, who had no notice of the term. A bill filed by the cestui que trust under the demise against the trustee of the term and the purchaser for administration of the trust was dismissed by James, V.-C., on the ground that there was no term by estoppel in the trustee, and on appeal the Lord Chancellor affirmed the decision, but without prejudice to any question that might be raised at law, being of opinion that the question of estoppel was a question for a court of law, and that there was no equity against the purchaser if the legal estate was in him. Clemow v. Geach, 40 L. J., Ch. 44; L. R. 6 Ch. 147; 19 W. R. 53.

Vendor when able to prove Non-payment of Purchase-money.]—In an action for unpaid purchase-money, the acknowledgment in the deed of conveyance of payment of the purchase-money does not, in the absence of a plea of estoppel, preclude the vendor from shewing that the purchase-money had not in fact been paid; although the deed is given in evidence by himself as proof of the fact of the sale and conveyance. Potts v. Nixon, Ir. R. 5 C. L. 45.

Effect of Recital on Covenants in Conveyance.]—A conveyance, after reciting that it had been agreed that 1,400*l.*, part of the purchase-money, should be paid to a mortgagee of the premises, and that the residue of the purchase-money, 460*l.*, should be paid to the vendor, witnessed that in consideration of the 1,400*l.* paid to the mortgagee at or before the sealing and delivery of the deed, the receipt whereof the mortgagee acknowledged, and from the mortgage-money and every part thereof acquitted and discharged the vendor; and also in consideration of the 460*l.* paid to the vendor as before mentioned, the receipt whereof and also the payment of the mortgage-money, making in the whole 1,860*l.*, the vendor thereby acknowledged, and from the same and every part thereof acquitted, released and discharged the purchaser: — Held, to be no estoppel upon the vendor, the release by the word "as before mentioned," &c., referring to, and being qualified by, the recital, which stated an agreement to pay the 460*l.*, and not an actual payment. Bottrell v. Summers, 2 Y. & J. 407; 31 R. R. 613. And see col. 427.

Patent—Denying Validity of.]—A declaration stated that letters-patent had been granted to the defendant for improvements in purifying gas, and that other letters had been granted to the plaintiff for an improved mode of manufacturing gas, and that parts of the plaintiff's invention intended to be secured had been claimed in the specification, that disputes had arisen between the parties as to their rights under the letters-patent to the use of oxides of iron for the purpose of purifying gas, and that to put an end to such disputes the parties covenanted by deed with each other for a mutual right of using the patents on the terms of giving notice to use the same; breach, want of notice. Plea, that the plaintiff's patent was not a good and valid patent, in this, that it was not new, and the plaintiff was not the true and first inventor:—Held, that the intention of the deed was to prevent disputes between the parties, and that the defendant was estopped by the deed from denying the validity of the patent, its novelty, and that the plaintiff was the true and first inventor. Hills v. Laming, 9 Ex. 256; 23 L. J., Ex. 60.

Shares—Certificate of Registration—Transfer — Refusal to Register—Damages.]—A company which issues a share certificate stating that the person therein named is the proprietor and duly registered owner of a specified number of shares in the company is estopped from afterwards denying his title to the shares, and is liable for damages for refusing to register a transfer from him. Bahia and San Francisco Ry., In re (L. R. 3 Q. B. 584) followed; Simm v. Anglo-American Telegraph Co. (5 Q. B. D. 188) and Ashbury Railway Carriage and Iron Co. v. Riche (L. R. 7 H. L. 653) distinguished. Balkis Consolidated Co. v. Tomkinson, 63 L. J., Q. B. 134; [1893] A. C. 396; 1 R. 178; 69 L. T. 598; 42 W. R. 204—H. L. (E.) See COMPANY, and col. 468.

—— Demise of Shares—Estoppel as to Title.]—A., by indenture, demised to B. for ten years the dividends to be declared on certain railway shares, at a yearly rent payable half-yearly. In an action by A. against B. upon this deed, the declaration alleged that A. was a member of the company, and as such was possessed of or entitled to shares therein; the declaration set out the indenture, and alleged a breach of covenant to pay the rent. B. pleaded that A., at the time of the making of the indenture, was not possessed of, or entitled to, the shares:—Held, that B. was estopped by his deed from so pleading. Beckett v. Bradley, 7 Man. & G. 994; 8 Scott (N.R.) 843; 2 D. & L. 586; 14 L. J., C. P. 3.

Trover for Goods — Delivery Denied.] — In trover for paper it appeared that the plaintiff and the defendant had been in partnership together as paper manufacturers and iron merchants. The partnership was dissolved by a deed which recited that it had been agreed that the business of paper manufacturer should belong exclusively to the defendant, and the business of an iron merchant to the plaintiff, but that the plaintiff should receive out of the stock paper to the value of 898*l.* 4*s.* 11*d.*, which should remain in the paper-mill for a year at his option. The deed also recited that in performance of that arrangement, paper to the value of 898*l.* 4*s.* 11*d.* had been delivered to the plaintiff, and the same was then in the mill, as the plaintiff acknowledged. It was then witnessed that in the performance of the arrangement the plaintiff and the defendant dissolved partnership, and the plaintiff assigned to the defendant the stock-in-trade of the business of a paper manufacturer, except the 898*l.* 4*s.* 11*d.* worth of paper so delivered to the plaintiff as aforesaid, and the defendant assigned to the plaintiff the stock-in-trade of the business of iron merchants. There were also mutual releases. No paper whatever was set apart or delivered to the plaintiff, but the jury found that the defendant had converted the whole stock:—Held, that the parties were estopped by the deed to say that no such delivery had taken place. Wiles v. Woodward, 5 Ex. 557; 20 L. J., Ex. 261.

Goods belonging to Licensee of Tenant.]—A third person not claiming possession to the land who has brought goods on to the land by the licence of the tenant is not estopped from disputing the lessor's title. Tadman v. Henman, [1893] 2 Q. B. 168; 5 R. 479; 57 J. P. 664.

Recovery — Technical Defect.] — Where a tenant in tail has entered into a contract for the sale of his estates of value, and in order to convey them to the purchaser, has suffered a recovery which turns out to be technically defective at law, the court will not allow persons claiming under him to take advantage of the flaw. Howard v. Shrewsbury (Earl), L. R. 3 Eq., 218.

Patentee disputing Validity of Patent.]—H. in 1873 took out a patent for improvements in bobbin-net and twist-lace machines; in his specification he claimed not only the whole combination but also three subordinate combinations. In 1877 H. became bankrupt, and his trustee assigned the patent to C. In 1880 H. took out another patent for improvements in bobbin netting and twist lace, and shortly afterwards entered into partnership with S. C. brought an action against H. & S. for infringing his patent. H. & S. delivered a defence containing a denial of the infringement, and of the validity of C.'s patent. C., by his reply, stated that H. & S. were estopped from denying the validity of his patent. H. & S. obtained leave to sever in their defence and to deliver particulars of objections, without prejudice to any question at the trial as to their being estopped from objecting to the validity of C.'s patent. The court having decided that C.'s patent was bad, on the ground that the original patentee had claimed, not only for the whole combination, but also for three subordinate combinations, one of which was not novel, allowed the appeal of S., who had taken that objection to the patent:—Held, as to H., that he was not estopped from disputing the validity of the patent granted to himself and assigned by his trustee in bankruptcy. Smith v. Cropper, 55 L. J., Ch. 12; 13 App. Cas. 249; 53 L. T. 330; 33 W. R. 753—H. L. (E.)

—— Licensee of Patentee.]—A licensee under another's patent is not estopped thereby from contesting the novelty of such patent. Dangerfield v. Jones, 13 L. T. 142. But see col. 465.

Deposit Note of Society given by Directors.]—The directors of an unincorporated building society which had no borrowing powers borrowed money for the benefit of the society and gave to the lender as security the promissory notes of the directors. The society was afterwards incorporated under the Building Societies Act, 1874 (37 & 38 Vict. c. 42), and acquired borrowing powers. The appellant, who was the representative of the lender, applied to the society for repayment of the loan, but ultimately agreed to refrain from legal proceedings against the society on the directors giving him a deposit note for the amount due. The directors accordingly gave him a deposit note under the seal of the society, stating that the money was lent by the appellant on the date of the deposit note, and he thereupon gave up to them the promissory notes above mentioned:—Held that the deposit note was not binding on the society. Sheffield Building Society, In re Watson, Ex parte, 57 L. J., Q. B. 609; 21 Q. B. D. 301; 59 L. T. 401; 36 W. R. 829; 52 J. P. 742.

Release of Legacies — Other Property falling in.]—A testatrix by her will bequeathed 4,000*l.* upon trust for investment for her niece for life, and in case the niece should die without issue, the testatrix directed that the sum should fall into her residuary estate. She also bequeathed several other pecuniary legacies, and the will contained also a residuary bequest. The estate proved insufficient to pay the pecuniary legacies in full, and the pecuniary legatees (including the niece) executed a deed of release, to which the residuary legatees were not parties, by which they acknowledged the receipt of dividends upon the legacies in discharge of the amounts of the several legacies, and released the executors and also the estate of the testatrix from all further claims and demands. The niece afterwards died without issue, and the sum which thus fell into the estate was sufficient to pay the balances on the pecuniary legacies in full. The legacy of 4,000*l.* was fully recited in the deed of release:—Held, that as the release could not have been intended to enure for the benefit of the residuary legatees, the pecuniary legatees were not estopped by the release from claiming to have the balances of their legacies made up out of the fund that had thus fallen in. Ghost's Trusts, In re, 49 L. T. 588.

Sale of Ship—Dock Duty.]—Upon the sale of a ship the vendor covenanted "that the said hereby bargained premises and every part thereof are now and so from henceforth for ever shall remain free and discharged of or from all bargains, gifts, sales, incumbrances and the like." At the time of the date of the deed the vessel was in B. docks. Vessels entering the B. docks were subject to a duty of 10*d.* on each ton of cargo, but the owners of the ship in question had compounded for a rate of 1½*d.* per ton on an undertaking that on the vessel leaving the whole duty should be paid. After the sale of the vessel the vendee took her to L., where she received her cargo, returning to the B. docks for her passengers, on leaving which the full duty of 10*d.* per ton was demanded and paid, but the deed was not delivered until the time when the vessel was at L.:—Held, that the language of the deed spoke from the time of delivery; that at that time the ship being at L., it was in consequence of the voluntary act of the vendee that the duty attached, and that there was therefore no breach of the covenant. Quære, whether if the deed had been delivered at the time the ship was at the docks there would have been a breach of the covenant. Taylor v. M'Calmont, 4 W. R. 59.

7. Pleading.

Necessity for.]—Estoppels by deed must, in order to make them binding, be pleaded if there be an opportunity; otherwise the party omitting to plead it waives the estoppel, and leaves the issue at large, on which the jury may find according to the truth. Freeman v. Cooke, 2 Ex. 654; 6 D. & L. 187; 18 L. J., Ex. 114; 12 Jur. 777.

D. By Matter in Pais.

1. General Principles.

What Acts.]—The acts in pais, which bind parties by way of estoppel, are acts of notoriety, not less formal and solemn than the execution of a deed; as, for instance, livery, entry, acceptance of an estate, and the like. Lyon v. Reed, 13 M. & W. 285; 13 L. J., Ex. 377; 8 Jur. 762.

Wilful Representation—Intention to Induce Another—Acting on Inducement.]—Where a person wilfully makes a representation, intended to induce another to act upon the faith of it or where (whatever is his intention) a reasonable man in the situation of that other, would believe that it was meant that he should act upon it, and in either case that other does act upon it as true, and alters his position, there is an estoppel in pais to conclude the former from averring against the latter a different state of things as existing at the same time, and conduct by negligence or omission, where there is a duty cast upon the person to disclose the truth, may often have the same effect. Freeman v. Cooke, 6 D. & L. 187; 2 Ex. 654; 18 L. J., Ex. 114; 12 Jur. 777.

But unless the statement was intended to induce the other to act on the faith of it, or was such that a reasonable person would act on the faith of it, there is no estoppel, although the other did in fact believe the statement, and was in fact induced to alter his position accordingly. Ib.

The language used by the Court of Queen's Bench in Pickard v. Sears, 6 A. & E. 469; 2 N. & P. 488; and Gregg v. Wells, 10 A. & E. 90; 2 P. & D. 296, must be understood with this qualification. Ib.

In trover by assignees of a bankrupt against a sheriff, for the conversion of the bankrupt's goods seized under a fi. fa. against C. and D., it appeared that immediately before the seizure the bankrupt told the officer that the goods were the property of C., and immediately afterwards he contradicted the statement, and said they were the goods of D. The jury found that the goods were in reality the bankrupt's, but also that he represented the goods to the officer as the goods of C., so as to induce the officer, by that false representation, to seize them:—Held, that, under the plea of not possessed, this finding did not estop the bankrupt and the assignees from complaining of the seizure of the goods as their own. Ib.

If A. deliberately makes an assertion to B., intending it to be acted upon by B., and it is acted upon by B., A. is estopped from saying that it was not true. If it turns out to be false, A. is answerable for the damage which may have accrued to B. from having acted upon it, and B. is entitled, in respect of anything done in the belief that it was true, to object to any denial of its truth by A. Piggott v. Stratton, 1 De G. F. & J. 33, 49; 29 L. J., Ch. 1; 6 Jur (N.S.) 129; 1 L. T. 111; 8 W. R. 13.

It is a universal law that if a man, either by words or by conduct, has intimated that he consents to an act which has been done, and that he will offer no opposition to it, although it could not have been lawfully done without his consent, and he thereby induces others to do that from which they otherwise might have abstained, he cannot question the legality of the act he had so sanctioned to the prejudice of those who have so given faith to his words, or to the fair inference to be drawn from his conduct. Cairncross v. Lorimer, 3 Macq. H. L. 829; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 149; 3 L. T. 130.

Nobody ought to be estopped from averring the truth or asserting a just demand, unless by his acts or words or neglect his now averring the truth or asserting the demand would work some wrong to some other person who has been induced to do something, or to abstain from doing something, by reason of what he has said or done, or omitted to say or do. Adamson, Ex parte, Collie, In re, 47 L. J., Ch. 106; 8 Ch. D. 817; 38 L. T. 920; 26 W. R. 892.

One recognised proposition as to estoppel in pais is, that if a person by words or conduct wilfully endeavours to cause another to believe in a certain state of things which such person knows to be false, and if the other believes in such state of things, and acts upon his belief, he who knowingly made the false statement is estopped from averring afterwards that such a state of things did not, in fact, exist. Carr v. L. & N. W. Ry., 44 L. J., C. P. 109; L. R. 10 C. P. 307; 31 L. T. 785; 23 W. R. 747.

Another recognised proposition as to estoppel in pais is, that if a person, either in express terms or by conduct, makes a representation to another of the existence of a certain state of facts which he intends to be acted upon in a certain way, and it is acted upon in that way, in the belief of the existence of such a state of facts, to the damage of him who so believes and acts, such person is estopped from denying the existence of such a state of facts. Ib.

A third recognised proposition as to estoppel in pais is, that if a person, whatever his real meaning may be, so conducts himself that a reasonable man would take his conduct to mean a certain representation of facts, and that it was a true representation, and that he was intended to act upon it in a particular way, and if he with such belief does act in that way to his damage, such person is estopped from denying that the facts were as represented. Ib.

A fourth recognised proposition as to estoppel in pais is, that if, in the transaction itself which is in dispute, A. has led B. into the belief in a certain state of facts by conduct of culpable negligence calculated to have the result, and such culpable negligence has been the proximate cause of leading and has led B. to act by mistake upon such belief to his prejudice, A. cannot be heard afterwards as against B. to shew that the state of facts referred to did not exist. Ib.

—— Company — Ultra Vires.]—A company cannot be bound by estoppel to do something beyond its powers. British Mutual Banking Co. v. Charnwood Forest Ry. Co., 56 L. J., Q. B. 449; 18 Q. B. D. 714; 57 L. T. 833; 35 W. R. 590; 52 J. P. 150. Bishop v. Balkis Consolidated Co., 59 L. J., Q. B. 563; 25 Q. B. D. 512; 63 L. T. 601; 39 W. R. 99; 2 Meg. 292.

But a borrower from a company which has lent its funds ultra vires is estopped when sued from setting up the invalidity of the contract. Coltman v. Coltman, 51 L. J., Ch. 3; 19 Ch. D. 64; 45 L. T. 392; 30 W. R. 242.

Mistake—No Intention to deceive.]—Where a person's acts or declarations induce another to act in a particular way, he will be bound by the consequences if injurious to that other, though he may himself have been under a mistake, and may have had no intention to mislead or deceive. Sarat Chunder Dey v. Gopal Chunder Lala, 56 J. P. 741—P. C.

Materiality of Representation.]—When a party has practised a deception, with a view to a particular end, which has been attained by it, he cannot be allowed to deny its materiality. The onus probandi that the end was not so attained lies on the party who used the deception. Smith v. Kay, 7 H. L. Cas. 750.

As to an Existing Fact.]—Estoppel by representations applies only where the representation is as to a fact existing at the time, not where it is as to something yet to come or as to matter of future intention. Citizens' Bank of Louisiana v. First National Bank of New Orleans, 43 L. J., Ch. 269; L. R. 6 H. L. 352; 22 W. R. 194.

The principle of estoppel in pais arising from a person's conduct, has no application where the state of things which it was sought to conclude that person from denying was a future state of things. M'Evoy v. Drogheda Harbour Commissioners, 16 W. R. 34.

I have always understood it to have been decided that the doctrine of estoppel by representation is applicable only to representations as to some state of facts alleged to be at the time actually in existence, and not to promises de futuro, which, if binding at all, must be binding as contracts—per Selborne, L.C. Maddison v. Alderson, 52 L. J., Q. B. 737; 8 App. Cas. 473; 49 L. T. 303; 31 W. R. 820; 47 J. P. 821.

Party must be prejudiced.]—If A. makes a certain representation to B., who in consequence of that representation has done something which has altered his position, A. would be bound by the representation, though ignorantly and innocently made. Horsfall v. Halifax and Huddersfield Union Banking Co., 52 L. J., Ch. 599.

Disavowal of.]—If an estoppel makes A. and B. liable and the facts make B. and C. liable, neither the estoppel nor the facts, nor any combination of the two can possibly make A., B. and C. jointly liable. Therefore, if the creditor chooses to go upon the facts and make B. and C. liable, he entirely disavows the estoppel and can no longer set it up—per Selborne, L.C. Scarf v. Jardine, 51 L. J., Q. B. 612; 7 App. Cas. 350; 47 L. T. 258; 30 W. R. 893.

No Intention that Representations should be acted on.]—If any person, by actual expressions, or by a course of action, so conducts himself that another may reasonably infer the existence of an agreement or a licence, and acts upon such inference, whether the former intends that he should do so or not, the party using that language, or who has so conducted himself, cannot afterwards gainsay the reasonable inference to be drawn from his words or conduct. Cornish v. Abington, 4 H. & N. 549; 28 L. J., Ex. 262; 7 W. R. 504.

Acting on Faith of Representations.]—Statements by one of two persons that another is his partner, he not being so in fact, will not be evidence to render the other liable as an ostensible partner, the statements not having been made to the person who seeks to render the other liable, and not having come to his knowledge as a matter of notoriety, and it not being shewn that he has acted on the faith of such statements. Edmundson v. Thompson, 31 L. J., Ex. 207; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 235; 5 L. T. 428; 10 W. R. 300.

Inferences of Law.]—In an action for goods sold there was a plea of payment, and it appeared that both the plaintiff and the defendant employed G. as factor. G. sold the goods to the defendant, knowing he was factor. On a balance of accounts G. was indebted to the defendant. The plaintiff, who knew the state of accounts between G. and the defendant, petitioned the Court of Bankruptcy to make G. a bankrupt, and alleged in his affidavit that G. owed him a sum of money for goods sold by G., as factor of the plaintiff, to the defendant, and for which he received payment by means of goods sold by the defendant to G. The plaintiff having afterwards sued the defendant for the price of the goods:—Held, that the statement in the affidavit was not conclusive evidence, estopping the plaintiff from denying that the defendant had paid for the goods, the allegation as to payment so explained not being an allegation of fact, but of an inference of law drawn by the plaintiff. Morgan v. Cruckman, 14 C. B. 101; 2 C. L. R. 53; 23 L. J., C. P. 36; 2 W. R. 59.

Mistake as to Legal Liability.]—The general doctrine that a party is at liberty to prove that an admission made by him was mistaken or untrue, and that he is not estopped by it unless another person has been induced by it to alter his condition, is applicable to mistakes in respect of legal liability as well as in respect of matters of fact. Newton v. Liddiard, 6 Railw. Cas. 42; 12 Q. B. 925; 18 L. J., Q. B. 53.

Between what Parties.]—Mandamus to complete a railway, pursuant to an act incorporating 8 & 9 Vict. c. 18. Return, that the undertaking was one to be carried into effect by means of a capital to be subscribed by the promoters, and that the capital had not been subscribed for under a contract, pursuant to 8 & 9 Vict. c. 18, s. 16, nor could the company at any time procure it to be subscribed for. A plea, by way of estoppel, that the company had taken the lands of a third party named, on a part of the line, in exercise of the compulsory powers, is bad, as the matter disclosed by it is res inter alios acta. Reg. v. Ambergate Ry., 1 El. & Bl. 372; 22 L. J., Q. B. 191; 17 Jur. 668.

Person intrusted with Public Duties cannot be Estopped.]—Claim: That the plaintiff was vicar of a parish; that a chapel was erected within it, and endowed and consecrated for the administration of the sacraments and the performance of all other divine offices according to the rites of the Church of England; that the plaintiff as such vicar was entitled to nominate and present, and had nominated and presented, a clerk to the chapel, but another clerk had been licensed, instituted and admitted by the defendant bishop on the nomination and presentation of certain other defendants, who thereby hindered the plaintiff in the exercise of his right; and he claimed to have his right established and declared. Defence of the last-mentioned defendants: That certain freeholders had erected the chapel and conveyed it to the ecclesiastical commissioners, and applied to them, under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 97, to declare the right of nomination to be in the defendants who had endowed the chapel, and that before making such declaration, a copy of the application was according to the act sent by the commissioners to the plaintiff, he being both patron and incumbent of the parish; that if he had ceased to be patron he stood by and knowingly allowed those defendants to endow the chapel and procure the same to be consecrated in the belief entertained by them as he well knew that he was patron, and that the sending of such copy to him was in fact a sending of a copy both to the patron and incumbent, as required by the act, and the plaintiff was therefore estopped from denying that he was patron; and that the right of nomination had been declared to be in those defendants who afterwards nominated. On demurrer to the allegation of estoppel:—Held, that it was bad, because the rights of the vicar were not merely private but were accompanied by spiritual and other duties in which his parishioners were interested, and he could not therefore waive or divest himself of those rights and duties by the conduct imputed to him. MacAllister v. Rochester (Bishop), 49 L. J., C. P. 114; 5 C. P. D. 194; 42 L. T. 22.

Liquidator Estopped.]—Lloyd's bonds payable in three years, with interest in the meantime, were given by the company to their contractor as compensation for the surrender of the contract. Two of these bonds were purchased for value from the contractor, without notice of the arrangement between him and the company. The bonds and the transfers were registered in the company's books. The transferee sued the company for eighteen months' interest, and recovered the amount due. Subsequently proceedings at law were taken against the company to recover principal and interest, and judgment was entered up by consent against the company, which was then ordered to be wound up:—Held, that, whether the bonds were valid or invalid in the hands of the contractor, the official liquidator was precluded by the subsequent conduct of the company from questioning their validity in the hands of a purchaser for value without notice. The transferee was therefore admitted as a creditor of the company for principal, interest, and costs. South Essex Estuary Co., In re, Chorley, Ex parte, 40 L. J., Ch. 153; L. R. 11 Eq. 157; 19 W. R. 430.

In Equity.]—The common-law doctrine of estoppel was resorted to in order to obtain powers which the Court of Chancery exercised without any foreign assistance; the doctrine is therefore purely legal, and has no place in courts of equity. Keate v. Phillips, 50 L. J., Ch. 664; 18 Ch. D. 577; 44 L. T. 731; 29 W. R. 710.

Equitable Estoppel by Representation—Contract of Indemnity—Implied Abandonment of Claim.]—The appellant became surety on behalf of the respondent, who died during the pendency of the action, for an advance made by a bank, the respondent undertaking by letter to hold the appellant harmless. Both parties forgot the existence of this indemnity, and by an agreement made between them and the bank the debt was discharged by equal payments by each of them. The appellant, subsequently discovering the letter of indemnity, brought an action at law against the respondent to enforce it. The respondent then, by a suit of equity, prayed for a declaration that the indemnity had been discharged, and for an injunction against the continuance of the action:—Held, that the appellant was entitled to enforce the indemnity under the doctrine laid down in Jorden v. Money (23 L. J., Ch. 865; 5 H. L. Cas. 185), that "where a person possesses a legal right a court of equity will not interfere to restrain him from enforcing it, though, between the time of its creation, and that of his attempt to enforce it, he has made representations of his intention to abandon it." Chadwick v. Manning, 65 L. J., P. C. 42; [1896] A. C. 231—P. C. And see Davies v. Davies, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1320; and Low v. Bouverie, col. 473.

Bill of Sale—Knowledge by Creditor of Non-registration.] — The fact that an execution creditor was, at the time when his debt was contracted, aware that his debtor had given a bill of sale of chattels, does not prevent his availing himself of the objection that it has not been registered. Edwards v. Edwards, 45 L. J., Ch. 391; 2 Ch. D. 291; 34 L. T. 472; 24 W. R. 713.

Trustee under Liquidation permitting Possession of Furniture by Debtor.]—A trustee under a liquidation, who, with the authority of the creditor, permits the debtor to remain in possession of his furniture as apparent owner, does not, in the absence of knowledge that the debtor was holding himself out as the real owner and dealing with it as such, forfeit his right to it so long as there has been no closing of the liquidation or order of discharge; and his right to it and to any after-acquired property cannot be defeated by a bill of sale given by the debtor subsequently to the liquidation. Meggy v. Imperial Discount Co., 47 L. J., Q. B. 119; 3 Q. B. D. 711; 38 L. T. 309; 26 W. R. 342—C. A.

2. Acts of Agents.

When Principal bound by.]—The Queensland Constitution Act, 1867, by s. 6, enacts that any person who shall, directly or indirectly, hold or enjoy any contract for or on account of the public service, shall be incapable of sitting or voting as a member of the legislative assembly; and s. 7 imposes a penalty on any person so disqualified so sitting or voting. The respondent, being part-owner of a ship which had been chartered by the government, sat and voted as a member of the legislative assembly. The respondent had instructed his agents, who were also part-owners, not to charter the ship to the government, and that if they did, the contract should be made with such part-owners only who should be held to have chartered the respondent's share at a rate fixed independently of such contract. The government had no knowledge that the respondent was a part-owner:—Held, that under these circumstances the respondent was not liable to the penalties imposed by the act. Freeman v. Cooke (2 Ex. 654) approved. Miles v. McIlwraith, 52 L. J., P. C. 17; 8 App. Cas. 120; 48 L. T. 689; 31 W. R. 591—P. C.

Where a director of a company purports to do as managing director an act, the doing of which it is, under the articles of association of the company, within the powers of his co-directors to delegate to him, persons dealing with him bonâ fide, and in the ordinary course of business, may assume that he has the power which he professes to have, and are not bound to inquire whether or no it has been in fact delegated to him, and will not be affected by any informality in the delegation of which they had no notice. Biggerstaff v. Rowatt's Wharf, 65 L. J., Ch. 536; [1896] 2 Ch. 93; 74 L. T. 473; 44 W. R. 536—C. A. And see Wilson v. West Hartlepool Ry., 24 Beav. 187.

W., having intrusted P., his solicitor, with 7,700*l.* for investment on mortgage on his behalf, was informed by his clerk, in conversation, that "P. proposed to invest the money on mortgage of leasehold property at Camden Town at 5 per cent.," and subsequently received a letter from P. stating "that the money was put on 5 per cent. mortgage as arranged by my clerk with you." On P.'s death it was found that no mortgage existed in favour of W., but that P. had advanced 100,000*l.* to a firm of builders on a mortgage of their leasehold property at Camden Town:—Held, that P. and those claiming under him were bound by the representation made by him, and were estopped from denying that the 7,700*l.* formed part of the 100,000*l.* so invested. Middleton v. Pollock, Wetherall, Ex parte, 46 L. J., Ch. 39; 4 Ch. D. 49; 35 L. T. 608; 25 W. R. 94.

Who are Agents to make Admissions.]—See Evidence (Admissions).

Representations made to Agent.]—M. purchased of the defendant, who was a corn dealer, with his warehouse next adjoining a railway station, eighty quarters of barley, which were not specifically appropriated to him, and for which he did not pay. Subsequently M. sold sixty quarters of such barley to the plaintiff, and sent a delivery order to the station-master for such barley to the plaintiff, and the plaintiff himself inclosed such order in a letter under his own hand requesting the station-master to confirm the transfer and to send him samples. The station-master thereupon saw the defendant, and showed him both documents, when the defendant said, "All right, when you get the forwarding-note I will put the barley on the line." After this the plaintiff gave a forwarding-note to the station-master for the sixty quarters of barley to be sent to Cambridge, which he presented to the defendant; but M. having in the meantime become a bankrupt, and not having paid the defendant for the barley, the defendant refused to deliver the barley. Upon an action of trover by the plaintiff against the defendant:—Held, that the defendant by his statement to the station-master had estopped himself from denying that he held the barley for the plaintiff. Knights v. Wiffen, 40 L. J., Q. B. 51; L. R. 5 Q. B. 660; 23 L. T. 610; 19 W. R. 244.

Agent cannot Set up his own Breach of Trust.]—The defendants were brewers, and employed F. as their "malting agent." The regular course of business between the defendants and F. was as follows: F. occupied the malting premises, and took out the necessary licences. It was his duty to buy barley in his own name as principal for cash, to send into the defendants certain periodical accounts of the barley so bought from time to time, and the prices of the same; to submit samples to the defendants, and if the barley was approved of by them to malt it, and deliver the malt to the defendants, receiving a commission upon the quantity of barley steeped. The quantity of malt required by large brewers being very great, the brewers, and not the malting agents, provide the capital for the purchase of the barley. In the present case the defendants kept accounts at certain provincial banks, upon which F. was empowered to draw, and from time to time the defendants paid in lump sums to the credit of those accounts, in accordance with current requirements, as shown by the accounts sent in by F. of barley purchased; but these sums were not intended to, nor did they, represent any payments for any specific barley. F.'s business was to act as malting agent for the defendants exclusively. The defendants paid the duty as the same became payable upon the malt in F.'s premises. F. had fraudulently departed from the regular course of business. Instead of buying barley for cash and applying the balances at the provincial banks in payment for the same he had been in the habit of sending in to the defendants fictitious accounts of barley purchased, misapplying the sums paid in for his own purposes, and providing the malt needed for the defendants' purposes by purchasing barley or ready-made malt upon credit. He likewise from time to time sold barley which had been brought on to the maltings, to raise money for his own purposes. The defendants believed, in consequence of the fictitious accounts and other false representations of F., that barley was from time to time purchased for cash in accordance with the regular course of business, and on the faith thereof continued to pay sums of money into the banks for the purpose of paying for such barley, which they believed were so applied. F. subsequently absconded, leaving upon his premises barley to the value of about 22,000*l.*, and malt to the value of about 35,000*l.*, upon part of which duty had been paid by the defendants. The value of such malt and barley was less than the amount drawn from the banks and misappropriated by F. He absconded and thereby committed an act of bankruptcy. Between the time of F.'s absconding and the time when he was adjudged a bankrupt, the defendants seized the barley and the malt left on his premises. The plaintiff, trustee in F.'s bankruptcy, sued the defendants for the value of the same:—Held, that F. could not have set up his own breach of trust, or have been heard to allege that the barley was bought otherwise than according to the authority given to him by the defendants; and that the plaintiff, as F.'s trustee in bankruptcy, could not in this respect stand in a better position than F. himself. Harris v. Truman, 51 L. J., Q. B. 338; 9 Q. B. D. 264; 46 L. T. 844; 30 W. R. 533—C. A.

Creditor Dealing with Agent as Principal.]—Where a party who has dealt with an agent has, by his conduct, led the principal to believe that he looked to the agent alone for payment, and thereby induced the principal, after the debt has become due, either to pay the agent the amount, or allow him to retain it out of the principal's money in his hands, the party so acting cannot afterwards resort to the principal. Macfarlane v. Giannacopulo, 3 H. & N. 860; 28 L. J., Ex. 72.

A., owner of a ship, applied to a broker to effect an insurance on it; the broker signed a policy on behalf of B., an underwriter. The ship was lost, and A., having applied to the broker for payment, received from him a credit note. It was usual to pay credit notes at a month from their date. Both at the time of signing the policy, and of the adjustment, the broker had money of B. sufficient to pay the loss. Nearly three months after the credit note was given the broker stopped payment, when A. applied to B. for the amount of the loss:—Held, that there was no injury to B. by the conduct of A., which rendered it unjust to call on him for payment, and therefore the case did not fall within the above rule of law. Ib.

Where there is a choice of debtors, and a liability is sought to be created by estoppel, and the remedy over against the person who ought to pay is likely to be imperilled by delay, the rule that an election should be made within a reasonable time ought to be strictly applied. And while the indication of intention to elect must be clear and unequivocal, an act of a creditor (who has the right of election) by which he materially affects the position of the co-creditors of one of his debtors, is such clear and unequivocal act of election to proceed against that particular debtor. Fell v. Parkin, 52 L. J., Q. B. 99; 47 L. T. 350.

Agent Estopped by Account Furnished.]—Agents and brokers in London furnished coals to a foreign steamer for several voyages made by the steamer in 1856. As agents of the ship they received the freights payable in London, and out of the proceeds furnished supplies and paid the expenses incurred by the steamer in England, making out a debit-and-credit account upon each voyage, which accounts they forwarded to the owners:—Held, that the agents having appropriated in their accounts moneys actually received in payment of specific items, including the coals supplied on each voyage, they were estopped by the accounts they had furnished, from appropriating the receipts to a previous agency account for the ship, and from suing for the coals as necessaries supplied and unpaid for. Van Hasselt v. Sack, 13 Moore, P. C. 185.

Policy in Hands of Insurance Broker.]—A shipbuilder in London employed an insurance broker to effect a policy upon a ship at Lloyd's, and after the happening of a loss, gave him the ship's papers for the purpose of enabling him to adjust the loss with the underwriters. The policy was effected in the broker's name, and he retained possession of it. An adjustment having taken place, the loss was settled, in accordance with a usage prevailing at Lloyd's which was found to be generally known to merchants and shipowners, but which was not known to the shipbuilder, who had merely left the policy in the broker's hands for safe custody, by the underwriter setting off the amount payable by him upon the policy against the balance due to him from the broker for premiums on other policies effected by him:—Held, that, assuming that he was estopped from denying that the broker had authority to receive the amount due from the underwriter on the policy in money, he was not bound by the usage, and, consequently, that he was entitled to recover the amount of the policy against the underwriter, notwithstanding such settlement. Sweeting v. Pearce, 9 C. B. (N.S.) 534; 30 L. J., C. P. 109; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 806; 5 L. T. 79; 9 W. R. 343—Ex. Ch.

Insurance Agent—Condition—Statement as to effect of.]—A life policy was subject to a condition making it void if the assured went beyond the limits of Europe without licence. An assignee of the policy, on paying the premium to a local agent of the assurance society at the place where the assurance had been effected, informed him that the assured was resident in Canada. The agent stated that this would not avoid the policy, and received the premiums until the assured died:—Held, that the society was precluded from insisting on the forfeiture. Wing v. Harvey, 5 De G. M. & G. 265; 23 L. J., Ch. 511; 18 Jur. 394; 2 Eq. R. 533; 2 W. R. 370.

Banker — Forged Endorsement of Bill of Exchange—Genuine Acceptance—Negligence of Customer.]—The respondent's clerk, by forging letters of advice and preparing and filling in forged drafts, in which he inserted the name of a foreign correspondent of the respondent as being that of the drawer, and the names of a foreign firm who were existing persons and actual correspondents of the respondent as being the names of the payees, procured his employer's acceptance of these forged instruments and obtained payment for them across the counter from the appellant bank. The clerk appropriated the moneys to his own use, which were thus lost to the bank:—Held, that the loss incurred on the forged bills must fall upon the respondent. Robarts v. Tucker (16 Q. B. 560) explained and distinguished, Bank of England v. Vagliano, 60 L. J., Q. B. 145; [1891] A. C. 107; 64 L. T. 353; 39 W. R. 657; 55 J. P. 676—H. L. (E.)

A representation made directly to a banker by a customer upon a material point, untrue in fact, though believed by the customer to be true, and on which the banker acts by paying money which he would not otherwise have paid, ought to be an answer to the primâ facie case that the banker's authority was only to pay to the order of the payee named upon the bill. Ib. By the Earl of Selborne.

Agreement by Manager of Company.]—C. proposed to H., the general manager of the M. & O. Bank, that the bank should advance him 8,300*l.*, to enable him to conclude a contract for the purchase of an unpaid vendor's interest in a colliery. H. had authority to make the advance. An agreement between C. and the bank, providing for the loan of the money by the bank, and the mortgage of the interest in the colliery to be purchased to the bank to secure repayment of the loan and charges, was prepared by a solicitor on H.'s instructions and signed by C. H. then declined to make the agreement without consulting the directors, and obtained C.'s signature to a document to the effect that the agreement was subject to the approval of the directors. On the same day, after a meeting of the directors, H. told C. that the directors approved, and that the bank would advance the money. The agreement was never signed by anybody on the part of the bank. Subsequently H. told C. he ought to be more firmly bound to take the money from the bank, and induced him to sign a document to the effect that, in consideration of the bank's agreeing to carry out the arrangements mentioned in the agreement, he agreed to pay the bank charges named therein, whether the bank carried through the transaction or not. In fact, the directors did not approve of the agreement, and H. acted under an erroneous impression that they did. The bank refused to find the money, and C. was in consequence unable to complete his contract:—Held, that the bank was estopped from denying such an agreement. Manchester and Oldham Bank v. Cook, 49 L. T. 674.

Action against Owner by Estoppel and Real Owner.]—Goods had been supplied to the M. Mansions upon the order of the housekeeper. The vendor sued the owner and secretary for payment. The secretary had previously paid for goods supplied by the plaintiffs by cheque, signed "M. Mansions account":—Held, that the doctrine of Scarf v. Jardine (7 App. Cas. 345) applied, and that the plaintiff could not sue the secretary, whose liability depended only on estoppel, at the same time as the real owner. Jones v. Ashwin, 1 Cab. & E. 159.

Postmaster-General — Authority of Clerk — Telegrams.]—Where a certain sum is charged for a telegram and the sender is afterwards called upon to pay an increased sum:—Held, that he is bound to pay the amount so claimed, as the Postmaster-General is in no way estopped from suing, and is not bound by inaccurate representations made by a clerk in his employ. Postmaster-General v. Green, 51 J. P. 582.

Set off.]—Whether the doctrine that on a contract with an agent for an undisclosed principal the buyer can set off against the principal a debt due from the agent, is founded on estoppel, quære. Cooke v. Eshelby, 56 L. J., Q. B. 505; 12 App. Cas. 271; 56 L. T. 673; 35 W. R. 629—H. L. (E.)

Authority of Agent—Loan—Mortgage of Debenture-Stock by Agent.]—If a company intrusts its agent with a certificate of debenture-stock issued by itself, it will be assumed in favour of a purchaser or mortgagee, in whose name the certificate is made out, and who has no notice to the contrary, that the agent had authority to deal with it to the full extent of its face value. Robinson v. Montgomeryshire Brewery Co., 65 L. J., Ch. 915; [1896] 2 Ch. 841; 3 Manson, 279.

A company being desirous of borrowing 3,000*l.*, requested its brokers to negotiate the loan. The brokers applied to G. to advance not 3,000*l.*, but 6,000*l.*, which he agreed to do upon having a debenture-stock certificate for 8,000*l.* deposited at his bank by way of security. The certificate was made out in the name of G., and stated that he was the registered holder of 8,000*l.* debenture-stock in the company, and G. advanced the 6,000*l.* and paid the same to the brokers, but only 3,000*l.* of this sum was handed to the company:—Held, that G. was not bound to inquire what were the relations between the brokers and the company, but had a right to assume that the brokers had authority from the company to deal with the certificate; and therefore he was, as regards the company and other debenture-holders, in the position of a bonâ fide purchaser for value to the extent of his advance, and entitled in the liquidation of the company to prove for the full amount of 8,000*l.* until he obtained dividends not exceeding the amount due in respect of his loan of 6,000*l.* Ib.

Directors—Expiration of Term of Office—No Re-election—Continuing to Act—Authority.]—The provisions of s. 67 of the Companies Act, 1862, for curing defects in the appointment or qualification of directors, do not operate to render good the authority of former directors, who without being re-elected continue after the expiration of their term of office to discharge the duties of directors, well knowing they had not been re-elected. And the receipt of payments made by these as directors by one aware of their true position does not estop that person from subsequently questioning their legal authority to demand as directors payments from him. Tyne Mutual Steamship Insurance Association v. Brown, 74 L. T. 283.

Appropriation of Money by Agent.]—Agents and brokers in London furnished coals to a foreign steamer for several voyages made by the steamer in 1856. As agents of the ship they received the freights payable in London, and out of the proceeds furnished supplies and paid the expenses incurred by the steamer in England, making out a debit-and-credit account upon each voyage, which accounts they forwarded to the owners:—Held, that the agents, having appropriated in their accounts moneys actually received in payment of specific items, including the coals supplied on each voyage, they were estopped by the accounts they had furnished from appropriating the receipts to a previous agency account for the ship, and from suing for the coals as necessaries supplied and unpaid for. Van Hasselt v. Sack, 13 Moore, P. C. 185.

3. BILLS OF EXCHANGE, &c.

Adoption of Forged Signature by Silence.]—A person who knows that a bank is relying upon his forged signature to a bill, cannot lie by and not divulge the fact until he sees that the position of the bank is altered for the worse. But there is no principle on which his mere silence for a fortnight from the time when he first knew of the forgery, during which the position of the bank was in no way altered or prejudiced, can be held to be an admission or adoption of liability, or an estoppel. The names of A. and B. appeared on a bill as drawers and indorsers to the B. L. Co. The B. L. Co.'s Inverness bank discounted it for C., who signed it as acceptor. They had had no previous dealings with A. or B. Being dishonoured when due, notice to that effect was sent to A. and B., and received late on a Saturday, but they did not communicate with the bank. On the following Monday, being the 14th of April, C. brought to the B. L. Co. a blank bill with A. and B.'s names as drawers and indorsers, apparently in the same handwriting as the previous bill. It was agreed to accept it as a renewal of the previous bill, but for a less amount, the difference being paid in cash by C. Three days before it was due, notice was sent to A. and B., and again when it was dishonoured, and then through the B. L. Co.'s law agent. A fortnight after the first notice the B. L. Co. were informed for the first time that A. and B.'s signatures were forgeries, and they declined to pay the amount in the bill. A. alleged that he called on C. on the 14th of April about the first bill, that C. admitted that he had forged his name, handed him the bill, and solemnly assured him that it had been taken up by cash; and so assured he did not think it necessary to communicate with the bank. He admitted that on that day he drank with C. and borrowed 4*l.* of him. He denied positively any knowledge of the second bill until he received the bank notices. C. was convicted of the forgery. The B. L. Co. charged A. with payment of the bill, on the ground that he had either authorised the use of his name, or had subsequently adopted and accredited the bill, and therefore was estopped from denying his liability:—Held, that on the facts proved A. had neither authorised nor assented to the use of his name; nor did the circumstances of the case raise any estoppel against him. Dictum of Parke, B., as to estoppel in Freeman v. Cook (2 Ex. 654), approved of. M'Kenzie v. British Linen Co., 6 App. Cas. 82; 44 L. T. 431; 29 W. R. 477—H. L. (Sc.)

Forged Cheques—Liability of Bank—Customer—Estoppel.]—A customer of a bank was debited with the amount of certain cheques, forged by one of the bank's clerks. On discovering the entry he communicated the fact to one of the officers, whom the jury, by a finding not objected to, found to be an agent of the bank, and who knew of the forgery, and produced a written confession of the forger. At the request of this agent, the customer forebore from informing the directors, being assured that if he did so the bank would lose all chance of recovering the money, which, however, was not recovered. In an action against the bank by the customer, the jury found that the customer did not arrange with the forger to withhold information from the bank; that the person whom he informed of the forgery was the bank's agent, and that he kept silence in order to enable the forger to repay the money; that the forger left the colony, and that the customer acted with a view solely to the bank's benefit. These findings were not objected to by the bank. The jury also found that the plaintiff's silence did not prejudice the bank; that the bank waived the negligence, if any, of the plaintiff, and that the bank ratified the action of their agent. These findings were objected to. Judgment was entered for the customer, but on motion for a new trial the full court set aside the findings which had been objected to, and entered judgment for the bank:—Held, that the conduct and silence of the appellant did not constitute a legal wrong upon which the bank could rely by way of estoppel. Mackenzie v. British Linen Co. (6 App. Cas. 82) distinguished. Ogilvie v. West Australian Mortgage and Agency Corporation, 65 L. J., P. C. 46; [1896] A. C. 257; 74 L. T. 201—P.C.

Agreement as to Indorsement.]—C., who had been managing clerk to B., a deceased merchant, sold a part of B.'s personal estate to D., with the consent of A., who claimed an interest therein; and by agreement between A., C. and D., C., in the name of B., drew a bill of exchange for the price on D., and in the like name indorsed it to A., who retained it till his death. D. accepted the bill after it had been so indorsed. After A.'s death A.'s executor put the bill in suit against D., declaring on it as on a bill drawn and indorsed by B. The plea denied the indorsement by B.:—Held, that D. was by his own agreement estopped from denying that the bill was indorsed as alleged. Aspitel v. Bryan, 3 B. & S. 474; 33 L. J., Q. B. 328; 11 L. T. 221; 12 W. R. 1082—Ex. Ch.

Description of Drawer.]—In an action on a promissory note, to which the defendant pleaded her coverture, the note being signed by her as "widow":—Held, that such representation did not bind her by way of estoppel. Cannam v. Farmer, 3 Ex. 698.

Indorsement to Party Indorsing.]—A declaration alleged that P. drew a bill of exchange payable to his own order, and indorsed it to the defendant, who indorsed it to the plaintiff; and that the bill was dishonoured, and the defendant did not pay it. A plea, denying the indorsement to the defendant, is bad, the defendant being estopped, by his admitted indorsement, from traversing the indorsement to himself. MacGregor v. Rhodes, 6 El. & Bl. 266; 25 L. J., Q. B. 318; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 834; 4 W. R. 483.

Acceptor Disputing Drawer's Writing.]—The acceptor of a bill of exchange cannot, in an action against him by an indorsee, dispute the handwriting of the drawer; and, if he does so by plea, the plaintiff may reply the acceptance by way of estoppel. Sanderson v. Collman, 4 Man. & G. 209; 4 Scott (N.R.) 638; 11 L. J., C. P. 270.

Acceptor supra protest—Payee Fictitious.]—In an action by an indorsee against an acceptor supra protest for the honour of the drawer, he cannot plead that the name of the payee was fictitious, and that he was ignorant of the fact when he accepted the bill. Phillips v. Im Thurm, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 694; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 489; 13 W. R. 750.

Negligence.]—A bill of exchange, with a blank for the drawer's name, and the defendant's name written across it as acceptor, was placed by the defendant in a drawer in his chambers, from which it was stolen. A drawer's name was forged, and subsequently the bill came into the hands of the plaintiff as bonâ fide holder for value. In an action on the bill:—Held, that the defendant was not liable. By Bramwell, L. J., because his negligence, if any, was not the proximate or effective cause of the loss, and therefore did not estop him from denying the validity of the bill. By Brett, L. J., because the bill was drawn without the authority of the defendant, and he had been guilty of no negligence. Baxendale v. Bennett, 47 L. J., Q. B. 624; 3 Q. B. D. 525; 26 W. R. 899—C. A.

—— Fraud.]—A bill for 500*l.* was presented for acceptance with a stamp of much larger amount than was necessary, and with spaces left. The acceptor wrote his acceptance and handed the bill to the drawer, who fraudulently filled up the spaces and turned it into a bill for 3,500*l.* Being sued on the bill by a bonâ fide holder, the acceptor paid 500*l.* into court:—Held, that the acceptor owed no duty of precaution to the plaintiff, and was guilty of no negligence, and was entitled to judgment. Scholfield v. Londesborough (Earl), 65 L. J., Q. B. 593; [1896] A. C. 514; 75 L. T. 254; 45 W. R. 124—H. L. (E.)

Payment under Mistake of Fact as to Bill having been Met—Action for Repayment.]—A., the indorsee of a bill of exchange, resident abroad, indorsed it to the defendants, his agents in London, for the purpose of collection. The defendants indorsed the bill to the plaintiffs, and sent it to them for the same purpose, and they forwarded it to their agents. The plaintiffs, under a misunderstanding, informed the defendants that the bill had been paid, and sent them a cheque for the amount. Thereupon the defendants intimated the same to A., and credited him with the amount of the bill. It was decided by Mathew, J., on the authority of Skyring v. Greenwood and Cox (4 B. & C. 281), that, as the plaintiffs had wrongfully informed the defendants that the bill had been paid, they could not recover the amount of the bill when the defendants had nothing to do with the mistake of fact; and also that the plaintiffs were estopped by the representation which they had made to the defendants, and upon which the defendants had acted. On appeal:—Held, that the action failed. Deutsche Bank v. Beriro, 73 L. T. 669—C. A.

Ratification of Forged Signature.]—J. indorsed to the plaintiff a promissory note, bearing a signature which he stated to be the defendant's, but which was a forgery. Shortly before the note became due, the plaintiff, hearing from the defendant that the signature was a forgery, threatened to prosecute J.; whereupon the defendant, to prevent his doing so, said that he would pay the money, and signed a memorandum to the effect that he held himself responsible for the note, describing it as bearing his signature. The plaintiff having sued the defendant upon the note, the judge ruled that the defendant had ratified the forged signature, and directed a verdict for the plaintiff:—Held (per Kelly, C. B., Channell, B., and Pigott, B., dissentiente Martin, B.), that this ruling was wrong, because the defendant's arrangement was not a ratification of a signature, written by an agent claiming to have authority from the defendant in that behalf, but an agreement upon the defendant's part to become liable on the bill in consideration of the plaintiff's forbearing to prosecute J., which agreement was void as against public policy; and also because no act in its inception illegal and void, such as a forgery, can be ratified by matter subsequent; and that the defendant was not estopped from setting up the forgery as a defence to the action. Brook v. Hook, 40 L. J., Ex. 50; L. R. 6 Ex. 89; 24 L. T. 34; 19 W. R. 508. See also BILLS OF EXCHANGE and col. 468.

4. CARRIERS AND BAILEES.

Carriers—Advice Notes.]—C. entered into a contract with A. for the purchase of bleaching powder, and immediately afterwards into a contract for the sale thereof to other persons. Owing to a mistake of C.'s vendor, a railway company was induced without culpable negligence on their part to advise C. that they had received fifteen casks of bleaching powder, marked and numbered in a particular manner, and that they held the same to his order as warehouseman. The railway company never had received the casks, and afterwards informed C. of the error; at a subsequent time, owing to another mistake, C. paid the railway company a sum of money as warehouse rent for the fifteen casks supposed to have been received by them. The mistake having been subsequently made known to all parties, C.'s vendees bought in fifteen casks of bleaching powder at a loss to him:—Held, that these facts did not create an estoppel in pais; that the railway company was not estopped from showing that the fifteen casks had never been received by them; and that the company was not liable to C. in trover or any other form of action. Carr v. L. & N. W. Ry., 44 L. J., C. P. 109; L. R. 10 C. P. 307; 31 L. T. 785; 23 W. R. 747. And see col. 462.

—— That Thief not Servant.]—Pictures above the value of 10*l.* were delivered to a railway company to be carried, and were by them placed in a van in their yard preparatory to their transmission. A man by representing himself to be C. (who was a driver in the employ of M., the sub-contractor of the company), obtained from their delivery clerk a pass and other documents, which enabled him to take the van from the yard and so to steal the pictures. An action having been brought for their value, the material issue was whether they were lost through the felonious act of the servants of the company:—Held, that the company was not estopped from denying that the thief was their servant. Way v. G. E. Ry., 45 L. J., Q. B. 874; 1 Q. B. D. 692; 35 L. T. 253.

—— Title to Goods.]—A carrier is not estopped from disputing the title of the person from whom he has received goods to carry; and it is an answer to trover against the carrier by such person, that the goods have been delivered to the real owner, on his claiming them. Sheridan v. New Quay Co., 4 C. B. (N.S.) 618; 28 L. J., C. P. 58; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 248.

—— Passengers' Tickets.]—A master took tickets for himself and three servants, keeping the tickets in his own care, but telling the guard that he had the servants' tickets, and the servants were allowed to enter the train without each having or showing his own ticket:—Held, that by so doing the company was estopped from pleading as a defence to an action by the master against the company for afterwards expelling the servants from the train and refusing to carry them, the by-law "No passenger will be allowed to enter any carriage or travel therein without having paid his fare and obtained a ticket, which ticket such passenger is to show when required, and to deliver up before leaving the company's premises." Jennings v. G. N. Ry., 35 L. J., Q. B. 15; L. R. 1 Q. B. 7; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 331; 13 L. T. 231; 14 W. R. 28.

Wharfingers.]—A wharfinger, who has agreed to hold goods under a delivery order, cannot resist an action for the conversion of those goods, on the ground that they have not been separated from the bulk, and that no property passed to the person who lodged the order. Woodley v. Coventry, 2 H. & C. 164; 32 L. J., Ex. 185; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 548; 8 L. T. 249; 11 W. R. 599.

Negligent Representation of Wharfinger.]—Goods were in 1875 stored by brokers with wharfingers, who issued a warrant for the same. In 1885 the servants of the defendant, who had taken over the wharf and business, delivered the goods by mistake to certain persons instead of goods to which they were entitled, and the defendant was not made aware of the mistake. The warrant had been negotiated, and was in January, 1886, in the possession of B. and E. In that month, no rent having been paid for the goods since 1880, the defendant wrote two letters to the plaintiff, who had previously taken over the business of the brokers and carried it on under their name, informing him, as the supposed holder of the warrant, and as the person presumedly interested in the goods, that the goods were in hand, that rent was due, and that, unless it was paid, the goods would be sold to cover the amount due. The plaintiff made no reply, but afterwards, and in consequence of receiving these letters, he bought the warrant from B. and E. and applied to the defendant for the goods, when the defendant first discovered that they were no longer in his possession. In an action to recover damages for a wrongful conversion of the goods:—Held, that the defendant was liable, being estopped from denying that he had the goods specified in the warrant, because he had by his negligent misrepresentation led the plaintiff to believe that the goods were in his possession, and such misrepresentation was the cause of the plaintiff's loss, the plaintiff having purchased the warrant in consequence of the same. Seton v. Lafone, 56 L. J., Q. B. 415; 19 Q. B. D. 68; 57 L. T. 547; 35 W. R. 749—C. A.

Acceptance of Bailment after Notice of Adverse Claim.]—Although in certain cases a bailee may set up the jus tertii, yet if he accepts the bailment with full knowledge of an adverse claim, he cannot afterwards set up the existence of such claim as against his bailor. After the filing of a liquidation petition the holder of a registered bill of sale executed by the debtors instructed an auctioneer to take possession of the chattels comprised in it. The auctioneer took possession, and advertised the goods for sale on behalf of the bill of sale holder. The sale was stopped by injunction, and the auctioneer remained in possession of the goods on behalf of the receiver under the petition. On the appointment of a trustee the auctioneer held possession for him, and ultimately by his directions advertised the goods for sale, the advertisements and the catalogues of the goods being headed "In liquidation. By order of the trustee." The goods were sold, and the proceeds of sale were received by the auctioneer. The bill of sale holder gave him notice not to pay them to the trustee, and he declined to pay them over. The trustee applied to the Court of Bankruptcy for an order for payment to him, serving notice of his motion on the auctioneer only. On the hearing of this motion an order was made by consent that the money should be paid into court, and the hearing adjourned, notice being meanwhile given to the bill of sale holder. Notice was served on him, but not a four days' notice as required by r. 50 of the bankruptcy rules, 1870, and he did not appear on the adjourned hearing. He had meanwhile commenced an action against the auctioneer for the proceeds of sale:—Held, that the Court of Bankruptcy ought to exercise its jurisdiction under s. 72 of the Bankruptcy Act, 1869, and that the money must be paid out to the trustee, on the ground that the auctioneer had, with full knowledge of the adverse claim, deliberately elected to sell the goods for the trustee, and was, therefore, estopped from denying his title. Biddle v. Bond (6 B. & S. 225) distinguished. Davies, Ex parte, Sadler, In re, 19 Ch. D. 86; 45 L. T. 632; 30 W. R. 237—C. A. See further, BAILMENT.

5. DELIVERY ORDERS AND BILLS OF LADING.

Delivery Orders.]—The defendants sold to B. & Co. 100 tons of zinc (unappropriated) upon certain terms of payment, giving them at the time of the contract four several documents to the following effect:—"We hereby undertake to deliver to your order indorsed hereon twenty-five tons merchantable sheet zinc off your contract of this date." Upon the faith of these documents, the plaintiffs bought of B. & Co., and paid for, fifty tons of the zinc mentioned in the contract. B. & Co. having failed, and the contract price being unpaid, the defendants refused to deliver the zinc:—Held, that the giving of these delivery orders or undertakings did not estop the defendants from setting up, as against the vendees of B. & Co., their right as unpaid vendors to withhold delivery. Farmiloe v. Bain, 45 L. J., C. P. 264; 1 C. P. D. 445; 34 L. T. 324.

—— Effect of, as creating Estoppel.]—The defendant being possessed of a quantity of barley, sold eighty quarters to M., who afterwards, on June 27, sold sixty of the eighty quarters to the plaintiff, who on the same day paid the price and forwarded M.'s delivery order for the sixty quarters to the defendant, who assented to the same on the 29th. The barley remained in bulk in the defendant's possession until July 7, on which day the plaintiff sent a forwarding order to the defendant, which the latter refused to comply with, on the ground that M. had in the meantime become bankrupt, and that the barley purchased by him was unpaid for:—Held, that the defendant, by assenting to the delivery order for the sixty quarters, was estopped from denying the plaintiff's right thereto, notwithstanding that the price of the barley was paid to M. contemporaneously with the forwarding of the delivery order to the defendant. Knights v. Wiffen, 40 L. J., Q. B. 51; L. R. 5 Q. B. 660; 23 L. T. 610; 19 W. R. 244.

A delivery order given by the vendor of goods is a mere promise to do something in futuro, and is not a representation upon which to found an estoppel. Gillman v. Carbutt, 61 L. T. 281; 37 W. R. 437—C. A.

Advice Notice—Negligence in Issuing Two Notes.]—The defendants having received a consignment of wheat, sent to the consignees an advice note, which described the consignment as "sacks wheat, four trucks," and did not contain any details as to weight, rates or charges, but across the printed form was written, "account to follow." The consignees gave B. a delivery order in respect of this wheat, and he obtained an advance from the plaintiffs upon it; the plaintiffs sent this delivery order to the defendants, and they accepted it. On the following day the defendants sent to B. another advice note on a printed form similar to the one already sent, but across the upper part was written the words, "charges only"; the invoice number was different; the consignment was described as 151 sacks of wheat; the weight, the rate and the amount of charges were filled in. B. filled up the delivery order at the bottom in favour of the plaintiffs, produced it to them, and obtained a second advance from them, as they believed it to relate to a second parcel of wheat. The plaintiffs delivered this order to the defendants, who accepted it, and who allowed the plaintiffs on both occasions to take samples of the wheat. There was, in fact, only one parcel of wheat, and the two advice notes related to the same parcel. B. went into liquidation, and the plaintiffs having lost the amount of one of the advances so made by them, sued the defendants for the amount:—Held, that the plaintiffs were entitled to recover the amount claimed, for that the defendants had so dealt with the wheat and advice notes as to lead the plaintiffs to believe that there were in fact two consignments of wheat, and that they were in consequence estopped from afterwards alleging that there was in fact but one consignment of wheat. Coventry v. G. E. Ry., 52 L. J., Q. B. 694; 11 Q. B. D. 776; 49 L. T. 641—C. A.

Bills of Lading.]—In an action for freight, the master is at liberty, notwithstanding the terms of the 18 & 19 Vict. c. 111, s. 3 (Bills of Lading Act), to show that the cargo actually received by him differs in weight from that signed for in the bill of lading; at all events where the weight mentioned in the bill of lading is a mere matter of measurement. Blanchet v. Powell's Llantivit Collieries Co., 43 L. J., Ex. 50; L. R. 9 Ex. 74; 30 L. T. 28; 22 W. R. 490.

When a bill of lading described the goods shipped as "thirteen packages books, woodwork, whalebones, Dutch clocks, shoes and linen goods," and was also stamped by the master with the words "value, weight and contents unknown":—Held, that although the freight charged for linen goods was lower than that for silk stuffs, the shippers were not estopped from proving the delivery of silk stuffs to the shipowners. Lebeau v. General Steam Navigation Co., 42 L. J., C. P. 1; L. R. 8 C. P. 88; 27 L. T. 447; 21 W. R. 146.

Bills of lading signed by the master are primâ facie evidence that the quantities named therein were received on board by him; the onus of rebutting this presumption, and of showing that a less quantity than that specified was received, lies on the shipowner. M'Lean v. Fleming, L. R. 2 H. L. Sc. 128 ; 25 L. T. 317.

A shipowner is not estopped by the signature of the bill of lading by the master from showing that the goods or some of them were never actually put on board. Brown v. Powell Duffryn Steam Coal Co., 44 L. J., C. P. 289 ; L. R. 10 C. P. 562 ; 32 L. T. 621 ; 23 W. R. 549. See also Tully v. Terry, 42 L. J., C. P. 240 ; L. R. 8 C. P. 679 ; 29 L. T. 36.

A bill of lading, stating goods to have been shipped in good order and condition, but indorsed by the master with the words, "quality and quantity unknown," does not admit as against the shipowner that the goods were shipped in good order and condition. The Ida, 32 L. T. 541—P. C.

There is no rule of law by which the consignee of goods under a bill of lading, stating goods to have been shipped in good order and condition, but containing the words "quantity and quality unknown," is bound to show that the goods were shipped in good order and condition. The Prosperino Palasso (29 L. T. 622) disapproved. Ib.

A company owned a line of steamers called "The Monarch Line," running between New York and London. A. was in the habit of shipping goods on steamers running on this line. A. shipped goods in a steamer at New York, and received a bill of lading made out in the ordinary form given by the company for goods shipped on their steamers, save that it had the words "extra steamer" added after the words "Monarch Line of Steamships." At London an overside release for the goods was signed and given by the company's agents to A., and the freight received by them from A. :—Held, in an action by A. against the company for non-delivery of the goods, that the company were estopped from saying that the contract of shipment was not made with them. Herman v. Royal Exchange Shipping Co., 1 Cab. & E. 413. Affirmed in C. A. See also cases sub tit. SHIPPING (BILL OF LADING).

6. INSURANCE.

Policy—Mutual Insurance Society.]—E. had an equitable interest in a ship, and afterwards received a transfer of the legal interest from the registered owner, who was a member of an insurance society. The owner insured the ship with the society in E.'s name by a policy incorporating the rules of the society, and providing among other things that every insurance effected should be valid and binding from noon on that day until noon on the 1st January then next following. By the rules persons became members only by signing the articles, and none but members could insure their ships. The rules also required certain notice upon sale of a ship or shares thereof. E. had never signed the articles nor given notice of the transfer to him of the legal interest, but had paid contributions claimed from him as owner by the society. Upon loss of the ship, E. was refused his claim upon this policy :—Held, that the society was estopped from disputing E.'s interest in the policy, and his right as member to claim upon it. Edwards v. Aberayron Mutual Ship Insurance Society, 1 Q. B. D. 563 ; 34 L. T. 457—C. A.

Underwriter—Estoppel by Conduct.]—Where the assurer discovers the concealment of a material fact between the initialing of the slip and the issuing of the stamped policy, but issues the policy without protest, he is not estopped from disputing his liability, nor is the burden of proof thrown on him to show that the assured was not misled into treating the contract as still subsisting. Morrison v. Universal Marine Insurance Co., 42 L. J., Ex. 115 ; L. R. 8 Ex. 197 ; 21 W. R. 774—Ex. Ch.

Underwriters accepting abandonment cannot afterwards rely on a breach of the warranty. Hudson v. Harrison, 3 Moore, 288 ; 3 Br. & B. 97. See also Provincial Insurance Co. of Canada v. Leduc, 43 L. J., P. C. 49 ; L. R. 6 P. C. 224 ; 31 L. T. 142 ; 22 W. R. 929.

7. MORTGAGE.

Misrepresentation to Mortgagee by Tenant for Life.]—A son, who, under a voluntary settlement executed by his father, was entitled in remainder to an estate for life with remainder to his first and other sons in tail, subsequently to his marriage joined his father in two mortgages, which recited that his father was seised in fee, and covenanted that he was so seised ; the father and the two mortgagees executed a subsequent mortgage in fee (to pay them off and raise a further sum), which the son did not execute, but was aware of and joined in a collateral deed for the purpose of barring all possible estates tail and vesting the fee in his father ; part of the money raised by all the mortgages being for, and applied to, the use of the son :—Held, that he was estopped from setting up against his own acts any estate which he had at the time of the mortgages, and that, therefore, the mortgage was a good charge on his life estate. Guardian Assurance Co. v. Avonmore (Viscount), Ir. R. 6 Eq. 391.

Investment by Solicitor for Client—Representation as to.]—W., having entrusted P., his solicitor, with 7,700*l.* for investment on mortgage on his behalf, was informed by his clerk, in conversation, that "P. proposed to invest the money on mortgage of leasehold property at Camden Town at 5 per cent.," and subsequently received a letter from P. stating "that the money was put on 5 per cent. mortgage as arranged by my clerk with you." On P.'s death it was found that no mortgage existed in favour of W., but that P. had advanced 100,000*l.* to a firm of builders on a mortgage of their leasehold property at Camden Town :—Held, that P. and those claiming under him were bound by the representation made by him, and were estopped from denying that the 7,700*l.* formed part of the 100,000*l.* so invested. Middleton v. Pollock, Wetherall, Ex parte, 46 L. J., Ch. 39 ; 4 Ch. D. 49 ; 35 L. T. 608 ; 25 W. R. 94.

8. PATENTS, BY ASSIGNMENT OR USE OF.

Denial of Validity.]—Action for a sum agreed to be paid to the plaintiff for each ton of an article manufactured and sold by the defendants, by the permission of the plaintiff to them given at their request, the plaintiff having letters-patent for the sole manufacture and sale of that article. A plea, that the letters-patent were void, and that the defendants had a right to make and sell the article without the plaintiff's permission, is bad; for, the invention having actually been used by the permission of the plaintiff, and there being no allegation of fraud, or of anything equivalent to eviction, the defendants were not at liberty to set up as a defence that the patent was void. Lawes v. Purser, 6 El. & Bl. 930; 26 L. J., Q. B. 25; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 182; 5 W. R. 43.

An assignor of a patent, who has sold it as valid, cannot, as between himself and the assignee to whom he sold it, raise any question as to the patent being void for want of novelty. Walton v. Lavater, 29 L. J., C. P. 275; 8 C. B. (N.S.) 162; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1251; 3 L. T. 272.

If a patentee, in consideration of a royalty, grants to another a licence to use the patent invention, and the latter uses it, he cannot plead, as a defence to an action for the royalty, that the invention was not new, or that the patentee was not the first inventor. Noton v. Brooks, 7 H. & N. 499; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 155; 10 W. R. 111.

On an action for infringement of a patent, the plaintiff, to a plea that he was not the first and true inventor, replied, that on another charge by the plaintiff against the defendant of infringement of the same patent, the question was referred by consent, and the arbitrator found that the letters-patent were not illegal and void:—Held, that the record did not show an estoppel. Newhall v. Elliot, 1 H. & C. 797; 32 L. J., Ex. 120; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 359; 7 L. T. 758; 11 W. R. 438.

C. was owner of patents for carpet manufactures, and agreed with D. to supply D. with machines embodying all the latest improvements, in consideration of D. paying the price, and a royalty for the use of the machines. D. bought the machines, and had paid the royalty for several years. Latterly, D. bought elsewhere other machines which were identical in construction and principle with C.'s machines, and used the same, and thus was using both sets of machines. C. having filed a bill in the Court of Chancery for an account of royalty in respect of both sets of machines, whereupon D. disputed the validity of C.'s patents:—Held, that while the licence continued, D. was estopped from disputing the validity of C.'s patent, and the only way in which C. could do so, was by putting an end to the agreement to take a licence, which he would do at his peril. Crossley v. Dixon, 10 H. L. Cas. 293; 1 N. R. 426; 32 L. J., Ch. 617; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 607; 8 L. T. 260; 11 W. R. 716—H. L.

To a declaration by a patentee of an invention for manufacturing wire rope, against a licensee by deed indented, for authority to use the invention, upon the latter's covenant to pay a royalty on every ton of the article so manufactured, it is a bad plea (as amounting to non est factum) to plead that the plaintiff did not give, nor did the defendant take, such exclusive licence, as by the deed was provided for. Smith v. Scott, 6 C. B. (N.S.) 771; 28 L. J., C. P. 325; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 1356.

A licensee under a patent, cannot, in any way, question its validity during the continuance of his licence. But he may show that what he has done (in respect of which patent royalties are claimed from him) does not fall within the limits of the patent, but is something extraneous to it. Clarke v. Adie, 46 L. J., Ch. 598; 2 App. Cas. 423; 37 L. T. 1; 26 W. R. 45—H. L. (E.)

A licensee under a patent is in a situation analogous to a tenant, who, during the tenancy, cannot dispute the title of the lessor to any of the land held under the lease; but who is, nevertheless, at liberty to show that part of the land he actually occupies is really not comprised within the lease, but belongs to himself under some other right. Ib.

The rule that an assignor of a patent is estopped from disputing its validity does not prevent his partner from separately raising that defence to an action for infringement. Heugh v. Chamberlain, 25 W. R. 742. See further, sub tit. PATENT (LICENCES).

Conduct of Patentee—Infringement.]—In an action by P., a patentee, for infringement, against persons who had bought machines from B., it was proved that P. had asked the purchasers to try his machine, saying that it was a better machine than B.'s, but gave no intimation that he considered B.'s machine an infringement of his patent, though he admitted that at the time he did consider it to be so:—Held, that as the purchasers did not depose that when they bought B.'s machines they were ignorant of P.'s patent, nor was there any reason to believe that they were ignorant of it, or that P. supposed them to be so; P. had not, on the ground of estoppel, lost his right to sue them for an infringement in using B.'s machines, it not being the duty of a patentee to warn persons that what they are doing is an infringement, and P.'s conduct not amounting to a representation that it was not an infringement. Proctor v. Bennis, 57 L. J., Ch. 11; 36 Ch. D. 740; 57 L. T. 662; 36 W. R. 456—C. A.

9. SALE.

As to Title.]—A person who has purported to sell goods is estopped from saying that the goods were not his at the time. Edmands v. Best, 7 L. T. 279.

By Auction.]—Property was put up for sale by public auction under the order of the Court of Chancery, and it was knocked down as unsold, there being no bid up to the reserved price. Before the auctioneer had left the desk, C. agreed to purchase the property at the reserved bidding, and signed the contract and paid the deposit:—Held, that he was estopped from disputing the sale as not being a sale by auction, and that he could not repudiate his purchase. Else v. Barnard, 6 Jur. (N.S.) 621; 2 L. T. 203.

Sale of Goods—Invoice.]—It is competent to a party, whose name appears at the head of an invoice as the vendor of certain goods, to show that he was not the seller, and that the invoice was only made out in those terms, and included those goods, for the convenience of the real parties to the contract. Holding v. Elliott, 5 H. & N. 117; 29 L. J., Ex. 134; 1 L. T. 381; 8 W. R. 192.

—— Validity.]—A., a trader, who was in difficulties, and apprehensive that his goods would be taken in execution, entered into an agreement with B. that A. should leave his place of business, and B. should take possession of it and his goods, A. giving him an invoice of them as upon a sale, and also a receipt for the supposed purchase-money. This having been done accordingly, B. took the goods, and afterwards converted them to his own use. A. having brought trover:

—Held, that he was not estopped from showing the nature of the transaction, and that there never had been any real sale to B. Bowes v. Foster, 2 H. & N. 779; 27 L. J., Ex. 262; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 95; 6 W. R. 257.

—— Concurrence in.]—The plaintiff, being a widow, but not representative of her deceased husband, was in possession of goods which had belonged to him. She married B., supposing him to be single, and lived with him in the house in which the goods were. The goods being distrained for rent, B. sold to the defendant so many of them as sufficed to pay off the distress, and the plaintiff authorised the sale. A month afterwards B. was convicted of bigamy: —Held, that the plaintiff could not recover in an action against the defendant for the value of the goods, first, because she had no title to them; and, secondly, because she was bound by her concurrence in the sale. Waller v. Drakeford, 1 El. & Bl. 749; 22 L. J., Q. B. 274; 17 Jur. 853.

Sale of Land—Deposit—Abstract—No Valid Contract in Writing.]—A purchaser deposited a certain sum on a contract for the sale of a leasehold shop. The agreement was signed by the auctioneer "as agent for the vendor," and by the purchaser: subsequently the purchaser obtained an abstract of the title, which was examined by her solicitors, who made certain requisitions as to title "without prejudice to any question which may arise as to the contract for the purchase of the premises." Afterwards the purchaser declined to complete the purchase, on the ground that the contract was void, as the parties to it were not sufficiently described:—Held, that although the memorandum might be insufficient under the Statute of Frauds, yet, as the purchaser had paid the deposit and received the abstract of title, well knowing that the vendor's name did not appear in the memorandum, and while the vendor was ready to complete the contract, she was estopped from recovering her deposit. Thomas v. Brown, 45 L. J., Q. B. 811; 1 Q. B. D. 714; 35 L. T. 237; 24 W. R. 821.

—— Title—Receipt—"Rent for Parish Land."]—An information filed in equity on behalf of the poor of a parish, stated an agreement dated in 1634, by the Earl of Portland, which recited that there lay in his park at R. divers parcels of land, which contained about six and a half acres, and belonged to the poor of the parish, for which lands, lying dispersed in his grounds, being ordained for good and charitable uses, the earl was desirous to give a full yearly rent and satisfaction, and thereby agreed to pay to the churchwardens and overseers of the parish for the time being, yearly, the sum of 6*l.*, and the earl thereby agreed to make such further assurance thereof, as by counsel should be advised, and to set out sufficient land of a better value for performance thereof, which he would either tie for the payment of the yearly rent, or otherwise assure and convey to such person and persons and their heirs, as by the vestry of the parish should be nominated to be feoffees in trust for the same. No conveyance was shown to be made in pursuance of this agreement, but it was in evidence that the park of the earl, including the six and a half acres, originally consisted of 550 acres, of which the defendant was in possession of thirty-one, his predecessors in the estate having, since 1786, covenanted to indemnify the purchasers of the other portions of the park from the payment of the annual rent of 6*l.*, which, in all the conveyances since 1786, was described as an annual rent-charge paid to the parish, but which in the parish books was expressed to have been received for rent of parish land; in 1849, the defendant's ancestor had accepted a receipt for the 6*l.* as for "rent for parish land":—Held, that in order to make the payment operate as an estoppel so as to prevent the defendant disputing the fact that the six and a half acres formed part of his estate, it was essential to make out that the payments had been from time to time made by him and his predecessors as for rent for land of which he and they were tenants, and, therefore, having regard to the only evidence adduced by the relators, namely, the entries in the parish books, the defendant was not estopped from denying that he was possessed of the six and a half acres of land originally demised by the parish to the earl. Att.-Gen. v. Stephens, 6 De G. M. & G. 111; 25 L. J., Ch. 888; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 51; 4 W. R. 191.

Sale by Apparent Owner—Attempt to oust Purchaser.]—If a person, being sole next of kin, is in possession of a chattel term without letters of administration having been obtained, and there are no debts due by the deceased, or anything to prevent such next of kin from using the term as his own, then he, the beneficial owner, can sell the term; and if the purchaser goes into possession under the contract of sale, the vendor cannot afterwards, either by obtaining a grant of administration, or in any other way, disaffirm his own act, and annul the contract. Hamill v. Murphy, 12 L. R., Ir. 400.

Representation as to Value.]—In the absence of trick or contrivance, representations respecting the value of a thing for sale, made by the owner to a party who, relying on their truth, becomes the purchaser, do not estop the former from denying that the value was so great as that represented. Martin v. Douglas, 16 W. R. 268.

Therefore, where D., the owner of a house, represented to M., who afterwards purchased it, that any person building a house adjoining would have to pay the owner of the existing house 150*l.* for the use of the flank wall thereof: —Held, that D. was not thereby estopped from showing that the value of such user was less than 150*l.* Ib.

10. Shares and other Securities.

Sale of Shares—Certification of Transfer—Voucher of Title—Want of Title in Transferor.]—The defendants were a company, incorporated under the Joint Stock Companies Acts, who had issued the whole of their authorised share capital. Subsequently to the completion of such issue L. sold to the plaintiffs, through stockbrokers, a certain number of shares in the defendant company. The brokers took the document, by which it was intended to transfer such shares from L. to the plaintiffs, before it had been executed by the plaintiffs or the price had been paid, to the office of the defendants, and procured the defendants to place upon it (partly by means of a stamp, partly in writing) the following words:

"Certificate lodged. The Balkis Consolidated Company, Limited, J. V. Thomas, for secretary." The placing of such words upon a transfer was commonly known as "certification" of the transfer; and it was in the ordinary course of the defendants' practice to grant such certification, if required to do so and if satisfied that the transferor was entitled to the shares specified in the transfer. The brokers, having obtained such certification and acting upon the faith of it, as the agents of the plaintiffs, paid L. the price of the shares. The defendants subsequently discovered that L. had had no title to the shares specified in the transfer, and thereupon, notwithstanding their certification of the transfer, refused to recognise the plaintiffs' title to the shares. The plaintiffs having brought an action to recover the value of the shares:—Held, that such a certification could only be taken to amount to a representation by the defendants that a document or documents had been lodged with them apparently in order, and showing primâ facie that the transferor was entitled to the shares; but that such certification did not import a warranty of the transferor's title or of the validity of such document or documents; that it did not therefore estop the defendants from impugning the plaintiffs' title on the ground of the invalidity of the transfer to the plaintiffs' transferor, and that the plaintiffs could not therefore make a title to the shares against the defendants by estoppel. Bishop v. Balkis Consolidated Co., 59 L. J., Q. B. 565; 25 Q. B. D. 512; 63 L. T. 601; 39 W. R. 99; 2 Meg. 292—C. A. And see Concessions Trust, In re, McKay's Case, 65 L. J., Ch. 909; [1896] 2 Ch. 575; 75 L. T. 298.

Shares Certified as Fully Paid-up—Allottee for Value—Misrepresentation.]—Where a man lends money to a company, and, by way of collateral security, accepts shares, on the certificate of which it is stated that each of them is fully paid up, the company and the liquidator in its winding-up are estopped from denying the truth of the allegation on the faith of which the money was advanced, and the lender is entitled to have his name removed from the list of contributories. It is no answer to the lender's claim that he might by inquiry or reflection have discovered that in fact nothing had been paid on the shares. Bloomenthal v. Ford, 66 L. J., Ch. 253; [1897] A. C. 156; 76 L. T. 205; 45 W. R. 449; 4 Manson, 156—H. L. (E.)

Debentures—Irregularity in Issue of—Company not permitted to set up Invalidity.]—A company, having power to issue debentures transferable at law, issued certain debentures to their contractor to enable him to obtain an advance for the purposes of the company. There was an irregularity in the issue of these debentures of which the contractor was aware, but the debentures on the face of them purported to be regularly issued for valuable consideration, and to be legally transferable. The debentures subsequently came into the hands of transferees for value who had no notice of their irregularity, but whose transfers were never registered:—Held, that as the original conduct of the company in issuing the debentures was such that the public was justified in treating it as a representation that the debentures were legally transferable, there was an equity on the part of the equitable transferees to restrain the company from pleading their invalidity, although the irregularity in their issue might have been a defence at law to an action against the company by their transferors. Romford Canal Co., In re, Carew's, Pocock's and Trickett's Claims, 52 L. J., Ch. 729; 24 Ch. D. 85; 49 L. T. 118.

Recognition of Transfer by the Company.]—C. transferred 510 shares in a cost-book mining company to A. for 5*l*. The transfer was registered. The company, having suspicions as to A.'s means, asked for information about him, but got none. They made calls upon him, and on non-payment recovered judgment for the amount, but obtained nothing. About two years afterwards the company was ordered to be wound up. The liquidator sought to put C. upon the list of contributories on the ground that the transfer was fraudulent within s. 35 of the Stannaries Act, 1869:—Held, that the court could only act in the winding-up as the company could have acted if there had been no winding-up, and that, as the company would have been estopped by having recognised the transfer with knowledge, the court could not set it aside. Wheal Unity Wood Mining Co., In re, Chynoweth's Case, 15 Ch. D. 13; 42 L. T. 636; 28 W. R. 897—C. A.

Blank Transfer sent to Broker.]—A. was induced by his broker to send him blank forms of transfer, which the broker filled up with numbers and descriptions of shares different from those of the company intended by A., being shares in another company, and by means of a duplicate key, which he had procured to be made without the knowledge of A., obtained certificates from a box of A.'s necessary to perfect the transfer; and he also forged the names of the attesting witnesses:—Held, that the acts of A. were not such as estopped him from showing that the deed of transfer was a forgery. Swan v. North British Australasian Co., 2 H. & C. 175; 32 L. J., Ex. 273; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 102; 11 W. R. 862—Ex. Ch.

Negotiability of Scrip and Scrip Certificates.]—Scrip was issued in England by the agent of a foreign government, and such scrip purported to entitle the bearer, upon payment of 100*l*. in instalments, to receive a definitive bond for 100*l*. G. purchased scrip on the open Stock Exchange, and intrusted it to a broker, who pledged it to his bankers as a security for his private debt. All the instalments of the 100*l*. had been paid. In an action of trover by G. against the bankers for the value of the scrip:—Held, that he had, by purchasing the scrip and entrusting it to the broker, estopped himself from contending that it was not negotiable like a bank-note. Goodwin v. Roberts, 45 L. J., Ex. 748; 1 App. Cas. 476; 35 L. T. 179; 24 W. R. 987—H. L. (E.)

Scrip certificates, by which it was certified that, after the payment of certain instalments, the bearer would be entitled to be registered as the holder of shares in a banking company, were issued to the plaintiff, and by him deposited with a stockbroker for the purpose of paying the instalments remaining due, and dealing with such certificates as the plaintiff should direct. The broker, in fraud of the plaintiff, and without his authority, deposited the scrip with the defendants as security for an amount due from him, the broker, to the defendants. The defendants were not aware of the fraud. It was proved that the usage among bankers, discounters, money dealers and on the Stock Exchange, had been for many years to treat such scrip certificates as negotiable instruments transferable by mere delivery:—Held, that the defendants were entitled to the scrip certificates as against the plaintiff, on the ground that the plaintiff, by depositing with his broker instruments purporting to be transferable by delivery to a bonâ fide holder for value, was estopped from denying that they were so transferable. Rumball v. Metropolitan Bank, 46 L. J., Q. B. 346; 2 Q. B. D. 194; 36 L. T. 240; 25 W. R. 366.

Negotiable Securities—Deposit of Securities by Broker—Authority of Broker—Bonâ fide Holder for Value.]—The plaintiff employed H., a stockbroker in speculative transactions on the Stock Exchange, in which it was the custom for H. to advance money to the plaintiff for the purchase of shares from time to time, and to keep the shares in his hands as security, with power also to transfer the benefit of this security. H. was accustomed to obtain money as he required it from the defendants, and deposited with them as security certain stocks and shares belonging to various clients. H. failed to meet his liabilities: the defendants then held certain stocks and shares of the plaintiff which had been deposited with the bank by H. The plaintiff claimed to be entitled to redeem on paying to the defendants the amount due from him to H.:—Held, that the defendants must be treated as bonâ fide holders without notice, and that they were entitled to hold the securities until payment of what was due to them from H. Bentinck v. London Joint Stock Bank, 62 L. J., Ch. 358; [1893] 2 Ch. 120; 3 R. 120; 68 L. T. 315; 42 W. R. 140.

Forged Transfer of Stock.]—C. owned stock in a company incorporated under the Companies Act, 1862. His clerk, P., contracted to sell stock in the company to S., who was the nominee of B. In order to carry out the contract, P. forged a transfer from C. to S., which was left by S. at the office of the company for registration. The company sent a letter to C. inquiring whether the transfer was correct: as they received no answer from him, they registered the transfer. B. borrowed money from a bank, and by way of security for the loan the stock was transferred by S. at the request of B. to I. as trustee for the bank, and the company registered I. as owner and issued a certificate accordingly. The money borrowed by B. was afterwards repaid by him to the bank, and the stock was held by I. as a bare trustee for B. The forgery was discovered, and the company then refused to acknowledge I. as the holder of the stock. In an action brought by B. and I. to compel the company to recognise their title:—Held, that although I., as trustee for the bank, might have acquired a good title by estoppel against the company, yet that title ceased when the loan by the bank was paid off, and that no estoppel existed in favour of B. against the company; for B. in contracting, through S., to buy the stock belonging to C. had acted on the faith of the forged transfer, and had not relied upon any act of the company, and by sending the forged transfer to the company had induced them to recognise his nominee as the holder, and that the action would not lie. Bahia and San Francisco Ry., In re (L. R. 3 Q. B. 585); Hart v. Frontino, &c. Gold Mining Co. (L. R. 5 Ex. 111); and Knights v. Wiffen (L. R. 5 Q. B. 660), discussed. Simm v. Anglo-American Telegraph Co., 49 L. J., Q. B. 392; 5 Q. B. D. 188; 42 L. T. 37; 28 W. R. 290; 44 J. P. 280—C. A.

New Shares—Validity—Receipt of Dividends.]—By the deed of settlement of a company, it was provided that the capital of the company should be 100,000*l.*, in 1,000 shares of 100*l.* each, and that it should be competent to any general meeting of the company to create additional shares of 100*l.* each. The company at a general meeting created 1,500 new half shares of 50*l.* each, some of which the defendant purchased, executed the deed of settlement, and received the dividends declared on the shares. It was afterwards resolved, at a special general meeting, that the company be wound up, and the defendant was sued for calls made by the directors and the liquidators of the company:—Held, that he was estopped from denying that the 50*l.* shares were valid shares. Hull Flax Co. v. Wellesley, 6 H. & N. 38; 30 L. J., Ex. 5.

Confirmation of Allotment of Shares.]—The plaintiff company was constituted by seven persons signing the memorandum of association. Afterwards they all were summoned to attend a meeting, but only four attended and they elected three directors. These three elected three other directors. The three original directors resigned, and afterwards one of the remaining directors sent in his resignation. The defendant then applied for fifty shares. The two remaining directors resolved that fifty shares should be allotted to the defendant, that he should be appointed a director, and that the resignation of the retiring director should be accepted. The defendant afterwards attended a meeting of the directors, confirmed the allotment to himself, and joined in passing a resolution, that the shares allotted to himself should be paid up in full forthwith. The defendant subsequently withdrew his application and refused to pay the amount of the shares allotted to him. By the articles of association the number of the directors was to be not less than three, and any casual vacancy occurring in the board might be filled up by the board, and the continuing board might act notwithstanding any vacancy in their body:—Held, that the defendant was liable to pay the amount of the shares. York Tramways Co. v. Willows, 51 L. J., Q. B. 257; 8 Q. B. D. 685; 46 L. T. 296; 30 W. R. 624—C. A.

Calls—Acting as Member of Company.]—Where a member of a mutual insurance company, afterwards converted into a limited company, has vessels on its books as insured, and pays calls and otherwise acts as if he were a member of the company, he is, in any action brought against him by the limited company for calls on losses, estopped from denying his liability, and from setting up either any irregularity in the transfer from the one company to the other, or that the losses were paid without any stamped policies being entered into in contravention of 30 Vict. c. 23, s. 7. Barrow Mutual Ship Insurance Co. v. Ashburner, 54 L. J., Q. B. 377; 54 L. T. 58; 5 Asp. M. C. 527—C. A. And see COMPANY, col. 1384.

—— Invalidly made—Liability of Director.]—The articles of association of a company provided that the board of directors should consist of not less than three directors, but when a call was made there were only two directors remaining, one of whom was the defendant, who assisted in passing the resolutions for the call. In an action against the defendant for calls:—Held, that he by his conduct was estopped from disputing the validity of such resolutions, and was liable to pay the amount of the call. Faure Electric Accumulator Co. v. Phillipart, 58 L. T. 525.

—— Issue of Fully-paid Shares.]—When a company issues shares to directors as fully paid-up shares, and afterwards endeavours to recover a call on such shares:—Held, that the company was prevented by estoppel from recovering the amount of such calls. Christchurch Gas Co. v. Kelly, 51 J. P. 374. See col. 469, and COMPANY.

Fraud—Repudiation.]—In an action for calls by a company against a shareholder, in which the jury have found that the contract to take the shares was induced by fraud, the defendant is not estopped from setting up the plea of fraud merely on the ground that he did not, immediately on the discovery of the fraud, repudiate the contract. Aaron's Reefs, Limited v. Twiss, 65 L. J., P. C. 54; [1896] A. C. 273; 74 L. T. 794—H. L. (Ir.)

11. TRUSTEE.

Representations by, as to Incumbrances on Life Interest—Mortgage of Trust Fund.]—In answer to an inquiry addressed by an intending mortgagee to the trustee of a fund whether the life tenant had encumbered his interest, the trustee enumerated certain specific charges on the life interest. At this date the trustee had received notice of several other incumbrances, but he had forgotten their existence. In an action by the mortgagee against the trustee to recover the loss arising from the insufficiency of the mortgage:—Held, that the trustee was not liable in the absence of estoppel, and that his answer did not amount to a positive representation that there were no other incumbrances on the life interest so as to create an estoppel against him. Low v. Bouverie, 60 L. J., Ch. 594; [1891] 3 Ch. 82; 65 L. T. 533; 40 W. R. 50—C. A.

12. IN OTHER CASES.

Allowing Person to Carry on Business in his own Name.]—By a deed, W., a horse contractor and jobber, assigned, until such time as all his then debts should be paid off, all his stock-in-trade, &c., to trustees for the benefit of his creditors, to hold upon certain trusts; that, so long as W. should observe the orders of the trustees, he was to be allowed to carry on and conduct the business, subject to the orders of the trustees; that, if he refused to comply with those orders, the trustees might immediately determine such permission; that the trustees should have power to sell any portion of the stock they pleased; that all moneys received in the business were to be paid to the account of the trustees, and all moneys paid by their cheques; and that W. was to receive a weekly salary for carrying on the business. The creditors also agreed to advance a large sum of money for the purpose of the business. This sum was advanced, and the business was carried on for some time under the terms of the deed; but W. having refused to comply with certain orders of the trustees, the trustees on the 22nd July, 1847, determined the permission to W. to carry on the business, and W. thereupon admitted in writing that the trustees had his leave to assume possession of the stock-in-trade, &c. Several of the horses used in the business were at that time let out on hire to various persons, and the trustees on that day served notice upon each of those persons that the horses in their possession belonged to them as trustees. On the 24th July, W. committed an act of bankruptcy. Upon an interpleader issue to try the title to these horses as between the trustees and the assignees:—Held, that by allowing W. to carry on the business in his own name, the trustees were not estopped from relying upon their own title to the property under the deed, as against the assignees. Price v. Groom, 2 Ex. 542; 17 L. J., Ex. 346.

Allowing Person to have Possession of Furniture.]—A trustee under a liquidation, who with the authority of the creditors, permits the debtor to remain in possession of his furniture as apparent owner, does not, in the absence of knowledge that the debtor was holding himself out as the real owner and dealing with it as such, forfeit his right to it so long as there has been no closing of the liquidation or order of discharge; and his right to it and to any after-acquired property cannot be defeated by a bill of sale given by the debtor subsequently to the liquidation. Meggy v. Imperial Discount Co., 47 L. J., Q. B. 119; 3 Q. B. D. 711; 38 L. T. 309; 26 W. R. 342—C. A.

Directors—Dealing with Insufficient Board.]—The deed of association of a joint stock company provided that the business of the company should be transacted by six directors; four directors conducted such business for a considerable time, and had various dealings with a third party as agent of the company:—Held, that it was not competent to such third party to object on a suit against him that the four directors did not sufficiently represent the company. Benson v. Hadfield, 4 Hare, 32.

Conduct of Business in other Person's Name.]—When a person grants authority to another to conduct a business in his name, in which business, in point of fact, he has no interest, and third persons enter into transactions with the firm under the belief, induced by the misrepresentation, that they are contracting with the person in whose name the business is being conducted, the latter will be estopped as against such third persons from assuming any position inconsistent with that which he so held himself out as occupying. Miles v. Furber, 42 L. J., Q. B. 41; L. R. 8 Q. B. 77; 27 L. T. 756; 21 W. R. 262.

By Negligence.]—Negligence in the custody of a draft or in its transmission by post will not disentitle the owner of it to recover the draft or its proceeds from one who has wrongfully obtained possession of it. Arnold v. Cheque Bank, 45 L. J., C. P. 562; 1 C. P. D. 578; 34 L. T. 729; 24 W. R. 759.

Negligence, to amount to an estoppel, must be in the transaction itself, and be the proximate cause of leading the third party into mistake, and also must be the neglect of some duty which is owing to such third party or to the general public. Ib.

The plaintiffs, merchants at New York, desiring to transmit 1,000*l.* to W. & Co., of Bradford, purchased of S. & Co., in New York, a draft for that amount drawn by S. & Co. on Smith, Payne & Co., London, payable to the order of the plaintiffs on demand. The plaintiffs indorsed the draft specially to W. & Co. or order, and inclosed it in a letter addressed to them which was placed in a letter-box in their office to be posted in the usual way. The letter was stolen by one Hecht, a clerk in the employ of the plaintiffs, who forged an indorsement of W. & Co., and procured the defendants, bankers in London, to present the draft and obtain the money, which was placed by them to the account of a person acting in concert with Hecht, upon whose cheques the money was almost immediately drawn out. In an action for money had and received, the defendants, in order to show that the negligence of the plaintiffs in the custody and transmission of the draft afforded facilities for the fraud, and so estopped them from suing for the money, tendered evidence that it was a usual and almost invariable practice amongst merchants sending large remittances from abroad to send, besides the letter containing the remittance, a letter of advice by the same or the next mail. This evidence was rejected, on the ground that the alleged negligence was collateral only to the transaction giving rise to the action:—Held, that the plaintiffs' right to the draft, and to sue for its proceeds in the hands of the defendants as money received to their use, was not affected by the felonious act of Hecht; and that the evidence tendered was properly rejected. Ib.

B., a trustee, advanced trust money to A. in 1851, on a legal mortgage of lands held by A. in fee, the mortgage deed reciting the trust. By collusion with B., A. in 1856 obtained the title deeds, and also a reconveyance of the legal estate, containing a reference to the mortgage, and then, suppressing the mortgage and reconveyance, conveyed, as under his original title, the legal estate to C., by way of mortgage. In a suit by B.'s cestui que trust:—Held, that C., although he acted bonâ fide, and was wholly unaware of the dealings between A. and B., and, in fact, never heard of the mortgage or reconveyance till after the commencement of the suit, could not be heard to aver ignorance of the facts which he would have discovered upon inquiries, to which he would have been put if he had seen the deeds of mortgage and reconveyance, before he advanced his money, inasmuch as he was obliged to rely upon those deeds for his legal title; therefore that the plantiff's mortgage had priority over C.'s. Joyce v. Rawlins, 40 L. J., Ch. 105; L. R. 11 Eq. 53; 23 L. T. 756; 19 W. R. 217.

H., a merchant dealing in tobacco and a broker in that trade, had fifty hogsheads of that article lying in bond in his name in the docks. The warrants for them had been issued to him. The plaintiff bought the tobacco from H. and paid for it, but he left the dock warrants in the possession of H., and took no steps to have any change made in the books of the dock company as to the ownership of the tobacco. H. being the ostensible owner of the tobacco fraudulently obtained advances on the pledge of a portion of the tobacco from the defendants respectively, and handed to them the dock warrants. Both the defendants acted in good faith, and took fresh warrants from the dock company:—Held, that H. was not intrusted by the plaintiff as his factor or agent with the documents of title, within 6 Geo. 4, c. 94, s. 2; and that the conduct of the plaintiff, in leaving the indicia of title in H.'s hands and thus enabling him to obtain advances on the security of the goods, was not such as to disentitle the plaintiff to recover its value from the defendants. Johnson v. Crédit Lyonnais Co., 47 L. J., C. P. 241; 3 C. P. D. 32; 37 L. T. 657; 26 W. R. 195—C. A. See 40 & 41 Vict. c. 39.

Negligence, to operate as an estoppel, must be the proximate cause of the loss. Swan v. North British Australasian Co., 2 H. & C. 175; 32 L. J., Ex. 273; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 102; 11 W. R. 862—Ex. Ch. And see col. 458.

Negligence of Mortgagee.]—The plaintiff, mortgagee of a policy of life insurance, handed it to the mortgagor for a particular purpose. On the plaintiff demanding it back from time to time, the mortgagor made excuses for not doing so; and the plaintiff then forgot that it had not been returned. Afterwards the mortgagor deposited the policy with the defendants to secure an advance. The plaintiff gave notice of his interest to the insurance company before the defendants:—Held, that the plaintiff was entitled to the policy as against the defendants, and that the conduct of the plaintiff had not been such as to estop him from asserting his claim against the defendants. Hall v. West End Advance Co., 1 Cab. & E. 161.

Negligence—Proximate Cause of Loss.]—A company incorporated under a charter granted by Charles II. were possessed of a common seal, and also of a certain amount of stock which stood in their names in the books of the defendants. The seal was intrusted to the custody of their clerk, in whom implicit confidence was placed, and who managed the affairs of the company without being subject to any control or supervision. The clerk affixed the seal of the company in the presence of two witnesses, who were not corporators, to two powers of attorney for the transfer of the stock belonging to the company. These transfers were lodged with the defendants, who in due course paid over to the clerk the proceeds of the sale of the stock. The clerk was subsequently tried and convicted of fraud in affixing the seal to the transfers without the authority of the company, and of appropriating the proceeds of the sale of the stock to his own use. In an action for a declaration that the company were entitled to have the stock stand in their names in the defendants' books, and that they might be ordered to replace the stock in the plaintiffs' names:—Held, upon the authority of Bank of Ireland v. Trustees of Evans' Charities (5 H. L. Cas. 389), that even assuming the company were negligent in intrusting the seal to the custody of their clerk, the negligence necessary to entitle the defendants to insist that the transfers were invalid must be negligence in or immediately connected with the transfers themselves, and that, inasmuch as the forgery committed by the clerk, and not the negligence of the company in intrusting him with the seal, was the proximate cause of the loss, the defendants were liable to replace the stock. Merchants of the Staple v. Bank of England, 57 L. J., Q. B. 418; 21 Q. B. D. 160; 36 W. R. 880; 52 J. P. 580—C. A.

The plaintiff's clerk, G., had by a series of frauds obtained the plaintiff's acceptance to certain bills of exchange, of which he (the clerk) received payment from the defendants. G. having forged a letter of advice from V., a correspondent of the plaintiff, with reference to a bill, would place it amongst the ordinary correspondence of the firm. There being nothing on its face to suggest doubt as to its genuineness, it in due time passed into the hands of another clerk who kept the "bills payable" book, and the particulars contained in the letter would be entered. G. then —sufficient time having elapsed, and having prepared and filled in a forged draft, inserting V. as drawer and P. & Co. as payees—would drop it into the bill box, whence it would be taken with the genuine bills, compared with the "bills payable" book, and, being found in order, would be accepted and placed in a portfolio in G.'s room, from which he could easily take it, and thus possess himself of a genuine acceptance to a forged draft. He then forged the indorsement of P. & Co., adding what professed to be their stamp. The payees, P. & Co., were real and existing persons, actual correspondents of the plaintiff. All the forged bills were cashed at the defendants' bank across the counter:— Held, that although there was negligence on the part of the plaintiff in leaving a clerk in G.'s position without any effective control or supervision over his proceedings, yet such negligence was not the proximate cause of the loss sustained by the defendants, and was no defence to the plaintiff's claim even if there were no negligence on the part of the defendants. Vagliano v. Bank of England, 58 L. J., Q. B. 357; 23 Q. B. D. 243; 61 L. T. 419; 37 W. R. 640; 53 J. P. 564 —C. A.

Representations inducing Person to act as Servant without Wages.]—An intestate induced a woman to serve him as his housekeeper without wages for many years and to give up other prospects of establishment in life by a verbal promise to make a will leaving her a life estate in land, and afterwards signed a will, not duly attested, by which he left her the life estate:— Held, that there was no contract, and that even if there had been and although the woman had wholly performed her part by serving till the intestate's death without wages, yet her service was not unequivocally and in its own nature referable to any contract, and was not such a part performance as to take the case out of the operation of the Statute of Frauds, s. 4; and that she could not maintain an action against the heir for a declaration that she was entitled to a life estate in the land. Loffus v. Maw (3 Giff. 592) disapproved. Maddison v. Alderson, 52 L. J., Q. B. 737; 8 App. Cas. 467; 49 L. T. 303; 31 W. R. 820; 47 J. P. 821—H. L. (E.)

A man, when in advanced years and ill health, induced his niece to reside with and continue valuable services to him, on the faith of his representations that by so doing she would become entitled to the benefit of property for life at his death; and by a codicil to his will, which was read over and explained to her, trusts were created in her favour:—Held, that he could not revoke the trusts. Loffus v. Maw, 3 Giff. 592; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 607; 6 L. T. 346; 10 W. R. 513.

Representations or Undertakings.] — The defendants sold goods to B. & Co., and at the same time handed to B. & Co. two documents, each as follows: "We hereby undertake to deliver to your order indorsed hereon twenty-five tons merchantable zinc off your contract of this date." Before delivery B. & Co. became insolvent and unable to pay the defendants, whereupon they retained the goods by virtue of their lien as unpaid vendors of insolvent purchasers. B. & Co. resold the goods to the plaintiffs and indorsed and handed to them the two documents above referred to. In an action by the plaintiffs against the defendants for refusing to deliver the goods:—Held, that inasmuch as the defendants were entitled to set up their lien as against B. & Co., and inasmuch as the two documents were only undertakings to do something, and not representations of any fact, the defendants were not estopped by them from setting up their lien as against the plaintiffs, and were therefore entitled to retain the goods. Farmiloe v. Bain, 45 L. J., C. P. 264; 1 C. P. D. 445; 34 L. T. 324.

—— As to Retainer.]—A declaration stated that the plaintiff and the defendant were attorneys; that the defendant falsely represented to the plaintiff that he, the defendant, was authorised by F. to bring an action in F.'s name against C. and B., and that he was authorised by F. to retain the plaintiff to bring the action; that the plaintiff brought the action; that the defendant was not so authorised, and that the plaintiff was compelled to discontinue the action and to pay costs. Plea, that the plaintiff was not employed, and did not act as such attorney. Replication, that the defendant ought not to be admitted to plead the plea, because a judge's order was made for taxing the plaintiff's bill of fees in the action, delivered to the defendant and O. and J., and for the Master to certify what was due; that the defendant and J. should be at liberty to dispute their retainer; that the Master allowed 196*l.* 13*s.* 5*d.*; that the plaintiff sued the defendant, O. and J. for determining the question of the retainer and recovering the 196*l.* 13*s.* 5*d.*; that the question of the retainer being referred to the Master, he certified that such retainer by the defendant, O. & J. was proved, whereupon the plaintiff signed judgment against the three parties for 247*l.* 3*s.* 10*d.*; and that the plaintiff's bill was for fees due to him for work done by him in bringing the action in the declaration mentioned:— Held, that the replication did not state a case of estoppel, and was bad. Callow v. Jenkinson, 6 Ex. 666; 20 L. J., Ex. 321.

Receipt.]—A receipt is not an estoppel, it is only primâ facie evidence that the money has been paid, and is open to explanation. Skaife v. Jackson, 5 D. & R. 290; 3 B. & C. 421. S. P., Bowes v. Foster, 2 H. & N. 779; 27 L. J., Ex. 262; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 95; 6 W. R. 257. See EVIDENCE (RECEIPT).

Payment.]—A. contracted to build a shed for B. Terms, everything to be completed to the satisfaction of B.'s engineers, payment 90 per cent. on completion of works, 10 per cent. to be held over for six months to answer defects in work. A. sent in his bill in February as for a completed shed with a letter containing these words, "as the shed will be completed before the close of the month," and was paid 90 per cent. of the price. In October, B., who had done repairs to the shed, which A. declined to do, offered to pay the residue, after deducting the cost of such repairs. In an action by A. for the whole of the residue:—Held, that the defendants were not estopped by the payment in February from showing that the work was not completed, nor from going into the amount of the defective work. Moss v. L. & N. W. Ry., 22 W. R. 532.

Pleadings—Contents of.]—When a declaration shows substantially a contract, and a tender in compliance with it, the plaintiff is not estopped from contending for the true interpretation of the contract by the fact that he has also set out in his declaration an alternative case of a tender which would not have been a compliance. M'Connel v. Murphy, L. R. 5 P. C. 203; 28 L. T. 713; 21 W. R. 609.

A sheriff having a writ commanding him to arrest A., took B., who represented herself to be the person named in the writ:—Held, that though B. might be estopped by her misrepresentation from suing the sheriff for the original taking, he could not justify detaining her after he had notice that she was not the real party. Dunston v. Paterson, 2 C. B. (N.S.) 495; 26 L. J., C. P. 267; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 982.

A., in the custody of the sheriff, and confined in the gaol at Bombay under a writ of execution issued against him upon a judgment of the supreme court, was permitted by the sheriff, with the sanction and authority of the judgment creditors, by reason of illness, to go out of prison and temporarily reside outside the precincts of the gaol, upon the condition that he should continue under the surveillance of the sheriff's officers, and to which condition A. agreed, and continued for a time to reside out of gaol at a private house, where he was constantly under such surveillance. Upon his becoming convalescent, the sheriff, at the instance of the judgment creditors, took him back to gaol. Upon application by A. to the supreme court to discharge him out of custody, on the ground that the writ of execution was satisfied:—Held, that A. having agreed to the condition imposed on him by the judgment creditors, of continuing in the custody of the sheriff's officers while out of gaol, was estopped from saying that he was out of the sheriff's custody when he was permitted to leave the gaol, and that a change of the place of imprisonment did not amount to a discharge out of custody. Haines v. East India Co., 11 Moore, P. C. 39; 5 W. R. 159.

—— Misnomer.—A defendant is estopped by the recognizance of bail entered into for him by the name in which he is sued, from pleading a misnomer, though he himself is no party to the recognizance. Meredith v. Hodges, 2 Bos. & P. (N.R.) 453. S. P., Anon., Lofft, 82.

If a person whose real name is William is asked before process issues against him, whether his name is not John, and he says it is, he cannot maintain trespass for what is done in execution of the process against him by the wrong name. Price v. Harwood, 3 Camp. 108.

So, where a different name is written over a shop door. Ib.

Where A., having two christian names, has omitted one of them in his dealings with B., he cannot, in an action by B., make the same omission a ground for setting aside the proceedings. Walker v. Willoughby, 2 Marsh. 230; 6 Taunt. 530.

A warrant of attorney executed by J. S. L. was filled up J. Stone L., and a fi. fa. issued against the party by that name. It appeared that the second name was Stowe. The sheriff seized goods which he afterwards relinquished, on a wrong supposition that they belonged to some trustees, and returned nulla bona. In an action for the false return:—Held, that as the party by executing the warrant of attorney was estopped from objecting to the incorrectness of the names, the sheriff could not make it a defence to the action. Reeves v. Slater, 7 B. & C. 486; 1 M. & Ry. 265; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 77; 31 R. R. 259.

Where a party is sued by a wrong name, and suffers judgment to go against him, without attempting to rectify the mistake, he cannot afterwards, in an action against the sheriff for false imprisonment, complain of an execution issued against him by that name. Fisher v. Magnay, 6 Scott (N.R.) 588; 1 D. & L. 40; 5 Man. & G. 778; 12 L. J., C. P. 276.

Arbitration—Award not made within Time.]—Where a cause was referred to an officer of the court under the compulsory powers of 17 & 18 Vict. c. 125, and the award was not made within three months, and the time was not enlarged by the court or a judge, or by the written consent of the parties, as required by s. 15, but they continued to attend before the arbitrator after the expiration of the three months without objection:—Held, that the party against whom judgment had been signed upon the award was estopped from alleging that there had been no written consent to the enlargement. Tyerman v. Smith, 6 El. & Bl. 719; 25 L. J., Q. B. 359; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 860.

Trial before Commissioner.]—A cause was tried without a jury before a commissioner of nisi prius, not a judge of the superior courts. The parties consented, and the judge in open court sanctioned this course; but there was neither a judge's order nor a consent in writing. The unsuccessful party having moved for a new trial:—Held, that the commissioner having general jurisdiction to try, the parties were precluded by their conduct from questioning the verdict on account of the absence of these preliminaries. Andrews v. Elliott, 6 El. & Bl. 338; 25 L. J., Q. B. 336; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 663; 4 W. R. 527.

Bankrupt holding himself out as a Trader.]—A man, not a trader, fraudulently contracted a debt, representing himself to the creditor to be a trader. He subsequently became a trader, and the debt was proved under his bankruptcy. The commissioner refused him his certificate, on the ground of his fraudulent conduct:—Held, that having represented himself as a trader in the transaction, he could not be heard to say that he was not so for the purpose of protecting himself from the consequences. Leslie, Ex parte, 25 L. J., Ch. 37; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 822; 4 W. R. 706—L.J.

Of Judgment Creditor.]—A judgment creditor is not bound by an estoppel precluding the judgment debtor from claiming the goods seized under the judgment. Richards v. Johnson, 4 H. & N. 660; 1 F. & F. 447; 28 L. J., Ex. 322; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 520.

M. stood by and allowed H. to assign goods as his own to the plaintiff, H. having and still continuing to retain possession. The goods were then seized by the defendant, under a judgment against M. On an interpleader issue between the plaintiff and the defendant, whether the goods were the plaintiff's as against the defendant, the jury found that there was no transfer from M. to H.: —Held, that the defendant was not estopped, and that, as against him, the goods were M.'s when seized. Ib.

Of Sheriff.]—Declaration alleging an imprisonment in the remand ward of the Queen's prison. Plea justifying under two writs of execution to the sheriff of York, and a habeas corpus, by which plaintiff was turned over to the defendant as keeper of the Queen's prison. New assignment, that the plaintiff, while in the custody of the sheriff, petitioned the Insolvent Debtors Court; that the petition was referred to the county court, and an order of adjudication made, and a warrant in pursuance thereof delivered to the gaoler of York Castle, ordering that the plaintiff should be discharged, as to the detainer, on the 12th April, 1852; that he was afterwards committed by habeas corpus, with the warrant, to the custody of the defendant, with the detainer; and that, after the 12th April, the defendant imprisoned the plaintiff in the remand ward. Plea, that the plaintiff was not committed to the custody of the defendant with the warrant, and that the defendant had not in his possession the order of adjudication or warrant. It appeared that the plaintiff had caused himself to be removed by habeas corpus to the Queen's prison, a copy only of the warrant being sent with the plaintiff to the keeper of the Queen's prison. The defendant told the plaintiff that he should require an order for his discharge on the 12th April. The plaintiff accordingly applied to the county court judge and a judge at chambers, who refused to make such an order, as being unnecessary: and three days after the 12th April he was discharged without any order. The jury found that the defendant had a copy of the warrant, and acted upon it as his sole authority for the plaintiff's imprisonment, and led the plaintiff to believe that he had, and had acted on, the original warrant:—Held, that the rule of law which prevents a party who makes a wilful misrepresentation, and induces another to act upon a belief in the truth of it to his prejudice, from afterwards proving the truth, did not apply so as to prevent the defendant from proving that he had received only a copy of the warrant, and had acted upon it. Howard v. Hudson, 2 El. & Bl. 1; 22 L. J., Q. B. 341; 17 Jur. 855; 1 W. R. 325.

The sheriff of a colony is liable, without proof of malice or want of probable cause, in an action for a false return of rescue made by him upon a writ of capias ad respondendum, for the damage which results to the plaintiff therefrom. Such return was conclusive at that stage of the proceedings as to the truth of the alleged rescue by the plaintiff, whom it rendered liable to attachment for a contempt of court without being allowed to shew that the facts returned were untrue, and constituted a misfeasance by a public ministerial officer in the discharge of his duties. Brasyer v. Maclean, 44 L. J., P. C. 79; L. R. 6 P. C. 398; 33 L. T. 1.

S. having obtained a judgment against F., issued a fi. fa. and placed it in the hands of the sheriff for execution, who, on proceeding to make a levy, found the goods claimed by his brother under a bill of sale; S. being informed of this, requested the officer to remain on the premises, which he did until after the goods were sold under the bill of sale, and then at S.'s request withdrew. The sheriff being ruled to make a return to the writ, returned that he had seized the goods and chattels of the debtor and kept them safely until ordered by S. to withdraw from possession. S. thereupon brought an action against the sheriff for not levying, and for making a false return thereto, but on the trial gave no evidence of having sustained any damage by the sheriff's neglect. The defence set up was the validity of the bill of sale, and the jury found that it was valid, and returned a verdict for the sheriff:—Held, that the sheriff was not estopped by the admission in his formal return from setting up as a defence that the goods were not the goods of the debtor at the time of the attempted seizure, and that consequently he had not sustained actual damage, and that the facts were not such as from which the law would imply damage necessarily resulting. Stimson v. Farnham, 41 L. J., Q. B. 52; L. R. 7 Q. B. 175; 25 L. T. 747; 20 W. R. 183.

A sheriff seized goods to satisfy a fi. fa. upon a judgment of nonsuit for 67*l.*: a person claimed possession of the goods from the sheriff, but the officer refused to give them up except on payment of 97*l.* (the additional 30*l.* being claimed for poundage, expenses, &c.); which sum was paid. The sheriff being ruled to return the writ, returned that he had levied the sum of 67*l.*; in an action brought by the alleged owner of the goods against the sheriff to recover back the 30*l.*: —Held, that the sheriff was not estopped by his return from saying that the excess beyond the 67*l.* was not the plaintiff's money. Scarfe v. Halifax, 7 M. & W. 288; 10 L. J., Ex. 332.

The defendant having recovered judgment against H., on the 25th of April lodged a writ of fi. fa. with the sheriff. The sheriff neglected to execute the writ until the 11th of May, when he seized the goods of H. and assigned them to the defendant by a bill of sale, which stated the consideration to be 256*l.* paid by the defendant to him. He then returned the fi. fa. Before the seizure the defendant had notice of an act of bankruptcy committed by H. before the 25th of April, upon which a fiat issued in August, and assignees were appointed, who recovered from the sheriff the value of the goods seized, whereupon he brought an action to recover back the money so paid:—Held, that the plaintiff was not estopped by his return from saying that the then title of the debtor was defeated by matter subsequent. Standish v. Ross, 3 Ex. 527; 19 L. J., Ex. 185.

Direction to Tenant to Pay Rent to Third Person.]—By deed of settlement a farm was conveyed, subject to a term for 1,000 years, to A. for life, with power of leasing for three lives, and with a remainder over which ultimately became vested in the defendants as tenants in tail. The term for 1,000 years had been created for securing a sum of money, and was, at the time of such settlement, vested in two trustees, one of whom was A., the tenant for life under the settlement. A., in exercise of the power of leasing, made a lease of the farm for three lives, under which lease the plaintiff became tenant, subject to the rent which was thereby reserved, and which rent he paid to the defendants or their attorneys, R. & D., upon the defendants coming into possession of the property. Afterwards R. & D., acting as their attorneys, wrote a letter to the plaintiff, representing to him that the legal estate was in C. under the term for 1,000 years, and directing the plaintiff, as tenant, to pay the rent to C. In consequence of such letter the plaintiff allowed C. to recover judgment against him for rent under one lease. The defendants having afterwards distrained for rent:—Held, that as the term for 1,000 years had merged as to one moiety in A., and the defendants had therefore a right to distrain for a moiety of the rent, the effect of the representation by R. & D. would not estop the defendants from recovering rent which the plaintiff had not paid in consequence of such representation, or had not thereby made himself liable to pay under the judgment obtained against him by C. Greenish v. White, 11 C. B. (N.S.) 209; 31 L. J., C. P. 93; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 563.

Bill of Sale treated as Valid—Declared to be Invalid.]—Where the grantor of a bill of sale which is afterwards found to be invalid has derived advantage from treating it as valid, he cannot set up its invalidity for the purpose of obtaining a further advantage. Roe v. Mutual Loan Fund Association, 19 Q. Accounts Rendered.]—It was the duty of a surveyor to the trustees of turnpike roads to make all contracts, and pay the amounts due, for labour and materials required for the repair of the roads, he being permitted to draw on the treasurer to a certain amount. His expenditure was not strictly limited to that amount, and in the yearly accounts, which it was his duty to present to the trustees, a balance was generally claimed as due to him, and was carried to the next year's account. He rendered accounts for 1856, 1857 and 1858, shewing certain balances due to himself. These accounts were audited, examined and allowed by the trustees at their general annual meeting, and a statement, based on them of the revenue and expenditure of the trust was published as required by 3 Geo. 4, c. 126, s. 78. The trustees, believing the accounts correct, paid off with moneys in hand a portion of their mortgage debt. He afterwards claimed a larger sum in respect of payments which had, in fact, been made by him, and which he ought to have brought into the accounts of the above years, but knowingly omitted. He also rendered an account for 1859, which, on inquiry by the trustees, he stated did not include all the payments, and he subsequently rendered another account for that year, in which he claimed a larger sum as due to him:—Held, first that he was estopped from recovering the sums omitted in the accounts for 1856, 1857 and 1858, since the trustees had acted upon the faith that those accounts were true. Cave v. Mills, 7 H. & N. 913; 31 L. J., Ex. 265; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 363; 6 L. T. 650; 10 W. R. 471.

Held, secondly, that he was entitled to recover the sums omitted in the account for 1859, since it was not accepted by the trustees as true. Ib.

Where the paymaster of a regiment gave credit in a running account with an officer on a foreign station for sums of money, as increased pay and allowances, to which, from a misconstruction of a general order, he supposed the officer was entitled, and after having been apprised by the board of ordnance that such sums would not be allowed, suffered the officer to remain in ignorance of this fact for four years:—Held, in an action by the officer's personal representatives, for pay remaining due, that the paymaster was concluded by the account in which he had erroneously given credit for the increased allowance. Skyring v. Greenwood, 6 D. & R. 401; 4 B. & C. 281; 1 Car. & P. 517; 28 R. Action on Contract—Fraud of Plaintiff.]—A declaration stated that the plaintiff bought of the defendant divers lots of timber trees, to be felled and removed under certain conditions, and that the defendant would not permit the plaintiff to fell or remove a certain remainder of the lots pursuant to the sale and conditions. The defendant pleaded, first, that before breach the plaintiff felled and carried away and converted divers other trees of the defendant in substitution of the remainder; and, secondly, that before breach the plaintiff fraudulently felled and removed other trees of the defendant not comprised in the lots sold, and to which the plaintiff had no right, and which exceeded in number and value the remainder; that the plaintiff fraudulently pretended that the trees which he so took were the trees which he had purchased; that they were taken in fraudulent substitution of the remainder, and that the plaintiff converted them to his own use:—Held, that these pleas were bad; that they shewed no rescission of the contract, and that the plaintiff was not estopped by his own fraud and trespass from bringing his action on the contract. Lewis v. Clifton, 14 C. B. 245; 2 C. L. R. 1350; 23 L. J., C. P. 68; 18 Jur. 291; 2 W. R. 230.

Accounts of Bankers—Appropriation.]—A., B. & Co., country bankers, had a cash account with C. & Co., London bankers, who were in the habit of transmitting to the former monthly statements of mutual debits and credits. A. died, leaving a large balance due from himself and B. & Co. to C. & Co., who for two months afterwards made no alteration in their own books as to the mode of keeping the account, but continued it as before. In the interval money was transmitted to C. & Co. from the country bank, sufficient to pay off the balance due from the firm at the time of A.'s death. During the two months no accounts were transmitted to the country bank, but at the end of that time two separate accounts were sent:—Held, that this did not estop C. & Co. from suing the heirs of A., as the entries in their books did not amount to a complete appropriation. Simson v. Ingham, 3 D. & R. 549; 2 B. & C. 65; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 234; 26 R. R. 273.

Building Erected on another's Land.]—If a man stands by and allows another to erect a building on his ground, and he afterwards agrees as to the rent to be paid for it, neither the owner of the land, nor any person claiming under him, can dispute the right of the builder to use the land. Mold v. Wheatcroft, 27 Beav. 510.

In an action for the recovery of land, when the plaintiff endorses a claim for mesne profits, a plea that the defendant never entered into and is not in possession of the land sought to be recovered is a good defence. In an action for the recovery of land, the defendant pleaded that he, several years ago, "by and with the knowledge, approbation and consent of the plaintiff," built a wall for the purpose of making a boundary-wall between the plaintiff's land and his own, and that the portion claimed was included within the said boundary-wall on his side :—Held, on demurrer, that the plea should be construed as impliedly alleging that the plaintiff had represented to the defendant that the site of the wall was the boundary; and that such representation having been made with the intent of being acted upon, and the defendant having acted upon it by building the wall, the plea was a good defence by way of estoppel. Sheridan v. Barrett, 4 L. R., Ir. 223.

Misrepresentation that Change of Company only Change of Name.]—T., P. and D., three directors of a company, gave a joint guarantee to bankers to secure the balance which might be due at the closing of their account to the extent of 2,000*l*. In September, 1880, the company went into voluntary liquidation, and immediately recommenced business under the same directors, but as a new company with the addition of the word "manufacturing" to their former title. The termination of the old company was not disclosed to the bankers, who continued their business with the company without intermission, merely putting the addition to the name on the cheques and in their books. P. died in December, 1880. In November, 1881, the new company was wound up, when it was indebted to the bankers, who commenced an action upon the guarantee for the amount due to them :—Held, that T. and D. by not having given notice to the plaintiffs upon the death of P. that they declined to be answerable for any other amount than that which was due at P.'s death, and by their concealment of the fact that a new company had been formed, and by the tenor of their conduct in carrying on the business as before, were estopped from denying their liability upon the guarantee, and were liable to the full amount thereby secured. Ashby v. Day, 54 L. T. 408; 34 W. R. 312—C. A. Affirming 54 L. J., Ch. 935.

Notice to Treat—Validity.]—The commissioners of sewers, acting under the powers of 57 Geo. 3, c. 29, gave the plaintiff notice to treat for the purchase of his property for the purpose of widening a street. The whole of the property was not required for that purpose, and it appeared that the improvement contemplated was rather lowering the level of, than widening the street. The plaintiff negotiated with the commissioners during eight months on the basis of the notice, and endeavoured to obtain from them as large a price as he could for the property. On his failing to obtain so large a price as he desired he brought an action for an injunction to restrain the commissioners from proceeding on the notice to treat. On motion for an injunction :—Held, the plaintiff during the negotiations had not such knowledge that the commissioners did not bonâ fide want his houses for purposes within their compulsory powers as to preclude him now from objecting to their taking the houses. Lynch v. Sewers Commissioners, 55 L. J., Ch. 409; 32 Ch. D. 72; 54 L. T. 699; 50 J. P. 548—C. A.

Invalidity cannot be set up when Person takes under Document.]—A tenant by the curtesy of an estate of freehold of inheritance died in 1820, after making a will by which he devised the freehold to trustees in trust for his daughter, Rebecca for life, and after her death to his grandson, B. Annuities were payable under the will, and were paid by Rebecca. The testator died in 1855, and at and after his death Rebecca remained in possession. In 1849 the plaintiff bought of B., the remainderman, all his interest in the freehold. In 1863 Rebecca sold the freehold to the defendant, and in 1872 she died, whereupon the plaintiff demanded possession, and brought an action of ejectment against the defendant to recover possession :—Held, that Rebecca having taken under the will, and having acted under it, would have been estopped from asserting that it was invalid, and that by reason of her possession for twenty years she was entitled to the fee; that the defendant, who claimed through her, was estopped in like manner, and that consequently the plaintiff, who had purchased from B., the remainderman, was entitled to recover from the defendant. Board v. Board, 43 L. J., Q. B. 4; L. R. 9 Q. B. 48; 29 L. T. 459; 22 W. R. 206.

Semble, where a widow takes under a devise durante viduitate, with remainder to another in fee, and marries, her husband, who enters after the marriage into possession of the same land and continues to occupy it with her, is estopped from denying the title of the devisor to the land. Asher v. Whitelock, 35 L. J., Q. B. 17; L. R. 1 Q. B. 1; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 925; 13 L. T. 254; 14 W. R. 26.

Notice as to Mode in which Expenses to be Paid.]—The 150th section of the Public Health Act, 1875, permits an urban authority in certain cases to give notice to the owners of premises fronting, adjoining or abutting on such parts of a street as in the judgment of such urban authority require to be sewered, requiring them to do what is necessary within a time to be specified in the notice, and, in the event of non-compliance with the notice, to execute the works themselves; and the same section also provides that such urban authority "may recover in a summary manner the expenses incurred by them in so doing from the owners in default, . . . or may by order declare the expenses so incurred to be private improvement expenses." By s. 213 et seq., a private improvement rate may be levied for expenses declared to be private improvement expenses, and certain advantages are given to owners. A notice given to the appellants, who were owners of premises fronting a street within the meaning of the 150th section, requiring them to do certain sewering works within a prescribed period, and stating that if such works were not executed the urban authority would execute the same themselves at the appellants' expense, thus concluded : "And the said urban authority will thereupon also proceed to declare all costs, charges and expenses paid, expended or incurred by them in consequence of such neglect or default, to be private improvement expenses, and to enforce payment according to law" :—Held, that even assuming the notice to have been good, the concluding portion could not be treated as surplusage, and that it was not, therefore, competent for the urban authority, after their declared intention to treat the expenses incurred as private improvement expenses, to proceed against the appellants summarily for the recovery of such expenses. Gould v. Bacup Local Board, 50 L. J., M. C. 44; 44 L. T. 103; 29 W. R. 471; 45 J. P. 325.

Permitting User of Easement.]—By indenture of lease of the 23rd of September, 1878, one Berridge demised to Brett a public-house at Hampstead, "together with all ways, waters, watercourses, drains, cellars, vaults, paths, passages, lights, easements, profits, privileges, commodities, advantages and appurtenances whatsoever to the said premises belonging or in any wise appertaining." At the rear of the premises was a path across the garden to a doorway in the boundary-wall which opened on to a private road (the property of Berridge) leading to Hampstead Heath. On the 1st of October, 1878, Berridge (pursuant to an agreement of November, 1867) granted to the defendant Clowser a lease for ninety-nine years of land which comprised the private road leading from the back of the public-house to Hampstead Heath; and on the 9th of October in that year Clowser built up the doorway in the boundary-wall. This way had, by special agreement between himself and his lessor Clowser, for several years been used by one Haughton, a former tenant of the public-house, whose tenancy had been determined in June, 1878:—Held, that the defendant Clowser was not estopped from denying the existence of the alleged right of way by having allowed Haughton to use it whilst he was the occupier of the public-house. Brett v. Clowser, 5 C. P. D. 376.

Shipping—Register, Flag and Pass.]—The register, flag and pass of a ship carry with them a presumption that they are true and correct, and the owner is estopped from averring against them. The Laura, 2 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 181; 12 L. T. 685; 13 W. R. 369.

Copyholder and Lord.]—If the heir-apparent of a copyholder in fee surrenders in the lifetime of his ancestor and survives him, the heir of such surrenderor is not estopped by that surrender of his ancestor from claiming against the surrenderee. Goodtitle d. Faulkner v. Morze, 3 Term Rep. 365; 1 R. R. 719.

A copyholder who has been admitted to a tenement, and done fealty to the lord of a manor, is estopped, in an action by the latter for a forfeiture, from shewing that the legal estate was not in the lord at the time of admittance. Doe d. Nepean v. Budden, 1 D. & R. 243; 5 B. & Ald. 626; 24 R. R. 504.

Receipt of Dividend on Composition—Action for Balance.]—The plaintiffs, who were creditors of the defendant, a trader in insolvent circumstances, took an active part in procuring the acceptance of a scheme of composition of the defendant's affairs, and obtained proxies from the debtor's other creditors. At a meeting of the creditors the plaintiffs withdrew the proof of their debt against the estate of the defendant on the ground that, owing to a fraudulent statement on his part on an earlier occasion, they had been induced to forbear to press their claim against him. They, however, proposed a resolution that a composition of 11*s.* 3*d.* in the pound should be accepted in satisfaction of the debts due from the debtor, and by using the proxies held by them they carried the resolution. A dividend of 11*s.* 3*d.* in the pound was received by the plaintiffs on their proof. They subsequently brought their action in the county court for the unpaid balance of their debt, and the county court judge gave a verdict and judgment for the amount claimed. The defendant obtained a rule nisi to set aside the verdict and judgment and for a new trial:—Held, on the argument of the rule, that the plaintiffs, having acted as they had done, had assented to the composition otherwise than by proving their debt and accepting a dividend on it, and that they could not maintain an action for the unpaid balance of their debt, and that judgment should be entered for the defendant. Thorp v. Dakin, 52 L. T. 856.

Receipt of Money under Deed bars Repudiation of Execution.]—Where a deed of assignment by debtors to a trustee for the benefit of all creditors who should execute the deed was executed by the plaintiffs, who appended a note that they executed only in respect of certain claims scheduled to the deed and amounting to $73,531, and it appeared that subsequently thereto they received a sum of money from the trustee by virtue of their execution of the deed:—Held, that the plaintiffs were bound, and that, as they had received payment under the deed, they could not be heard to repudiate it, and deny their execution. Yarmouth Exchange Bank v. Blethen, 10 App. Cas. 293; 54 L. J., P. C. 27; 53 L. T. 537; 33 W. R. 801—P. C.

Jus tertii — Payment of Rent.]—Where a person claiming to be assignee of the reversion receives rent from the tenant by fraud or misrepresentation, such payment is no evidence of title; but where there is no fraud or misrepresentation, such payment is primâ facie evidence of title, and the tenant can only defeat that title by shewing that he paid the rent in ignorance of the true state of the title, and that some third person is the real assignee of the reversion, and entitled to maintain ejectment. Carlton v. Bowcock, 51 L. T. 659.

—— Execution Debtor—Claimant in Interpleader.]—A mere estoppel, which precludes the execution debtor from denying the title of the claimant in an interpleader proceeding, confers no title upon the claimant as against the execution creditor. Richards v. Johnson (28 L. J., Ex. 322), followed. Richards v. Jenkins, 56 L. J., Q. B. 293; 18 Q. B. D. 451; 56 L. T. 591; 35 W. R. 355—C. A.

Agreement by Rector as to Tithes.]—A rector, having come to an agreement with his parishioners for tithes, cannot in equity set up his own non-residence to avoid the agreement. Atkinson v. Folkes, 1 Anst. 67; 3 R. R. 548.

Fictitious Legal Title—Priorities.]—In 1873, D., in order to carry out a fraudulent scheme, obtained a transfer to himself of mortgages of freehold property, and after various dealings with it the legal estate was, in September, 1875, conveyed by a mortgagee to H. in trust for M., and in March, 1876, by H. to M. M. was alleged to have been an accomplice of and trustee for D. In August, 1874, in pursuance of this scheme, T., claiming to be entitled to this property under a fictitious lease for ninety-eight years, purporting to have been granted to him in March, 1870, by a merely fictitious freeholder (an agent and accomplice of D.), demised the property by way of mortgage to A. In November, 1874, M., claiming to be entitled to the same property under a fictitious lease for ninety-nine years, also dated March, 1870, and purporting to be granted to him by T., demised the property by way of mortgage to B., the mortgage deed being executed by M. only. In January, 1877,

M. (to whom the legal estate had been conveyed in March, 1876) deposited the genuine title deeds of the property with C., upon a memorandum charging his estate and interest in the lands comprised in the deeds and a statutory declaration of title; and further advances were made to M. and D., who came forward and stated that M. was merely a trustee for him of the property. In 1878 D., M. and T. were convicted and sentenced to penal servitude for forgery and fraud in connection with this property, and C., as equitable mortgagee, entered into possession. In an action by A. to settle the priorities of himself, B. and C. as incumbrancers on the property:—Held, (1) that assuming T. to have been the agent of D., so that his representations to A. of having a good title were binding on D., such representations, followed by the acquisition of the property beneficially by D., did not bind the estate so as to give A. prior equitable charge as against subsequent purchasers for value without notice; (2) that the like representations of M. to B., followed by the acquisition, first of the equitable, and afterwards of the legal estate by M., did not put B. in any better position, and that the doctrine of estoppel did not apply so as to convert the fictitious title acquired by B. from M., in November, 1874, into a valid legal title ab initio upon the conveyance of the legal estate to M. in March, 1876; (3) that as purchaser for value without notice by deposit of the genuine title deeds, C., though subsequent in date, was entitled in priority over A. and B. Keate v. Phillips, 50 L. J., Ch. 664; L. R. 18 Ch. D. 560; 44 L. T. 731; 29 W. R. 710.

Admission of Annuity by Grantor—Devisee of Grantor.]—The grantor of an annuity had admitted, in his answer to a bill in chancery, that the annuity was a subsisting charge on his estates, and the decree and proceedings in the suit had treated the annuity as valid. Under those circumstances the grantor's devisee was restrained from proceeding at law to set aside the annuity for want of a memorial. Roberts v. Madocks, 13 Sim. 549.

Creditor suppressing his Debt.]—Creditor, by suppressing his debt inducing another person to enter into a contract, not permitted to set up the debt, even against the person in whose favour and at whose instance he made the suppression. Dalbiac v. Dalbiac, 16 Ves. 125.

Estate sold subject to Lease—Seller impeaching Lease.]—Quære, whether, if an estate be sold subject to a lease, the seller can afterwards impeach the lease, unless he can at the same time impeach both the sale and the lease. Muskerry v. Chinnery, Ll. & G. t. Sugd. 185. Sheehy v. Muskerry, 7 Cl. & F. 1; Macl. & R. 493; Ll. & G. t. Plunk. 568.

Cost-book Mine — Forfeiture of Shares — Laches.]—At a meeting of the partners in a cost-book mine, held in 1874, it was stated that the mine was 2,003*l.* in debt, and a call of 25*l.* was made upon each of the six shares in the mine. Two of the partners did not pay this call, and were in arrear for other calls. At subsequent meetings in June, 1874, the shares of these partners were declared to be forfeited. These two partners took no steps as to the mine until July, 1879, when they made a claim, and in September, 1880, they brought an action, alleging that the shares had not been regularly forfeited, and claiming to be still partners. It appeared that the mine was in debt in 1878:—Held, that even assuming the shares not to have been regularly forfeited, the plaintiffs, under the circumstances, could not, after lying by for more than six years, successfully assert their claim to be partners. Clarke v. Hart (6 H. L. Cas. 633) distinguished. Rule v. Jewell, 18 Ch. D. 660; 29 W. R. 755.

13. Pleading.

When Necessary.]—Matter of estoppel in pais may be pleaded. Sanderson v. Collman, 4 Man. & G. 209; 4 Scott (N.R.) 638; 11 L. J., C. P. 270.

An estoppel in pais in general need not be pleaded to make it obligatory, and it binds the jury as well as the parties, whatever be the form of pleading. Freeman v. Cooke, 6 D. & L. 187; 2 Ex. 654; 18 L. J., Ex. 114; 12 Jur. 777.

A replication by way of estoppel may be replied to a plea of liberum tenementum; and if the plaintiff does not avail himself of that liberty, but merely joins issue on the plea, the matter, which might have been so replied, is not conclusive evidence in his favour, but is merely evidence to go to the jury. Faversham (Lord) v. Emerson, 11 Ex. 385; 24 L. J., Ex. 254; 3 C. L. R. 1379.

Contents.]—A committee of a company was empowered, by a deed executed by the defendant and others, to certify what sum was necessary for discharging the debts of the company, and their certificate was to be conclusive as to the amount. The committee certified that the sum of 17,986*l.* was necessary, and that the sum of 529*l.* was the defendant's proportion, which he was called on to pay to the plaintiff, as trustee under the deed; of the 529*l.*, the defendant had paid 150*l.*, under a former certificate to the same effect, and he was told that credit would be given him for that payment. In an action for the 529*l.*, the plaintiff having joined issue on a traverse of an allegation, that "the committee had certified, as the fact was," that the sum of 17,986*l.* was required for payment of the debts of the company:—Held, that the defendant was not estopped from shewing that by reason of this payment of the 150*l.*, the fact was not that 17,986*l.* was required as aforesaid. Wilson v. Butler, 4 Bing. (N.C.) 748; S.C., 6 Scott, 540; 1 Arn. 333; 8 L. J., C. P. 143.

Admission in Defence in another Action.]—An admission contained in a defence in one action cannot properly be treated as conclusive in other proceedings between the same parties, but on a different issue. Walters, In re, Neison v. Walters, 61 L. T. 872. Reversed on a different point 63 L. T. 328—C. A.

Declaration of Contract and Tender.]—When a declaration shews substantially a contract, and a tender in compliance with it, the plaintiff is not estopped from contending for the true interpretation of the contract by the fact that he has also set out in his declaration an alternative case of a tender which would not have been a compliance. M'Connel v. Murphy, L. R. 5 P. C. 203.

E. ESTATES BY.

Agreement to sell Land not Property of Vendor.]—Effect of an agreement to sell land, not then the property of the vendor, but which afterwards became his. Morse v. Faulkner, 3 Swanst. 429. And see Carne v. Mitchell, 15 L. J., Ch., 287; 10 Jur. 909, and col. 466.

J. S., under the belief that he had the fee simple in an estate subject to a life interest in his mother, conveyed all his interest to trustees, for the benefit of his creditors. The conveyance contained covenants for title and for further assurance. It turned out, that at the time of the conveyance the mother had the fee simple, which upon her death descended to J. S. as her heir-at-law:—Held, that though no estate passed by the conveyance, yet the transaction amounted to a contract for sale of the specific estate, and that J. S., unless he could set aside the contract for fraud, was in equity compellable to carry it into execution. Smith v. Baker, 1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 223.

Contract by Trustees under Power of Sale.]—Contract by trustees under power of sale, though by subsequent events it cannot be executed under the power, shall be made good in equity by the effect of the interest acquired on the estate bound by the contract. Mortlock v. Buller, 10 Ves. 315. Affirmed 2 Dow, 518.

Agreement to grant Lease.]—A. made an equitable mortgage to B., and afterwards agreed to grant a lease to C., who had notice of the mortgage. B. afterwards purchased the equity of redemption with notice of C.'s agreement, and took a conveyance to himself:—Held, that B. was bound out of his whole interest to grant the lease to C. Smith v. Phillips, 1 Keen, 694; 6 L. J., Ch. 253.

If a person of age grants a lease, having nothing in the premises, and the lands afterwards descend to him, the lease shall enure by way of estoppel. Sed secus in the case of an infant. Smith v. Low, 1 Atk. 489.

Replacing Destroyed Interest by New.]—A contingent remainderman conveyed his interest to secure his debt; the remainder was afterwards destroyed by the tenant of the prior estate. The remainderman afterwards acquired a new interest in the property under the will of that tenant:—Held, that it was available to the creditor. Noel v. Bewley, 3 Sim. 103.

Conveyance by way of Lease and Release.]—A conveyance by lease and release does not operate by way of estoppel. Stackpoole v. Stackpoole, 2 Con. & L. 489; 4 Dr. & War. 320; 6 Ir. Eq. R. 18. S. P., Loyd v. Loyd, 2 Con. & L. 592; 4 Dr. & War. 354.

Conveyance by lease and release will operate as an estoppel, and where the releasee can have the benefit of the conveyance at law. A court of equity will not interfere in his behalf. Bensley v. Burdon, 2 Sim. & S. 519; 4 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 164. Affirmed 8 L. J. (o.s.) Ch. 85.

Fine.]—Lands are devised to A. and B., and to the heirs of the survivor in trust to sell; though the inheritance be in abeyance, yet the trustees, by a fine, may make a good title by estoppel. Vick v. Edwards, 3 P. W. 372.

Forged Deed of Title.]—S. agreed with E. for the purchase from him of lands sold in the Irish Incumbered Estates Court, but not yet conveyed. Part of the consideration for the purchase was to be a bill of exchange, accepted by a bank. S. forged a conveyance from the Incumbered Estates Court to persons from whom he traced title to himself, and executed a conveyance to W., reciting the forged conveyance, as if genuine. Afterwards, the Incumbered Estates Court executed a conveyance to S., reciting the purchase money to be E.'s:—Held, that under the genuine deed, an interest in the land passed by estoppel to W., and that E. had not a lien for the amount of the bill of exchange. Eyre v. Sadleir, 15 Ir. Ch. R. 1.

Demise of Term on Trusts—Subsequent Devise of Fee.]—The owner of the equity of redemption in a mortgaged estate demised the estate to a trustee for a term, upon certain trusts, and afterwards devised the same estate in fee. The devisees, having contracted to sell the estate to a purchaser, paid off the mortgage, took a reconveyance to the uses of the will and conveyed the estate to the purchaser, who had no notice of the term. A bill filed by the cestui que trust under the demise against the trustee of the term and the purchaser for administration of the trust, was dismissed by the vice-chancellor on the ground that there was no term by estoppel in the trustee; and on appeal the Lord Chancellor affirmed the decision, but without prejudice to any question that might be raised at law, being of opinion that the question of estoppel was a question for a court of law, and that there was no equity against the purchaser if the legal estate was in him. Clemow v. Geach, 40 L. J., Ch. 44; L. R. 6 Ch. 147; 19 W. R. 53.

I. ADMISSIONS, DECLARATIONS AND ENTRIES.

1. Admissions.

a. By Parties Themselves.

i. In what Capacity.

Trustee.]—A defendant may give in evidence the declarations or admissions of the plaintiff on the record to defeat the action, although such plaintiff appears to be only trustee for a third person. Bauerman v. Radenius, 7 Term Rep. 663; 2 Esp. 653. And see Lane v. Chandler, 3 Smith, 73; Duke v. Aldridge, 7 Term Rep. 665; 11 East, 584, n.

Cestui que Trust.]—In an ejectment by a trustee in fee, and by a cestui que trust for life, the question was as to parcel or no parcel; no evidence was offered on the demise by the cestui que trust, but the defendant tendered in evidence, a deed by the cestui que trust (who had been in possession), as an admission by a party substantially interested in the suit:—Held, that as the deed was not clearly and unambiguously against the interest of the cestui que trust, and as it appeared by it that she obtained an advantage under the deed, there was a balance of interest, and her declaration was admissible. Doe d. Rowlandson v. Wainwright, 3 N. & P. 598; 8 A. & E. 691; 1 W. W. & H. 508; 7 L. J., Q. B. 222; 3 Jur. 7.

In order to let in the declarations of a cestui que trust as evidence against his trustee, in an action in which the trustee is the plaintiff on the record, it must clearly appear that the action is brought for the benefit of such cestui que trust. May v. Taylor, 6 Man. & G. 261; 6 Scott (N.R.) 974; 12 L. J., C. P. 314; 7 Jur. 515.

A declaration made by a person who afterwards assumes and is sued in the character of administratrix cannot be used in equity as an admission made by a party in the cause; and this although she may combine the character of cestui que trust with that of administratrix. Legge v. Edwards, 25 L. J., Ch. 125 ; 4 W. R. 71.

Guardian.]—Where a minor sues by his guardian, the declaration of the guardian is not evidence against the plaintiff. Cowling v. Ely, 2 Stark, 366 ; 20 R. R. 694.

Neither are declarations of a prochein amy, made before action, admissible for the defendant. Webb v. Smith, R. & M. 106 ; 1 Car. & P. 337.

Representation.]—The declarations of a party suing as a representative of others, made before he became such, are evidence. Smith v. Morgan, 2 M. & Rob. 257. Contra, Fenwick v. Thornton, M. & M. 51 ; and Huntley v. St. George's Insurance Co., 7 W. R. 51. And see Metters v. Brown, 1 H. & C. 691 ; 32 L. J., Ex. 138, 140 ; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 416 ; 7 L. T. 795 ; 11 W. R. 429.

In an action against several, a statement made by one is receivable, as the plaintiff may proceed by steps to fix each separately. Whitford v. Tutin, 6 Car. & P. 228 ; 4 M. & Scott, 166 ; 10 Bing. 395 ; 3 L. J., C. P. 106.

Substituted Defendant.]—An action was brought against A., who was a shareholder in a company, to recover the price of goods supplied to the company, to which he pleaded the general issue. After the action an order was made under 11 & 12 Vict. c. 45, for the dissolution and winding-up of the company, and B. was appointed official manager. The plaintiff having obtained leave from the Court of Chancery to take proceedings at law, a judge's order was made to substitute B. as the defendant in the action instead of A. ; and a suggestion was entered on the record accordingly, which stated that "the action was commenced and had thence hitherto been prosecuted against A., as a person authorised to be sued as the nominal defendant on behalf of the company :—Held, that acts and declarations of A., while he was the defendant on the record, were not receivable on the trial. Armstrong v. Normandy, 5 Ex. 409 ; 19 L. J., Ex. 343 ; 14 Jur. 579.

Where Defendant not Called.]—Although, where there is no evidence in itself to affect a defendant, the mere fact that he is not called as a witness is not sufficient to sustain a verdict against him ; yet if there is some evidence against him (as an implied admission on his part), then the circumstance that he is not called to explain it may be enough to turn the scale and sustain the verdict. M'Kewen v. Cotching, 27 L. J., Ex. 41 ; 6 W. R. 16.

In an action for conversion of a bill of exchange, it being proved that the defendant had said, in answer to a demand for it, that he could not give it up because it had been burnt, and he not being called as a witness :—Held, that the case was rightly left to the jury, and that their verdict for the plaintiff was justified by the evidence. Ib.

ii. By Conduct.

Admitting Validity of Award.]—A trespasser inclosed and occupied a piece of land, part of the waste at a roadside. Before he had been in possession twenty years an inclosure act was passed, and an award made, by which the piece of land was treated as part of the waste of the manor, and allotted to the owner of the adjoining freehold, who admitted the validity of the award, by entering upon other lands part of the same waste under the award :—Held, that such admission, being against the interest of the person making it, was evidence that the land in question had been part of the waste of the manor, and that, therefore, the prescription by which the trespasser and his successors could claim the land against the adjoining owner ran from the date of the award, and not from the date of the trespass. Redman v. Gery, or Gery v. Redman, 45 L. J., Q. B. 267 ; 1 Q. B. D. 161 ; 24 W. R. 270.

In an action for work, to which the defendant pleads the general issue, a statement made by the plaintiff that the claim which forms the subject of the action was referred to an arbitrator, who found, by his award, that nothing was due to the plaintiff, is evidence against him under the issue raised by that plea. Murray v. Gregory, 5 Ex. 468 ; 19 L. J., Ex. 355 ; 14 Jur. 555.

Requesting Witnesses to make False Statements.]—The fact that one of the parties to an action, who is not himself examined as a witness, has requested other persons to make false statements at the trial, may be proved as evidence against his whole case, as being equivalent to an admission by him that it is not a good and genuine case. And it makes no difference that the party thus attempting to procure false testimony is bringing the action not on his own account, but for injuries done to his wife. Moriarty v. L. C. & D. Ry., 39 L. J., Q. B. 109 ; L. R. 5 Q. B. 314 ; 22 L. T. 163 ; 18 W. R. 625.

In an action by husband and wife, for an injury to the wife by the negligence of a railway company, witnesses were called by the company, who proved that the husband and a clerk in the office of the plaintiff's attorney had joined in requesting them to give evidence in support of their case, although they knew that the witnesses were not present at the accident :—Held, that the evidence ought to be received, as amounting to an admission, by conduct, that the plaintiff's case was not a good and genuine one. Ib.

Statements within Hearing.]—A statement made in the plaintiff's hearing, although not in her presence, is evidence against her. Neile v. Jakle, 2 Car. & K. 709.

The plaintiff brought two actions against the defendant, one for breach of promise of marriage, the other for money laid out in the purchase of dresses at the request of the defendant. The verdict in the former action passed for the defendant, the plaintiff failing to prove the promise. The second action was referred, and in her evidence on the reference, the plaintiff made certain statements in the presence of the defendant tending to prove the supposed promise, and which he was not called to contradict :—Held, that this could not be considered as legitimate evidence against him in the way of implied admissions in the action for breach of promise of marriage. Thomas v. Shirley, 11 W. R. 21.

Receiving Letters.]—Letters making a demand on the defendant, which he did not answer, but in an interview with the writer gave an unsatisfactory account of the demand made in them, admissible against him, though they contain statements of fact shewing how the demand arose. Gaskill v. Skene, 14 Q. B. 664 ; 19 L. J., Q. B. 275 ; 14 Jur. 597.

A letter received from a third person and given by the plaintiff to the defendant, is not evidence against the plaintiff. Cottle v. Champion, 2 Peake, 45.

But letters found in a bankrupt's possession are evidence to shew that he received information that the fact mentioned in the letters took place. Cotton v. James, M. & M. 277 ; 3 Car. & P. 505.

The plaintiff and J. were engaged in some work for which they contended defendant was liable. T., son of J., wrote a letter to defendant, which he signed for plaintiff and J. Defendant addressed a reply to J. Plaintiff admitted having seen it :—Held, that this reply was properly admitted against him. Carne v. Steer, 5 H. & N. 628 ; 29 L. J., Ex. 281 ; 2 L. T. 198.

So a letter from the plaintiff's attorney to the defendant, coupled with the fact that it has not been answered, may be evidence against him. Keen v. Priest, 1 F. & F. 314.

The plaintiff having written a letter to the defendant, which the latter did not answer, the plaintiff's counsel at the trial called for it under a notice to produce, and wished to give evidence of its contents :—Held, that such evidence was not admissible ; but that if by the letter the plaintiff demanded a certain sum, so much only of the copy of it might be read as stated the sum demanded. Fairlie v. Denton, 3 Car. & P. 103.

Sanity of Testator.]—Upon a question as to the general sanity of a devisor, letters addressed to him in his lifetime, by persons since dead, who were well acquainted with him, and found amongst his papers after his death, with the seals unbroken, and in which he is addressed as a person of sound mind, are not evidence, unless it is shewn that the devisor answered such letters, or did some other act in relation to them. Doe d. Tatham v. Wright, 6 N. & M. 132 ; 1 H. & W. 729 ; 5 L. J., K. B. 124. S. C., 7 A. & E. 313 ; 7 L. J., Ex. 340—Ex. Ch.

Payment of Money.]—Payment of money, though evidence against the payer, of the title of the party receiving it, is not evidence against the receiver, that the payer was the party bound to pay it. James v. Biou, 2 Sim. & S. 600.

Payment into Court.]—There is no difference as to the extent of an admission by the payment of money into court under the old practice with a plea of non-assumpsit as to the remainder, and a payment of money into court as pleaded under the new rule, with a denial that plaintiff suffered damage beyond the sum so paid in, and concluding with a verification. Lucey or Lucy v. Walrond, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 841 ; 5 Scott, 49 ; 6 L. J., C. P. 290.

Presence at Meeting.] — In an action by the plaintiffs for work done, as engineers for a railway company, of which the defendant was a member of the provisional committee, the plaintiffs gave in evidence certain resolutions of the committee made at meetings, at which the defendant was present. The defendant offered in evidence a resolution, to the effect that engineers should be employed, but that the members of the provisional committee were not to incur any personal responsibility ; but at that meeting the plaintiffs were not present :—Held, that the resolution was not receivable. Rennie v. Clark, 5 Ex. 292.

On the winding-up of a company a committee of inquiry was appointed, and the defendant had handed to him the minute-book, containing resolutions entered by the secretary :—Held, that he was sufficiently a party to such resolutions as to make them evidence against him. Ashpital v. Sercombe, 5 Ex. 147 ; 6 Railw. Cas. 224 — Ex. Ch.

Mistake in Law.]—The effect of an admission may be altered if the admission arises from a mistake in law. Newton v. Liddiard, 6 Railw. Cas. 42 ; 12 Q. B. 925 ; 18 L. J., Q. B. 53.

The general doctrine, that a party is at liberty to prove that an admission made by him was mistaken or untrue, and is not estopped by it unless another person has been induced by it to alter his condition, is applicable to mistakes in respect of legal liability as well as in respect of facts. Ib.

iii. On what Occasions.

Subscribing Deed.]—The merely having subscribed any paper writing as a witness is not sufficient to charge the witness with notice, unless it is proved that he knew the contents. Harding v. Crethorn, 1 Esp. 57 ; 5 R. R. 719. S. P., Sweeting v. Asplin, 7 M. & W. 172 ; 1 H. & W. 6.

In the absence of evidence to the contrary, there is a legal presumption that a man knows the contents of the deed which he executes. Cooper, In re, Cooper v. Vesey, 51 L. J., Ch. 862 ; 20 Ch. D. 611 ; 47 L. T. 89 ; 30 W. R. 648.

Recitals.] —Recitals in documents are no evidence of what is there recited, though actual possession in conformity therewith would constitute a primâ facie title. Bristow v. Cormican, 3 App. Cas. 641—H. L. (Ir.)

Recitals in a deed tendered but not executed were held admissions by the parties on whose behalf the deed was prepared, but capable of being rebutted. Bulley v. Bulley, 44 L. J., Ch. 79 ; L. R. 9 Ch. 739 ; 30 L. T. 848 ; 22 W. R. 779.

By a memorandum, the trustees of turnpike-roads agreed to let, and H. agreed to take, a lease of tolls, with an undertaking by H. and his sureties for the due accounting therefor. "Witness the hands of E. W. D. and E. F., two of the trustees of the turnpike-roads, and of W. F. and his sureties" :—Held, in an action by the clerk to the trustees against one of the sureties, who was proved to have signed the instrument, that the recital in the instrument and the witnessing clause were evidence against him that the parties who signed were trustees. Willington v. Browne, 15 L. J., Q. B. 23 ; 9 Jur. 971. See Beckley v. Bradley, 2 D. & L. 586 ; 8 Scott (N.R.) 843.

An abstract of title, stating the recitals in certain deeds and relied upon by the defendant when before a master in chancery, in a suit in which he was plaintiff, is admissible against him in an action as evidence of the matters recited without producing the deeds. Pritchard v. Bagshawe, 11 C. B. 459 ; 20 L. J., C. P. 161.

Indorsing Copy.]—The following memorandum, signed by the plaintiff, was indorsed upon the registered copy of the deed of settlement of a company of which the plaintiff was a member, produced by the defendant in an action by the plaintiff against him for contribution towards the payment of the debts of the company : "We do hereby certify that the within-written deed is the deed of settlement of the Universal Gas Light Company, and that, to the best of our knowledge, the particulars therein contained are correctly set forth" :—Held, that the copy was primary evidence against the plaintiff of the contents of the deed. Boulter v. Peplow, 9 C. B. 493 ; 19 L. J., C. P. 190 ; 14 Jur. 248.

Negotiating Bill.]—In a suit instituted against A. and B., to have bills of exchange, which have been negotiated from A. to B., delivered up on the ground that it was a fraud in A. to negotiate them, and that B. was a party to the fraud, the admissions of A., while the bills were in his possession, that he was not entitled to negotiate them, are admissible in evidence. Lee v. Harrison, 5 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 30.

Even if evidence is read without any objection being taken at the time, its admissibility may be objected to in the course of the argument. Ib.

Agreement to Transfer Shares.]—In an action to recover goods supplied to a mine, in order to shew that the defendant was a shareholder, a document was produced by which A. certified that he had for the consideration expressed in a deed, transferred certain shares to the defendant, who on his part agreed to accept them. The purser of the mine stated that those persons only were considered shareholders in the concern, whose names were entered in a book ; that the usual mode of transferring shares was by documents similar to the above ; and that, on receiving it from the defendant, he had entered his name in the book as a shareholder :—Held, that this document was receivable as an admission by the defendant that he was a shareholder in the company. Toll v. Lee, 4 Ex. 230 ; 18 L. J., Ex. 364 ; 13 Jur. 614.

Effect of, in Letters.]—When a plaintiff has not offered himself as a witness, admissions by him contained in letters to a third party may be received in evidence. Steuart v. Gladstone, 47 L. J., Ch. 423 ; 38 L. T. 557 ; 26 W. R. 657.

A letter written by a party is not admissible in his own favour, except as a notice or a demand. Richards v. Frankum, 9 Car. & P. 221.

A letter written by a party may be read against him, without producing that to which it purports to be an answer. Mortimer v. Wright, 6 M. & W. 482 ; 9 L. J., Ex. 158 ; 4 Jur. 465.

So, letters of a party are evidence of themselves to prove a promise to pay, without producing those to which such letters are answers. Barrymore v. Taylor, 1 Esp. 326.

In trover for goods the question was whether the plaintiffs sold the goods to A. on his own account (through whom the defendant claimed), or to A. as agent for G. & Co., who, however, never authorised the purchase. At the time of the bargain A. referred the plaintiffs to B. for inquiry as to the responsibility of G. & Co., the plaintiffs alleging that the reference was required and given as to their responsibility as buyers, the defendant alleging that it was merely as to their responsibility as shippers on behalf of A. The plaintiffs wrote to their agent as follows :—" We wish you to call and see B., and inquire as to the trustworthiness of G. & Co., and also of A., who is making a rather large purchase of goods for the above party, and who refers us to B. ; write by return." An answer was received, but not in evidence :—Held, that the letter was admissible as evidence for the plaintiffs, on the ground that it was part of the res gestæ, and that they were entitled to have the whole of it read and submitted to the consideration of the jury. Milne v. Leisler, 7 H. & N. 786 ; 31 L. J., Ex. 257 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 121 ; 5 L. T. 802 ; 10 W. R. 250.

Executed Agreement for Compromise.]—An agreement for adjusting differences admitted in evidence, notwithstanding the rule that admissions during treaties for compromise of suits cannot be received for the purpose of fixing the party intended to be charged with the debt, that rule not extended to executed agreements. Frogsell v. Lewelyn, 9 Price, 122.

Proposal to Refer.]—Where a proposal to refer was connected with an admission sustaining a plea of set-off :—Held, that it ought to have been received in evidence. Thomson v. Austen, 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 99 ; 2 D. & R. 359.

Before Arbitrator.]—An admission made by a party before an arbitrator may be used as evidence on the trial of another cause, and is not to be considered as an admission made with a view to a compromise. Doe d. Lloyd v. Evans, 3 Car. & P. 219.

Even admissions of particular articles before an arbitrator are good evidence. Westlake v. Collard, Bull. N. P. 233. S. P., Gregory v. Howard, 3 Esp. 113 ; Murray v. Gregory, 5 Ex. 468.

Committee of the House.]—The evidence which a person has given before a committee of the House of Commons is afterwards admissible against him on a criminal charge. Rex v. Merceron, 2 Stark. 366.

During Legal Proceedings.]—So, admissions which a defendant would be obliged to make in his answer to a bill in equity are evidence. Slack v. Buchannan, Peake, 5.

The examinition of a person taken in shorthand when examined as a witness is evidence against him in an action, though he was stopped in giving his testimony, and might have added to or explained what he had said. Collett v. Keith (Lord), 4 Esp. 212.

Any admission of a demand, or a confession to that effect, made by a person when he is arrested, and is ignorant whether he is bound by law to the payment of the demand or not, is inadmissible to charge him. Rouse v. Redwood, 1 Esp. 155.

In an action against assignees of a bankrupt to try the right to the property in goods which have been delivered before the bankruptcy to a bailee for a specific purpose, the declarations made by the bankrupt to the bailee subsequently to the delivery of the goods are admissible, though they are offered with a view of shewing the property to have been in the bankrupt himself. Sharp v. Newsholme, 8 Scott, 23 ; 5 Bing. (N.C.) 713 ; 3 Jur. 581 ; 9 L. J., C. P. 211.

The statements in a special plea on which judgment has been given for the plaintiff, on demurrer, cannot be used at the trial of the cause as an admission on the record by the defendant ; but the case must be tried on the general issue, without any reference to the special plea at all. Firmin v. Crucifix, 5 Car. & P. 98.

Defence in another Action.]—An admission contained in a defence in one action, cannot properly be treated as conclusive in other proceedings between the same parties, but on a different issue. Walters, In re, Neison v. Walters, 61 L. T. 872. See S. C., 63 L. T. 328.

Entry Invalid—Contemporaneous Admission.]—To prove the defendant's admission of a debt due, the plaintiff produced a book containing a written entry signed by the defendant, but which, being couched in the terms of a promise to pay, was rejected for want of a stamp:—Held, that a verbal admission by the defendant of the amount of the debt due from him to the plaintiff, and made before or contemporaneously with his signing the entry, was properly admitted. Singleton v. Barrett, 2 Tyr. 409; 2 C. & J. 368; 1 L. J., Ex. 134.

Accident—Surgeon's Estimate.]—The carriage of P. was driven against the carriage of M., whereby M.'s thigh was broken. On the trial of an action by M. against P. for this, S., a surgeon, was called as a witness for M., who recovered 600*l.* damages against P. S. afterwards brought an action against M. for his services as a surgeon in attending M. after his thigh was broken. The counsel of S. proposed to go into evidence to shew what S. stated as to the amount of his charge for attendance on M. in giving his evidence on the trial of the action by M. against P.:—Held, that such evidence was not admissible. Sutherland v. M'Laughlin, Car. & M. 429.

Previous Belief—Parliamentary Oaths Acts.]—Statements and avowals of a defendant as to his belief in a Supreme Being, and as to whether an oath, as an oath, has any binding force upon his conscience, are admissible in the trial at bar of an action for penalties under the Parliamentary Oaths Act, 1866, even though such statements or avowals were made before he was elected a member of the parliament in which he sat and voted. Att.-Gen. v. Bradlaugh, 54 L. J., Q. B. 205; 14 Q. B. D. 667; 52 L. T. 589; 33 W. R. 673; 49 J. P. 500.

iv. Extent and Effect of.

An admission by a party concerned in matters of fact is stronger than if they had been determined by a jury, and facts are as properly concluded by admission by a trial; therefore, where parties come incidentally before the court, and an incident is admitted, the court may determine it, and hold the parties to their admission, although the court could determine the points adversely; and there is no difference between the parties admitting things proper to be determined by the court in which the admission is made, and an admission of things cognizable in another court, for both are equally binding. Sheffield v. Bucks (Duchess), 1 Atk. 630.

Primâ Facie Evidence.]—In a cause there was no direct evidence of the acts complained of against one defendant:—Held, that an allusion, in the admissions, to these acts as stated in the bill was sufficient primâ facie evidence to enable the court to grant the relief prayed against that defendant, giving him an opportunity to deny those statements. Bell v. Wilson, 6 N. R. 81.

In Writing.]—It is the duty of an attorney in an action to see that all admissions are in writing; and where there has been an express admission made in the usual formal way, the court will not extend it on oral evidence nor imply any further admission from previous correspondence, nor will they grant a new trial on the ground of surprise, merely because the attorneys on each side have misunderstood each other as to the extent or effect, of some supposed agreement for admission. Holford v. Hughes, 10 W. R. 60.

By Parol.]—A parol admission by a party may be sufficient for a cause of action, without proof of the debt to which the admission relates. Harris v. Chapman, 17 L. T. 517.

The plaintiff gave evidence of an admission of the defendant, that he owed 147*l.* on a bill of exchange which had been returned dishonoured:—Held, that such acknowledgment was admissible, though no notice to produce the bill had been given. Fryer v. Brown, R. & M. 145.

In an action for goods sold and delivered, and on an account stated, a parol admission of the debt by the defendant is evidence under the account stated, though it appears that there was a written agreement relating to the goods. Newhall v. Holt, 6 M. & W. 662; 9 L. J., Ex. 293; 4 Jur. 610.

A parol admission by a party to a suit is always receivable as primary evidence against him, although it relates to the contents of a deed or other written instrument, and even though its contents are directly in issue in the cause. Slatterie v. Pooley, 6 M. & W. 664; 1 H. & W. 16; 10 L. J., Ex. 8; 4 Jur. 1038.

An admission by a party that he is in possession of certain premises, is no evidence of his possession on any day antecedently to that on which the admission is made. Tindal v. Whitrow, 1 Car. & P. 22.

Parol evidence of a debt is receivable, although such admission and a promise to pay the same be immediately reduced into writing and signed by the party making it. Singleton v. Barrett, 2 C. & J. 368; 2 Tyr. 409; 1 L. J., Ex. 134.

Parliamentary Agreement.]—Certain landowners had withdrawn their opposition to a bill authorising a railway company to make certain works, in consideration of an agreement in writing, by which the company undertook that the claim of the landowners to compensation should not be barred by the fact that the company did not propose to take any of their land:—Held, that this did not amount to an admission that the landowners were entitled to compensation in any event. Caledonian Ry. v. Walker's Trustees, 7 App. Cas. 259; 46 L. T. 826; 30 W. R. 569; 46 J. P. 676—H. L. (Sc.)

Surrender of Tenancy.]—In an action of trespass to premises which had been held by the plaintiff under a tenancy from year to year, determinable by notice of surrender:—Held, that in order to prove a surrender before the acts complained of, evidence was admissible on behalf of the defendant of oral admissions made by the plaintiff, and made in his presence by his son, who had been acting as his manager, that notice of surrender had been given by the plaintiff. Slatterie v. Pooley (6 M. & W. 664) followed. Martin v. Doherty, 6 L. R., Ir. 194.

Of Balance Due.]—Where the confidential agent for the defendants at A., in rendering his accounts to I., the authorised agent at B., claimed a sum less than the balance, according to the statements of I., and was afterwards allowed by the latter portion of such excess as made up the amount, and which was sanctioned by the defendants:—Held, in a subsequent suit to recover the remainder, that the allowance, as to a part, was not a binding admission of the correctness of I., so as to dispense with all proof by the plaintiff of the remainder being in fact due to him. Farquhar v. East India Co., 8 Beav. 260.

Of Arrest for Debt.]—An admission by the defendant, that he cannot pay, but will give a bill, and that he has been arrested will entitle the plaintiff to a verdict of 10*l.* as there could have been no arrest for a smaller amount. Braithwaite v. Churchill, 2 Car. & P. 341.

Whole Transaction must be taken.] — The whole of the account which a party gives of a transaction must be taken together, and his admission of a fact disadvantageous to himself shall not be received, without receiving at the same time his contemporaneous assertion of a fact favourable to himself, and that not merely as evidence that he made such a counter-claim, but as admissible evidence of the existence of the matter in his discharge, which he asserts. Randle v. Blackburn, 5 Taunt. 245.

The assertion of a party, in a conversation given in evidence against him, of facts in his favour, is evidence for him of those facts. Smith v. Blandy, R. & M. 257.

If a person who has numerous dealings with a bankrupt, on being examined before the commissioners, does not bring his books with him, but while under examination consents that the accountants to the commission shall make extracts from them, these extracts cannot be used as evidence against him, without also reading his examination. Yates v. Carnsew, 3 Car. & P. 99.

Selection by Plaintiff.]—In courts of equity, the plaintiff may select a particular admission; and when that is read, defendant is obliged to prove the other facts stated in his answer by other evidence. Anon., Gilb. Evid. 52. But see Peake's Evid. 56, notes.

Qualified Admissions — Relevancy.] — An admission in a letter of a state of things—e.g. a partnership having existed up to a certain date—accompanied by a statement that it had then ceased, may, together with other facts occurring subsequently, be left to a jury as evidence from which the continued existence of the state of things said to have ceased may be inferred. Brown v. Wren, 64 L. J., Q. B. 119; [1895] 1 Q. B. 390; 15 R. 239; 72 L. T. 109; 43 W. R. 351.

Of Execution of Deed.]—A. having made a deposit of deeds to B., on an equitable mortgage, gave a schedule of the deeds in which he described one as the deed of C.:—Held, that in an ejectment brought by B. against a person who came in under A., this admission by A. did not dispense with proof of the execution of this deed. Doe d. Graham v. Penfold, 8 Car. & P. 536.

The parties agreed to admit in the cause certain facts, in the same manner as if they had been proved by proper and legal evidence, and among others that a certain exhibit was the notice, and a certain other exhibit was a true copy of the lease:—Held, that the notice was not evidence of the lease so as to relieve the defendant from the necessity of calling the attesting witness. Mounsey v. Burnham, 1 Hare, 15.

Held, also, that the admission as to the copy of the lease substituted the copy for the original, but did not place the copy in a better situation than the original, if it had been produced. Ib.

Repeated admissions (even an oath), by a party sued on a deed, that he had executed it, allowed to be explained, and evidence that he had in fact executed a deed, but for a different amount, and mistook it for the deed in question, is sufficient to account for the admissions. Painter v. Abel, 3 F. & F. 518.

Conclusiveness—Evidence of Mistake.]—Held, that a director who had been plaintiff in an action against a stranger, in which the declaration stated an undertaking to have been given by the directors, that in the event of the act for the incorporation of the company not being obtained, they would return the whole of the deposits to the subscribers without deduction, and who had been a defendant to a suit in chancery instituted by the stranger, and had by his answer admitted to the same effect, had not thereby conclusively adopted the undertaking, but might adduce evidence to shew that the admission in the answer was made by mistake. Londesborough's (Lord) Case, 4 De G. M. & G. 411; 23 L. J., Ch. 738; 18 Jur. 863. And see Painter v. Abel, supra.

b. By Wife.

Verbal Statements.]—Where a husband permits his wife to act for him in any department of business, her admissions or acknowledgments are evidence to charge him. Emerson v. Blonden, 1 Esp. 142; 5 R. R. 725. S. P., Anderson v. Saunderson, 2 Stark. 204; Holt, 591; 17 R. R. 681; 19 R. R. 703.

Admissions made by a wife, who served in her husband's shop, and conducted his business in his absence, may be given in evidence against her husband, on an application to pay for goods sold and delivered at the shop. Clifford v. Burton, 8 Moore, 16; 1 Bing. 199; 1 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 61; 25 R. R. 614.

Where a wife carried on, in her husband's absence, the business of a shop, and by his authority attended to all the receipts and payments:—Held, in replevin by the husband, that a statement made by the wife to the landlord, on the occasion of her paying him rent for another person, that she would pay the rent of the shop on a future day, and admitting its amount, was not evidence against the husband of the terms of the tenancy. Meredith v. Footner, 11 M. & W. 202; 12 L. J., Ex. 183.

In an action for board and lodging supplied to the defendant's wife, if the defence is the adultery of the wife, a statement made by her, confessing her adultery, which statement was made immediately previously to her husband turning her out of doors, is admissible on the part of the husband; and so are letters from different men found by him at that time in her writing-desk. Walton v. Green, 1 Car. & P. 621.

Where, in an action by a trustee, founded on an agreement of separation brought against the husband for the recovery of the arrears of a weekly sum which he agreed to allow his wife; her declarations were received at the trial, to shew that she had been living in adultery previously to and at the time the demand was made, and the jury found a verdict for the defendant, the court granted a new trial. Scholey v. Goodman, 1 Bing. 349 ; 8 Moore, 350 ; 1 Car. & P. 36.

Where an action is brought by the orders of a wife in the name of her husband to recover a sum of money taken from her, on the ground that it was the produce of goods she had been concerned in stealing : what she afterwards said in her husband's absence respecting the money, when examined on the charge of being concerned in the robbery, is evidence for the defendant. Carey v. Adkins, 4 Camp. 92.

In an action by husband and wife in right of the wife as executrix, no declarations of the wife can be given in evidence by the defendant. Alban v. Pritchett, 6 Term Rep. 680.

In an action by husband and wife for a debt due to the wife dum sola, any admission respecting it made by the wife after her marriage, is inadmissible as against her husband. Kelly v. Small, 2 Esp. 716.

The declarations of a married woman during coverture, of the non-payment of money lent to her before marriage, are admissible for the plaintiff, in an action against her husband as her administrator. Humphreys v. Boyce, 1 M. & Rob. 140.

Observations made by a wife are admissible in evidence, where she acts as the agent of her husband. Pratt v. Baker, 1 L. J., K. B. 12.

Memorandum.]—In an action against the indorser of a bill of exchange, a memorandum in writing, made by his wife, of the receipt of notice of dishonour at the place from which the bill was dated (he himself not having been resident there at the time) is admissible, after the death of the wife, to prove that her husband had due notice of dishonour. Wharton v. Wright, 1 Car. & K. 585.

Letters.]—After the trial of an action on a policy of assurance in which the widow and administratrix of the deceased was plaintiff, a letter was discovered which had been written by plaintiff, during her husband's lifetime, to his physician as to his state of health, and which (if admissible) was relevant to a plea of fraudulent concealment of a disease with which it was alleged he was affected at the time the policy was entered into. The court refused to set the verdict aside on the ground of the discovery of this fresh evidence, the evidence of physicians at the trial having negatived the existence of any such disease. Quære, whether the evidence was admissible. Huntly v. St. George Insurance Co., 7 W. R. 51.

The court has no jurisdiction to control the discretion of a commissioner as to what documentary evidence he shall require to be produced to prove an act of bankruptcy. But the court intimated its opinion that a letter written by the bankrupt's wife to a third party, in whose possession it remained, though it could not in any way afford direct evidence of the act of bankruptcy (unless it was also proved that she was authorised by her husband to write it as his agent), she not being examinable as a witness upon that point, yet might be ordered to be produced, to be used only as a clue to the procurement of other evidence as to the act of bankruptcy. Groom, Ex parte, Chambers, In re, 4 Deac. & C. 640 ; 2 Mont. & Ayr. 143 ; 4 L. J. Bk. 22.

Maintenance of Child.]—In an action for educating a child, who had been placed with the plaintiff by the defendant's wife (who was her aunt), evidence is admissible to shew that the wife was in the habit of ordering domestic articles, which were paid for by the defendant, in order to shew her agency. M'George v. Egan, 7 Scott, 112 ; 5 Bing. (N.S.) 196 ; 1 Arn. 462 ; 3 Jur. 266.

Answer of in Chancery.]—Semble, the separate answer of feme covert may be read against her. Le Neve v. Le Neve, 3 Atk. 648.

Admissions in the answer of a feme covert, joining with her husband in answering the bill, will not be permitted to be read against her. Hodgson v. Merest, 9 Price, 563.

Lord Chancellor Manners held, that an answer put in by husband and wife relating to wife's property, could not be read against her or the defendant, who claimed under her ; though she survived her husband, and did move to put in a new answer. Sanders v. Allen, 2 Moll. 329.

The admissions in a joint answer by the husband and wife are no evidence against the wife, such joint answer being considered as the answer of the husband alone. Elston v. Wood, 2 Myl. & K. 678.

The answer of a married woman may be read to shew that she has property settled to her separate use when the object of the suit is to establish a demand against her separate estate. —— v. Bailie, 5 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 105.

Reading the answer of a feme covert against her, in matters touching her separate estate. Bailey v. Jackson, C. P. Cooper, 495.

Baron and feme defendants to a bill, the feme must answer, though the answer cannot be read against the husband, but may probably be read against her if she survives. But in no case is a feme bound to answer to a bill subjecting her to forfeiture, though the husband has submitted to answer. Wrottesley v. Bendish, 3 P. W. 238. S. P., 2 Ch. Ca. 39, 173.

And see HUSBAND AND WIFE.

c. By Agents and Servants.

i. Capacity.

Scope of Authority.]—An agent or a servant can only act within the scope of his authority ; therefore declarations made by him as to a particular fact are not admissible unless they fall within the nature of his employment as such agent or servant. Schumack v. Lock, 10 Moore, 39 ; 3 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 57.

The declarations of an agent are only admissible against the principal where they form part of the contract which he has entered into, and is employed to negotiate on behalf of the principal. Betham v. Benson, Gow, 45.

Though an agent may, within the scope of his authority, bind his principal by his agreement, and in many cases by his acts, evidence of his declarations is confined to what is either by the statement itself, or as tending to determine the quality of contemporary acts, the foundation of or inducement to the agreement. Fairlie v. Hastings, 10 Ves. 123.

What is said by an agent respecting a contract or other matter in the course of his employment, which contract or matter is the foundation of the action, is good evidence to affect the principal. Aliter, what is said by him on another occasion. Peto v. Hague, 3 Esp. 134.

In an action on the warranty of a horse sold by the son of the defendant as the agent of his father, a part of the defence being that the son had no authority to warrant, it was proposed to ask a witness whether, on the day on which the the sale took place, the defendant's son did not, in answer to a question put by the witness as to the price of the horse, say that he would warrant the horse:—Held, inadmissible, as being a conversation with a stranger; but that if the defendant's son, in offering the horse for sale, had offered a warranty, it might have been otherwise, as that would have been a statement accompanying an act done in the course of his agency. Allen v. Denstone, 8 Car. & P. 760.

In an action against a body corporate, for negligently pulling down a house which belonged to them, whereby the plaintiff's house was injured, a letter written to the plaintiff respecting the pulling down of the house, by the defendant's surveyor, who had the management of all their buildings, is to be presumed to have been written by him in that capacity, and is, therefore, evidence against them. Peyton v. St. Thomas's Hospital, 3 Car. & P. 363. S. C., nom. Peyton v. London Corporation, 9 B. & C. 725; 4 M. & Ry. 625.

Admissions by the under-sheriff not accompanying an act done in his official character, are not receivable to charge the sheriff. Snowball v. Goodriche, 1 N. & M. 234; 4 B. & Ad. 541; 2 L. J., K. B. 53.

Statements made by the shopman of a pawnbroker, who is left in the shop to answer in his master's absence, can only be received in an action against the master, when they relate to transactions which are strictly within the business of a pawnbroker; and are not receivable if they relate to an advance of money not within the terms of the Pawnbrokers Act. Garth v. Howard, 1 M. & Scott, 628; 8 Bing. 451; 5 Car. & P. 346; 1 L. J., C. P. 129.

If an alteration has been made in the plaintiff's pass-book with his bankers, by some person there, if he inquires why it was done, the answer he receives from a person acting in the banking-house as a clerk is evidence in an action against the bankers. Price v. Marsh, 1 Car. & P. 60.

In an action against a railway company for not conveying cattle to market within a reasonable time, a county court judge allowed evidence to be given of a conversation which took place, a week after the alleged cause of action arose, between the plaintiff and a night inspector at one of the company's stations, whose duty it was to forward the cattle in which the latter, in answer to a question as to why he did not send the cattle on, stated that "he had forgotten them":—Held, that such evidence was improperly admitted, it not being within the scope of the man's authority to make admissions as to bygone transactions. G. W. Ry. v. Willis, 18 C. B. (N.S.) 748; 34 L. J., C. P. 195; 12 L. T. 349.

In an action against a railway company for the loss of a parcel of money above the value of 10*l.*, the issue being whether the loss was occasioned by the felonious act of one of the company's servants, who had absconded at the time of the parcel being missed, it is allowable to call a police officer to prove instructions which he received from the station-master, tending to shew that he, the station-master, had suspicions that the servant had stolen the parcel. Kirkstall Brewery Co. v. Furness Ry., 43 L. J., Q. B. 142; L. R. 9 Q. B. 468; 30 L. T. 783; 22 W. R. 876.

Of Negligence.]—An admission by a servant of a negligent act is not evidence as against his master. Johnson v. Lindsay, 53 J. P. 599.

By Manager of Bank in another Action.]—A bank manager had in a previous action by another plaintiff, given evidence of the practice of the bank in making loans to customers:—Held, that the manager being a person authorised to make admissions on the part of the bank, his evidence might be read on the part of the plaintiff in this action so far as relevant to the matters now in question. Simmons v. London Joint Stock Bank, 62 L. T. 427.

Chairman of Company.]—A shareholder in a company applied to have his name removed from the register of members on the ground that he had been induced to become a shareholder by a material misrepresentation in a prospectus issued by the company. The only evidence of the untruth of the representation was a statement made by the chairman of the company in a speech addressed by him to a meeting of the shareholders:—Held, that the statement was not admissible evidence against the company, inasmuch as the chairman in making it was not acting as the agent of the company in a transaction between them and a third party, but was making a confidential report to his own principal. Meux's Executor's Case (2 De G. M. & G. 522) distinguished. Devala Provident Gold Mining Co., In re, Abbott, Ex parte, 52 L. J., Ch. 434; 22 Ch. D. 593; 48 L. T. 259; 31 W. R. 425.

Partner.]—Declarations of one partner, as to the payment, subsequently to a dissolution, of a debt due to the partnership, are admissible against the other partner. Pritchard v. Draper, 1 Russ. & M. 191; Taml. 332.

Between Principal and Surety.]—A. was clerk to B. from 1829. In 1832, C. gave a bond for the faithful conduct of A. as such clerk. After that B. dismissed A., and, after his dismissal, A. made an admission of various sums that he had not accounted for:—Held, that in an action on the bond, this admission was not evidence against C., as A. was living at the time of the trial, and might have been called as a witness:—Held, also, that it appearing that one item in the admission was of a sum received by A. before the date of the bond, C. would not be liable to the amount of the admission, although it had been shewn to him, and he had said that B. must get what he could of A. and he, C., would pay the rest. Smith v. Whittingham, 6 Car. & P. 78.

Affidavits of.]—In an action against the sheriff for taking the goods of the plaintiff, an affidavit made by the officer under the Interpleader Act respecting the goods is admissible to prove that the officer who seized the goods is the servant of the sheriff. Brickhill v. Hulse, 2 N. & P. 426; 7 A. & E. 454; 7 L. J., Q. B. 18.

An affidavit of an agent cannot be used to prove a fact against his principal, where he can himself be called; but where the principal has used an affidavit of the agent in an application to the court, in which a particular fact is stated, the affidavit of the agent may be used as evidence of the fact. Johnson v. Ward, 6 Esp. 47.

Where a petitioning creditor having ascertained that an agent in his service could prove an act of bankruptcy, sent him for that purpose to be examined on the opening of the fiat:—Held, that the deposition then made was evidence of the act of bankruptcy as against such creditor, in an action against him by the assignees, in which the act of bankruptcy was put in issue. Gardiner v. Moult, 10 A. & E. 464; 2 P. & D. 403; 8 L. J., Q. B. 270.

ii. Letters of.

When Admissible.]—A letter written by an agent or a broker, by whom a contract has been made, is not evidence where such agent or broker can be called as a witness. Maesters v. Abraham, 1 Esp. 357.

A letter signed by procuration is admissible, if unexplained, to prove an admission of the authorship of a former letter. Gauntlett v. Whitworth, 2 Car. & K. 720.

Where a person was in the habit of employing his son to write letters in his name, a letter without signature, but in the son's handwriting, and bearing a postmark, is inadmissible. Barton v. Hutchinson, 2 Car. & K. 712.

Letters of an agent to his principal, in which he is rendering him an account of the transactions he has performed for him, are not admissible against the principal. Langhorn v. Allnutt, 4 Taunt. 511; 13 R. R. 663.

Letters written by an agent in making a contract, which form part of the contract, or of the res gestæ, are admissible against the principal. Ib.

The defendants' agents abroad by their order received money on their account, and stated the fact in a letter to them:—Held, that the agents' letter, coupled with the defendants' reply, by which they acknowledged the receipt of the money and directed its disposal, was admissible to charge the defendants with the receipt of the money. Coates v. Bainbridge, 5 Bing. 58; 2 M. & P. 142; 6 L. J. (O.S.), C. P. 220.

Letter by an agent is not evidence against the principal of a pre-existing agreement, though it may be of an agreement contained in that letter. Fairlie v. Hastings, 10 Ves. 123, 128.

—— From Captain to Owners.]—A letter from the master of a ship to her owners is admissible as evidence against them in regard to the facts therein stated; but the opinion of the master in such a letter is not evidence. The Solway, 54 L. J., P. 83; 10 P. D. 137; 53 L. T. 680; 34 W. R. 232; 5 Asp., M. C. 482.

—— By Deceased Agent.]—Letters written by a deceased agent to his principal subsequently to the date of an agreement alleged to have been made by him on behalf of the principal, detailing conversations with the other party, are not admissible on behalf of the principal to prove that no such agreement was entered into, or that the agent was not authorised to make it, and that the principal never knew of or ratified it. Turner v. Hutchinson, 3 L. T. 815.

A local agent, whose duty it was to advise his principals of all his transactions on their account, wrote them a letter, in which were these words: "I enclose draft of B., which he sent to-day with three large cases to the office. I enclose his invoices for your perusal. He leaves shipment of his goods to your judgment. He will renew . . . I consider him a perfectly safe man, should there be any reclamation. He draws for 75 per cent.":—Held, that this letter could not be used by the principals after his death, to prove the nature of the transaction to which it referred, as it was neither a record of the transaction, which it was the specific duty of this agent to make, nor an entry against his interest. Smith v. Blakey, 8 B. & S. 157; 36 L. J., Q. B. 156; L. R. 2 Q. B. 326; 15 W. R. 492.

Insurance Cases.]—The letters of an agent of the assured in a foreign country, stating the contents of letters from another agent of the assured, are not evidence against the principal. Kahl v. Jahnsen, 4 Taunt. 565.

Letters written to the assured by his agent or correspondent on the continent, are not admissible against him. Reyner v. Pearson, 4 Taunt. 662; 13 R. R. 723.

Where letters between parties shewed that an insurance broker had considered himself as dealing with one of the owners of a ship only, and as having insured for him alone:—Held, conclusive against the broker, as fixing him with an agency for his correspondent solely. Roberts v. Ogilby, 9 Price, 269; 23 R. R. 671.

A letter written by an agent (though not known to be such by the party to whom the letter was written), speaking of a ship as his own ship, is not conclusive against him in an action on a policy of insurance, in which the question of ownership is raised: he may still prove that he is only an agent, and that others are in fact the owners of the vessel. Tulloch v. Boyd, Holt, N. P. 487; 18 R. R. 546.

Scope of Authority.]—Letters forged by the defendant's confidential clerk, purporting to contain an authority to indorse bills of exchange, are not admissible to shew he had no authority to make the indorsement on which the plaintiff sued. Prescott v. Flynn, 9 Bing. 19; 2 M. & Scott, 18; 1 L. J., C. P. 145.

The letters of a person who in one year acted as the agent of a company, are not evidence to affect other persons who were members of that company in the preceding year, but who were not proved to be members of it at the time when the letters were written. Jones v. Shears, 4 A. & E. 832; 2 H. & W. 43; 6 N. & M. 428; 5 L. J., K. B. 153.

Payments were made to A. purporting to be on account of the defendant, who took credit on account of them. A letter was written by the plaintiff to the defendant, which was answered by A. in a letter, stating that the defendant had handed the plaintiff's letter to him. A.'s letter contained an admission of the debt:—Held, that there was evidence of A.'s authority to make the admission. Morel v. Harborough (Lord), 1 Gale, 146.

In an action against an executor for a legacy, which it was alleged he was, by agreement with the legatee, to retain, and to pay interest upon, he pleaded the Statute of Limitations. It was proposed to take the case out of the statute by putting in letters written by the defendant's son, who assisted him in his trade, and received for him money due to him in the way of his business as a shoe manufacturer:—Held, that though this would be good evidence to shew that the son was his father's agent in matters relating to the father's trade, it was not such evidence of agency as would render the letters of the son admissible in this case. Whitehouse v. Abberley, 1 Car. & K. 642.

General or Particular Duty.]—It is not sufficient to make the entry or declaration of a deceased person admissible, that it was made in the course of a general duty to the employer; but it must have been made in the discharge of some particular duty. Smith v. Blakey, 8 B. & S. 157; 36 L. J., Q. B. 156; L. R. 2 Q. B. 325; 15 W. R. 492.

It was the duty of a confidential clerk who managed a branch business of the plaintiffs', as general merchants, to keep them duly advised of all business transacted; in discharge of this duty he wrote them a letter, stating that the defendant had sent three cases to the office, and giving details of the transaction under which they were sent:—Held, that this letter was not admissible against the defendant after the clerk's death, as it was neither a declaration against direct pecuniary interest, nor an entry made in the discharge of a duty to do a particular act and make a record of it. Ib.

d. By Persons referred to.

Competency of Arbitrator to explain Award.]—An arbitrator may be called as a witness in an action to enforce his award. Buccleuch (Duke) v. Metropolitan Board of Works, 41 L. J., Ex. 137; L. R. 5 H. L. 418; 27 L. T. 1.

He may be asked questions as to what passed before him, and as to what matters were presented to him for consideration. Ib.

But no questions can be put to him as to what passed in his own mind when exercising his discretionary power on the matter submitted to him. Ib.

Miner's Jury.]—In an action for insecurely keeping a mining shaft, issue was joined on the defendant's possession of the shaft. The defendant had stated, that if a miner's jury should say it was his he would remunerate the plaintiff. The miner's jury gave their verdict in writing, that the shaft was in the possession of the defendant:—Held, that the finding was admissible, on the principle on which admissions made by a third person to whom a party refers are admissible. Sybray v. White, 2 Gale, 68; 1 M. & W. 435; 1 Tyr. & G. 746; 5 L. J., Ex. 173.

Determination.]—Where a party agrees to be bound by what a third party says, what such third party says is evidence. Daniel v. Pitt, Peake's Add. Cas. 238; 6 Esp. 74; 1 Camp. 366, n.; 10 R. R. 706.

If a person says, "I'll pay you money if A. says it is due," and A. being applied to says it is due, but is dead at the time of the action, what he said respecting the debt is evidence. Ib.

Information.]—If A. refers B. for information upon any particular subject to C., what C. says concerning it, when applied to by B., or his agent, is evidence for B. in an action against A. Williams v. Innes, 1 Camp. 364; 10 R. R. 702.

A. received a forged note from B. and the inspector of notes proved that he carried back the note to B., who said if she paid it away she had it from C., and desired him to inquire of C. about it; the inspector was allowed to state what C. told him, as B. had referred to C. for information on the subject. Broch v. Kent, 1 Camp. 366, n.; 10 R. R. 706, n.

Instructions.]—If a person, on being applied to on a particular subject, writes an answer, mentioning another person, and saying on one occasion, "He is in possession of my sentiments, and will attend"; and on another, "I have written to him, and I refer you to him thereon"; such letters are sufficient to constitute the party referred to an agent in the business; and what he said at a meeting on the subject may be given in evidence against the principal. Hood v. Reeve, 3 Car. & P. 532.

A dispute having arisen between the plaintiff and the defendant as to whether or not the granite which had been prepared by the former for a work which was in the course of construction by the latter was according to contract, the plaintiff wrote to the defendant, "I have seen E., and he has kindly consented to see you on the subject of the granite for Merthyr Tydfil, and I have authorised him to do so, and, if possible, come to some amicable arrangement in the matter." E. having agreed with the defendant that the defendant should have the granite for 50*l.*, the contract price being 121*l.* 16*s.* 11*d.*:—Held, that it was not competent to the plaintiff afterwards to repudiate the act of E., on the ground that he had given him secret instructions not to settle for less than 100*l.* Trickett v. Tomlinson, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 663; 7 L. T. 678.

e. By Counsel.

When Made.]—A statement made by counsel at judge's chambers in the presence of his client's attorney, or the attorney's clerk acting for the attorney, in order to induce the judge to take a step in the cause, is, if relevant to the question in issue at the trial, admissible. Haller v. Worman, 3 L. T. 741; 9 W. R. 348. S. C., at nisi prius, 2 F. & F. 165.

Quære, whether an admission by counsel in his address to the jury, that part of his client's demand had been satisfied, is receivable in evidence if his client heard it and made no objection to it at the time. Colledge v. Horn, 3 Bing. 119; 3 L. J. (O.S.) C. P. 184; 28 R. R. 606.

Authority.]—An order was made by consent in the presence of the defendant, his solicitor, and counsel. Upon an application by the defendant to set aside the order on the grounds that he had never consented to it; that his counsel had no authority to do so; that he had not himself understood it; and that so soon as he did understand it, he repudiated it; the court, being of opinion that the defendant had understood the order at the time it was made, refused to set it aside. Holt v. Jesse, 46 L. J., Ch. 254; 3 Ch. D. 177; 24 W. R. 879.

The general authority, both of counsel and solicitor, extends to the entering a stet processus, and a compromise by stet processus announced by counsel in open court in the presence of his client must be repudiated openly and at once by the client, or it cannot be set aside. Rumsey v. King, 33 L. T. 728.

Proof of Facts dispensed with.]—At the trial of an action counsel made an admission as to the law of Scotland, but the judge did not consider himself bound by that admission and received evidence upon the point:—Held, that as the question of Scotch law was one of fact, proof of which [like proof of other facts might be dispensed with by the admission of counsel, the judge was wrong in going into the matter. Urquhart v. Butterfield, 57 L. J., Ch. 521; 37 Ch. D. 357; 57 L. T. 780; 36 W. R. 376—C. A.

f. By Solicitors.

Fraud of Solicitor.]—Where a solicitor has put in a fraudulent defence for his client without the knowledge of the client, making admissions on which judgment was obtained against the client:—Held, that the court had jurisdiction to set aside the judgment and permit the client to withdraw the defence, and put in a fresh defence. Williams v. Preston, 51 L. J., Ch. 927; 20 Ch. D. 672; 47 L. T. 265; 30 W. R. 555—C. A.

Purpose of Cause.]—A statement made by the plaintiff's attorney to the defendant's attorney in conversations during the assizes, with respect to the nature of the claim in the action, such statement not being expressly made for the purpose of being used as evidence, is not admissible. Petch v. Lyon, 9 Q. B. 147; 15 L. J., Q. B. 393.

The admissions of the attorney in a cause are evidence against his client only where they are made with a view to obviate the necessity of proving the facts admitted at the trial. Young v. Wright, 1 Camp. 140.

Therefore, declarations made by the attorney of a party in conversation, are not evidence against his client. Parkins v. Hawkshaw, 2 Stark. 239; 10 R. R. 711. S. P., Wilson v. Turner, 1 Taunt. 398; 9 R. R. 797.

Written admissions, made for the purpose of a former trial, may be used on a new trial. Elton v. Larkins, 5 Car. & P. 385; 1 M. & Rob. 196.

If the party who made them wishes to withdraw them, he should take out a summons before a judge in order to obtain his permission. Ib.

Where the town agents of the defendant's attorney gave an admission to the plaintiff's attorney, that the printed copy of a private act of parliament should be receivable in evidence, without formal proof:—Held, that it was not necessary to prove the handwriting of such agents, the admission having been made bonâ fide, and under the sanction of the defendant's attorney. Truslove v. Burton, 9 Moore, 64; 2 L. J. (o.s.), C. P. 105. See S. C., 10 Moore, 96.

An admission, signed by the defendant's attorney, consenting to admit the defendant to be editor of a periodical work, is no evidence that he was editor on a day subsequent to the date of such admission. Macleod v. Wakley, 3 Car. & P. 311.

Offers of Conditions.]—Where the defendant's attorney, without his client's knowledge, agrees to settle the action upon condition that the plaintiff's porter makes an affidavit of the facts, the defendant is bound by the affidavit when made. Lloyd v. Willan, 1 Esp. 178.

Offers made by a plaintiff's attorney in the hearing of a third person, to do an act relative to the defendant, which lay within the scope of his authority, are not admissible to affect the plaintiff with such offer. Wilson v. Turner, 1 Taunt. 398; 9 R. R. 797.

Otherwise, if the offers had been made to the defendant. Ib.

Effect of Appearance.]—In an action against the owners of a ship, it is sufficient primâ facie evidence of ownership to put in an undertaking to appear for them, given before the commencement of the action, by the person who subsequently acts as their attorney in defending it in which he describes them as owners, without further proof of agency. Marshall v. Cliff, 4 Camp. 133.

But a letter written to the plaintiff's attorney before action by the attorney who afterwards appears in the cause for the defendant, is not evidence of a fact admitted therein, without further proof that the defendant authorised the communication. Wagstaff v. Wilson, 4 B. & Ad. 339; 1 N. & M. 1. S. P., Pope v. Andrews, 9 Car. & P. 564.

To render criminally responsible.]—A letter written by a solicitor for a client making a claim for a lost parcel alleged to contain valuable articles, is not inadmissible on the ground of privilege in a criminal case. But in order to make a client criminally responsible for a letter written by his solicitor it must be shewn that the letter was written in pursuance of the instructions of the client. A letter by a solicitor written "in consequence" of an interview with his client is not equivalent to a letter written by the instructions of the client, and is not admissible in a criminal case against the client. Reg. v. Downer, 43 L. T. 445.

By Clerks.]—If the clerk of an attorney has the management of a cause, what he says is receivable in evidence, the same as if it had been said by the attorney himself. Standage v. Creighton, 5 Car. & P. 406.

Where an attorney's clerk admitted, on the taxation of costs before the master, that the suit in which the costs were taxed was conducted by his employer from motives of charity, on behalf of the plaintiff:—Held, that the clerk was such an agent as to bind his master by such admission. Ashbourne v. Price, D. & R., N. P. C. 48; 25 R. R. 787.

g. By Co-Defendant.

Bill by the obligee in a bond, who had delivered it up by mistake (as he alleged) to one of the co-obligors, to recover the amount due on it. The joint answer of the co-obligors admitted the delivery of the bond, and that one of them had destroyed it, but traversed the allegation as to mistake:—Held, that declarations made by the obligor to whom the bond had been delivered tending to prove the plaintiff's allegation were admissible against the co-obligor. Crosse v. Bedingfield, 12 Sim. 35; 10 L. J., Ch. 219; 5 Jur. 836.

Two defendants, A. and B., answered separately. A. admitted the possession of certain documents, but alleging that he had acted as solicitor of B., insisted they were privileged from production. B., by a separate answer, denied that he had employed A. as his solicitor. On a motion to produce, notice of which was given to both defendants:—Held, that the answer of B. could not be read in aid of the motion against the answer of A. Blenkinsopp v. Blenkinsopp, 11 Beav. 134. But see S. C., 2 Ph. 607; 17 L. J., Ch. 343.

When plaintiff's case wholly fails, it cannot be aided by the gift or waiver of one defendant, as against his co-defendant. Hollingsworth v. Shakeshaft, 14 Beav. 492; 21 L. J., Ch. 722.

Costs.]—Admissions between co-defendants under Ord. XXXII. r. 2, of the Rules of the Supreme Court, 1883, to which the plaintiff is not a party, cannot be entered as evidence against the plaintiff, and therefore cannot be included in an order for taxation and payment of the general costs of the action. Dodds v. Tuke, 53 L. J., Ch. 598 ; 25 Ch. D. 617 ; 50 L. T. 320 ; 32 W. R. 424.

h. By Executor.

Of Money in his Hands—Order for Payment into Court.]—Admission by an executor, that the whole amount of the property is 40,000*l*., and that the whole is invested in India in public securities, either in his name or the name of the house in which he is a partner, and subject to his disposal, unless some part is in the hand of the said house at interest, which he believes may be the case, not a sufficient admission of money in his hands to order the payment into court of any part of it. Freeman v. Fairlie, 3 Mer. 39.

As against Co-executor.]—Semble, one co-executor's answer to interrogatories cannot be used as an admission against his co-executor. Peek v. Ray, 63 L. J., Ch. 647 ; [1894] 3 Ch. 282 ; 7 R. 259 ; 70 L. T. 769 ; 42 W. R. 498—C. A.

i. By Co-Trespassers or Co-Conspirators.

Trespassers' Motives.] — Evidence of an admission by one of several defendants, in an action of trespass, will not establish the others to be co-trespassers ; but if that is proved by other evidence, the declaration of the one as to the motives and circumstances of the trespass will be evidence against all who are proved to have combined together for the common object. Rex v. Hardwick, 11 East, 585.

Conspirators.]—Declarations of co-conspirators made in furtherance of a common plot, were received against their companions. Rex v. Watson, 2 Stark. 116.

Upon the trial of an indictment against B. and T. for conspiring to cause imported goods to be carried away from port without payment of duties, with intent to defraud the revenue, it was proposed to put in evidence against B. the butt or counterfoil of T.'s bank cheque-book (he having absconded before the trial), which had also been obtained from his counting-house, and which purported to shew that part of the duty of which the customs had been defrauded had been paid to B. :—Held, that this was no act done in pursuance of the conspiracy so as to make the entry evidence against B., and was no more than a declaration or statement by a conspirator to a third party as to the result of the conspiracy. Reg. v. Blake, 6 Q. B. 126 ; 13 L. J., M. C. 131 ; 8 Jur. 667.

Particeps criminis, in the case of fraud, is the most proper person to discover and prove it ; especially when what he so proves turns to his own prejudice. May v. Harman, 4 Bro. P. C. 156.

And see CRIMINAL LAW.

j. Admissions without Prejudice.

Cannot be Used.]—A letter sent by a debtor to a creditor, respecting a debt, which contains in the introductory part these words, "which is not to be used in prejudice of my rights now or in any future arrangement that may be made or instituted," cannot be given in evidence in an action for the debt, for the purpose of taking the case out of the Statute of Limitations. Cory v. Bretton, 4 Car. & P. 462.

If the plaintiff's attorney writes a letter to the defendant asking an apology, and states that he writes without prejudice, no part of it can be given in evidence. Healey v. Fletcher, 8 Car. & P. 388.

An offer of a specific sum by way of compromise is admissible, unless accompanied with a caution that the offer is confidential. Wallace v. Small, M. & M. 446.

A letter from the plaintiff's solicitors to the defendant, which was followed in a day or two by another letter guarding against prejudice to the plaintiff's legal and other rights, was not allowed to be used by the defendant as evidence for any purpose of his defence. Peacock v. Harper, 26 W. R. 109.

Where letters are written "without prejudice" with a view to compromise, they cannot be given in evidence. Hoghton v. Hoghton, 15 Beav. 278 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 482 ; 17 Jur. 99. S. P., Jones v. Foxall, 15 Beav. 388 ; 21 L. J., Ch. 725.

Except in Favour.]—Where a letter is written "without prejudice," although it cannot be used against the writer, there is nothing to prevent the writer himself using it. Williams v. Thomas, 2 Drew. & Sm. 29 ; 31 L. J., Ch. 674 ; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 250 ; 7 L. T. 184 ; 10 W. R. 417.

Replies to.]—Where a letter is expressed to be written "without prejudice," it cannot be received in evidence, either for or against the party sending it ; neither can the reply thereto, though not similarly guarded. Paddock v. Forrester, 3 Scott. (N.R.) 734 ; 3 Man. & G. 903.

And see cases, post, cols. 683—685.

2. DECLARATIONS.

a. In General.

Nature of Act.]—A declaration accompanying an act is not admissible, unless the act itself is admissible. Wright v. Latham or Tatham, 5 Cl. & F. 676 ; 2 Jur. 461.

Declarations against Interest.]—At the trial of an action for an injunction for stopping up ancient lights, it was proved that there was an agreement for the payment of sixpence a year for the use of light, and that, in 1859 (within the period of twenty years), the agent of the owner of the alleged dominant tenement paid the owner of the alleged servient tenement the sum of sixpence, and made a verbal statement that it was for the lights of the house. The agent was now dead :—Held, that this was evidence of payment of the rent by the owner of the alleged dominant tenement. Bewley v. Atkinson, 49 L. J., Ch. 153 ; 13 Ch. D. 283 ; 41 L. T. 603 ; 28 W. R. 638—C. A.

—— And Entries compared.]—There is no reason in principle why there should be a distinction made between the written entries of a deceased person against his interest and his verbal declarations. Where the statements are merely verbal, there is reason for watching more carefully the evidence by which those declarations are proved ; but if you are satisfied that they were in fact made, there is no reason whatever why there should be any distinction between the admissibility of the verbal declarations and of the written entries.—Per Thesiger, L.J. Ib.

In Corroboration.]—Although hearsay evidence is not allowed as direct evidence, yet it may be admitted in corroboration of a witness's testimony, to shew that he affirmed the same thing before on other occasions. Holliday v. Sweeting, Bull. N. P. 294.

On a prosecution for perjury, where, on the part of the prosecution, the depositions of a deceased person were offered in evidence, and upon the cross-examination of the prosecutor's witness certain declarations of the deceased witness, not upon oath, were proved, for the purpose of corroborating the facts stated in his depositions, in a matter material to the defendant:—Held, that evidence of such declarations was not admissible. Rex v. Parker, 3 Dougl. 242.

Possession.]—If a person is seen felling timber in a wood, it is primâ facie evidence that he is the owner of it; and therefore anything that he says, at that or any other time, as to anyone else being the owner of it, is evidence. Doe d. Stansbury v. Arkwright, 5 Car. & P. 575.

A declaration by the party in possession, that his interest was less than a fee, e.g. for his own life only, would be primary evidence that it ceased to exist at his death. Doe d. Welsh v. Langfield, 16 M. & W. 497.

Secus, where he declared that he held "for life interest," that statement being consistent with one or more life interests coming into existence at his death. Ib.

Where there is a right of entry given for an assigning or under-letting, if a person is found on the premises, the declaration of such person is evidence against the lessee of an under-letting. Doe d. Hindly v. Rickarby, 5 Esp. 4.

Knowledge of Circumstances.]—Declarations of a person in insolvent circumstances, tending to shew that he knew of his insolvency, are admissible to prove such knowledge, provided the fact of his insolvency is proved aliunde. Thomas v. Connell, 4 M. & W. 267; 1 H. & H. 189; 7 L. J., Ex. 306.

Intention.]—The declaration of a party is admissible in evidence to prove his intention. Gale v. Halfknight, 3 Stark. 56.

Wife barred from her right to be exonerated out of the assets of her husband, in respect of money raised by mortgage of her estate, and received by him, by telling executor she would not raise her claim; and no difference, whether legacies were paid before or after. Parol evidence of her declarations, admissible to prove that it was not applied for the husband's use, not to prove the transaction itself different from what it appears to be by the instrument, and the other evidence, as that it was intended as a gift to him. Clinton v. Hooper, 1 Ves. J. 173; 1 R. R. 102.

b. Of Deceased Persons.

When accompanying Sale of Land.]—Statements of a deceased vendor, made at the time of sale to indicate the property sold, are, for the purpose of its identification, admissible in evidence. Parrott v. Watts, 47 L. J., C. P. 79; 37 L. T. 755.

The plaintiff claimed, under a surrender of copyhold lands in 1845, to be in possession of a certain piece of waste land within a manor, purchased by him from B., the then tenant in possession, who was also the plaintiff's predecessor in title, and the surrenderor under the deed of surrender. In order to identify the land claimed with a parcel of land described in the deed of surrender as "the common piece on the Mind," the plaintiff stated that at the time of the purchase, B., since deceased, went over the land with him, and pointed out to him "the common piece on the Mind." On objection to this evidence:—Held, that it was admissible as a declaration accompanying and explaining an act. Ib.

In Course of Business.]—Discussion of the rules of evidence relating to declarations in writing by deceased persons made in the ordinary course of business. Pickering v. Ely (Bishop), 2 Y. & Coll. C. C. 249; 12 L. J., Ch. 271; 7 Jur. 479.

Against Pecuniary Interest.]—The only declarations of deceased persons receivable in evidence are those made against the proprietary or the pecuniary interests of the party making them, when the subject-matter of such declarations is within the peculiar knowledge of the party so making them. Sussex Peerage Case, 11 Cl. & F. 85; 8 Jur. 793.

The law does not recognise the apprehension of possible danger of a prosecution, as creating an interest which can bring these declarations within the rule in favour of their admissibility, upon the ground of their being declarations made against the interest of the party making them. Ib.

The declarations of a deceased clergyman to his son, to the effect that he had celebrated a marriage between a deceased peer and his alleged wife, are not receivable, as the declarations of a deceased party made against his own interest, such interest not being an interest of a pecuniary nature. Ib.

Principles on which the written statements of third parties (since deceased) are admissible as evidence, discussed. Giffard v. Williams, 38 L. J., Ch. 597; L. R. 8 Eq. 494; 21 L. T. 575; 17 W. R. 56.

The principle applicable to the admissibility in evidence of the declarations of deceased persons, is the same whether the declaration is against proprietary or pecuniary interest, and whether verbal or written; and a verbal declaration against proprietary interest is evidence not only of the particular fact which is against interest, but also of any other fact contained in the declaration, and substantially connected with the same subject-matter. Reg. v. Birmingham Overseers, 1 B. & S. 763; 31 L. J., M. C. 63; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 37; 5 L. T. 309; 10 W. R. 41.

A deed whereby a mortgagor mortgaged his life interest in real estate under the will of a person therein named is admissible after the mortgagor's death to shew that such a will existed, as the deed amounted to a declaration by the mortgagor against his interest as limiting his estate to an estate for life under a particular will. Sly v. Dredge, 46 L. J., P. 63; 2 P. D. 91; 25 W. R. 463.

Lands in C. were devised to trustees for absolute sale, to purchase other lands at A., and to permit D. to receive the rents of the so purchased lands for his life, with remainders over. D. granted an annuity arising out of certain lands (C. amongst others), and in the annuity-deed recited the will, that the trustees had not sold the lands in C., and that the trustees had permitted him to receive the rents. In an ejectment by the trustees under the will, for the lands in C., D. having been shewn to have been in receipt of the rents and profits during his lifetime :—Held, that the annuity-deed was admissible, as containing a declaration by D. that he did not hold in fee. Doe d. Shirreff v. Coulthred, 2 N. & P. 165 ; 7 A. & E. 235 ; W. W. & D. 477 ; 7 L. J., Q. B. 52.

Declaration of F. deceased, that her husband made a will, and that he thereby gave her a life interest in his property and legacies to others amounting to 8,000*l.* or 9,000*l.*, admitted in evidence as being a declaration against pecuniary or proprietary interest made by a deceased person on the ground that F. would, if her husband had died intestate, have been entitled absolutely to a moiety of a certain sum mentioned in a marriage settlement. Flood v. Russell, 29 L. R., Ir. 91.

Upon the principle of written declarations being admissible, where they are against the pecuniary interest of a person making them, the accounts of a deceased trustee, containing acknowledgments of money received by him on behalf of his cestui que trust, and for which he was liable, held admissible against the cestui que trust. Bright v. Legerton, 29 L. J., Ch. 852 ; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1179 ; 8 W. R. 678.

Parol evidence of declarations of the wife respecting her advancement made during coverture with first husband, admissible against the second. Fawkner v. Watts, 1 Atk. 407.

So also proofs of declarations by a husband, because against his interest ; secus, as to declarations by the father. Ib.

Plaintiff tendered a document in evidence dated 7 July, 1733, headed, "An account of weyers & nettes on the river Blackwater & in whose possession." It was found among the muniments of title of plaintiff, but was not signed by any person. The handwriting in which it was written was not proved, neither was it proved that the statements contained in it had been adopted by the person from whom plaintiff derived title, against whose interest they appeared to be, or that they had been made by his authority :—Held, that the document was not admissible either as a declaration against interest or as evidence of reputation. Devonshire (Duke) v. Neill, 2 L. R., Ir. 132.

—— Of Testator as against his Representative.]—In an action by an executor for a debt due to the estate, a parol statement by the testator against his pecuniary interest with reference to such debt is admissible. Watson v. Sandford, 40 L. T. 39.

Declarations made by a testator are evidence against a person claiming in the character of his administrator. Smith v. Smith, 7 Car. & P. 401.

At the trial of an action of detinue by the plaintiff, as administratrix of her deceased husband, for the recovery of a policy of insurance, effected by him on his own life, evidence was tendered by the defendants and admitted, that the policy had been given by the deceased in his lifetime to his mother, one of the defendants, with words to the effect that it was given to her for her own use and benefit ; and evidence of other conversations of the deceased to the same effect was also tendered by the defendant and admitted. The plaintiff, who questioned the truth of this evidence, tendered evidence of conversations between herself and her deceased husband, tending to shew that the deceased intended the policy as a provision for the plaintiff, or that she should share in it, but this evidence was rejected as inadmissible :—Held, that assuming the policy to have been given to the defendant as alleged and proved by her at the trial, it was no longer the property of the deceased, and any words of his tending to derogate from the validity of the gift were not admissible in evidence, and therefore the evidence tendered by the plaintiff to that effect was rightly rejected on the ground that the conversations in question were statements of the deceased in his own favour ; and that for the converse reason, the evidence of the defendant, objected to by the plaintiff, was rightly received as being admissions of the deceased against his own interest. Rummens v. Hare, 32 L. T. 428.

Of Person who if alive would be a competent Witness—Scots Law.]—See Lauderdale Peerage, The, 10 App. Cas. 692—H. L. (Sc.) Lovat Peerage, The, 10 App. Cas. 763—H. L. (Sc.) post, cols. 552, 553.

Of Person in actual Possession of Land.]—To make a declaration against proprietary interest in lands evidence after the death of the declarant, he must have been at the time in actual possession. La Touche v. Hutton, Ir. R. 9 Eq. 166.

Semble, that the fact of his making a lease of the lands is, of itself, as an act of ownership, sufficient evidence of his being in possession, so as to render admissible against third parties a declaration against his proprietary interest contained in that lease. Ib.

A declaration made by a deceased occupier at the time of planting a tree to the effect that he did so to shew where the boundary of a road was when he was a boy :—Held, to be not receivable. Reg. v. Bliss, 2 N. & P. 464 ; 7 A. & E. 550 ; W. W. & D. 624 ; 7 L. J., Q. B. 4.

By Deceased Tenant for Life binding on Remainderman.]—In order that a declaration by a deceased tenant for life may be admissible in evidence against a remainderman, it must be accompanied by some act done by the tenant for life. Such a declaration accompanied by an act of a third party is not receivable. Howe v. Malkin, 40 L. T. 196 ; 27 W. R. 340.

Of Collector.] — Quære, whether a verbal statement made by a deceased collector of rents at the time of paying over to his employer moneys received by him from the tenants, as to the person from whom he received a particular sum entered by him in the rental, is admissible against that person. Fursdon v. Clogg, 10 M. & W. 572.

Of Tenant as to Rent.]—A declaration or a written entry by a deceased person when occupier of a house that he was tenant at so much rent, and had paid it, is admissible, as a declaration against proprietary interest, to prove the fact of the payment as well as of the tenancy, and so to shew that he had acquired a settlement, under 6 Geo. 4, c. 57, s. 2, by renting a tenement. Reg. v. Exeter Guardians, 10 B. & S. 433 ; 38 L. J., M. C. 126 ; L. R. 4 Q. B. 341 ; 20 L. T. 693 ; 17 W. R. 850.

As to Will.]—Declarations of a deceased person, claiming a limited interest under a particular will of property of which he was in possession, are admissible to prove the fact that such will had a legal existence, and that certain persons were named executors therein. Sly v. Dredge, 46 L. J., P. 63; 2 P. D. 91; 25 W. R. 463.

As to Gift.]—In trover to recover a watch, the defendant pleaded that it was not the property of the plaintiff. It appeared that the watch had formerly been the property of the father of the plaintiff and defendant, who were brothers. The defendant proved in evidence letters of administration of his father's effects, which had been granted to him:—Held, that the plaintiff, in answer to this evidence, was entitled to give evidence of conversations in which the deceased had stated that he had given the watch to the plaintiff. Smith v. Smith, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 29; 3 Scott, 352; 2 Hodges, 130; 5 L. J., C. P. 305.

—— Purpose of.]—A., the holder of a promissory note for 200*l.* and interest, expressed to be for value received, sued the executors and devisees of B., deceased, the maker of the note, for payment, and proved by the attesting witness that B. signed and gave the note. The devisees, by their answer, alleged that the note was given to A., at his request, to secure to him that amount out of the testator's assets after his decease:—Held, that the declarations by B. to that effect in the presence of A. were admissible in evidence, and that A. was not entitled to recover on the note. Fritchley v. Williamson, 7 Jur. 335.

As to Agreement for Purchase.]—On a question between the real and personal representatives of A. (who died intestate), whether A. had actually agreed in his lifetime for the purchase of an estate, the parol declarations of A. in his lifetime are not admissible evidence. Perchard v. Benyon, 1 Cox, 214.

Validity of Patent.]—On the trial of an action for the infringement of a patent, the novelty of which was disputed, the defendant gave evidence that O., then deceased, had, previously to the date of the plaintiff's patent, used a process identical with the plaintiff's, and had produced and sold a product exactly similar to that produced by the plaintiff's patent. The plaintiff called witnesses in reply; and a witness deposed that O. had, on a sale of the product subsequently to that of which the defendant had given evidence, and subsequently to the plaintiff's patent, stated that the article was new, and that he wished it to be kept secret:—Held, that the evidence was inadmissible. Hyde v. Palmer, 3 B. & S. 657; 32 L. J., Q. B. 126; 7 L. T. 823; 11 W. R. 433.

Insurance—As to Health.]—In an action by the husband upon a policy of insurance on the life of his wife, declarations by the wife made by her when lying in bed apparently ill, stating the bad state of her health at the period of her going to M. (whither she went a few days before in order to be examined by a surgeon, and to get a certificate from him of good health, preparatory to making the insurance) down to that time, and her apprehensions that she could not live ten days longer, by which time the policy was to be returned, are admissible to shew her own opinion, who best knew the fact of the ill state of her health, at the time of effecting the policy, which was on a day intervening between the time of her going to M. and the day on which such declarations were made: and particularly after the plaintiff had called the surgeon as a witness to prove that she was in a good state of health when examined by him at M., his judgment being formed in part from the satisfactory answers given by her to his inquiries. Aveson v. Kinnaird (Lord), 6 East, 188; 2 Smith, 286; 8 R. R. 455.

The principle upon which such declarations are evidence is, that, when accompanying the act done, and tending to explain it, they are part of the res gestæ, and therefore admissible. Ib.

The written statements by a sick person to a medical man of the symptoms of his malady are not admissible, although the medical man has given advice upon the faith of such statements. Witt v. Klindworth, 3 Sw. & Tr. 143; 32 L. J., Mat. 179; 8 L. T. 175; 11 W. R. 154.

—— As to Interest.]—In an action by an administratrix on a policy of insurance on the life of the intestate, where the defence was that the policy was void under 14 Geo. 3, c. 48, on the ground that the intestate had no interest in it; the evidence of a witness that previously to the insurance the intestate consulted him about effecting a policy on his, the intestate's life, is admissible as an act, and is not objectionable as hearsay. Shilling v. Accidental Death Co., 4 Jur. (N.S.) 244.

Personal Acts.]—A confession of forgery by a dead witness may be admissible. Clymer v. Littler, 11 W. Bl. 345. S. C., nom. Wright d. Clymer v. Littler, 3 Burr. 1244.

But evidence of the declarations of a man since dead, as to a fact done by himself, is not admissible. Garnons v. Barnard, 1 Anstr. 298.

Evidence at Previous Trial.]—What a dead witness has sworn on a former trial, between the same parties, is evidence in the cause, and may either be read from the judge's notes, or proved upon oath by the notes or recollection of any person who heard it. Doncaster Corporation v. Day, 3 Taunt. 262; 12 R. R. 650. S. P., Strutt v. Bovingdon, 5 Esp. 36; 8 R. R. 834.

In ejectment, A. proposed to cross-examine a shorthand writer as to the evidence given in a former action by a witness who had since died. The former action was an ejectment by A.'s son, who claimed as A.'s heir-at-law, under the supposition that A. was dead, to recover the same land from the defendant's father:—Held, that there was no privity of estate between A. and the son, and that the evidence not being admissible against A., was not admissible for him. Morgan v. Nicholl, 36 L. J., C. P. 86; L. R. 2 C. P. 117; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 963; 15 L. T. 184; 15 W. R. 110.

Evidence given on oath, and subject to cross-examination on a former trial, is admissible in a subsequent action between the same parties, or those claiming under them, if it relates to the same subject, and the witness cannot be called. Ib.

In ejectment, where the question is devisavit vel non, evidence of the examination and cross-examination of one of the attesting witnesses to the will, who, upon the trial of an issue out of chancery between the same parties, and upon the same question, proved the execution of the will, and is since dead, is admissible; and, being admitted, is entitled to the same degree of weight as the vivâ voce evidence of an attesting witness.

Wright v. Doe d. Tatham, 3 N. & M. 268; 1 A. & E. 3; 3 L. J., Ex. 366.

A. being possessed of Blackacre and Whiteacre by the same title, conveyed Blackacre to B. Evidence given by witnesses since dead, in an action between C. and A. respecting the title to Whiteacre, brought subsequently to the conveyance from A. to B., is not admissible in an action between C. and B., as to the title to Blackacre. Doe d. Foster v. Derby (Earl), 3 N. & M. 782; 1 A. & E. 783; 3 L. J., K. B. 191.

In ejectment, Doe d. H. v. R., M., a witness of A., since deceased, was examined under a commission. In a second ejectment, Doe d. H. v. P., to recover the same property, it was proved that before the examination R. agreed to defend the former ejectment for P.:—Held, that on the trial of the second ejectment M.'s deposition was receivable in evidence for P., as the two ejectments were substantially between the same parties, and that it need not be shewn that at the time of the examination H. knew that B. was defending for P. Doe d. Hulin v. Powell, 3 Car. & K. 323.

At Previous Stage.]—Where, upon an issue between parties, the testimony of a witness since deceased has been received, which either of those parties might use against the other, that evidence may be used between the same parties in any subsequent proceedings on the same issue. Lawrence v. Maule, 4 Drew. 472; 28 L. J., Ch. 681; 7 W. R. 314.

Dying Declarations.]—See CRIMINAL LAW, ante, vol. 4, col. 1528.

c. Representative Parties.

Trustee.]—A defendant may give in evidence the declarations of the plaintiff on the record to defeat the action, although such plaintiff appears to be only a trustee for a third person. Bauerman v. Radenius, 7 Term Rep. 663; 2 Esp. 653.

Guardian.]—But when a minor sues by his guardian, the declaration of the guardian is not admissible against the plaintiff. Cowling v. Ely, 2 Stark. 366; 20 R. R. 694.

Nothing in answer of guardian can be read against the ward. Leigh v. Ward, 2 Vent. 72.

Infant's answer cannot be read against him, nor excepted to, and may be amended when he comes of age. Savage v. Carroll, 1 Ball & B. 553. See 12 R. R. 32.

An infant's answer cannot be given in evidence against him, because it is not the answer of the infant, but of the guardian who is sworn, and not the infant. Wrottesley v. Bendish, 3 P. W. 237.

But where a defendant put in an answer to a bill brought by an infant who did not reply to it, in such case the answer was taken to be true, in regard to the defendant for want of replication was deprived of an opportunity of examining witnesses to prove his answer, and he ought not to suffer for such omission in the plaintiff, sed quære. Ib.

Next Friend.]—Neither are declarations of a prochein amy, made before action, admissible for the defendant. Webb v. Smith, R. & M. 106; 1 Car. & P. 337.

Assignee.]—Declarations of an assignee of a bankrupt suing as such, made before he was chosen assignee, are not admissible against him. Fenwick v. Thornton, M. & M. 51. Contra, Smith v. Morgan, 2 M. & Rob. 257. And see Metters v. Brown, 1 H. & C. 691; 32 L. J., Ex. 138.

If A. is seeking to recover possession of a leasehold house in ejectment, and it appears that after his lease was granted to him he became bankrupt, he cannot in anticipation of a supposed defence that the defendant claims under his assignees, give in evidence declarations of the assignees that they have no interest in the lease. Doe d. Colnaghi v. Bluck, 8 Car. & P. 464.

Executor.]—In an action by a special administrator, under 38 Geo. 3, c. 87, the declarations of the executor named in the will, made by him while he was the acting executor, are not admissible against the plaintiff. Rush v. Peacock, 2 M. & Rob. 162.

Guardian of Superannuated Person.] — The answer of superannuated person put in by guardian shall be read against him as an answer of one of full age. Secus, of an infant who is to have a day to show cause. Leving v. Caverly, Pre. Ch. 229.

The court will not permit the answer of the guardian ad litem of a superannuated person to be read against him, nor make a decree against him thereon, but will require the case to be proved against him. Freeman v. Grady, 8 Ir. Eq. R. 137.

Committee of Lunatic.]—Quære, whether the answer of a lunatic by her committee can be read against her, or, after her decease, against her estate. Percival v. Caney, 14 Jur. 1056. And see Stanton v. Percival, 5 H. L. Cas. 257; 24 L. J., Ch. 369; 3 W. R. 391.

d. Testators.

Will Lost—Proving Contents.]—The contents of a lost will, like those of any other lost instrument, may be proved by secondary evidence. Sugden v. St. Leonards (Lord), 45 L. J., P. 49; 1 P. D. 154; 34 L. T. 372; 24 W. R. 860—C. A.

Declarations, written or oral, made by a testator, both before and after the execution of his will, are, in the event of its loss, admissible as secondary evidence of its contents. Ib.

Omission.]—The declaration of a testator will not be admitted to explain an omission in a will, although evidence of surrounding circumstances will. Sullivan v. Sullivan, Ir. R. 4 Eq. 457.

Execution—What included in Will at Time of.] —Oral and written declarations of a testator, whether made before or after the date of execution of a will, are admissible in evidence for the purpose of shewing what were the constituent parts of the will at the time of execution. M. R. made and duly executed her last will on the 1st of August, 1872. On her death, in 1879, the will was found in an envelope in her writing-desk. It was contained in two sheets of note-paper stitched together bookwise. The will was all in the handwriting of the testatrix (with the exception of the attestation clause, which was filled in by one of the attesting witnesses), and, commencing with the first page of the outer sheet, it ran: "I appoint my nephews, R. J. G. and R. G. L., to be my joint executors to carry my will into effect. I appoint my nephew, R. J. G., to be my executor and sole residuary legatee.—M. R. And placed with my will the 1st day of August, 1872." The following page was a blank, and the will was continued on the inner sheet, which was paged 1, 2, 3, 4: "The last will and testament of me," &c., and concluded with the attestation clause on the fourth page. The next, the third page of the outer sheet, was a blank, and the last contained the indorsement, "The will of M. R., August 1, 1872." The attesting witnesses were unable to say what were the contents of the will, or whether it was contained in one or two sheets of paper:—Held, that declarations of intention by the testatrix before the execution of the will, and declarations by her subsequent to the execution, shewing the belief that she had effected her intention, were admissible in evidence, with the view of shewing what were the constituent parts of the will at the time of its execution. Gould v. Lakes, 49 L. J., P. 59; 6 P. D. 1; 43 L. T. 382; 29 W. R. 155; 44 J. P. 698.

As to Devisee.]—Devise of lands "to J. A., the grandson of my said brother T., his heirs and assigns for ever," charged with the payment of 100*l.* "to each and every of the brothers and sisters of the aforesaid J. A." The testatrix's brother T. had two grandsons, each named J. A., but one of these (the lessor of the plaintiff) had several brothers and sisters, the other, the defendant, had only one brother and one sister:—Held, that notwithstanding this circumstance, evidence of declaration of testatrix made some months after the date of the will that she had left the property to the defendant, was receivable. Doe d. Allen v. Allen, 12 A. & E. 451; 4 P. & D. 320; 9 L. J., Q. B. 395.

Fraud.]—The declarations of a testator are admissible when a will is disputed on account of fraud, circumvention, or forgery. Doe d. Ellis v. Hardy, 1 M. & Rob. 525.

Attempted Destruction.]—In ejectment by an heir against a devisee, evidence may be given on the part of the heir of declarations made by the testator, that he had attempted to destroy his will. Doe d. Reed v. Harris, 7 Car. & P. 330.

A will was found, the signature to which had been cut out, but gummed on to its former place. The will had been in the custody of the testator up to the time of his death. Declarations of the testator made subsequently to the date of the will were proved of an intention to benefit his wife by will. No other will was forthcoming:—Held, that the presumption that the testator had cut out the signature animo revocandi was not rebutted, and that the gumming on the signature in its original place did not revive the will. Bell v. Fothergill, L. R. 2 P. 148; 23 L. T. 323; 18 W. R. 1040.

A will, which had remained in the custody of the testator since the time of its execution, was not forthcoming at his death. A draft was propounded, and evidence of declaration was admitted to shew an intention to adhere to the will. On the other side evidence was offered to shew that the testator did not intend to leave his property in the manner in which it was disposed of by his will, and that he had destroyed it by burning it:—Held, that such declarations were admissible, not as evidence of destruction, but of intention not to adhere to the will. Keen v. Keen, 42 L. J., P. 61; L. R. 3 P. 105; 29 L. T. 247. See further, WILL.

e. Of Parties formerly Interested.

Deceased Vendor.]—Statements of a deceased vendor, made at the time of sale to indicate the property sold, are for the purpose of its identification, admissible in evidence. Parrott v. Watts, 47 L. J., C. P. 79; 37 L. T. 758.

Declarations respecting the subject-matter of a cause by a person who, at the time of making them, had the same interest in such matter as one of the parties now has, are admissible against that party, though the maker of them is alive and might be called as a witness. Woolway v. Rowe, 3 N. & M. 849; 1 A. & E. 114; 3 L. J., K. B. 121.

Upon a trial where the question was whether the chapelry of St. H. was a legal parochial chapelry, a case stated by a deceased incumbent of St. H., for the opinion of a proctor, with his opinion thereon, is admissible, on the same principle as a statement of a deceased occupier, which qualifies his estate, is admissible. Carr v. Mostyn, 5 Ex. 69; 19 L. J., Ex. 249.

Upon an issue between A. and B., whether C. died possessed of certain property, evidence may be given of declarations made by C. that she had assigned the property to A. Ivat v. Finch, 1 Taunt. 141; 9 R. R. 716. See Smith v. Smith, 3 Scott, 352; 3 Bing. (N.C.) 29; 2 Hodges, 130; 5 L. J., C. P. 305.

Tenants.]—Declarations by tenants are admissible after their death, to shew that a certain piece of land is parcel of the estate which they occupied; and proof that they exercised acts of ownership on it, not resisted by contrary evidence, is decisive. Davies v. Pierce, 2 Term Rep. 53; 1 R. R. 419.

The declarations of a deceased occupier of land are admissible to shew of whom he held it. Doe d. Majoribanks v. Green, Gow, 227; 21 R. R. 829. S. P., Uncle v. Watson, 4 Taunt. 16; 13 R. R. 552.

Where a party claimed as devisee in remainder under a will made twenty-seven years before, under which there was no possession, declarations by the tenant in possession at that time, that he held as tenant to the devisor, are admissible evidence to prove the seisin of the devisor. Holloway v. Rakes, 2 Term Rep. 55. See 1 R. R. 421.

Statements of a deceased occupier touching his title are admissible generally, without reference to the particular effect they may produce in the cause. Carne v. Nicoll, 1 Bing. (N.C.) 430; 1 Scott, 466; 4 L. J., C. P. 89.

—— In derogation of Rights of Reversioner.]—The plaintiff claimed a right of common by prescription, in respect of a que estate in land, and also by thirty and sixty years' enjoyment by the occupiers of the land. The defendant offered evidence that A., now deceased, while tenant of the land for four years, had declared that he had no such right in respect of the land:—Held, that the declaration was not admissible, inasmuch as it was in derogation of the title of the reversioner. Papendick v. Bridgwater, 5 El. & Bl. 166; 24 L. J., Q. B. 289; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 657; 3 W. R. 490.

On an issue whether the plaintiff had an easement in the defendant's land, the declaration of a former occupier of the defendant's land is not admissible against him. Scholes v. Chadwick, 2 M. & Rob. 507.

Explanatory of Acts.]—Action for entering the plaintiff's garden. The plaintiff was tenant to W. L. of the garden, and the defendant was owner of premises comprising a cottage and yard, which had formerly been part of the estates of the L. family, with a privy in the yard abutting upon the garden, which privy had stood there sixty years. L., who died in 1811, was owner of the garden and the premises belonging to the defendant, and devised certain of his estates, including those premises, to H. L. in trust to sell. H. L. sold various lots, and, in 1812, W. became the purchaser of a lot which included those premises. In 1821, W. built the cottage, and on his death in 1849, the premises devolved upon the defendant in right of his wife, who was heiress of W. In 1823, S. became tenant of the garden, and continued so until 1857. In 1830 he walled up stones against the opening of the privy into the garden, and W. knocked them down. S. complained of that act to H. L., who went with his agent to look at the place, and met there S. and W. Declarations of W. and H. L. on that occasion were admitted in evidence at the trial. A low wall was accordingly built round, and a loose flagstone put at the top so as to form a cesspool, and the privy was cleaned out through the garden until about 1852. Under the will of L., the garden came to W. L. on his attaining twenty-one in 1817. After the declarations were given in evidence, it appeared that H. L. was trustee of W. L. during his minority, and subsequently by his request received his rents. In October, 1861, the tenant of the garden, by direction of W. L., built a wall to prevent the defendant going through it. The trespass for which the action was brought was committed on the 3rd of February, 1863, and the writ issued on the following day:—Held, that the declaration of W. was admissible as explanatory of acts about to be done by him, shewing the nature of the enjoyment of the way. Bennison v. Cartwright, 5 B. & S. 1.

Semble, that even taking H. L. as a stranger to the estate at the time of the conversation between him and S. and W., his declaration was admissible as part of the conversation. Ib.

The acts of successive tenants of an estate held not to be evidence to prove the existence of a certain covenant; but where the covenant was otherwise proved, they were evidence of the construction which the parties interested had put upon it. Sadlier v. Biggs, 4 H. L. Cas. 435. And see Reg. v. Bliss, post, col. 546.

Lords of Manor—Wastes.]—Declarations of a deceased lord of a manor, as to the extent of his rights over the wastes of a manor, are not admissible. Aliter, if spoken of the extent of the wastes only. Crease v. Barrett, 1 C. M. & R. 919; 5 Tyr. 458; 4 L. J., Ex. 297.

Of former Rector as to Modus.]—An answer by former rector to bill filed to establish modus of certain measure of meal, as to one farm, admitting that parish is exempt in consideration of a commutation of meal, is not only admissible but strong evidence to prove a district modus. De Whelpdale v. Milburn, 5 Price, 485.

Deceased Tenant for Life.]—In order that a declaration by a deceased tenant for life may be admissible in evidence against a remainderman, it must be accompanied by some act done by the tenant for life. Such a declaration accompanied by an act of a third party is not receivable. Howe v. Malkin, 40 L. T. 196; 27 W. R. 340.

Person in actual Possession.]—To make a declaration against proprietary interest in lands evidence after the death of the declarant, he must have been at the time in actual possession. La Touche v. Hatton, Ir. R. 9 Eq. 166.

Semble, that the fact of his making a lease of the lands is, of itself, as an act of ownership, sufficient evidence of his being in possession, so as to render admissible against third parties a declaration against his proprietary interest contained in that lease. Ib.

A. had, forty-five years back, inclosed a piece of ground from the waste, and built a cottage on part of it; he died twenty-nine years back; and, after that, his widow and daughter lived on the premises till the death of the former, a month before the trial:—Held, in ejectment by A.'s eldest son, that the declarations of the mother were evidence for lessor of the plaintiff, although she was not in the sole occupation of the premises, and, although she was not on the premises when such declarations were made. Doe d. Pritchard v. Jauncey, 8 Car. & P. 99.

A party claiming to have been owner of lands by virtue of a cession to him from A., since deceased, offered evidence, before any other proof of the cession, that A. actually managed the property, and while so managing declared that he did so in the name of the claimant:—Held, admissible. De Bode's (Baron) Case, 8 Q. B. 208.

Execution Debtor as to Property in Goods.]—On the trial of an issue directed to try whether goods seized under a fi. fia. against A. by defendant were the goods of plaintiff, declaration of A. as to the property of the goods are not receivable in evidence on the part of the plaintiff. Stothert v. James, 1 Car. & K. 121.

A. brought trover for goods, which had been seized at the house of B. by defendant, as sheriff of S., under a fi. fia. against B. A. claimed under a sale at auction, which was stated, at the time of the sale, to have been made under an assignment by B. for the benefit of his creditors. To shew that the sale was fraudulent, the defendant's counsel proposed to give evidence that when the execution went in, and while the goods remained in B.'s possession, B. said that the goods were his son's:—Held, that this evidence was not receivable. Roberts v. Justice, 1 Car. & K. 93.

Bankrupt.]—In an action for use and occupation by the assignees of a bankrupt, it was proved that defendant had said that he had been served with a writ for rent by the attorney of the assignees, but that the bankrupt was his landlord, and his attorney had sent an indemnification for the bankrupt to sign, which the bankrupt had signed:—Held, that the assignees were entitled to give in evidence statements made by the bankrupt, without any further proof of the nature and extent of the indemnity. Arkle v. Wakeman, 1 Car. & K. 516.

f. Of Attesting Witnesses.

Declarations made by a deceased attesting witness respecting the attested instrument, are not admissible, though admissions of fraud or forgery on his own part, and though his handwriting has been proved as proof of the instrument. Stobart v. Dryden, 1 M. & W. 615; 2 Gale, 146; 5 L. J., Ex. 218.

Copy in Handwriting of.]—A copy of a will in the handwriting of one of the attesting witnesses, who was a solicitor's clerk, was found, after a lapse of fifty years, among the solicitor's papers tied up with other papers belonging to a client who was one of the executors named in the will:—Held, on proof of due search for the original will, that the copy was admissible. Sly v. Dredge, 46 L. J., P. 63; 2 P. D. 91; 25 W. R. 463.

Affidavit of.]—A will purported to have been executed in the presence of two attesting witnesses. One was abroad and the other in England. The executors, who propounded the will, applied for a commission for the examination de bene esse of the second attesting witness, who was resident in London. The affidavit alleged no physical infirmity, but described him as an elderly person. The court ordered the commission to issue, but intimated that if it was proposed at the trial to read the evidence taken under it, strict proof of inability to produce the witness would be required. M'Pherson v. Parnell, 40 L. J., P. 30; 24 L. T. 742; 19 W. R. 784.

g. In Questions of Pedigree.

i. Who may make Declarations.

Deceased Parent.]—In a case of pedigree the declaration of a deceased father is admissible evidence of the illegitimacy of his child when the question in dispute is whether the father and mother were ever married. And such a declaration may outweigh evidence shewing that the father and mother were reputed to be husband and wife. Murray v. Milner, 48 L. J., Ch. 775; 12 Ch. D. 845; 41 L. T. 213; 27 W. R. 881.

Deceased Relations.]—Where the object is to connect A. with C., after proving that B., a deceased person, was related to A., it is competent to give in evidence declarations by B., in which he claimed relationship with C. Monkton v. Att.-Gen., 2 Russ. & M. 147. S.C., nom. Robson v. Att.-Gen., 10 Cl. & F. 471.

Correspondence between members of the same family in which they respectively address one another as relatives, is admissible. Hubbard v. Lees, 4 H. & C. 418; 35 L. J., Ex. 169; L. R. 1 Ex. 255; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 435; 14 L. T. 442; 14 W. R. 694.

A conversation between a connection of a family and some of the members of the family on the subject of a marriage supposed to have taken place in that family, cannot be given in evidence without previous proof that the persons with whom the conversation took place are dead. Butler v. Mountgarret (Viscount), 7 H. L. Cas. 633.

Declarations of relations' evidence of pedigree, but inconclusive without shewing on what occasion, what led to them, &c. Whether a physician or servant who attended the family can be admitted as one of the family, quære. Object of taking evidence in secret to prevent attempts to support defective evidence already given; but further inquiry when necessary, not refused. Walker v. Wingfield, 18 Ves. 443; 11 R. R. 232.

Deliberate statements made by deceased members of a family, who, if alive, could have been competent witnesses, are generally admissible, but a statement by one member of a family that B., another member, did a certain act, which act, if done at all, was done before the deceased's birth, and there being nothing to shew what were his grounds of knowledge, and the fact not otherwise being proved, is not evidence that the particular act was done by anyone; and though the statement cannot be altogether rejected, yet it can only be received as mere family tradition. Lovat Peerage, The, 10 App. Cas. 763—H. L. (Sc.)

Declarations of deceased members of the family afford important evidence on questions of pedigree, if supported by entries and documents, but the court has been compelled to reject a case which depends exclusively on evidence of such declarations. Webb v. Haycock, 19 Beav. 342.

On a question of pedigree, witnesses cannot be received to prove the declarations of a relative whose deposition is read. Gordon v. Gordon, 3 Swanst. 465; 19 R. R. 230.

Handwriting of a relation deceased rejected as evidence of pedigree. Edwards v. Harvey, G. Cooper 39.

Connections.]—The declarations of a wife, as to the state of her husband's family, are equally admissible with the declarations of a husband as to the state of his wife's family. This admissibility does not extend to statements made by the wife's father. Shrewsbury Peerage, 7 H. L. Cas. 1.

To prove a pedigree, the declarations of a husband of one of the family are admissible, though he was not otherwise related to the family. Doe d. Northey v. Harvey, R. & M. 297.

In a question of pedigree, declarations of a party connected by marriage are receivable. Doe d. Futter v. Randall, 2 M. & P. 20.

Hearsay evidence of declarations by a husband as to his wife's legitimacy are admissible, as well as those of relations by blood. Vowles v. Young, 13 Ves. 140; 9 R. R. 154.

A witness who deposes to declarations on the subject of pedigree need not be himself a member of the family. Essex (Earl) v. Hodgson, 15 W. R. 960.

Qualification as to evidence; tradition, even upon pedigree, must be from persons having such a connection with the party that it is natural and likely, from their domestic habits, that they are speaking the truth and could not be mistaken; upon that principle, descriptions in wills, monuments, Bibles, &c., are admitted. Whitelocke v. Baker, 13 Ves. 511; 9 R. R. 216.

An ancient mural inscription, giving an historical account of a family, and placed in a chancel which had formerly been used as a burying place of the family, and which formed part of the church of the parish where members of the family had long been resident proprietors, was held to be admissible evidence in a question of pedigree for the purpose of proving the facts stated in the inscription. Slaney v. Wade, 1 Myl. & C. 338. Affirming 7 Sim. 595. And see Kidney v. Cockburn, 2 Russ. & M. 147.

A recital that A. B. is a child of the marriage of the persons therein named, occurring in a deed by which the personal representative of the last surviving trustee of the premises comprised in the deed assigns the premises to A. B., who is not related to the assignor, and whose sole title to the assignment is in the character of a child of such marriage, is not admissible as a declaration to prove the legitimacy of A. B. in a question of pedigree between third parties, semble. Ib.

Party having an Interest.]—Declarations ante litem motam are admissible in questions of pedigree, though the plaintiff's title was that which the party making such declarations would have had if living. Doe d. Tilman v. Tarver, 1 R. & M. 141.

Friends and Servants.]—Declarations of deceased servants and acquaintances, however intimate, are not admissible, as such declarations must be limited to relations, or members of the family. Johnson v. Lawson, 9 Moore, 183; 2 Bing. 86; 27 R. R. 558; 2 L. J. (o.s.), C. P. 136.

Heirship proved as a matter of reputation, by an intimate friend of the family at the time of the birth. Bridger v. Huett, 2 F. & F. 35.

Stranger.]—In proof of a pedigree, the dying declarations of A. as to the relationship of the lessor of the plaintiff to the person last seised, are not admissible. Doe d. Sutton v. Ridgway, 4 B. & Ald. 53.

Bastards.]—The declarations of an illegitimate member of a family respecting his illegitimate brothers are not admissible as reputation. Doe d. Bamford v. Barton, 2 M. & Rob. 28.

Weight of Evidence.] — In pedigree cases resting on the declaration of deceased persons, the court is compelled to regard with great suspicion the evidence of persons interested. Webb v. Haycock, 19 Beav. 342.

In pedigree cases the question usually mainly turns on one link in the pedigree. Ib.

Observations on the little reliance to be placed on the evidence of persons who strive to work out and sustain a particular pedigree. Crouch v. Hooper, 16 Beav. 182; 1 W. R. 10.

In pedigree cases, if one link be assumed, any two persons may be proved to be related; and therefore, in such cases, the difficulty usually consists in properly weighing and considering the evidence relating to the connecting link. Ib.

Where witnesses are once impressed with the belief of their relationship to a given individual, they are apt in time, by talking and discussing the matter, to bring themselves over to a conscientious belief of family conversations and declarations tending to support that relationship, but which never took place. Ib.

Evidence of conversations with deceased persons is not given under the ordinary worldly sanction, from the difficulty, in such a case, of convicting the witness of perjury. Ib.

The absence, unexplained, of the baptismal certificate of the party forming the material link of a pedigree, while those of the other sons are carefully and regularly entered, forms a difficulty almost insuperable in substantiating the alleged pedigree. Ib.

The evidence of "experts," as to the age of a document, and the character of the handwriting, may, in some cases, be valuable. Ib.

Where no Dispute.]—Statements in writing, by a deceased person, of facts within his knowledge relating to the state of his family, without a view to a suit or a claim of peerage, are admissible in proof of a pedigree. Crawford and Lindsay Peerages, 2 H. L. Cas. 534.

The rule as to receiving the declarations of deceased persons in questions of pedigree is that such declarations are admissible if emanating from a deceased member of the family whose pedigree is in question before any controversy has arisen touching the matter to which the declarations relate, and if the relationship of the declarant is proved independently of the declaration itself. Smith v. Tebbitt, 36 L. J., P. 35; L. R. 1 P. 354; 15 L. T. 594; 15 W. R. 562.

In an ejectment the defendant was entitled to a verdict if E. S., deceased, was legitimate or not; a certificate of the marriage of E. S.'s alleged father, J. D., to her mother, was produced by a witness, who said he received it from E. S. The question was then put, whether E. S. made at the time any statement respecting her mother's marriage:—Held, that this question was admissible, it having been proved before, to the satisfaction of the judge, that E. S. was a member of the family, and it not appearing that any dispute was at that time known to exist. Doe d. Jenkins v. Davies, 10 Q. B. 314; 16 L. J., Q. B. 218; 11 Jur. 607.

A deed was put in, whereby E. S. conveyed the reversion of the property to E. J. It was signed by E. S., describing herself as "daughter and heiress of J. D.," and by E. J., who was an undoubted relation of J. D., and was tenant for life of the property:—Held, that the signatures were admissible as declarations, notwithstanding the interest which those parties might be supposed to have in E. S. thus representing herself, it not appearing that any dispute had then arisen. Ib.

A will of a deceased peer, made many years before his death, declaring, and in the most solemn form, the marriage and the legitimacy of his son (the claimant of the peerage), was proposed to be read as a declaration made by one of the parties; but it was rejected, because the date and certain expressions in it shewed it to have been written after a suit to annul the marriage of the deceased peer had been instituted by his father, and because there was nothing to shew that that marriage was not the very marriage in question. Sussex Peerage, 11 C. & F. 85; 8 Jur. 793.

In questions of pedigree, declarations tending to shew the person making them entitled to a remainder upon failure of the issue of the then possessor of an estate, were admissible for the plaintiff claiming under that person, ante litem motam. Doe d. Tilman v. Tarver, R. & M. 141.

A certain paper being found along with other papers relating to the private concerns of the person last seised, after his death, in a drawer in his house; which paper purported to be the will of a person answering the description of his grandfather, made in 1738, but which was found cancelled, and no evidence was given of its ever having been acted upon, or probate of it taken out, is yet evidence of its recognition by the party last seised, as the declaration of his ancestor concerning the state of his family, so as to let in the contents of it for the purpose of shewing that the ancestor acknowledged a brother of the name of Thomas to be older than another brother of the name of William; assuming the jury to be satisfied of the fact that the paper so found was kept there by the person last seised, with a knowledge of its contents, and that no imposition was practised. Doe d. Johnson v. Pembroke (Earl), 11 East, 504; 11 R. R. 260.

As to Place.]—In a question of pedigree, when it is important to shew that the family had relatives living at a particular place, evidence may be given of declarations by a deceased member of the family that he was going to visit his relatives at that place. Rishtone v. Nesbitt, 2 M. & Rob. 554.

Family Writings.]—Family memorials to be admissible as evidence of pedigree must be spontaneous, and have originated before any question has been raised. Where, therefore, the document sought to be given in evidence was in the form of an affidavit, although not sworn, it was held to be ipso facto inadmissible. Hill v. Hibbit, 19 W. R. 250.

In questions of pedigree, entries of births and marriages of members of the family in a New Testament produced from the proper custody, are evidence without proof of the handwriting. Hubbard v. Lees, 4 H. & C. 418; 35 L. J., Ex. 169; L. R. 1 Ex. 255; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 435; 14 L. T. 442; 14 W. R. 694.

Family Reputation.]—Evidence of family reputation is not admissible to prove which of two trustees was the survivor, for the purpose of tracing the descent of the trust estate to a particular individual as heir-at-law of the surviving trustee. Smith v. Smith, Ir. R. 10 Eq. 273. Reversed, 1 L. R., Ir. 206—C. A.

—— Whether Hearsay.]—Evidence by a witness of reputation of marriage is admissible so long as it appears to be of a general reputation; so soon as it appears, however, on cross-examination or otherwise, that the witness is speaking from information given to him by some individual, even of the existence of a general reputation, such evidence is merely hearsay, and, as such, is inadmissible. Shedden v. Patrick, 2 Sw. & Tr. 170; 30 L. J., Mat. 217; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1163; 3 L. T. 592; 9 W. R. 285.

—— As to Age.]—Evidence of reputation is inadmissible to prove a person's age. Colclough v. Smyth, 15 Ir. Ch. Rep. 347; 10 L. T. 918.

Affidavit by father and uncle of time of birth, and of immediate baptism in a church, which had ceased to be a place of worship, and of which neither the register nor the clergyman could be found, and of subsequent baptism for the purpose of adding a name, in the certificate of which (which was produced) the names of the sponsors were by mistake written for those of the parents, an error which was corrected in the margin by the clergyman, admitted to prove age, the certificate of baptism which was produced not being of sufficient antiquity for the purpose. Jamieson v. Vaile, 1 Jur. 791.

The statement in a will of the date of a person's birth:—Held, to be primâ facie evidence of the age in a suit with reference to such will. Valliamy v. Huskisson, 3 Y. & Coll. 80; 2 Jur. 656.

Evidence partly erroneous.]—Observations on traditionary evidence in pedigree cases, and its fallibility. It is not to be wholly rejected because error is proved as to part. Johnston v. Todd, 5 Beav. 597.

ii. Post litem motam.

Inadmissible.]—In a petition for a legitimacy declaration the question was whether a marriage between the petitioner's grandfather and his wife was solemnised before 1784, the date of the birth of C., their eldest son, the petitioner's father, it was admitted that the only evidence of the marriage was reputation and family declarations. In 1800, C., the father of the petitioner, claimed property to which he would have been entitled, but which was then in the possession of his maternal uncle, and stated that his chief object was to establish his legitimacy. The maternal uncle replied that he was ready to defend any action that might be taken, and informed C.'s paternal uncle of the claim which had been made. No proceedings were taken. A controversy had arisen in 1800, between C. and his maternal uncle upon the very question involved in this litigation, and consequently declarations by members of the family, and recitals in deeds, made subsequently, when tendered were rejected as made post litem motam. Frederick v. Att.-Gen., 44 L. J., Mat. 1; L. R. 3 P. 270; 32 L. T. 39.

B. married C. in facie ecclesiæ in 1851, had issue, and died in 1872. In an attempt by A. to set up a previous irregular Scotch marriage, a witness gave evidence that B. told him repeatedly after 1851, that A. was his wife, and not C.:—Held, that such evidence was not admissible. Dysart Peerage Case, 6 App. Cas. 419—H. L. (Sc.)

Effect of the statute 37 & 38 Vict. c. 64 (1874), held not necessary to decide. Ib.

Precognitions.]—In an attempt on the part of A. to set up an irregular marriage according to the law of Scotland, between herself and B., statements prepared by D., the plaintiff in an action against B. as the alleged husband of A., for A.'s board and lodging; which statements were signed—and in one case, corrected by interlineations—by deceased persons, who, if alive, would have been competent witnesses, were sought to be used as evidence:—Held, that they were not admissible. Ib.

What within the Rule.]—In 1806, it was referred to the master in chancery to report who was the proper person to be committee of G., a lunatic, and to certify who was her next of kin and heir-at-law, to whom it was directed that notice was to be given. S., maternal grandmother of G., made a deposition before the master, in which she stated the connections of the family. In 1854 G. died. In an ejectment in which the question was who was heir-at-law, ex parte paternâ, of G., the deposition of S., at that time deceased, was tendered as a declaration of a deceased relative on a matter of pedigree. No evidence was given either way as to whether, in 1806, there was any real dispute as to who was the heir of G. The evidence was objected to as being post litem motam, but received:—Held, that the evidence was properly received; the inquiry as to who was heir-at-law before the master not being in itself a controversy, or lis pendens, within the rule, and it being no objection that the declaration was upon oath. Gee v. Ward, 7 El. & Bl. 509; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 692; 5 W. R. 579.

A controversy in a family, though not at that moment the subject of a suit, constitutes a lis sufficient to render inadmissible a letter written on the subject by one of the members of the family and addressed to another member of it. Butler v. Mountgarret (Viscount), 7 H. L. Cas. 633.

S. B., H. B. and P. B. were, in 1816 (in this order of succession), the expectant heirs of a person who was then childless. In that year S. B. wrote to P. B. a letter stating circumstances respecting a marriage of H. B. in 1811, which if true would have the effect of handing over the succession to P. B.'s children. The then holder of the property did not die till 1846 :—Held, in an ejectment afterwards, by the children of P. B., that this letter was not admissible. Ib.

The admissibility of declarations by members of the family terminates with the commencement of the controversy, and the termination of this admissibility is not effected by any knowledge or ignorance on the part of the declarant of the existence of that controversy; nor is it affected by its being shewn that such proceedings were fraudulently commenced with a view to exclude the possibility of any such declaration. Shedden v. Patrick, 2 Sw. & Tr. 170; 30 L. J., Mat. 217; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 1163; 3 L. T. 592; 9 W. R. 285.

The commencement of the controversy, and not of the situation from which it springs, is the commencement of the lis mota and terminates the admissibility of family declarations. A declaration made expressly with a view to a probable future contest is admissible quantum valeat. Ib.

Not so, however, when made in a prior cause, on the same subject-matter. A prior cause carried on between the same parties will not be a lis so as to exclude declarations, unless the very point subsequently in dispute, upon which it is sought to bring such declaration to bar, was then in litigation. Ib.

A., in 1798, died possessed of property which many years afterwards B. commenced a suit to recover. In 1799, a relation of B. made a declaration, the effect of which was to shew that B. was the heir and next of kin of A. :—Held, that this declaration was not receivable : as the lis mota, or the commencement of a controversy, must be taken to be the arising of that state of facts on which the claim is founded, without anything more. Walker v. Beauchamp, 6 Car. & P. 552.

It is a rule of evidence that the declaration of deceased members of the family, post litem motam, are inadmissible; and anterior declarations are little to be regarded, unless corroborated by other circumstances. Crouch v. Hooper, 16 Beav. 182; 1 W. R. 10.

When a person leaves his native place and goes to another place to pursue a claim to an estate situated there, and on his return tells certain persons what was said to him by persons connected with the family while so pursuing his inquiries; these statements are not admissible evidence. Lovat Peerage, The, 10 App. Cas. 763—H. L. (Ir.)

Declaration remembered after Action.]—Slight reliance is to be paid to the declaration of deceased persons said to have been made before but remembered after the cause of litigation has arisen. Such evidence is usually given with minute particularity, but is subject to no worldly sanction. Webb v. Haycock, 19 Beav. 342. And see cases ante, cols. 533, 534.

iii. For what Purpose.

To Prove Legitimacy.]—General declarations, or the answer of a parent in chancery, are good evidence, after the death of such parent, to prove that a child was born before marriage; but not to prove that a child born in wedlock is a bastard. Goodwright d. Stevens v. Moss, Cowp. 591.

The declarations of an illegitimate member of a family respecting his illegitimate brothers, are not admissible as reputation. Doe d. Bamford v. Barton, 2 M. & Rob. 28.

A.'s title to property depended on his being a child of the marriage of B. and C., and the representative of a trustee conveyed the property to him by a deed reciting that he was such child:—Held, that the deed was evidence of B.'s legitimacy, although the suit did not relate to the property, and the parties to it were not parties to the deed. Slaney v. Wade, 7 Sim. 595; 1 Mylne & C. 338.

In an administration suit, the only question before the jury was whether D., through whom the defendant claimed, was legitimate. The defendant, after producing primâ facie evidence of the legitimacy of D., tendered his declarations. The plaintiff objected to the admissibility of these declarations, and tendered evidence on the voir dire to shew that declarant was not a member of the family. The court being of opinion that the defendant had made out a primâ facie case of declarant's legitimacy, admitted the evidence of the declarations, and rejected the evidence on the voir dire tendered by plaintiff. Hitchens v. Eardley, 40 L. J., Mat. 70; L. R. 2 P. 241; 25 L. T. 163.

P. died intestate, and the Crown claimed his property on the ground that he was illegitimate. The evidence which was relied on to prove illegitimacy was (1) declarations made and letters written by P. whilst alive, asserting his own illegitimacy; (2) absence of proof that the man whom P.'s next of kin asserted to be P.'s legitimate father was alive, at the date of P.'s conception; (3) family tradition and admissions by the next of kin now claiming the property :—Held, (1) that declarations made by a deceased person before his death as to his own illegitimacy were admissible in evidence; (2) that it lay on the claimant to prove that the man asserted by her to be the father of P. was alive at the date of P.'s conception, before it was necessary for the Crown to prove non-access by that man to P.'s mother at that date; and (3) that family tradition was admissible to corroborate P.'s declaration as to his own illegitimacy. Perton, In re, Pearson v. Att.-Gen., 53 L. T. 707.

Where the legitimacy of a child born in wedlock is in issue, previous statements by the mother that the child is a bastard are admissible as evidence of her conduct, although she could not be allowed to make such statements in the witness-box. The Aylesford Peerage, 11 App. Cas. 1—H. L. (E.)

Declarations by a reputed father contained in business letters written by one of his daughters in his name and under his dictation were admitted as evidence after his death of the date of their birth upon the question of their legitimacy. Turner, In re, Glenister v. Harding, 29 Ch. D. 985; 53 L. T. 528.

Godson.]—Family repute is admissible to shew that a legatee was a godson of the testator. Gregory, In re, 34 Beav. 600.

Natural Son.]—On an issue whether the plaintiff was the natural son of H. C., declarations of the brother of H. C. were tendered as evidence of the relationship between the plaintiff and H. C. :—Held, that such declarations did not fall within the exception which admits declarations of members of the family in cases of pedigree. Crispin v. Doglioni, 3 Sw. & Tr. 44 ; 32 L. J., Mat. 109 ; 8 L. T. 91 ; 11 W. R. 500.

Birth and Death.]—A. and B. were married in 1806, and C., their daughter, was born in 1811. A. and B. were dead, and there was evidence that after the birth of C., B. had stated that she had had a son, who was older than C., and had died before the birth of the latter. The christian name of the son could not be ascertained, and there was no other evidence of his birth or death : —Held, that B.'s statements were admissible as a declaration by a deceased person on a question of pedigree, that the death of the son of A. and B., though his christian name was unknown, might be presumed to have occurred between 1806 and 1811, and that a grant of administration should be made, describing him by his surname with his christian name in blank. Thompson, In goods of, 56 L. J., P. 46 ; 12 P. D. 100 ; 57 L. T. 373 ; 35 W. R. 384.

Live Birth.]—An issue had been directed to inquire whether a child was born alive or not. At the trial evidence was received of declarations made by certain members of the family shortly after the death of the child :—Held, upon a motion for a new trial, that the evidence was properly received. The point of inquiry respecting the admissibility of such evidence is not the existence of a state of facts out of which a claim has arisen, but the existence of a controversy or dispute respecting that claim. (The case of Walker v. Beauchamp (Countess), 6 Car. & P. 552, considered). Reilly v. Fitzgerald, 1 Dr. 122 ; 6 Ir. Eq. R. 335.

Marriage — Incomplete Declaration.] — In questions of pedigree, the circumstance that a document containing a relevant declaration by a deceased declarant is not complete for its primary purpose does not affect the admissibility of the declaration. Thus, where the question was one as to the marriage of A. and B., both deceased, a declaration by A. that B. passed as his wife contained in a draft will in A.'s handwriting was held admissible, although such draft will was never executed by A. Lambert, In re, 56 L. J., Ch. 122 ; 56 L. T. 15.

Only received in Questions of Pedigree—Evidence of Infancy.]—The defendant to an action for goods sold, work done and money paid, set up the defence of infancy. In support of this defence an affidavit made by his father, since deceased, in an administration suit, to which the plaintiff in this action was not a party, containing a statement by the father as to the place and date of the defendant's birth, was tendered and received in evidence :—Held, that such a declaration was only receivable in questions of pedigree, and that no such question was raised in this case, so that the case did not fall within that exception to the general rule as to the inadmissibility of hearsay evidence. Haines v. Guthrie, 53 L. J., Q. B. 521 ; 13 Q. B. D. 818 ; 51 L. T. 645 ; 33 W. R. 99 ; 48 J. P. 756—C. A.

Quære, whether, to support a plea of infancy, declarations by defendant's father (since deceased) as to defendant's age are admissible. Semble, per Patteson, J., they are not. Figg v. Wedderburne, 11 L. J., Q. B. 45.

—— Death.]—Where a witness deposed that she had received a letter from her niece A. relating the fact of the death of A.'s father (which was material to the issue in the case), and that the family repute founded on that letter was that A.'s father was dead :—Held, that as family repute is only admissible in question of pedigree, the evidence should have been rejected. Palmer v. Palmer, 18 L. R., Ir. 192—C. A.

h. Reputation as to Boundaries and Easements.

Public or Private Rights.]—Evidence of reputation is admissible in questions relating to matters of public and general interest, notwithstanding that matters of private interest may also be involved in the inquiry. Reg. v. Bedford, 4 El. & Bl. 535 ; 3 C. L. R. 442 ; 24 L. J., Q. B. 81 ; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 208 ; 3 W. R. 205 ; 6 Cox, C. C. 505.

Therefore on the trial of an indictment against the inhabitants of a county for the non-repair of a bridge, to which they pleaded that A. was liable ratione tenuræ to repair a portion of the bridge, evidence of reputation that A. and his predecessors were liable to repair that part is admissible. Ib.

In the case of a public right, in proof of usage, traditional evidence as to it is admissible ; aliter, in case of private rights. Withnell v. Gartham, 6 Term Rep. 388 ; 1 Esp. 324 ; 3 R. R. 218.

Boundary of Manor.]—Evidence of reputation is admissible as to the line of boundary of a reputed manor. Doe d. Molesworth v. Sleeman, 9 Q. B. 298 ; 15 L. J., Q. B. 338 ; 10 Jur. 568.

The seashore between high and low water may be part of the adjoining manor ; and where, by an ancient grant of the manor, its limits were not defined, modern usage is admissible to shew that such seashore was part of the manor. Beaufort (Duke) v. Swansea Corporation, 3 Ex. 413.

—— By Tenants and Others.]—In an action by the lord of a manor against the owner of a freehold estate within the manor, for breaking and entering his close, the question being whether the close was part of the waste of the manor, or part of the adjoining estate of the owner of the freehold estate, it appeared that there were many lands and tenements held of the manor, the tenants whereof in respect of those lands had always exercised rights of common for all their commonable cattle on the waste of the manor :—Held, first, that the want of evidence of acts of enjoyment of the rights over the close did not affect the admissibility of evidence of reputation. Dunraven (Earl) v. Llewellen, 15 Q. B. 791 ; 19 L. J., Q. B. 388 ; 14 Jur. 1089—Ex. Ch.

Held, secondly, that declarations by deceased residents in the manor, not being tenants of it, were not inadmissible on the ground that they proceeded from persons who had not competent knowledge upon the subject. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that declarations of deceased tenants of the manor who had exercised rights of common on the waste of the manor, that the close was parcel of the waste, though not objectionable on the ground that they proceeded from interested persons, were not receivable, inasmuch as there was no common law right for every tenant of a manor to have such right of common; and that the many private rights of common of the tenants of a manor, who had such right by virtue of their individual grants, and as incident thereto, did not compose one public right so as to render evidence of reputation as to the boundary of the waste admissible. Ib.

—— Commissioners.]—In the 13 Car. 1, a commission issued out of the duchy court of Lancaster reciting that the lords of the manors of A. and C. had petitioned the Crown, shewing that the boundaries between their two manors were uncertain, and that suits were likely to grow thereout, for preventing whereof it directed the commissioners to repair to the spot and impannel a jury for the purpose of setting out the boundaries. The return stated that the commissioners had inquired into the matter, being attended by the parties interested, and that a jury of the body of the county had been sworn to inquire and a true verdict give concerning the boundary, and thereupon the commissioners set out the boundary by marks and stones:—Held, that this was a proceeding in the nature of a verdict before a court of competent jurisdiction, and therefore admissible in a question of manorial boundary where reputation was admissible, and that it was not to be excluded on the ground that it had taken place post litem motam, or because it did not appear that any decree had been made. Briscoe v. Lomax, 3 N. & P. 308; 8 A. & E. 198; 7 L. J., Q. B. 1482; Jur. 682.

—— Parts of Manor.]—Reputation of lands being part of a manor and copyhold is good evidence. Doe d. Jones v. Richards, Peake's Add. Cas. 180; 4 R. R. 901.

In order to prove that a particular piece of land is part of the wastes of a manor, acts of ownership upon another piece of land lying along the same highway, but not continuous with the locus in quo, are admissible. Simpson v. Dendy, 18 C. B. 831; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 642—Ex. Ch.

Traditionary reputation is evidence of boundary between two parishes or manors, and this though the old persons deceased making the declarations claimed rights of common on the respective wastes which might be enlarged by such evidence. Nichols v. Parker, 14 East 331, n.; 12 R. R. 542. And see Freeman v. Phillips, 4 M. & S. 486; 16 R. R. 524.

—— Estates in Parishes.]—On a question of boundary between two estates, if evidence has been given that the boundary of the estates is the same as that between two hamlets, evidence of reputation as to the boundary of the hamlets may be adduced for the purpose of proving that of the estates, and the jury may be desired to take into consideration the latter evidence if they are satisfied with the first. Thomas v. Jenkins, 1 N. & P. 587; 6 A. & E. 525; 6 L. J., K. B. 163; 1 Jur. 261.

Where, in trespass, the question was, whether certain land was in the parish of A. or parish of B., the land in B. being tithe-free:—Held, that ancient leases granted by the ancestor of the plaintiff's landlord, in which the land was described as being in the parish of B., were admissible as evidence of reputation that the land was in that parish. Plaxton v. Dare, 10 B. & C. 17; 5 M. & Ry. 1; 8 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 98.

Boundary of Counties.]—Reputation that a river was the boundary between two counties is some evidence that the land on one side of the existing stream belonged to the county on that side. Ford v. Lacy, 2 F. & F. 354.

—— Entries in Book of Owner.]—In ejectment to recover a house and premises forming part of twenty-two acres of land alleged to be parcel of the manor of H., the lessor of the plaintiff, who sought to trace his title through C. in order to prove a lease to H., and assignments by the latter to P., and by P. to C., and that the land in question was parcel of that manor, tendered in evidence an ancient book, found in the muniment-room of the family to whom, at the supposed date of that book, the reversion of the manor belonged. This book, amongst other entries and receipts contended to be in the handwriting of a person suggested to be the steward of the property, contained an entry dated 1610, which purported to be a memorandum of the terms of certain leases and deeds. It commenced with a lease from S. to H. from 1570, for fifty-one years, of land, including the premises in question, describing them as parcel of the manor of H., and stated the recitals of that lease as shewing that the lord of the manor of H. had in 1559 granted a lease for one hundred years to L., and that L. had underlet to S. The entry then added that H. had assigned to P., and P.'s widow to C., who claimed ten years yet to come in the premises. There was no proof, independent of the entry, of the existence of such a lease from S. to H.:—Held, that the entry was not admissible upon the ground of reputation, nor as an entry made in the course of business, nor as secondary evidence of the lease of which it purported to state the effect. Witteomb v. Padwick, 4 H. L. Cas. 425. Affirming 6 Ex. 601; 20 L. J., Ex. 297; 15 Jur. 778—Ex. Ch.

Two Estates.]—Evidence of reputation of a boundary between two estates was rejected. Clothier v. Chapman, 14 East, 331, n.; 12 R. R. 543.

—— Reputation as to Facts.]—To an action for cutting down and converting trees which the defendant justified as growing upon his soil and freehold, the plaintiff replied that the trees were his freehold and not the freehold of the defendant; and this was held to be proved by shewing that they grew on a certain woody belt fifteen feet wide, which surrounded the plaintiff's land, but was undivided by any fences from the several closes adjoining, of which it formed part, belonging to different owners; and that, from time to time, the plaintiff and his ancestors, at their pleasure, cut down for their own use the trees growing within the belt; and that the several owners of the different closes inclosing the belt never felled trees there, though they felled them in other parts of the same closes, and that when they made sale of their estates the trees in the belt were never valued by their agents, because they were reputed and considered to belong to the plaintiff and his ancestors, in which the several owners acquiesced. Stanley v. White, 14 East, 332; 12 R. R. 544.

Evidence that the tenants of the defendant's estate for thirty years and upwards had publicly and without interruption from the lord, and with his knowledge, cut and sold the planted wood on the estate in large quantities, is admissible; but evidence of reputation that the tenants of the defendant's estate had the right of cutting and selling planted wood, is not admissible. Blackett v. Lowes, 2 M. & S. 494; 15 R. R. 324.

Where a person, between fifty and sixty years ago, devised land to his son for life, remainder to his grandson for life, remainder to the heirs of the body of the grandson, remainder to the lessor of the plaintiff in tail; between whom and the devisee in fee of the son the question was whether the land in dispute, which had been occupied by the son in the lifetime of the testator, was part of the entailed estate, or had been acquired by his own purchase; evidence of reputation that the land had belonged to S., and was purchased of him by the first testator, is not admissible, though coupled with corroborative parol evidence that the land had belonged to S. before the occupation of it by the son, and also by a deed of conveyance of another farm in the same place, from the first testator to a younger son, about the same period, in which it was recited that the land thereby conveyed had been then lately purchased by the testator from S. Doe d. Didsbury v. Thomas, 14 East, 323; 12 R. R. 533.

Sheep-walk.]—Evidence of reputation is admissible on a question as to private rights, viz. whether a place is or is not parcel of a sheep-walk. Davis v. Lewis, 2 Chit. 535.

Public Rights—Common.]—Evidence of reputation is admissible to prove a right of common pur cause de vicinage. Pritchard v. Powell, 15 L. J., Q. B. 166; 10 Jur. 154.

Trespass quare clausum fregit; plea of prescriptive right of common over the locus in quo at all times for his cattle levant and couchant; replication prescribing in right of his messuage to use the locus in quo for tillage with corn, and until the taking in of the corn, to hold and enjoy the same in every year:—Held, that many persons besides the defendant having a right of common over the locus in quo, evidence of reputation as to the right claimed by the plaintiff was admissible: a foundation being first laid by evidence of the enjoyment of such right: and that the plaintiff's right might legally exist as a qualification of the defendant's right, and was not repugnant to it. Weeks v. Sparke, 1 M. & S. 680; 14 R. R. 546.

—— Free Warren.]—Reputation is admissible evidence of a claim of free warren by prescription over an entire manor. Carnarron (Earl) v. Villebois, 13 M. & W. 313; 14 L. J., Ex. 233.

On the same ground, the declarations of deceased copyholders, as to the existence of the franchise over all the copyholds, is admissible for the like purpose. Ib.

—— Mines and Minerals.]—Upon a question whether the lord of a manor was entitled to the coals under a freehold tenement within the manor, it is competent to him to shew by parol evidence that there was a known distinction within the manor between old and new land, and that in fact the plaintiff's lands lay within the boundary of the new land; and also to shew by evidence of general reputation, as well as acts of taking coal under the lands of other freeholders within the same boundary, that the right to the coals under the plaintiff's lands was in the lord. Barnes v. Mawson, 1 M. & S. 77; 14 R. R. 397.

Quære, whether general evidence of reputation as to a prescriptive right of digging stones on the lord's waste, annexed to a particular estate, is admissible. Two judges against two; but one of those who held the affirmative thought it required other evidence of the right to be first laid as a foundation: it seems, however, that such evidence may be given as to a particular custom, though not as to a private prescription; by three to one. Morewood v. Wood, 14 East, 327; 12 R. R. 537.

—— Fact—Inference.]—Indictment for obstructing a highway. A witness stated, that about forty years before a deceased occupier of land over which the road passed, planted a willow near the road. The witness was then asked what the occupier said when he planted the willow. The witness answered, that the occupier said that he planted the willow to shew where the boundary of the road was when he was a boy:—Held, that the statement of the occupier was not receivable, on the ground that it was evidence of reputation, nor as a declaration accompanying an act done, nor as a declaration against the interest of the party making it. Reg. v. Bliss, 2 N. & P. 464; 7 A. & E. 550; W. W. & D. 624; 7 L. J., Q. B. 4.

Tolls.]—An old deed between a public body claiming tolls, and others liable thereto, regulating the amount of payment, is evidence in the nature of reputation of the existence of the tolls. Brett v. Beales, M. & M. 416. See 31 R. R. 744.

Repair of Roads.]—A document drawn up at a meeting of the inhabitants of a township, and signed by them under a resolution to resist the repairs of a road, is evidence of reputation. Barraclough v. Johnson, 3 N. & P. 233; 8 A. & E. 99; 7 L. J., Q. B. 172; 2 Jur. 839.

Landing-place.]—On an issue joined, whether a certain place situate on the bank of a river is a public landing-place for all the king's subjects, evidence may be given of reputation that it is not a public landing-place. Drinkwater v. Porter, 7 Car. & P. 181.

Ferry.]—A right of ferry is a matter in which the public are interested, and as to which, therefore, reputation is evidence. Pim v. Curell, 6 M. & W. 234.

Custom of Descent in Manors.]—Reputation of the custom of a manor, that, in default of sons, the eldest daughter, and, in default also of daughters, the eldest sister, and, in case of the death of all, the descendants of the eldest daughter or sister respectively of the person last seised, should take, is proper to be left to the jury, to prove the existence of such a custom as applied to a great nephew (the grandson of an eldest sister) of the person last seised: although the instances in which it was proved to have been put in use, extended no further than those of the eldest daughter and eldest sister, and the son of an eldest sister. The existence of such extended custom in adjacent manors seems to be no evidence of the custom in the particular manor. Doe d. Foster v. Sisson, 12 East, 62.

Rights of Chapel.]—Upon a trial where the question was, whether the chapelry of St. H. was a legal parochial chapelry:—Held, that the statement of a witness that he had heard from a former incumbent of St. H. that the people of four townships and another parish came to the chapelry was admissible, inasmuch as the rights of the chapel in question were sufficiently of a public nature to make reputation admissible. Carr v. Mostyn, 5 Ex. 69; 19 L. J., Ex. 249.

An allegation in an action for a false return to a mandamus, of a custom of payment by the chapelwardens of A. to the churchwardens of B., may be supported by evidence of a custom of payment to officers acting only for the township of B., not co-extensive with the parish of B., but who have always been described as the churchwardens of B. Stead v. Heaton, 4 Term Rep. 669.

Several Fishery.]—In an action for injuring the plaintiff's reversionary interest in a several fishery in an estuary of the sea, and in the soil of the bottom of the sea, both in the possession of F. as tenant, issues were taken on the plaintiff's right to the fishery and ownership of the soil. The controversy was, whether the soil belonged to the plaintiff or to G. The plaintiff gave in evidence proceedings in an action by F. against G. One count in such action was, for injuring F.'s fishery by tearing up the soil, described as being the soil of the now plaintiff, and thereby destroying fish. To this there was a plea of not guilty. The amount of damages was referred, and the arbitrator awarded nominal damages. It was proved that the act complained of in that action was committed in part of the same estuary, and that the soil there was claimed by the same title as the soil which was the subject of the present action, and that the defendant in the present action became tenant to G. subsequently to the award. The proceedings were admitted, and the plaintiff had a verdict: —Held, that they were improperly admitted, the award not being evidence of reputation, and the proceedings not being admissible for the plaintiff, who was not a party, or shewn to be privy to F., though the defendant was privy to G. Wenman (Lady) v. Mackenzie, 5 El. & Bl. 447; 25 L. J., Q. B. 44; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 1015; 3 W. R. 626.

Non-existence of Rights over Waste.]—The lord of a manor contracted to sell part of the waste, and furnished a statutory declaration that to the best of his information and belief no copyholder or free tenant had exercised any right of common for forty years and upwards, and that he did not know or believe that any copyholder or free tenant existed, and that no quit rents had been paid or services rendered or court baron held for forty, or, as the declarant believed, for sixty years and upwards. The means of knowledge of the declarant were not questioned; and he offered to add to his statutory declaration a statement negativing the existence of any commonable rights over the waste:—Held, that the title could be forced on the purchaser. Bridges and McRae's Contract, In re, 30 W. R. 539.

Farm Modus.]—Evidence of reputation as to the payment of a farm modus is inadmissible, on the ground that hearsay evidence is not admissible on a question of private right. And therefore, and in obedience to this rule, the evidence of old persons, who deposed to having heard their parents and relations, and other persons, since dead, state that a certain farm modus was payable in respect of a particular farm, was rejected. Lonsdale v. Heaton, Younge, 58.

—— Reputation of Fact.]—On an issue to try whether a farm modus of 2*l.* 19*s.* 8*d.* was payable for a certain farm, a former occupier of the farm cannot be asked what he has heard his deceased father say respecting this modus, although his father had also occupied the farm; because this would be evidence of the reputation of a fact. Wells v. Jesus College, Oxford, 7 Car. & P. 284.

i. Reputation as to Individuals.

Character.]—In an action for falsely representing that W., a tradesman, was trustworthy, the defendant called as a witness his counterman, who was acquainted with the transactions between the defendant and W., and asked him: "Was W. at the time of the representation trustworthy, to your belief?" The defendant also called four tradesmen of the same town, who were asked as to the general reputation of W. for trustworthiness:—Held, that the evidence was admissible. Sheen v. Bumpstead, 2 H. & C. 193; 32 L. J., Ex. 271; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 242; 8 L. T. 832; 11 W. R. 734—Ex. Ch.

Action for a libel alleging that the plaintiff, a theatrical critic, had endeavoured to extort money by threatening to publish defamatory matter concerning a deceased actress. Defence: that the allegation was true in substance and fact:—Held, that evidence of rumours before the publication of the libel that the plaintiff had committed the offences charged in it, and evidence of particular facts and circumstances tending to shew the misconduct of the plaintiff as a theatrical critic, could not be admitted in reduction of damages. Scott v. Sampson, 51 L. J., Q. B. 380; 8 Q. B. D. 491; 46 L. T. 412; 30 W. R. 541; 46 J. P. 408.

Sanity.]—Evidence of the general reputation of the insanity of a person in the neighbourhood in which he resided is inadmissible to prove that a person was cognisant of that fact. Greenslade v. Dare, 20 Beav. 284.

Age.]—Evidence of reputation is inadmissible to prove a person's age. Colclough v. Smyth, 15 Ir. R. Ch. 347; 10 L. T. 918.

Live Birth.]—The evidence of a father claiming an estate for life as tenant by the curtesy will be considered sufficient proof that his child was born alive, when it was acquiesced in and acted upon by the father of the wife, who was residing in the house. Jones v. Ricketts, 31 L. J., Ch. 753; 7 L. T. 43; 10 W. R. 576.

Settlement Cases.]—Hearsay evidence of the declaration of a deceased father, as to the place of birth of his bastard child, is not admissible to prove the birth-settlement of such child. Rex v. Erith, 8 East, 539. S. P., Reg. v. Rishworth, 1 G. & D. 597; 2 Q. B. 476; 11 L. J., M. C. 34.

Evidence of the declaration of a deceased parent as to the place of birth, or place of baptism, of the child is inadmissible. Rider v. Malbon, 8 L. J. (o.s.) M. C. 127.

A pauper's statement of what he has heard and believes as to the place of his birth, is within the rule excluding hearsay evidence, and insufficient to support an order for his removal. Reg. v. Lydeard St. Lawrence, 1 G. & D. 191; 11 A. & E. 616; 10 L. J., M. C. 147; 6 Jur. 32.

3. ENTRIES.

a. Of Deceased Persons Generally.

Admissible for what Purposes.]—When an entry in the handwriting of a deceased person is prima facie against his interest, it is admissible as evidence for all purposes, irrespectively of its effect or value when received. Taylor v. Witham, 45 L. J., Ch. 798; 3 Ch. D. 605; 24 W. R. 877.

The following entry in the handwriting of a deceased person, "J. W. paid me three months' interest," followed by other entries pointing to a loan to J. W., is admissible as evidence, whether or not the effect of it when admitted would be to establish the existence of a debt due to the testator. Ib.

During the trial of an action to establish the plaintiff's right to be indemnified by the two defendants, or one of them, in respect of 200 shares transferred into the plaintiff's name as trustee for the defendants, or one of them, the plaintiff desired to prove that the shares had been bought on the Stock Exchange for one of the defendants through his brokers, Messrs. G. & D. G. was dead, and the plaintiff tendered in evidence an entry in the day-book of the firm of a purchase of 200 shares by G. for the particular defendant; and, having proved that the entry was in the handwriting of G., that it was made by him in the ordinary course of business at the time of the purchase as a memorandum of the transaction, and that the ledger of the firm was made up from the day-book, contended that it was admissible in evidence as a declaration made by a deceased person, first, because it was made against the pecuniary interest of the person making it; and, secondly, because it had been made in the ordinary course of business:—Held, that it was not admissible upon the first ground, because it might, according to the turn of the market, have been to the advantage of the deceased; nor upon the second ground, because it was not made in the performance of any duty. Massey v. Allen, 49 L. J., Ch. 76; 13 Ch. D. 558; 41 L. T. 788; 28 W. R. 212.

An entry by a deceased person, charging himself, is admissible against strangers, even though it appears that the facts stated in that entry were not known to him of his own knowledge. Crease v. Barrett, 1 C. M. & R. 919; 5 Tyr. 458; 4 L. J., Ex. 297.

On an issue as to the right of L. to a fishery, entries of a deceased receiver charging himself with the receipt of rent from a sub-receiver, due from persons (of whom the sub-receiver was one), for fixing a net in the fishery, are evidence in support of L.'s right. Percival v. Nanson, 7 Ex. 1; 21 L. J., Ex. 1.

Certain variations in old entries of receivers' accounts as to a manorial customary payment, extending over three centuries, and uniform in amount:—Held, to be no objection to the validity of the claim. Beaufort (Duke) v. Smith, 4 Ex. 450; 19 L. J., Ex. 97.

An entry by a deceased person shewing (in contradiction to a deed evidencing a rightful payment by him) that the payment had been made in breach of trust to A., instead of to the trustees, is admissible, to shew the receipt by A., on the ground that such entry tended to charge the maker of it. Orrett v. Corser, 21 Beav. 52.

A bill of sale having been executed by a testator, and subsequently delivered to A., on a question whether it was intended as a gift, an entry in the testator's book, made between the periods of the execution and the delivery, is admissible evidence. Ryle v. Haggie, 1 Jac. & Walk. 234.

Bill by executors on loss of notes mentioned in a list written by the testator. Such a list not of itself evidence of the property, but left to be tried at law. Glynn v. Bank of England, 2 Ves. 38.

A person's own entry in books of account allowed, on inquiries before the master, as evidence of a claim made in his lifetime, but not as original or positive evidence of the fact. Lefebure v. Worden, 2 Ves. 54.

Against Interest.]—In order that an admission made by a dead man may be admissible in evidence on the ground that it was against his interest, it must have been actually against his interest at the time when it was made; it is not sufficient that it might possibly turn out afterwards to have been against his interest. An admission made by a bankrupt in his statement of affairs that a debt is due from him, is not after his death admissible evidence as against his assignee in bankruptcy of the existence of the debt, merely because it might turn out that there was a surplus after paying the creditors. Edwards, Ex parte, Tollemache, In re, 14 Q. B. D. 415—C. A.

An admission of a debt, contained in a bankrupt's statement of his affairs made after the commencement of bankruptcy proceedings, is not evidence as against his creditors of the existence of a debt, even though the statement was verified by his oath (without cross-examination), and he has since died. Revell, Ex parte, Tollemache, In re, 54 L. J., Q. B. 89; 13 Q. B. D. 720; 51 L. T. 376; 33 W. R. 288—C. A.

If a person has peculiar means of knowing a fact, and makes a declaration or a written entry of the fact, which is against his interest at the time, it is evidence of the fact, as between third persons, after his death, if he could have been examined to it in his lifetime; and, therefore, an entry made by a man-midwife in a book, of having delivered a woman of a child on a certain day, referring to his ledger in which he had made a charge for his attendance, which was marked as paid, is evidence upon an issue as to the age of such child at the time of his afterwards suffering a recovery. Higham v. Ridgway, 10 East, 109; 10 R. R. 235. And see following cases.

The fact that the balance on the foot of a debtor and creditor account is struck in favour of the party having made the entry and since deceased, does not prevent the entries in the account from being admissible as entries against interest. Whaley v. Carlisle, 17 Ir. C. L. R. 792—Ex. Ch.; 15 W. R. 1183.

An entry by deceased person, who had knowledge of a fact, whereby he charges himself or discharges another, upon whom he would otherwise have a claim, is admissible in evidence, even though the party could not have been examined as to the fact in his lifetime. Short v. Lee, 2 Jac. & Walk. 489.

Debt discharged by entry in the testator's hand, that the debtor pays no interest; nor should he (the testator) take the principal, unless greatly distressed, and upon evidence of his circumstances. Eden v. Smith, 5 Ves. 350; 5 R. R. 60.

An ancient roll found among the muniments of a manor containing the reeve's account of moneys received by him on account of the lord, followed by an account of moneys expended by him on account of the lord, was tendered as evidence of a fact noticed in one of the items of discharge, for which the reeve took credit in the account. This entry was rejected on the ground that it did not appear on the face of the account that the reeve gave credit for any sum applied to the discharge of that particular item:—Held, that the evidence was properly rejected. Doe d. Kinglake v. Beriss, 7 C. B. 456; 18 L. J., C. P. 128.

In an action by executors against a son of their testator to recover money received by him from his father, the debtor side of the testator's account book, containing entries of the receipt of interest from the son, was held to be admissible in support of the plaintiff's contention that the money had been lent, and not given, although the right of the plaintiff without consent to put in the other side, which contained no entries opposed to the advantage of the writer, was doubtful. Peck v. Peck, 21 L. T. 670; 18 W. R. 295.

—— Parol Representation.]—E., now dead, a clerk to the plaintiff, submitted to the plaintiff a book containing entries in the handwriting of F., which charged E. with the receipt of interest on a sum owing by R. and W. to the plaintiff:—Held, that evidence could be given of E.'s so doing, as of a parol representation made by him against his interest. Kettlewell v. Watson, 30 W. R. 402.

Against third Parties.]—An account stated between a judgment debtor and his creditor, in which the latter admits payments on account, and a balance is struck off the sum due, cannot, after the death of the parties, be made use of in evidence, as an admission against interest, to prove these payments against third persons. Foster v. M'Mahon, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 287.

Mode—In Course of Duty.]—If an entry is admissible as being against the interest of the party making it, it carries with it the whole statement. But if the entry is made merely in the course of a man's duty, it does not go beyond those matters which it was his duty to enter. Percival v. Nanson, 7 Ex. 1; 21 L. J., Ex. 1. S. P., Coleman v. Mellersh, 2 Mac. & G. 309.

A written memorandum of an arrest, and the place where it occurred, made by a sheriff's officer, contemporaneously with effecting the arrest, sent immediately to the sheriff's office, and there filed in the course of business, is not admissible evidence of the place at which the arrest took place, after the death of the officer, in an action between third persons. Chambers v. Bernasconi, 1 C. M. & R. 347; 4 Tyr. 531; 3 L. J., Ex. 373.

An entry in the handwriting of a deceased person is not admissible when there was no duty imposed on him to make it, and when it is not against his interest. Webster v. Webster, 1 F. & F. 401.

Entries made by a deceased person in the ordinary course of business, but not contemporaneously with the facts entered, are not admissible. Doe d. Kinglake v. Beriss, 7 C. B. 456; 18 L. J., C. P. 128.

To make an entry in the handwriting of a person deceased evidence, it must be proved not only to have been made in the regular course of business, but to have been made at the time it bears date, or immediately afterward. Ray v. Jones, 2 Gale, 220.

On the trial of an appeal against an order of removal, an entry in the private memorandum-book of a deceased master was tendered to rebut a settlement by hiring and service, by shewing that the servant had not been hired for a year; the sessions rejected the evidence:—Held, that the sessions were right, and that this entry could not be admitted as an entry by a deceased person against his interest, or as an entry by a deceased person in the discharge of some duty, or as a contract between the master and the servant. Reg. v. Worth, 4 Q. B. 132; 3 G. & D. 376; 12 L. J., Q. B. 144; 7 Jur. 172. Massey v. Allen, supra, col. 549.

In an action to recover the balance on consignments of goods by the defendant to the plaintiffs, to be sold in India, it appeared that the transaction took place vivâ voce between him and B., the managing clerk of the plaintiffs, who carried on business in London, Liverpool and Calcutta. B., who had since died, managed their business at Liverpool. The contention of the defendant being that the transaction was a sale and not a consignment, the plaintiffs put in evidence a copy taken by a machine of a letter, which was lost, written in the course of business by B. to the plaintiffs, giving an account of the transaction, and inclosing invoices of the goods and a draft of the defendant. And in order to prove the balance they put in an account current of the sales prepared from the account sales received from their correspondents in India, which were lost:—Held, that the letter was not admissible, either as containing a declaration against pecuniary interest, or as being the entry of an act which it was the clerk's duty to do and to record. Smith v. Blakey, 8 B. & S. 157; 36 L. J., Q. B. 156; L. R. 2 Q. B. 325; 15 W. R. 492.

—— Postage.]—Neither proof of an entry made by a deceased person in the ordinary course of business in a postage-book of a letter to be posted, nor proof of possession by the deceased person for the purpose of posting, is sufficient evidence of postage. Rowlands v. De Vecchi, 1 Cab. & E. 10.

Of Person who if Alive would have been a Competent Witness—Scots Law.]—By the law of Scotland statements of a deceased person in relation to facts, which must presumably have been within his personal knowledge, and as to which, if alive, he could have been examined as a witness, may after his death be received as secondary evidence through the medium of writing, or through the medium of a living person who heard the statement. Where, therefore, a member of the family writes a note in a manuscript book to the effect that he has sent original letters to a certain person, and they cannot be found, the copies of such letters, the handwriting, and that the copies were from original letters being proved, the note and the copies of the letters are evidence of the truth of the statements within the writer's personal knowledge, and appearing to be so by the letters themselves. Lauderdale Peerage, The, 10 App. Cas. 692—H. L. (Sc.)

So also a statement, whether oral or written, is not vitiated if made with a purpose, where the object was an obvious and legitimate one, and one supporting and not discrediting the presumption of truth. But the statement of a deceased person is not admissible as evidence when its terms, or the circumstances in which it was made, are such as to beget a reasonable suspicion either that the statement was not in accordance with the truth, or that it was a coloured or one-sided version of the truth; and this rule should be applied with greater strictness in criminal cases. Ib.

The general rule of the law of Scotland is that hearsay of a deceased person, who if alive would have been a competent witness, is admissible evidence; but if the fact to which the deceased testified was such as he could not have had any special knowledge of it, it is not receivable; and this applies to written as well as oral statements. Lovat Peerage, The, 10 App. Cas. 763—H. L. (Sc.)

Payment reviving Statute-barred Debt.]—In 1884, a foreclosure action was brought by the representative of a mortgagee against the assignees of the equity of redemption of land mortgaged in 1863, and the equity of redemption in which was assigned to the defendants in July, 1878. The only evidence that interest had been paid since 1876 was an entry in the diary of the deceased mortgagee of 50*l.* paid by the mortgagor for principal and interest. The date of the entry was September, 1878:—Held, by North, J., that as the entry would prove the revival of a debt then statute-barred it was an entry in the interest of the mortgagee, and could not be received in evidence in favour of his representatives:—Held, on appeal, that whether the entry was admissible or not, it was not sufficient to take the case out of the Statute of Limitations, because it was only evidence of a payment made by the mortgagor after he had parted with his equity of redemption. This decision affirmed, not for the reasons given by that court, but because, without pronouncing any opinion on the question arising out of the Statute of Limitations and assuming the entry in question to be admissible, there was no evidence to connect the entry with the property in question. Newbould v. Smith, 14 App. Cas. 423; 61 L. T. 814—H. L. (E.) Affirming 55 L. J., Ch. 788; 34 W. R. 690—C. A.

b. Particular Persons.

i. Tradesmen and Merchants.

When deceased.]—A deceased tradesman's bill for repairs, with his receipt thereon, is not evidence of the work having been done for the person charged, though the paper is found amongst the other papers of the person charged. Doe d. Gallop v. Vowles, 1 M. & Rob. 261.

So in ejectment by parish officers to recover a cottage, entries in the books of a deceased tradesman of charges for the building of the cottage, which are there stated to have been paid by the lord of the manor, are not admissible on the part of the defendant. Doe d. Haden v. Burton, 9 Car. & P. 254.

Where it was the course of business for H., one of the workmen at a coal mine, to give notice to Y., the foreman, of the coal sold, and Y., not being able to write, employed B. to make entries of the sales in a book at the time from his, Y.'s, information:—Held, that H. and Y. being dead, the entries were not evidence in an action for the price of such coals. Brain v. Preece, 11 M. & W. 773.

To prove the delivery of goods in a shop of a trader, an entry made in the shop books by another, which a witness saw soon after it was made, and corresponding with the delivery which he also saw, is tantamount to an entry made by himself, and is admissible. Digby v. Stedman, 1 Esp. 328.

A book kept privately by the defendant, and made up from certain slips of paper, on which the daily transactions of his business were entered, and there being no proof that these were accurately copied by him, is not admissible for the defendant. Ellis v. Cowne, 2 Car. & K. 719.

Accounts between master and servant, tradesmen and shopmen, and bankers and customers, may under special cases and from the necessity of the case be admitted as evidence in favour of the party writing them. Symonds v. Gaslight and Coke Co., 11 Beav. 283.

Shop books in testator's hand not evidence; entries by servants, after their death, allowed. Glynn v. Bank of England, 2 Ves. 43.

Bankers' Books.]—See post, cols. 629 et seq.

Connection of Entries.]—Where the plaintiff read in evidence an entry from the defendant's day-book:—Held, that the latter could not be permitted to read distinct entries in different parts of the book, unconnected with the entry so read by the plaintiff. Catt v. Howard, 3 Stark. 3; 23 R. R. 752.

The general rule of evidence, that if one side puts in evidence a document for the purpose of proving part of it, the other side has a right to have the whole put in, does not apply to merchants' or traders' books of account containing entries of receipts and payments; and, therefore, if one side puts in such books of accounts to prove certain items of receipts, that does not entitle the other side to put those books in evidence to prove payments, unless the different items are so mixed up together as to clearly form one transaction. Reere v. Whitmore, 2 Drew. & Sm. 446; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 722; 12 L. T. 724; 13 W. R. 913.

Although an entry of receipts is good evidence of such receipt as against the person making it, an entry of payment is not evidence of such payment in favour of such person. Ib.

ii. Solicitors.

Against Interest—Ordinary Course of Business.]—On a question relating to the rent paid for a particular property, a statement as to receipts from an agent, signed by a deceased principal, is, as being against interest, equally admissible in evidence with a statement by a deceased agent as to receipts from a tenant. But a rent-roll signed by a deceased solicitor who was paid to audit the accounts by testing the arithmetic, but not by examining with vouchers the truth as to alleged payments, is not admissible in evidence, either on the ground of a pecuniary interest, or on the ground of the audit having been made in the ordinary course of business. Vivian v. Moat, 44 L. T. 210; 29 W. R. 504.

Entries of charges made by an attorney in his books shewing the time when a certain lease prepared for a client of his was executed, which charges were shewn to have been paid, are evidence, after the attorney's death, to shew that the lease executed under a power to lease in possession, and not in reversion, which lease bore date the 31st of August, 1770, and purported to grant a term from the 29th of September then next ensuing, was not in fact executed till after the 29th of September, inasmuch as the charge for drawing and engrossing the lease was under the date of "October, 1770." Doe d. Reece v. Robson, 15 East, 32; 13 R. R. 361.

Entries in the books of a deceased attorney of the defendant were admitted as evidence for a plaintiff in a bill of foreclosure, to prove that the whole mortgage money had been paid to the defendant, and that there was no usury; such entries, though not against the interest of the attorney, being made in the usual course of his business. Clark v. Wilmot, 1 Y. & C. C. C. 53.

Entries in a deceased solicitor's books, in his handwriting, relating to a deed prepared by him, and executed by a deceased client are good evidence. Rawlins v. Rickards, 28 Beav. 370.

Entries made by a deceased attorney are not evidence of business done by him. Gale v. Pukington, M'Clel. & Y. 357.

Entries of a debtor and creditor account, in the books of a deceased attorney, are not admissible as evidence, merely because there are items on the other side of the account that are admitted. Whaley v. Carlisle, 17 Ir. C. L. R. 792; 15 W. R. 1183.

Evidence as against Third Parties.]—H., who employed Messrs. P. as his solicitors, was in the habit of leaving moneys of his in their hands for investment for his benefit. In 1878 Messrs. P., who had lent money of their own to V. and E., an engineering firm, on a mortgage of certain works, repaid themselves 11,000*l.*, part of the debt, out of the moneys of H. in their hands, and in their books entered the transaction as a "loan" by H. to V. and E. of 11,000*l.* at 5 per cent., the interest being paid to him during his life by Messrs. P. Messrs. P. became bankrupt, and a summons was taken out by H.'s representative, that she became, under declarations of trust by Messrs. P., sub-mortgagee for 11,000*l.* and interest, of the works, or part owner to that extent, and for other relief. As evidence in support of the summons, the claimant relied on the above-mentioned entry in Messrs. P.'s books: on entries in a cash account furnished to her by them of half-yearly payments of interest on the 11,000*l.*; on a tabular statement of mortgages in the residuary account of H.'s estate, prepared by them for the purposes of legacy duty; and on a letter written by Messrs. P. to her containing a similar tabulated statement of mortgages forming part of H.'s estate:—Held, that although the entries she relied on were not evidence as against third parties such as the company, yet as against Messrs. P. they established a declaration of trust of a mortgage for 11,000*l.* and interest extending to all the work of V. and E., at the place mentioned at the date of the letter. Vernon, Ewens, & Co., In re, 32 Ch. D. 165; 54 L. T. 365; 34 W. R. 606.

Although mere entries in a solicitor's books of business alleged to have been done by him or in a bill of costs and disbursements made out by him in the regular course of business would not be evidence against third persons, a solicitor's bill of costs made out to trustees, introducing the name of the cestui que trust as being personally present when the business was transacted, paid by the trustees and allowed in the settlement of accounts with the cestui que trust, are admissible against the cestui que trust, in a suit instituted by him, upwards of twenty years afterwards, against the trustees. Bright v. Legerton, 2 De G. F. & J. 606; 30 L. J., Ch. 338; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 559; 3 L. T. 713; 9 W. R. 239.

Letters.]—A letter of a deceased solicitor, purporting to be written on behalf of a client, is not evidence against him, unless there is proof of the solicitor having acted in that character. Ib.

Indorsement on Notice to Quit.]—Where it was the usual course of practice in an attorney's office for the clerks to serve notices to quit on tenants, and to endorse on duplicates of such notices the fact and time of service; and on one occasion the attorney himself prepared a notice to quit to serve on a tenant, took it out with him together with two others prepared at the same time, and returned to his office in the evening, having endorsed on the duplicate of each notice a memorandum of his having delivered it to the tenant, and two of them were proved to have been delivered by him on that occasion:—Held, on the trial of an ejectment after the attorney's death, that the indorsement so made by him was admissible to prove the service of the third notice. Doe d. Pattoshall v. Turford, 3 B. & Ad. 890; 1 L. J., K. B. 262.

Clerks.]—See post, iii.

iii. Partners, Clerks and Agents.

Relationship of Parties.]—The entries in a book containing a record of the proceedings of a society established under a deed of co-partnership produced at the meetings, and open to the inspection of all the members, are admissible against a person after he has been proved a member of the society. Alderson v. Clay, 1 Stark. 405; 18 R. R. 788.

Evidence against whom.]—A., the holder of a bill, deposited it with B., as a collateral security for the balance of accounts between them; B. indorsed the bill over to C. after it became due. In an action by C. against A., B.'s account-book is not evidence in diminution of the balance between A. and B. Colleuridge v. Farquharson, 1 Stark. 259.

A. undertook to act as the agent of B. in recovering the amount of an insured cargo, subject to the superior claim of C., who resided abroad. In an action by B. against A. to recover his proportion of the amount recovered by A., an invoice sent by C., but to which A. was not privy, is not admissible against A., in order to shew the extent of B.'s interest. Mendham v. Thompson, 1 Stark. 316.

Entries by Deceased Partner.]—During the trial of an action to establish the plaintiff's right to be indemnified by the two defendants, or one of them, in respect of 200 shares transferred into the plaintiff's name as trustee for the defendants, or one of them, the plaintiff desired to prove that the shares had been bought on the Stock Exchange for one of the defendants through his brokers, Messrs. G. and D. G. was dead, and the plaintiff tendered in evidence an entry in the day-book of the firm of a purchase of 200 shares by G. for the particular defendant; and, having proved that the entry was in the handwriting of G., that it was made by him in the ordinary course of business at the time of the purchase as a memorandum of the transaction, and that the ledger of the firm was made up from the day-book, contended that it was admissible in evidence as a declaration made by a deceased person, first, because it was made against the pecuniary interest of the person making it; and, secondly, because it had been made in the ordinary course of business:—Held, that it was not admissible upon the first ground, because it might, according to the turn of the market, have been to the advantage of the deceased; nor upon the second ground, because it was not made in the performance of any duty. Massey v. Allen, 49 L. J., Ch. 76; 13 Ch. D. 558; 41 L. T. 788; 28 W. R. 212.

Clerks—Facts within Knowledge.]—The clerk in a solicitor's office, when speaking to facts within his own knowledge, may refer to the "office journal" in order to fix the dates of those facts; but cannot speak to facts (not within his knowledge) from entries in the journal, not in his handwriting. Butlin v. Barry, 1 Curt. 617.

Where the practice of the defendant's counting-house was that the clerk, after copying a letter into the letter-book, returned it to the defendant to seal, and that he or another clerk carried all letters to the post-office, but there was no particular place of deposit in the office for such letters, and neither of the clerks had any recollection of the particular letter offered in evidence, though they swore that they uniformly carried all letters given them to carry:—Held, that the entry in the clerk's writing in the letter-book of a letter to the plaintiff could not be read as proof of such letter having been sent to the plaintiff. Toosey v. Williams, 1 M. & Scott, 129.

—— Where no Duty.]—An entry in the diary of a solicitor's clerk, who had become lunatic, was not allowed to be read in evidence of a matter concerning which it was not the duty of the clerk to have made such entry. Coleman v. Mellersh, 2 Mac. & G. 309.

An entry of a tender and a refusal made by the deceased clerk of the plaintiff's attorney, in a day-book kept for the purpose of minuting his daily transactions, is admissible in evidence to prove the tender. Marks v. Lahee, 3 Bing. (N.C.) 408; 4 Scott, 137; 6 L. J., C. P. 69.

An entry in a diary kept by an agent is not admissible to prove a fact therein stated, unless it is shewn that it was the duty of the agent to make the whole entry. Trotter v. Maclean, 13 Ch. D. 574, 579; 42 L. T. 118; 28 W. R. 244.

—— Proof of Handwriting.]—An entry made in the books of the plaintiff, specifying the terms of an agreement, is not evidence where the person who made it is dead, by proving his handwriting. Calvert v. Canterbury (Archbishop), 2 Esp. 646.

Where entries have been made by a clerk who is since dead, proof of his handwriting will not make such entries evidence. Sikes v. Marshall, 2 Esp. 705.

—— Service of Interrogatories.]—An indorsed memorandum of service in the handwriting of a clerk of the plaintiff's attorney (the writer being abroad), coupled with an affidavit by another clerk that the defendant's solicitor had admitted to him verbally the service of interrogatories:—Held, sufficient to justify the court in ordering an attachment to issue against the defendant for want of answer. Sidebottom v. Adkins, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 631; 6 W. R. 97.

Nature of Duty.]—J., who was usually employed to serve notices to quit, received instructions to serve a duplicate notice to quit on R. C., and on his return signed a memorandum, which had been prepared beforehand, "29th September, delivered a duplicate to R. C." In fact, he had served the father of R. C., and he stated that fact to his employer on his return. On ejectment after the death of J.:—Held, that the parol declaration was not admissible, because not made in the course of business or in the discharge of a duty. Stapylton v. Clough, 2 El. & Bl. 933; 2 C. L. R. 266; 23 L. J., Q. B. 5; 18 Jur. 60; 2 W. R. 60.

A local agent, whose duty it was to advise his principals of all his transactions on their account, wrote them a letter, in which occurred these words: "I enclose a draft of B., which he sent to-day with three large cases to the office. I enclose his invoices for your perusal. He leaves shipment of his goods to your judgment. He will renew. . . . I consider him a perfectly safe man, should there be any reclamation. He draws 75 per cent.":—Held, that this letter could not be used by the principals after the agent's death, to prove the nature of the transaction to which it referred, as it was neither the record of a transaction which it was the specific duty of the agent to make, nor an entry against his interest. Smith v. Blakey, 8 B. & S. 157; 36 L. J., Q. B. 156; L. R. 2 Q. B. 326; 15 W. R. 492.

In an action upon a bond given to bankers, conditioned for the fidelity of a clerk, entries of the receipts of sums of money made by the clerk in books kept by him in the discharge of his duty as clerk, are, after his death, evidence against his sureties of the fact of the receipt of money. Whitnash v. George, 8 B. & C. 556. See Cooper v. Marsden, 1 Esp. 1.

Clerk to Commissioners.]—Where claims to allotments, which were by an act of parliament directed to be in writing, were entered, by a deceased clerk of the commissioners, in a book, and were marked as allowed by their initials:—Held, that upon proof of the clerk's death, and of negative search for the original claims, the entries were admissible to shew the nature of the claim. Doe d. Welsh v. Langfield, 16 M. & W. 497. S. C., nom. Doe d. Padwick v. Skinner, 3 Ex. 84; 18 L. J., Ex. 107.

Notary's Clerk.]—An entry of the dishonour of a bill of exchange, made in the usual course of business, at the time of the dishonour, in the book of a notary, by his clerk, who presented the bill, may be given in evidence in an action on the bill, upon proof of the death of the clerk who made the entry. Poole v. Dicas, 1 Scott, 600; 1 Bing. (N.C.) 649; 1 Hodges, 162; 7 Car. & P. 79; 4 L. J., C. P. 196.

Notice of Call—List of Names.]—In order to prove the service of a notice of a railway call in an action for the same, the company proved that it was the duty of C. to fill up the printed notices and direct them to the shareholders; that on the day of the call he had received instructions to send out such notices; that he had been seen in the act of making out such notices and putting them into a basket ready to be posted, and that at that time he had a list in his hand. It was proved that all the letters in the basket were posted. C. was dead at the time of the trial, but a list containing the name of the defendant was produced in his handwriting, with an indorsement by him "letters sent out":—Held, that this list so indorsed was admissible, as it might reasonably be inferred that it was a contemporaneous entry. Eastern Union Ry. v. Symonds, 5 Ex. 237; 6 Railw. Cas. 578; 19 L. J., Ex. 287.

Servant.]—Entry by servant or agent usually employed in keeping accounts allowed as good evidence upon proof of his death. Lefebure v. Worden, 2 Ves. 54.

R. married N.'s widow, who was executrix of her husband, and kept a book of accounts relating to his estate: after she married R. the same book was continued. Afterwards R. went as governor to Barbadoes with his wife and the servant who kept the book; they all died there. It was proved in the cause, that the book was made up from vouchers, and that great part of the money was paid; and the witness believed the whole was paid. Upon exceptions to the master's report, the court adjudged the book should be allowed as a discharge, as well as a charge. Daston v. Orford (Earl), Colles's P. C. 229. S. C., differently stated, Pre. Ch. 188; 1 Eq. Abr. 10.

iv. Stewards, Receivers and Collectors.

Steward's Entries.]—Entries on the ancient roll of a manor of items in the accounts rendered by the reeve of the manor, by which he charges himself with the receipt of money, are admissible; but entries in the same account of disbursements of the money so received discharging the reeve are not admissible, unless they are referred to by the charging items, or are necessary to explain them. Doe d. Kinglake v. Beriss, 7 C. B. 456; 18 L. J., C. P. 128.

—— Entry as to Recital of Lease—Hearsay.]—In an ejectment the question was, whether lands known as Kingston Pastures were part of the manor of Hayling. The lands had been purchased from the Duke of Norfolk. An entry in a book found among the muniments of the Norfolk family was tendered for the purpose of proving the affirmative of the issue. The entry, which was made by a steward of that family, spoke of an indenture which "recited a lease made by the Earl of Arundel," and which, tracing the lands into the possession of R. H., went on to say that "R. H. demiseth unto, &c., all those pasture grounds lying in Kingston, in the parish of Portsea, parcel of the manor of Hayling":—Held, that this entry was a mere recital of some document which the writer had seen or heard of, and was not admissible either as an entry by a person in the discharge of his duty, or as entry against the interest of the person who made it, nor was it evidence of reputation to prove that the lands were parcel of the manor. Doe d. Padwick v. Wittcomb, 4 H. L. Cas. 425. Affirming 6 Ex. 601; 20 L. J., Ex. 297; 15 Jur. 778.

—— Amount.]—A paper signed by a deceased steward charged him with the receipt of a gross sum. In the same box was found an ancient rental in the same handwriting, but unsigned, containing an account of items which, added together, made up the gross sum with which the deceased steward so debited himself:—Held, admissible. Musgrave v. Emmerson, 10 Q. B. 326; 16 L. J., Q. B. 174. S. P., Brune v. Thompson, Car. & M. 34.

—— Presumption.]—Entries in a steward's book made more than thirty years ago, and coming from the proper custody, are admissible, without proving the handwriting of the steward. Wynne v. Tyrwhitt, 4 B. & Ad. 376.

—— Privity of Estate.]—In ejectment, it appeared that the lessor of the plaintiff, to entitle himself to the property as heir-at-law, must deduce title through E. The title relied upon by the defendant was that of a party to whom E. had devised his remainder in the property, which remainder had been devised by J. to E. Among other evidence to identify the property in question with that devised by J., a book was offered, containing entries of receipts of rent of the property in question by a deceased steward of E.:—Held, that the defendant was entitled to produce these entries in evidence against the plaintiff, each party claiming under or through E. The defendant claimed by purchase from the heir of a devisee under E.'s will. Doe d. Strode v. Seaton, 2 A. & E. 171; 4 N. & M. 81; 4 L. J., K. B. 13.

Where the right to the soil is in issue, entries written by a steward of a former owner, from whom title is derived, are admissible in evidence if the steward is dead. Barry v. Bebington, 4 Term Rep. 514; 2 R. R. 450.

—— Balance in Favour.]—It is no objection to the admissibility of an entry by which a deceased steward charges himself, that the balance of the account is in favour of the steward. Williams v. Graves, 8 Car. & P. 593.

Entries in a steward's book, made in his favour, and not connected with other entries made against him, are not evidence of the facts mentioned in such entries. Knight v. Waterford (Marquis), 4 Y. & C. 283; 10 L. J., Ex. Eq. 57.

Quit Rent.]—Bill for quit rent and account produced; it must be proved to have been a steward or bailiff's, or it is not evidence in equity any more than at law. Franks v. Curry, 2 Atk. 140.

—— Son of Steward.]—In ejectment, a book, professing to contain yearly accounts between the lord of a manor and his steward, J. V., sen., was produced from the muniment-room of the lessor. The statement of the balance at the end of each year was signed by the lord of the manor and J. V., jun.; and in 1795 there was a statement, also signed by the lord and J. V., jun., of the balance due to J. V., sen., upon the general settlement of the preceding accounts, and an acknowledgment of the payment of it to J. V., jun.:—Held, that the entries in these accounts were receivable upon the same footing as entries by the steward for the time being. Doe d. Ashburnham (Lord) v. Michael, 17 Q. B. 276; 20 L. J., Q. B. 480; 15 Jur. 677.

—— Nature of Accounts.]—The rent-rolls of an estate unsigned, and drawn out in four columns: the first and second columns, containing the tenants' names, and the amount to be paid by each, were in the handwriting of the owner of the estate; the third and fourth columns, containing the amount actually received of each tenant, and the date when received, were in the handwriting of a deceased steward:—Held, receivable as accounts of a deceased steward charging himself. Doe d. Bodenham v. Colcombe, Car. & M. 155.

Collector—Sums Received.]—It is no objection to the admissibility of a book, containing an account in which a deceased receiver charges himself with money paid to him, that, on the opposite side of the account, the receiver discharges himself to the same extent, or that the account (being in his handwriting) is not signed by him; or that the name of the party on whose account the money is received does not appear in the book, it being shewn aliunde that the person making the entry did not receive the money on his own account. Rowe v. Brenton, 3 M. & Ry. 268; 8 B. & C. 765.

A private book kept by a deceased collector of taxes, not as a matter of duty, but for his own convenience, containing entries by him acknowledging the receipt of sums of money in his character of collector, is admissible in an action against his surety; although the parties who made the payments were alive and might have been called as witnesses. Middleton v. Melton, 5 M. & Ry. 264.

In Tithe Suit.]—In a suit by rector for tithes, a book, in which the collector of a former rector had kept accounts of the receipts of tithes, cannot be proved vivâ voce, as, besides the handwriting, it would be necessary to prove that it came out of the proper custody, and that the writer was the collector of the tithes. Lake v. Skinner, 1 Jac. & Walk. 9.

Nothing to be proved vivâ voce that requires more than proof of handwriting, or that admits of cross-examination. Ib. 15.

—— Approved Entries of Clerk.]—Entries of the receipt of rent, made in the handwriting of a clerk of a treasurer of a charity, in a book produced by the treasurer at the audits of his accounts, and adopted by him, are evidence, after the death of the treasurer, to prove the payment of the sums therein mentioned. Doe d. Graham v. Hawkins, 1 G. & D. 551; 2 Q. B. 212; 10 L. J., Q. B. 285; 6 Jur. 215.

—— Rate-book—Admissible in Action against Sureties.]—A rate-collector's bond executed by him and sureties, was upon the conditions that the collector should collect the rates, and pay the amount so collected to the treasurer, that the collector should deliver true and proper accounts, and should, when required, deliver up his books and pay to the treasurer such money as upon the balance of any accounts should appear to be in his hands. The rate-collector absconded, and an action was commenced against the sureties, claiming 223*l.*; the only evidence of the receipt by the collector of this sum, was the entries made by him in his accounts:—Held, that these entries were admissible in evidence against the sureties. Abbeyleix Guardians v. Sutcliffe, 25 L. R. Ir. 332.

Signature.]—A deceased receiver of rents rendered to his employer annual accounts of the rents received from property at H. The accounts were not signed by any one. One of the accounts was in the handwriting of a deceased clerk, but on it was written, in the handwriting of the receiver, "H. rents"; another account was in the handwriting of the son of the receiver, who proved that he made it out by the authority of his father, and the account was rendered to the employer, and was in the usual course:—Held, that both these accounts were receivable as the accounts of a deceased agent charging himself to his principal. Doe d. Sturt v. Mobbs, Car. & M. 1.

Entries signed by a deceased agent, but not in his handwriting, but by which such agent charges himself, are receivable. Doe d. Lichfield (Earl) v. Stacey, 6 Car. & P. 139.

—— Nature of Accounts—Proof of Audit.]—In an action by the corporation of Exeter, for petty customs and port duties, payable on goods landed at Teignmouth, to shew the receipt of such dues in former times, they produced a series of accounts, purporting to be of the receipts by the receivers of the city. It was proved that the receivers' accounts were regularly audited, and that no one could at the time to which the evidence related be mayor till he had been receiver, and had his accounts audited. Down to a certain time the accounts were not signed at all: afterwards they were regularly signed by the auditors only. One entry of the latter class stated the receipt by B., a receiver, of a sum for town dues from W.: and with this entry was found a paper, stating that W. had received a sum for town dues, almost exactly corresponding with that stated in the entry, and at the time of which it bore date. No evidence was given as to the handwriting of the latter paper. B. and W. were both dead. The documents were more than thirty years old. No one of them stated the receipt to be "by me"; but the third person was used:—Held, that all the documents were admissible. Exeter Corporation v. Warren, 5 Q. B. 773; D. & M. 524.

—— Receipts and Tolls.]—In a colliery lease, the lessee covenanted to keep true accounts of all coal daily raised, and to make and deliver true copies thereof to the lessor. J., who was the account-keeper appointed by the persons who worked the colliery, but who was since dead, rendered to the lessor accounts of coals sold by him:—Held, that these accounts were receivable against the lessee; first, as being entries made by J., charging himself; and, secondly, as being admissions made by the lessee's agent. Edwards v. Rees, 7 Car. & P. 340.

Accounts of the receipts of tolls of a market, signed by a person since deceased, styling himself managing clerk of a deceased steward of the claimant's ancestor, are not evidence of title, although such accounts are found among the family muniments. De Rutzen v. Farr, 5 N. & M. 617; 4 A. & E. 53; 1 H. & W. 735; 5 L. J., K. B. 38.

In an action by the lessee of a corporation for tolls, it was proved that it had been the practice, as long as the witness, who was conversant with the subject, could remember, for the town treasurer to furnish the town clerk with information, from which he made out his (the treasurer's) accounts, and also for the treasurer to attend before the auditors, unless prevented by illness or by accident, and produce vouchers verifying the town clerk's statement. Entries in books of that description, commencing with 1766, were tendered. Some of them were signed by the auditors as allowed, and to some of them appeared only an unsigned entry of their having been examined:—Held, that those which were signed by the auditors were admissible without proof of any attendance by the particular treasurer before the auditors, or of any entry in his writing charging himself, partly on the ground that there was reasonable evidence of his having made the town clerk his agent for the making out of the accounts. Laneum v. Lovell, 6 Car. & P. 441.

Upon a bond conditioned that a clerk shall account for all moneys received on account of his employers, and shall act with fidelity and punctuality in the matters entrusted to him, entries made by the clerk in the course of his employment, whereby he charges himself with the receipt of money on account of his employers, are after his death primâ facie evidence against his sureties, the obligors, of the receipt of such moneys. But it is open to the latter to shew, that the entries are incorrect, though by so doing they will render themselves liable as upon a breach of the second branch of the condition. Whitmarsh v. Genge, 3 M. & Ry. 42; 8 B. & C. 556; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 57.

By Executors.]—In an action by the executor of a payee against the maker upon a promissory note more than six years overdue, the plaintiff, in order to take the case out of the Statute of Limitations, produced a book in which he had, in 1844 and 1847, at the request of the testatrix, entered two payments, as for interest due upon the note, which she told him she had received from the defendant:—Held, admissible as entries against the interest of the party making them. Bradley v. James, 13 C. B. 822; 1 C. L. R. 494; 22 L. J., C. P. 193; 1 W. R. 388.

A book of accounts kept by a deceased executor, charging himself with the receipt of rents in his character of executor, is admissible for the purpose of shewing that he had received the rent on account of a particular tenement, notwithstanding that he took a remote contingent interest under the will. Spires v. Morris, 3 M. & Scott, 124; 9 Bing. 687; 2 L. J., C. P. 153.

v. Parties formerly Interested.

Payment of Rent.]—On appeal against an order of removal it was proved that the father of the pauper's mother had rented and occupied a tenement in the appellant parish for four years, ending at Midsummer, 1830; the pauper's mother was called to prove that she heard her father say that he had rented the house of B. at 22*l.* a year, and had paid the rent for it; and she produced a book containing entries in his handwriting stating that he had paid B. two sums amounting to 5*l.* 10*s.* for a quarter's rent due at Midsummer, 1830:—Held, first, that the declaration and the entries were admissible evidence as to the fact of payment of the rent. Reg. v. Exeter Guardians, 10 B. & S. 433; 38 L. J., M. C. 126; L. R. 4 Q. B. 341; 20 L. T. 693; 17 W. R. 850.

Held, secondly, that the undisturbed occupation by the tenant of the house for four years was presumptive proof of payment. Ib.

An entry in a rent-book in the handwriting of the plaintiff's deceased mother, who had managed his affairs, admitting the receipt of rent by her, amounts to a recognition by her that certain entries of payments, recorded in the preceding part of the same page in the handwriting of a person since deceased, of rent which ought to have been received by her, represented receipts for which she was accountable, and were consequently admissible in evidence. Richards v. Gogarty, Ir. R. 4 C. L. 300.

F. was tenant to C., with a promise of a lease for twenty-one years, from September, 1851, to September, 1872, at the rent of 84*l.* 16*s.* Afterwards C. entered F.'s name in his rent-book as the tenant of 128 acres, at 16*s.* an acre, at yearly rent of 102*l.* 8*s.*, less 4*l.* for county cess—98*l.* 8*s.* "Tenure, thirty-one years, from September, 1872, at rent of 16*s.* per acre, allowed 4*l.* for county cess." The entry was in C.'s handwriting:—Held, that it was admissible in evidence as a statement against the proprietary and pecuniary interest of C. Conner v. Fitzgerald, 11 L. R., Ir. 106.

Effect of.]—On the trial of an issue, under 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 71, whether a modus had been, during the statutable period, payable by the occupiers of lands in a hamlet to the rector in lieu of tithes, an account book kept by a deceased rector, containing receipts and payments by him relative to the living, was received in evidence for the present incumbent:—Held, that the account book was properly admitted. Young v. Clare Hall (Master), 17 Q. B. 529; 21 L. J., Q. B. 12; 16 Jur. 81.

The entries by a tenant for life, in his book, of the receipt of the rent to the amount stated, are evidence of the fact. Roe d. Brune v. Rawlings, 7 East, 279; 3 Smith, 254; 8 R. R. 632.

But entries made by a third person, deceased, in his books of receipts of rent from his tenant for a particular estate, are not evidence to prove the identity of the land in a cause between two others. Outram v. Morewood, 5 Term Rep. 121; 12 R. R. 542.

A memorandum signed by a person deceased, who had been owner of a copyhold tenement, and had occupied a slip of garden ground adjoining, stating that no part of the garden ground belonged to the copyhold, but that he paid rent for the whole of it, is admissible for the lessor of the plaintiff in ejectment for this garden ground, to shew that it is not a part of the copyhold tenement. Doe d. Baggalley v. Jones, 1 Camp. 367.

Parson's receipts for tithes evidence for successor. Glynn v. Bank of England, 2 Ves. 38.

Answers of Tenants of Manor.]—Ancient answers of conventionary tenants of a manor, stating the rights of the lord of the manor, are admissible, even against the freeholders of the manor; but if they state facts only, e.g. that "the commons of the manor do belong to the tenants of the manor unstinted, who have always enjoyed the same under the yearly rent of 33*l.* 4*s.*, as by the records remaining with the auditor of the duchy appeareth; unto which, for the more certainty, we refer ourselves;" they are not admissible. Crease v. Barrett, 1 C. M. & R. 919; 5 Tyr. 458; 4 L. J., Ex. 297.

vi. Other Persons.

By Public Official.]—The report of a committee appointed by a public department in a foreign state, though addressed to that department and acted on by the government, is not necessarily admissible in the courts here as evidence of all the facts stated therein. M., the consul in London for the then Genoese government, applied in 1789 to his government to receive the rank and employment of diplomatic agent here. The executive government (collegii) referred the application to a committee called the Giunta della Marina to inquire into the propriety of the proposed change of appointment, and into M.'s fitness for the post of diplomatic agent. The Giunta reported favourably on both points. In the course of the report the Giunta described him as "a native of Quarto, of about forty-five years of age." He was appointed in 1790, and died in England in 1803. His only child, a daughter, died here in 1871 without any known relations. Her property was taken possession of by the Crown, but, on a process instituted here, a decree was made directing payment of the fund to certain persons of the Freccia family, who claimed to be next of kin, and whose claim was founded on an allegation that M. had been born at St. Ilario, near Genoa, in 1735. Other persons then claimed to be next of kin, asserting that M. had been born at Quarto in 1744. In a suit between these two sets of claimants, the report of the Giunta was tendered in evidence as fixing the real place and time of M.'s birth:—Held, that it was not admissible for that purpose. Sturla v. Freccia, 50 L. J., Ch. 86; 5 App. Cas. 623; 43 L. T. 209; 29 W. R. 217; 44 J. P. 812—H. L. (E.)

Per Lord Blackburn:—"A public document" means a document that is made for the purpose of the public making use of it, especially where there is a judicial or quasi-judicial duty to inquire. Its very object must be that the public, all persons concerned in it, may have access to it. Ib.

Where entries purported to be made by commissioners of the land tax in 1827, and evidence was given that the persons making them had acted as such commissioners in 1828:—Held, that this was properly left as evidence to go to the jury that they were also commissioners in 1827. Doe d. Hopley v. Young, 8 Q. B. 63; 15 L. J., Q. B. 9; 9 Jur. 941.

Overseer.]—In a tithe suit by a vicar, an overseer's accounts, mentioning that a sum had been received from a vicar, in respect of a modus payable to him, are admissible for the defendants. Ward v. Pomfret, 5 Sim. 475; 2 L. J., Ch. 22.

In Log Book.]—Entries in a log by a deceased seaman in the course of his duty, but not contemporaneous with the facts entered, and not against his interest, are not admissible in evidence. The Henry Coxon, 47 L. J., Adm. 83; 3 P. D. 156; 38 L. T. 819; 27 W. R. 263.

Depositions of a deceased seaman taken by a receiver of wrecks in the course of his duty are not admissible as evidence in an action of damage. Ib.

By Chief Rabbi.]—In an action for taking the plaintiff's goods, with a plea of not possessed, it was proposed to shew that the goods were not his, by shewing that he was not twenty-one. To shew this, it was proved, that, by the custom of the law of the Jews, children are circumcised on the eighth day from their birth, and that it was the duty of the chief rabbi to perform this rite, and make an entry of it in a book. It was proposed to give in evidence the entry in this book of the plaintiff's circumcision, the entry being in the handwriting of a chief rabbi who was dead:—Held, that the entry was not receivable. Davis v. Lloyd, 1 Car. & K. 275.

Entry by Sexton.]—In order to prove the residence of a party at the time of his death, an entry made by a parish sexton in a book which, under the authority of a private act of parliament, he was required to keep for the purpose of entering burials and the burial fees, is admissible. Lloyd v. Wait, 1 Ph. 61; 6 Jur. 455.

Receipt of Church Rates.]—An entry made in a parish book, of the receipt of money by officers of a township from the officers of another township for a proportion of church-rates, is evidence to charge the latter officers with the same proportion in future. Stead v. Heaton, 4 Term Rep. 669.

Entries by Living Persons.]—The entries of a person still living against his interest are not evidence between other parties, though it is shewn that he is abroad, having absconded from a criminal charge, and altogether out of the power of a party to produce him as a witness. Stephen v. Gwenap, 1 M. & Rob. 120.

Memorandum of Agreement by Third Party.]—A witness called to prove the terms of a verbal agreement stated that he was in company with plaintiff and defendant when it was made, and referred to an entry made a few hours after, to refresh his memory. This entry was made by him from a paper written in pencil by the plaintiff during the interview between the parties, and read by him to the defendant as embodying the terms of their agreement. The defendant assented, but he neither signed nor was asked to sign it, nor was it shewn to him:—Held, that it was not necessary to produce this paper as constituting the real agreement. Trewhitt v. Lambert, 3 P. & D. 676; 10 A. & E. 470. See also Rex v. Wrangle, 4 N. & M. 375; 2 A. & E. 314; 1 H. & W. 41; 4 L. J., M. C. 43.

Of Payment of King's Silver.]—The entry of the payment of the king's silver is sufficient evidence of a fine having been duly levied, the fine being complete on such payment. Marjoribanks v. Hovenden, 8 Ir. Ch. R. 317.

II. PRESUMPTIONS.

1. Right to Land, Easements, &c.

General Principles.]—The principle regulating the presuming documents in support of beneficial enjoyment is, that where there has been a long enjoyment of any right which could have had no lawful origin except by deed, there, in favour of such enjoyment, all necessary deeds may be presumed, if there is nothing to negative such presumption. Lyon v. Reed, 13 M. & W. 285; 13 L. J., Ex. 377; 8 Jur. 762.

Grants presumed upon the principle of quieting possession. Hillary v. Waller, 12 Ves. 252.

Presumption of title need not be founded on what is believed to have happened, but what may have happened. St. Mary Magdalen College, Oxford v. Att.-Gen., 3 Jur. (N.S.) 675.

Legal Origin.]—Where the possession of an estate can be referred to a good and valid title, equity will not refer it to a title obtained by fraud or disseisin. Conry v. Caulfield, 2 Ball & B. 255.

The plaintiff as surviving feoffee of parish lands, alleged that from the time of legal memory a certain part of such lands had been vested in the feoffees upon trust for the vestry, subject to a rent-charge of 3*l.* 6*s.* 8*d.*, and that the defendant corporation had been tenants of the vestry at a rent of 150*l.* per annum since 1838, which tenancy had expired:—Held, that a legal origin of title was not impossible, and must therefore be presumed, for after such a possession it was plainly incumbent on the court to find a legal origin if such could be found. Held, also, that the omission of the land in question from the feoffments of the parish before 1838 was not sufficient to rebut the inference which the long possession compelled the court to draw. Eliot v. Bristol Corporation, 72 L. T. 752—C. A.

Where rights of common have been exercised for many years, the court will try to find a legal origin for those rights. Warrick v. Queen's College, Oxford, 40 L. J., Ch. 780; L. R. 6 Ch. 716; 25 L. T. 254; 19 W. R. 1098.

Freehold Tenure.]—An award by commissioners of lands in general terms, without stating their tenure, is primâ facie evidence of their being freehold. Cattel v. Corral, 4 Y. & Coll. 228; 9 L. J., Ex. Eq. 37.

Seisin in Fee.]—The fact of possession is primâ facie evidence of seisin in fee, per Mellor, J., in Asher v. Whitelock, 35 L. J., Q. B. 17; L. R. 10 Q. B. 1; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 925; 14 W. R. 26.

Proof of possession of land, and pernancy of the rents and profits, is primâ facie evidence of a seisin in fee. Jayne v. Price, 5 Taunt. 326; 1 Marsh. 68; 15 R. R. 518.

The heir and executor of T. having disputed whether certain estates, of which T. died seised or possessed, were real or personal estate all that appeared was that P., the original owner, through whom both claimed, as far as was known, died seised of the freehold. The heir-at-law of P. having sued T., the litigation was compromised by a deed conveying to T. all the estate and right of such heir, and no other claim was ever heard of, nor was T. disturbed in possession:—Held, that, assuming that P. died seised of the fee, and that all the interests of other claimants were conveyed to T., the presumption was that T. also impliedly acquired the fee. Tudury v Sachez de Pina, 7 L. T. 115.

In 1586, property was, in consideration of 273*l.*; demised for 2,000 years at a small rent, and the lessor covenanted, if required by the lessee within seven years, to convey the fee to the lessees without further payment. In documents dated in 1664, 1681, and 1690, the property was treated by the persons claiming under the lessees as held in fee simple. But in documents dated in 1715 and 1758, it was considered doubtful whether it was freehold or leasehold, and in 1777 and 1778 it was treated as leasehold:—Held, that the presumption up to 1715 was, that it was fee simple; that such presumption was not destroyed by the subsequent doubts, and a purchaser in 1859 of the fee was held bound to take the title. Jeffreys v. Machu, 29 Beav. 344.

Unity of Possession.]—Unity of title is a primâ facie case of unity of possession. Clayton v. Corby, 2 G. & D. 174; 2 Q. B. 813.

Grant from Crown.]—The undisturbed occupation for thirty-nine years of lands forming an encroachment on the Forest of Dean raises a presumption of a grant from the Crown. Goodtitle v. Baldwin, 11 East, 488; 14 R. R. 674. See Kingston-upon-Hull Corporation v. Homer, Cowp. 102; Lofft. 576. Chasemore v. Richards, 7 H. L. Cas. 347; 29 L. J., Ex. 81; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 873; 7 W. R. 685.

Act of Parliament.]—After a long possession, the court will make great presumptions, including, in some cases, even an act of parliament, in order to protect a right. The court will not, however, adopt such presumption when the origin of the right or possession is clearly ascertained and negatives such presumption. Att.-Gen. v. Ewelme Hospital, 17 Beav. 366; 22 L. J., Ch. 846; 1 W. R. 523. But see Chilton v. London Corporation, post, col. 572.

Conveyance of Legal Interest by Trustees.]—Where a bare legal estate had been conveyed to a trustee in 1804, and in 1813 the estate was dealt with by the cestui que trust and other parties, without any reference to the existence of such outstanding legal interest, but it was to be implied from the terms of the latter deed that there had been some intermediate dealing with the property between 1804 and 1813:—Held, that there was evidence from which a jury might presume a conveyance by the trustee of the legal interest on behalf of the parties beneficially entitled. Mathias v. Evans, 5 W. R. 707.

Where no acts of ownership have been exercised by the party beneficially interested in an estate devised in trust, a reconveyance by the trustees cannot be presumed, as that would be a presumption against possession. Doe d. Rees v. Williams, 1 M. & W. 749; M. & H. 198; 6 L. J., Ex. 256; 1 Jur. 755.

Reconveyance.]—H., being seised in fee-tail in possession of premises, and being also seised of the immediate reversion in fee, enfeoffed his brother R. R. never took possession, and the deed of feoffment remained in the custody of the feoffor. The feoffor died in 1780, whereupon his son Robert entered, and the premises continued to be occupied by him and his lessees down to 1826, when he died, having in the meantime suffered a recovery of the premises, and devised them to the lessors of the plaintiff:—Held, that this long uninterrupted possession by the feoffor, and those claiming under him, warranted the presumption that the premises had been reconveyed to the feoffor. Tenny d. Whinnett v. Jones, 3 M. & Scott, 472.

Redemption of or Release from Rentcharge.]—When a rent, which was to cease upon payment of a certain sum of money, was charged upon, and payable out of, several denominations of land, and there was evidence to show that it had not been paid by or demanded from the owners of one of those denominations for upwards of a century: but there was nothing to show that it had not been regularly paid out of the other denominations:—Held, that the court would not presume, either that the redemption money was paid, or that that portion of the land had been released. Warren v. Bateman, Fl. & K. 448.

Mesne Assignments.]—To make good a title to the residue of an old term, mesne assignments, which cannot be produced, will be presumed even at law. White v. Foljambe, 11 Ves. 350.

Reversionary Interest.]—In an action by the reversioners of a copyhold estate, for an injury to their reversion, they proved the payment to them of rent by the tenant; the defendants proved the surrender to, and admittance of, third parties to the estate, in 1821:—Held, that the payment of rent was sufficient primâ facie evidence of the reversion being in the plaintiffs, and that the surrender proved by the defendants did not cast the onus of proof upon the plaintiffs, to shew a reconveyance of the estate to them. Daintry v. Brocklehurst, 3 Ex. 207; 18 L. J., Ex. 57.

In an action for pulling down a messuage and premises in the possession and occupation of H., as tenant to the plaintiff, to the injury of his reversionary estate and interest, the defendant pleaded that the messuage and premises were not in the possession and occupation of H. as tenant to the plaintiff, nor did the reversion belong to the plaintiff. It appeared at the trial that H. held at a profit rent of the plaintiff, who had a limited interest in the premises, but that H. had given up possession to the defendant a short time before the act complained of, without, however, assigning away his interest:—Held, first, that the plea was substantially proved, the plaintiff's right to the reversion in the premises being the substantial question raised by it. Hosking v. Phillips, 3 Ex. 168; 5 Railw. Cas. 560; 18 L. J., Ex. 1; 12 Jur. 1030.

Where Contradiction.]—Where, under a plea of not possessed, in an action for obstructing the plaintiff's wharf, the plaintiff gave general evidence of user for a long period:—Held, that the jury was properly directed to find for the plaintiff on such evidence, though the defendant put in the lease under which the plaintiff claimed, and which granted to the lessees the use of the locus in quo "for a sawpit, and for laying timber upon." Page v. Hatchett, 8 Q. B. 187; 15 L. J., Q. B. 281; 10 Jur. 634.

Upon possession for many years, the origin of it not appearing, and no title, except as cestui que trust, under a term to raise a sum of money, the court would not presume any other title, and, therefore, decreed the plaintiff to be let into possession on payment of the charge, but with reluctance, and, upon the laches, refused an account of the rents even from the filing of the bill. Acherley v. Roe, 5 Ves. 565.

Ownership of Land.]—To prove a right to the soil, acts of ownership exercised by one party are conclusive evidence against a supposed title from boundaries which have never been ascertained. Curson v. Lomax, 5 Esp. 60.

Evidence that the plaintiff took the crops of grass, and that the defendant grazed the aftermath, is rather consistent with the ownership of the land being in the plaintiff than in the defendant. Ford v. Lacy, 2 F. & F. 354.

Land had been in the possession of the parish officers for nearly sixty years, and no evidence that it had ever been in the possession of any other person since the will of the testator, the date of which was unknown. There was some slight evidence of a house which once stood on it having been an almshouse. The court treated it as parish land, and directed a mortgage to be made to repay funds borrowed for its improvement. Dixon's Trust, In re, 1 W. R. 244.

Soil of Highway.]—Where a deed of conveyance of land contiguous to a highway described the parcels, giving the acreage to the thousandth part of an acre by reference to an ordnance map, and to a schedule and plan drawn on the conveyance, the measurements and corresponding numbers and colouring of which did not include any portion of the highway, and further contained a recital that the trees on the land to be sold had been valued and the amount of the valuation—which in fact did not include any of the trees upon the highway—formed part of the purchase-money:—Held, that the presumption of law that a moiety of the highway passed by the conveyance was rebutted. Berridge v. Ward (10 C. B. (N.S.) 400) distinguished. Pryor v. Petre, 63 L. J., Ch. 531; [1894] 2 Ch. 11; 7 R. 424; 70 L. T. 331; 42 W. R. 435—C. A.

The presumption that the soil of a highway belongs to the owner of the adjoining land, usque ad medium filum viæ, does not apply to ground which was intended to be used as a highway, but has never been dedicated to the public; and if the owner of the soil of the intended highway disposes of the adjoining land by conveyances in which it is described as bounded by the intended highway, the grantees do not acquire by presumption of law the ownership of the soil of the intended highway. Leigh v. Jack, 49 L. J., Ex. 220; 5 Ex. D. 264; 42 L. T. 463; 28 W. R. 452; 44 J. P. 488—C. A.

—— Crown Grant of Rights in Town.]—By a charter of 1215 King John granted to the corporation of Droitwich quicquid scilicet habemus in eadem villa to have and to hold to the burgesses for ever. There was no proof that certain streets in the borough ever were the property of the king in his demesne:—Held, that the presumption that the soil of these streets was vested in the adjoining owners was not rebutted by such grant. Salt Union v. Harvey, 61 J. P. 375.

Mines and Minerals.]—Primâ facie the owner of land is entitled to the surface itself, and all below it ex jure naturæ; who seek to derogate from that right must do so by virtue of some grant or conveyance. Rowbottom v. Wilson, 8 H. L. Cas. 348.

No presumption of a grant of mines against an express reservation on a sale many years ago, merely from permitting expenditure without claim. Norway v. Rowe, 19 Ves. 156. See 12 R. R. 157, and 21 R. R. 469.

Underground Water.]—No length of enjoyment of water percolating underground to a deep well raises a presumption of a grant of a right to the water from adjoining owners of the ground under which the water percolates. Chasemore v. Richards, 7 H. L. Cas. 349; 29 L. J., Ex. 81; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 873; 7 W. R. 685. And see Ewart v. Belfast Poor Law Guardians, 9 L. R., Ir. 172—C. A.

Commons.]—Where user is shewn for sixty years and upwards, the law presumes a grant in accordance with that user. Sewers Commissioners v. Glasse, Epping Forest Case, 44 L. J., Ch. 129; L. R. 19 Eq. 134; 31 L. T. 495; 23 W. R. 102.

When user is shewn for sixty years and upwards, the law presumes a grant in accordance with that user; but the person over whose soil the user is proved to have been exercised may defeat the presumption by documentary evidence to approve against common of turbary and estovers. Lascelles v. Onslow (Lord), 46 L. J., Q. B. 333; 2 Q. B. D. 433; 36 L. T. 459; 25 W. R. 496.

In order to make a right of pasture over common or lammas lands appurtenant to particular lands there must be some relation between the enjoyment of the right and the enjoyment of the particular lands; that is, there must be some connection between the beasts used on those particular lands and the number or description of beasts that may be depastured on the common or lammas lands; as, for instance, where the right claimed is for the beasts which plough the particular lands: or, for every beast used on such lands not exceeding a certain number. In an action claiming rights of pasture, or rights of a like nature, it is the duty of the court, as far as possible, to attribute a legal origin to such rights, where there is evidence of long-continued user, but that duty can only be discharged at the trial. Baylis v. Tyssen-Amhurst, 46 L. J., Ch. 718; 6 Ch. D. 500; 37 L. T. 493.

The freehold tenants of a manor must have in common some rights over the waste as against the lord; and therefore one freehold tenant, claiming by prescription on a presumed grant, can sue on behalf of himself and all the other freehold tenants to protect their rights over the waste of the manor as against the lord. Where rights of common have been exercised for many years, the court will try to find a legal origin for those rights. Warrick v. Queen's College, Oxford, 40 L. J., Ch. 780; L. R. 6 Ch. 716; 25 L. T. 254; 19 W. R. 1098.

—— Crown Grant.]—A right claimed by the inhabitants of a parish to cut and carry away for use as fuel in their own houses fagots or haskets of the underwood growing upon a common belonging to the lord of the manor cannot exist by custom, prescription or grant, unless it is a Crown grant which incorporates the inhabitants. Rivers (Lord) v. Adams, 48 L. J., Ex. 47; 3 Ex. D. 361; 39 L. T. 39; 27 W. R. 381.

Such a Crown grant will not be presumed from proof of user by inhabitants if the presumption is inconsistent with the past and existing state of things, and there is no trace of such a corporation having existed at any time. Ib.

Such a presumption would, moreover, be wholly unreasonable in a case where at the time when the corporation was supposed to be in existence and entitled to the right, the tenants of the manor were exercising inconsistent rights and asserting their entire control over the underwood. Ib.

The user must be connected with the right claimed. Ib.

A prescriptive right to cut underwood in respect of a particular house is not established by proof of user when the only evidence is that the right was exercised in respect of the inhabitants of the parish generally. Ib.

—— Act of Parliament.]—A right of lopwood, lying within a manor, that is, a right in the inhabitants of a parish at certain periods of the year to lop for fuel the branches of trees growing upon the waste lands of the manor, cannot be created by custom or prescription, or otherwise than by Crown grant or act of parliament. Chilton v. London Corporation, 47 L. J., Ch. 433; 7 Ch. D. 735; 38 L. T. 498; 26 W. R. 474.

Semble, a grant to the "inhabitants" of a parish lying within a manor of a profit à prendre out of the manorial waste, means a grant to the inhabitants of houses lawfully erected within the parish, and does not extend to the inhabitants of houses which, through having been erected on the waste, illegally interfere with the right claimed. Ib.

The court will not presume a non-existent act of parliament as an origin for an alleged right. Ib.

—— Pasture.]—A claim of exclusive right of common for cattle, sheep and other commonable animals, levant and couchant, is not conclusive that the right claimed is in its nature appurtenant, but such right may have had its origin in a grant in gross. Johnson v. Barnes, 42 L. J., C. P. 259; L. R. 8 C. P. 527; 29 L. T. 65—Ex. Ch.

If such right is shewn to have existed in gross without question for a long period of time, it ought to be sustained. Ib.

The recognition and repetition of releases from the sixteenth century downwards without question, is evidence that the right admitted of severance by its original grant. Ib.

—— Allotment of.]—Where a conveyance was, inter alia, of four acres and a half, dispersed in the common field of A., in 1784, and a subsequent conveyance was made in 1818, reciting an allotment under an act passed in 1801, for inclosing part of the parish of A., in lieu of five acres of common field lands:—Held, that, in the absence of anything to raise the presumption of the allotment having been made in respect of other lands, the court would assume it to have been made in respect of the common lands comprised in the deed of 1784, and the title in 1841 to be unobjectionable. Major v. Ward, 5 Hare, 604. And see COMMON.

Fishing Mill-dam.]—Where a mill-dam has been standing for more than 110 years, and had been used for over sixty years in the same manner continuously:—Held, that a presumption was raised that the adjoining proprietors along the river bank had granted a right for its erection. Leconfield (Lord) v. Lonsdale (Earl), 39 L. J., C. P. 305; L. R. 5 C. P. 657; 23 L. T. 155; 18 W. R. 1165.

Fishery.]—Long exclusive enjoyment of a right to a several fishery in a public navigable river is sufficient primâ facie evidence upon which to presume that the Crown had granted a separate right before Magna Charta, yet the omission of any reference to such right, or any reasonable ground for considering that the user had not been exclusive, may be sufficient to negative such a presumption. Edgar v. English Fisheries Commissioners, 23 L. T. 732.

A prescriptive right to a several oyster fishery in a navigable tidal river was proved to have been exercised from time immemorial by a borough corporation and its lessees, without any qualification except that the free inhabitants of ancient tenements in the borough had from time immemorial without interruption, and claiming as of right, exercised the privilege of dredging for oysters in the locus in quo from the 2nd of February to Easter eve in each year, and of catching and carrying away the same without stint for sale and otherwise. This usage of the inhabitants tended to the destruction of the fishery, and if continued would destroy it:—Held (Lord Blackburn dissenting), that the claim of the inhabitants was not to a profit à prendre in alieno solo; that a lawful origin for the usage ought to be presumed if reasonably possible; and that the presumption which ought to be drawn, as reasonable in law and probable in fact, was that the original grant to the corporation was subject to a trust or condition in favour of the free inhabitants of ancient tenements in the borough in accordance with the usage. Goodman v. Saltash Corporation, 52 L. J., Q. B. 193; 7 App. Cas. 633; 48 L. T. 239; 31 W. R. 293; 47 J. P. 276—H. L. (E.)

Access of Air to Chimney of Dwelling-house.]—The access of air to the chimneys of a building cannot, as against the occupier of neighbouring land, be claimed either as a natural right of property, or as an easement by prescription from the time of legal memory, or by a lost grant, or under the Prescription Act (2 & 3 Will. 4, c. 71). Webb v. Bird (infra) followed. Bryant v. Lefever, 48 L. J., C. P. 380; 4 C. P. D. 172; 40 L. T. 579; 27 W. R. 592—C. A.

An enjoyment of an unobstructed current of air to a windmill for thirty years raises no presumption of an implied grant by the adjoining owners of a right to it. Webb v. Bird, 13 C. B. (N.S.) 841; 31 L. J., C. P. 335; 8 Jur. (N.S.) 621—Ex. Ch.

Sign-board of Public-house.]—The plaintiffs, the owners of a public-house, claimed the right to affix a sign-board to the wall of the defendant's house. The sign-board had been so affixed for upwards of forty years. The two houses had formerly belonged to the same owner, the defendant's house having been granted away by such owner before the plaintiffs' house. When he first became owner of the two houses the plaintiffs' house was not occupied as a public-house. It did not, however, appear whether the sign-board was first affixed to the defendant's house during the common ownership:—Held, that it could not be assumed that it was first affixed during the common ownership. Moody v. Steggles, 48 L. J., Ch. 639; 12 Ch. D. 261; 41 L. T. 25.

Held, also, that the easement claimed was a legal one, and that a grant of it by the defendant's predecessors in title to the plaintiffs' predecessors in title must be presumed. And an injunction was granted to restrain the defendants from removing the sign-board. Ib.

And see EASEMENT.

2. As to Identity.

Names.]—It is not necessary to prove strictly the identity of the defendant with the person of the same name, concerning whom a witness gives evidence. The similarity of the names is sufficient to put the defendant to the proof that he is not the person spoken of. Hamber v. Roberts, 7 C. B. 861; 18 L. J., C. P. 250.

It is primâ facie proof of identity, if a name is written up in an auction room, and the auctioneer is addressed by the bystanders by that name. Collier v. Nokes, 2 Car. & K. 1012.

The plaintiff was appointed engineer to a railway company at a meeting of the provisional committee. The defendant had previously agreed to join the committee, and had forwarded applications for shares, but whether before or after the meeting was uncertain. An individual answering to the defendant's name was present at the meeting, and visited the office of the company:—Held, that there was no evidence of the defendant's identity with that individual. Giles v. Cornfoot, 2 Car. & K. 653.

In an action for medicines and attendances by an apothecary, he put in evidence a licence from the Apothecaries' Company to practise as such, granted to a person bearing the same christian and surname:—Held, that this was sufficient primâ facie evidence to shew his identity with the person named in the licence. Simpson v. Dismore, 9 M. & W. 47; 1 D. (N.S.) 357; 11 L. J., Ex. 137; 5 Jur. 1012. S. P., Russell v. Smyth, 1 D. (N.S.) 929; 9 M. & W. 810; 11 L. J., Ex. 308.

Declaration as to.]—If a carman takes goods to the house of L., not knowing him, and asks for Mr. L. of a person whom he finds in the house, and that person says, "I am Mr. L.," this is primâ facie evidence that he was L. Wilton v. Edwards, 6 Car. & P. 677.

In an action against S., it was proved that a witness went to a tavern and asked a waiter if S. was there, and on a person coming out to the witness, the latter asked him who he was, and he said his name was S. The witness had not known the defendant before, and had never seen him since:—Held, that this was some proof that this person was S., and that the conversation between the witness and this person was receivable. Reynolds v. Staines, 2 Car. & K. 745.

An action having been brought against William Henderson, for negligently navigating a vessel, and the circumstances under which the collision took place having been proved, it was objected that no evidence had been given that the defendant was the pilot in charge of the vessel; whereupon the plaintiff's counsel called out, "Mr. Henderson," upon which a person in court answered, "Here," and said, "I am the pilot." It was proved by a person who had gone on board the vessel at the time of the accident, that he had seen that person then acting as pilot:—Held, that this was sufficient evidence of the identity of the defendant with the pilot. Smith v. Henderson, 9 M. & W. 798; 2 D. (N.S.) 245; 11 L. J., Ex. 315.

But where a person, on being sent by the defendant, an indorser of a bill of exchange, to the plaintiff, the indorsee, to inquire as to the solvency of B., a prior indorser, went to the plaintiff's residence, and, on the street door being opened, a person in a dressing-gown, whom he had never seen before or since, asked him what his business was:—Held, not sufficient evidence of identity to let in evidence of the conversation. Corfield v. Parsons, 1 C. & M. 730; 3 Tyr. 806; 2 L. J., Ex. 262.

Handwriting.]—In support of a plea of coverture, alleging the marriage of the defendant with one J. G., a copy of the marriage register was put in evidence, and a witness was called, who stated, that he was acquainted with one J. G., that he had inspected the original register, and that one of the signatures to it was in the handwriting of the J. G. whom he knew:—Held, that this was evidence of the identity of J. G., without the original register being produced. Sayer v. Glossop, 2 Ex. 409; 17 L. J., Ex. 300; 12 Jur. 465.

In an action against Henry Thomas Ryde, as acceptor of a bill of exchange, it appeared that a Henry Thomas Ryde had kept cash at the bank where the bill was made payable, and had drawn cheques which the cashier had paid. The cashier knew the party's handwriting by the cheques, and swore that the acceptance was in the same writing; but he had not paid any cheques for some time, did not know the party personally, and could not further identify him with the defendant:—Held, a sufficient primâ facie case. Roden v. Ryde, 4 Q. B. 626; 3 G. & D. 604; 12 L. J., Q. B. 276; 7 Jur. 213.

In an action on a bill of exchange, directed to Charles Banner Crawford, East India House, and accepted C. B. Crawford, a witness stated that the acceptance was in the handwriting of C. B. Crawford, and that he was formerly in the India House, but the witness could not tell whether that person was the defendant in the suit:—Held, that the evidence was sufficient without proof of identity. Greenshields v. Crawford, 9 M. & W. 314; 1 D. (N.S.) 439; 11 L. J., Ex. 372; 6 Jur. 303.

Belief.]—In order to prove the publication of a libellous pamphlet in an action, a witness said that she received from the defendant a copy of a pamphlet, of which she read some portions, and lent it to several persons in succession, who returned it to her, and although there was no mark by which she could identify it, she believed the copy produced to be the same, but could not swear that it was:—Held, that this was evidence of publication proper to be left to the jury. Fryer v. Gathercole, 4 Ex. 262; 18 L. J., Ex. 389; 13 Jur. 542.

Circumstantial Evidence.]—Identity may be proved by circumstantial evidence. Rooker v. Rooker and Newton, 3 Sw. & Tr. 526; 33 L. J., Mat. 42; 9 Jur. (N.S.) 1329; 12 W. R. 807.

Question for Jury.]—Identity of names in certificates of births, baptisms, marriages and burials, with the persons to whom they are alleged to refer, is for the jury. Hubbard v. Lees, 4 H. & C. 418; 35 L. J., Ex. 169; L. R. 1 Ex. 255; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 435; 14 L. T. 367; 14 W. R. 694.

3. Of Birth, Legitimacy, Sanity, and Life.

Birth.]—Where there was a claim to a share of a residuary personal estate, the title to which depended upon the question whether a child en ventre sa mère at the time of the death of its father was or was not born alive:—Held, that there was sufficient to prove the existence of life in the child after its separation from its mother, there being proof of the performance of one clear vital function—pulsation. Brock v. Kellock, 3 Giff. 58. Affirmed, 30 L. J., Ch. 498; 7 Jur. (N.S.) 789; 4 L. T. 572; 9 W. R. 939—L.JJ.

The opinions of eminent medical men, that, in the absence of clear evidence of respiration, clear evidence of pulsation and of animal motion must not be taken as a proof of the existence of animal life, not supported. Ib.

The proposition, that unless there is proof of the performance of all three functions essential to vitality, there is no proof that vitality was known to exist, not adopted. Ib.

The opinions of certain medical practitioners, that unless respiration, which is one of the vital functions, is proved to have taken place, there is no sufficient evidence that a child was born alive, not adopted generally by the medical profession. Ib.

And see Criminal Law.

Legitimacy of Children.]—The presumption in favour of the legitimacy of a child born in wedlock is not a presumptio juris et de jure, but may be rebutted by evidence, which must be clear and conclusive and not merely resting on a balance of probabilities. Bosville v. Att.-Gen., 56 L. J., P. 97; 12 P. D. 177; 57 L. T. 88; 36 W. R. 79.

And see tit. Bastardy, Vol. II. col. 1430.

Sanity.]—The presumption that every man is sane until the contrary is proved, is not a presumption of law, but a presumption of fact, or, at the most, a mixed presumption of law and fact. Sutton v. Sadler, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 87; 26 L. J., C. P. 284; 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1150; 5 W. R. 880.

See also Criminal Law.

Life.]—There is no absolute presumption of law as to the continuance of life, nor any absolute presumption against a party doing an act because the doing of it would make him guilty of an offence against the law. In every instance the circumstances of the case must be considered. Lapsley v. Grierson, 1 H. L. Cas. 498.

There is no presumption of law in favour of the continuance of life, though an inference of fact may legitimately be drawn that a person alive and in health on a certain day was alive a short time afterwards. Phené's Trusts, In re, 39 L. J., Ch. 316; L. R. 5 Ch. 139; 22 L. T. 111; 18 W. R. 303.

Where the issue is as to the life or death of a person once existing, the proof lies on the party asserting the death. Wilson v. Hodges, 2 East, 312; 6 R. R. 427.

4. Of Death and Survivorship.

Death—Person not Heard of for Seven Years—Onus probandi.]—By deed, dated in 1866, trusts of personalty were declared, after the death of the settlor, in favour of a person by name. The named person had not been heard of since 1861. There was no evidence as to the date of his death, and on the death of the settlor her representatives claimed the money, contending that there was a resulting trust in her favour:—Held, that where a trust was declared by deed in favour of a named person, such person must, until the contrary was shewn, be taken to have been in existence at the date of the deed: that the onus of proving his death before that date lay on the representatives of the settlor, and as it had not been discharged by them, there was no resulting trust, and the money must be paid to the representatives of the named person. Corbishley's Trusts, In re, 49 L. J., Ch. 266; 14 Ch. D. 846; 28 W. R. 536.

If a person has not been heard of for seven years, there is a presumption of law that he is dead; but at what particular time within that period he died is not a matter of presumption, but of evidence, and the onus of proving that the death took place at any particular time within the seven years lies upon the person who claims a right to the establishment of which that fact is essential. Phené's Trusts, In re, 39 L. J., Ch. 316; L. R. 5 Ch. 139; 22 L. T. 111; 18 W. R. 303.

There is no presumption of law in favour of the continuance of life, though an inference of fact may legitimately be drawn that a person alive and in health on a certain day was alive a short time afterwards. Ib.

A. died on the 5th of January, 1861, having bequeathed his residuary estate equally between his nephews and nieces. One of his nephews, N., was born in 1829, had gone to America in 1853, had frequently written home till August, 1858, when he wrote from on board an American ship of war, but from that time no letter had been received from him, and nothing was afterwards heard about him, except that he was entered in the books of the American navy as having deserted on the 16th of June, 1860, while on leave:—Held, that his personal representative had not established a title to any share of the estate, and that it must be divided among the nephews and nieces who were proved to have survived the testator. Ib.

The death of a legatee is presumed after he has not been heard of for seven years, and there is no presumption of law that he lived beyond the first day of the seven years; but the onus of proving that he survived a given day lies on those who claim under him. And the fact that the person who takes in case of a lapse, whether as next of kin or as residuary legatee, is the one to commence proceedings to obtain payment of the money to himself, does not shift the onus of proof. Lewes' Trusts, In re, 40 L. J., Ch. 602; L. R. 6 Ch. 356; 24 L. T. 533; 19 W. R. 617.

A person emigrated to Australia under circumstances showing that he was likely to communicate constantly with his family in Ireland, and having so communicated with them for some time, then ceased to do so, and was not heard of for more than seven years. From his last letter it was probable that, had he lived, he would have continued to write home. Inquiries were made by his family concerning him, and advertisements published, but with no result:—Held, that there was sufficient primâ facie evidence to establish a title depending on his death without issue during the lifetime of a person who died after the expiration of the seven years, and to authorise the Landed Estates Court to proceed on a petition for sale of lands held under that title. Webb's Trusts, In re, Ir. R. 5 Eq. 235—C. A.

Where a party has not been heard of for seven years after going abroad he will, at the expiration of that time, be presumed to be dead, but there is no presumption raised by the law as to the time when the death actually took place; this is a matter concerning which the jury must form their opinion upon the particular facts of the case. Doe d. Knight v. Nepean, 2 N. & M. 219; 5 B. & Ad. 86; 2 L. J., K. B. 150. S. C., Nepean v. Doe d. Knight, 2 M. & W. 894; 7 L. J., Ex. 335—Ex. Ch.

Where a person has not been heard of for seven years, there is no presumption of law that he died at any particular period during that time; and it is for the party alleging that he was not alive four years after he was last heard of to prove that fact. Lambe v. Orton, 29 L. J., Ch. 286; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 61; 1 L. T. 290; 8 W. R. 111.

A person ought not to be presumed to be dead, from the fact of his not having been heard of for seven years, if the other circumstances of the case render it probable that he would not be heard of though alive. Watson v. England, 14 Sim. 28; 8 Jur. 1062.

The presumption of death after seven years' absence does not arise where the probability of intelligence is rebutted by circumstances. Bowden v. Henderson, 2 Sm. & G. 360.

When a person has not been heard of for seven years the presumption of law is that he is dead, but there is no presumption when he died; and he must be taken to have lived to the end of the seven years. Dunn v. Snowden, 2 Drew. & Sm. 201; 32 L. J., Ch. 104; 7 L. T. 558; 11 W. R. 160.

Although the law presumes a person who has not been heard of for seven years to be dead, yet, in the absence of special circumstances, it draws no presumption from that fact as to the particular period when he died; and the onus of proving death at any particular period of time within the seven years lies with the party alleging death at such particular time. Thomas v. Thomas, 2 Drew. & Sm. 298; 11 L. T. 47; 13 W. R. 225.

Where a tenant for life has not been seen or heard of for fourteen years, by a person resident near the estate on which he resided, although not a member of his family, it is primâ facie evidence of the death of such tenant. Doe d. Lloyd v. Deakin, 4 B. & Ald. 433; 23 R. R. 335.

If a person has not been heard of for seven years, there is a presumption of law that he is dead; but there is no presumption as to when, during the seven years he died. The person upon whom it rests to prove, either that he was alive or dead at a particular time, must do so by distinct evidence. Rhodes, In re, Rhodes v. Rhodes, 56 L. J., Ch. 825; 36 Ch. D. 586; 57 L. T. 652.

A. R. was last heard of in 1873; but there was no evidence as to when he died. He died entitled to a sum of money, which had recently been paid to his administrator:—Held, that (in the absence of any evidence as to when he died) neither his next of kin in 1873, nor his next of kin in 1880, were entitled to have the money paid to them. Ib.

Although there is no legal presumption as to the actual time of death, there is a presumption at law, when a party has been absent and not heard of for seven years, that he is dead. The plaintiffs having insured the life interest of one H. with the defendant insurance company for the better security of certain advances to H., and H. not having been seen or heard of for a period of over seven years:—Held, that H. must be taken to be dead, and that the plaintiffs were entitled to the amount of the life policy and bonuses. Willyams v. Scottish Widows Fund, 52 J. P. 471.

In the absence of special circumstances, until a person has been unaccounted for for seven years, there is no presumption of law that he is alive or dead. After the expiration of that period there is a presumption of law that he is dead; and the onus of proving either before or after the lapse of such period that a person was alive or dead within that period is upon the person alleging the fact. There is no presumption of law in favour of continuance of life, but there is a disputable presumption of fact in favour of continuance of life, for any reasonable time after a person has been last heard of. Connor, In

The Court of Chancery, following the analogy of 7 Will. 3, c. 8, s. 1, acts upon the general rule, that a man's death is to be presumed after an interval of seven years since he was last heard of; but the rule admits of exceptions, and the court is bound to consider the circumstances of the particular case, in order to see whether the presumption is rebutted, or, rather, whether it fairly arises. M'Mahon v. M'Elroy, Ir. R. 5 Eq. 1.

In 1859 a suit for administration was instituted by the tenant for life. The mortgagee obtained, under an order made in 1860, liberty to enter, and did enter, into possession of the rents for the purpose of keeping down the interest on her mortgage, and paying the balance to the tenant for life. On a petition presented by the same parties for an account of arrears of rent received by the mortgagee:—Held, that the petitioners had been guilty of no laches in not filing their petition till the expiration of seven years after the disappearance of the tenant for life, and that they were, therefore, entitled to an account of rents; but that there was no fiduciary relation between the mortgagee and the petitioners, and therefore, they were only entitled to arrears for six years before the filing of the petition. Hickman v. Upsall, 46 L. J., Ch. 245; 4 Ch. D. 144; 35 L. T. 919; 25 W. R. 175.

When a man has not been heard of for seven years, there can be no presumption of his death until the expiration of that period; those who allege the death within that period are bound to prove the fact. Consequently, where a legacy was left to a man who was last heard of in 1854, by a testator who died in 1860:—Held, not to have lapsed, but to be payable to his personal representatives. Benham, In re, 36 L. J., Ch. 502; L. R. 4 Eq. 416; 16 L. T. 349; 15 W. R. 741.

But on appeal the court required evidence as to the time of death, and could not come to a decision on the point upon mere presumption; and inquiries were directed accordingly. S. C., 37 L. J., Ch. 265; 17 L. T. 180; 16 W. R. 180.

D., in 1814, sailed from Liverpool for Rio de Janeiro, and had never since been heard of. The plaintiff, as next of kin, claimed a fund to which D. had become entitled; but the defendant, into whose possession as trustee the fund came in 1844, retained it in his own hands, and refused to pay it over to the plaintiff, without receiving direct and positive proof of the death of D.:—Held, that the trustee must pay over the whole fund, together with interest at 5*l.* per cent. from the time when he ought to have invested it, and also the costs of the suit. Dobson v. Pattinson, 3 Jur. (N.S.) 1202; 5 W. R. 771.

Payment of money out of court ordered to an administratix of a person presumed to be dead, not having been heard of for more than seven years; the court being satisfied with such evidence of death as was thought sufficient by the Ecclesiastical Court in granting administration. Dunsmure v. Boulderson, 5 Jur. 958.

A person who, if living, would have been entitled to a share of residue, as one of the next of kin, but who left England seventeen years ago, and had never since returned or been heard of, was presumed to be dead. Buckman v. Ives, 6 L. J., Ch. 197; 1 Jur. 234.

Testator by his will, dated in 1828, bequeathed a fifth of his residue to W. R., E. R., and J. R., and all other the children of J. R. the elder, and the issue of such of his children as should have departed this life, such issue to take such portion of the fifth as their parents would have taken if living. The testator died in 1829. J. R. the elder had two children besides those named in the will. One of them, N. R., went abroad in 1809, and had not been heard of since 1815. Both before and after the testator's death, endeavours were made, by inquiries and advertisements, to ascertain whether N. R. were living or dead, but without success:—Held, that he must be presumed to have died before the date of the will, but nevertheless that his children were entitled to the share which he would have taken if he had survived the testator. Rust v. Baker, 8 Sim. 443.

A reference was made to the Master, to inquire whether A. B. was living or dead. He reported certain facts and findings on stated evidence, showing that, after diligent inquiry, nothing had been heard of A. B. for more than seven years; and he found that he was not able to state to the court whether A. B. was living or dead. On petition to confirm the report, the court read and considered the evidence, and came to a conclusion presuming the death. Grissall v. Stelfox, 9 Jur. 890. And see Wilcock v. Purchase, Id. 891, n.

There is no absolute presumption of law as to the continuance of life, nor any absolute presumption against a party doing an act because the doing of it would make him guilty of an offence against the law. In every instance the circumstances of the case must be considered. Rex v. Twyning (2 B. & Ald. 386; 20 R. R. 480) explained. Lapsley v. Grierson, 1 H. L. Cas. 498.

Where a man entitled to a legacy has not been heard of for fifteen years, and was supposed to have gone to Australia, where he had been inquired (but not advertised) for without success, the court refused to transfer the principal to parties claiming to be his legal personal representatives, but directed an inquiry. Allin, In re, 17 L. T. 60; 15 W. R. 1164.

Evidence of absence, and not being heard of for thirty years, sufficient to intend death of mortgagee, on bill by mortgagor to redeem. Masten v. Cookson, 2 Eq. Abr. 414.

Presumption of death of legatee, after twenty-seven years, without any intelligence about him; but when the court makes a reference to the Master in any such instance, it expects the Master to draw a conclusion, and not to rest content with a bare statement of facts. Dixon v. Dixon, 3 Bro. C. C. 510.

Payment ordered where one party entitled had not been heard of for twenty years, upon recognizance to refund. Bailey v. Hammond, 7 Ves. 590.

The presumption of death from length of time has relation to the commencement of that period. Webster v. Birchmore, 13 Ves. 362.

A tenant for life of a fund in court was transported in 1838, and had not since been heard of. Upon an application made in 1852, by the remaindermen, for payment, the court would only direct payment of the dividends to them, and required an undertaking to replace the amount out of the capital, if the tenant for life should be still alive. Mileham's Trust, In re, 15 Beav. 507.

Presumption of the death of a person not heard of for many years. Lyford's Settlement, In re, 17 Jur. 570.

A husband and wife in America, by a deed of separation, agreed to live apart, and that the wife should be at liberty to carry on business, &c., and to retain for her own use all her present and future property, in any way acquired. Subsequently a legacy, having accrued in right of the wife, was carried to the account of the husband and wife. Nothing having been heard of the husband for fourteen years, on a petition presented by the wife, asking the transfer to her of the stock, the court directed the stock to be sold, and the proceeds paid to her on her sole receipt. Whitworth v. Dilworth, 2 Sm. & G. 35; 18 Jur. 445.

Where, on a motion to take the bill off the file, on the ground that the plaintiff was not alive in 1839, when the suit was instituted, the affidavit in support thereof stated that the plaintiff went to America in 1824, and had not since been heard of by the defendant. No direct evidence was produced by the other side that the plaintiff was living, nor the date of any letter from him since 1827:—Held, that the circumstances afforded sufficient ground of suspicion to direct a reference to the Master as to that fact. Howe v. Maclean, 9 L. J., Ex. Eq. 1.

A sum of money was set apart, in 1815, to answer an annuity to a woman then supposed to be resident in India, but who was never afterwards heard of. In 1837, the Master having certified, upon presumption, that she was dead, but without finding when she died, the court ordered payment of the principal money to the party entitled to it, subject to the annuity. In 1842, the Master having certified, upon presumption, that she had died in 1822, and that no personal representative had been heard of, the court ordered immediate payment to the same party of the accumulations since that time. And in 1847 it ordered payment of the rest of the fund to the same party though resident abroad, upon his giving his personal security to refund in case the annuitant or her personal representative should ever establish a claim. Cuthbert v. Purrier, 2 Ph. 199; 6 Jur. 447.

—— Less than Seven Years—Special Circumstances.]—A person who was entitled to the dividends on stock payable in April and October, applied for his dividends in April, 1860, and was last seen in August in the same year, when he was in a very bad state of health. He never applied for his half-yearly dividends in the ensuing October. It appeared that he was of very dissolute habits, and chiefly depended on the dividends for his maintenance. The question being whether he died before November, 1860:—Held, that not having applied for the dividends due to him in October, 1860, and having regard to the state of his health when last seen, the presumption must be that he died before November, 1860. Beasney's Trusts, In re, 38 L. J., Ch. 159; L. R. 7 Eq. 498; 19 L. T. 630.

A tenant for life entitled beneficially under a will assigned her interests to secure the repayment of certain advances, and the premiums on policies on her life. At the end of March, 1866, a small sum of money, usually paid quarterly, was paid to her. Shortly afterwards she went on a pedestrian tour, and had never been heard of since. The small sum which became payable at the end of June was never applied for:—Held, that the presumption was that she was dead; that on the evidence she could not be presumed to have died before June, 1866; but that she must be taken to have died soon after June, 1866. Hickman v. Upsall, L. R. 20 Eq. 136; 23 W. R. 776.

A sailor left his ship at the end of 1849 or very early in 1850, and had not since been heard of:—Held, that if he was shown to have intended to desert, it could not be presumed that he was dead in May, 1850; but that if he intended to return to his ship, then the court would assume that he had met with an accident, by which he perished a very short time after leaving the vessel, and before May, 1850. Lakin v. Lakin, 34 Beav. 443.

Where parties sailed from an island in the West Indies before the hurricane months, and were never again heard of, it was presumed after the seven years from their being last seen had elapsed, that they died before the expiration of the period commonly known by the name of the hurricane months, that is, the period between the 1st of August and the 10th of January, and therefore before the 24th of January. Sillick v. Booth, 1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 117; 11 L. J., Ch. 41.

An issue to try the question was, under the circumstances, refused by the court. Ib.

In July, 1852, H. quitted England for America, and wrote home announcing his safe arrival at New York. There was evidence that he was in declining health when he quitted England, and that, from his character, education and previous life, he would, if living, have communicated with his friends in England. Advertisements requesting information concerning him had been inserted in the American newspapers, but he was never heard of again. The father of H. died in September, 1853, intestate. One of the next of kin of the father, supposing the son to have predeceased him, filed a bill for the administration of the father's estate:—Held, that there was primâ facie evidence of the death of H. in his father's lifetime to entitle him to have the personal estate secured in court. Danby v. Danby, 5 Jur. (N.S.) 54.

—— Non-production of Cestui que Vie.]—The devisee of land in case of the death of another without having issue is a person who has a claim in expectancy to an estate after the death of a person, within the meaning of 6 Anne, c. 18, s. 1. A close of land was devised to T. in fee, but in case she should die without leaving lawful issue, to others. T. married and left her husband, having had no issue. He died in May, 1888. Orders were made in June and August, 1888, respectively that A. who had bought the interest of T., should produce her first at W. church door, secondly, in court; she not having been produced, and A. not having proved that she was alive:—The court ordered that she should be taken to be dead. Pople, In re, Baker, Ex parte, 58 L. J., Ch. 372; 40 Ch. D. 589; 60 L. T. 668; 37 W. R. 554.

—— Contradictory Evidence.]—Upon a bill of discovery in aid of a defence at law, and an injunction to restrain the proceedings at law, the court will not dissolve the injunction before the coming in of the defendant's answer, upon presumptive evidence of his death, if that evidence, though strong, be qualified by circumstances tending to a contrary conclusion. Janson v. Solarte, 2 Y. & Coll. 127; 6 L. J., Ex. Eq. 75.

—— Insufficient Evidence.]—A. left this country on the 9th of November, 1829. On the 16th of June, 1831, his brother-in-law received a letter from America on behalf of A., describing him as having changed his name to B. Three months after this A.'s wife sent a letter to him, addressed to him as B., by the hand of a friend, who could not find him. He was not heard of any more, and it did not appear that any other inquiries were made by his family:—Held, that on this state of facts, there was not sufficient information to ground presumption of death, still less of the particular period of death. Creed, In re, 1 Drew. 235.

—— Time of Death—Question for Jury.]—Where a vessel is proved to have sailed, and has not been heard of for two or three years, it is to be presumed that she is lost; but at what time an individual, who sailed on board of such vessel, perished, is to be collected by the jury from the particular circumstances of the case. Watson v. King, 1 Stark. 121. And see cases supra.

—— Grant of Administration.]—See post, WILL.

Proof of Death—Entry in Register.]—The proper way to prove the death of a person is by a certified copy of the entry in the register of deaths, but such evidence ought in general to be supported by an affidavit as to the fact of the burial. Riseley v. Shepherd, 21 W. R. 782.

—— And Production of Will.]—To prove that W. F. of L. was dead, his will, dated in 1817, from the Prerogative Court, was produced, and also an examined copy of the register of burials of L., of 1817, containing an entry of the burial of a W. F. of L. And it was stated by a niece of W. F. that he was dead, and that she had received a legacy of 100*l.* under his will, but was not at the place when he died:—Held, to be sufficient evidence of the death of W. F. Doe d. Hall v. Penfold, 8 Car. & P. 536.

—— Person Dying Abroad.]—Where a party dies abroad, and his will is proved, and the estate administered to there, and the property brought to this country, although there is no certificate of burial, the court will consider that sufficient evidence of death, and will direct payment to the executor. Jerrad v. Spicer, 11 W. R. 634.

—— Death at Sea.]—A sum of stock standing in court to the account of A. B. ordered to be transferred to C. D., the father and administrator of A. B., on evidence of letters from abroad to C. D., from the owner of the vessel, and his clerk, on board of which A. B. died, and of a foreign newspaper, announcing A. B.'s death on board the same vessel, and also on evidence of receipt and identity of a box containing a flute and mathematical instruments from abroad, which had been given to A. B. on his quitting this country, none of the crew of the vessel on board of which A. B. was stated to have died being in this country. Stickney v. Knight, 13 L. J., Ch. 101.

—— Lunatic.]—The court will never act on the allegation of the decease of a lunatic without proof of that fact by affidavit. Fermor, Ex parte, 1 W. R. 43.

—— Necessity for.]—Where a party dies since order for distributing the fund, the court will not vary the order without proof of death. Bell v. Bell, 2 W. R. 135.

—— Discretion of Bank of England.]—Evidence which the Court of Chancery may, in uncontested cases, consider sufficient to prove a death, is not necessarily binding and conclusive upon, or to be accepted as satisfactory by, the Bank of England. The bank has a discretion to exercise for its own protection and the benefit of the public; and the court will not compel it, when exercising that discretion bonâ fide, to depart from its own settled practice. Prosser v. Bank of England, 41 L. J., Ch. 327; L. R. 13 Eq. 611; 26 L. T. 60; 20 W. R. 362.

—— Recital in Private Act.]—Recital of the death of a prior tenant for life in a private act of parliament is, upon an application by a subsequent tenant for life for payment of the income, insufficient evidence of the death. Cowell v. Chambers, 21 Beav. 619.

—— Proof of Existence and Death—Search.]—Ejectment in 1849 by a reversioner for premises demised in 1801 for three lives and twenty-one years. Two of the cestuis que vie had died before 1828. No witness was called who had ever known the third; and except the mention of him in the lease (which described him as aged ten years), there was no proof that he had ever existed. No evidence of search for him was given:—Held, that to raise the presumption of his death there should have been evidence that he had not been heard of by those persons who would naturally have heard of him had he been alive, or that search had been ineffectually made to find such a person; and that the mere fact that no witness called had heard of him was not sufficient. Doe d. France v. Andrews, 15 Q. B. 756.

Direction to Jury—Action on Policy of Insurance.]—A policy on the life of Nutt was granted in 1863. An action was brought upon it in 1874, and the question was whether Nutt was then alive or dead. He had been absent from his former home for more than seven years, having left it in 1867. His sister and brother-in-law, who lived where he had formerly lived, gave evidence as to his absence, and said they had not heard of him for more than seven years. On cross-examination, they said that a niece of his had said that when she was in Melbourne, in December, 1872, or January, 1873, she saw a man whom she believed to be her uncle Nutt, but he was lost in the passing crowd before she was able to get to speak to him. No effort appeared to have been made to find him at Melbourne, and the other relatives believed the niece to have been mistaken. The jury expressed a similar opinion. The judge directed the jury that they "could not say that the man had not been heard of during the last seven years when one of his relatives declared that she had seen him alive and well within the last three years; and still less could they say that he had never been heard of, when all the members of the family stated that they had heard what she had stated," and "that the ground for the presumption of death from a man having been absent for seven years was entirely removed by the direct evidence that every relative had heard that he was alive." And lastly, the judge said to the jury: "Under these circumstances, unless you are prepared to find that he was dead in April, 1875, and find it upon evidence which tends to prove exactly the contrary, and in the absence of that evidence upon which alone the presumption should be raised of his death, your verdict ought to be for the defendant." The Court of Appeal considered this to be a misdirection, and ordered a venire de novo. On appeal, the lords were equally divided, and so the decision of the Appeal Court stood affirmed. Prudential Assurance Co. v. Edmonds, 2 App. Cas. 487.

—— Bigamy.]—In 1864 W. married A. In 1868 he was charged with bigamy in marrying B. in 1868, his wife A. being then alive, and was on such charge convicted. In 1879 he married C., and in 1880, C. being then alive, he married D. Afterwards, upon a charge of bigamy in marrying D., C. being then alive, W. was convicted, it being held by the presiding judge that there was no evidence that A. was alive when W. married C., or that the marriage with C. was invalid by reason of A. being then alive:—Held, that the conviction could not be sustained, as the question should have been left to the jury whether upon the above facts A. was alive or not when W. married C. Reg. v. Willshire, 50 L. J., M. C. 57; 6 Q. B. D. 366; 44 L. T. 222; 29 W. R. 473; 14 Cox, C. C. 541; 45 J. P. 375.

Of Death without Issue.]—After the lapse of a period of more than 100 years, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the death of a party without issue may be presumed. Doe d. Oldham v. Wolley, 8 B. & C. 22; 2 M. & Ry. 195; 3 Car. & P. 402; 6 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 286.

In pedigree cases, persons presumed to be dead are presumed to have died unmarried and without issue. Ib.

The pedigree of a claimant as a descendant from the seventh son of the first peer, who was so created by letters patent to hold to him and the heirs male of his body, stated that that peer left seven sons; that the issue of the first and second were extinct, and that the four next died without issue, there being no contemporaneous account of them, nor other evidence, except reputation in the family, which agreed with the pedigree:—Held, that it might be presumed they died without issue, more especially as, during a long contest for the dignity, no descendant from them claimed it. Roscommon's (Earl) Case, 6 Cl. & F. 97.

A woman emigrated, along with her husband and seven children, to America, in 1847, where she died in 1866, and not any of the children had been heard of for ten years preceding the trial:—Held, that it could not be presumed that all the seven children had died without issue. Mullaly v. Walsh, Ir. R. 6 C. L. 314.

In making a title by pedigree, evidence that a man has not been heard of for many years is sufficient evidence primâ facie to prove him dead without issue. Rowe v. Hasland, 1 W. Bl. 404.

Proof by one of a family that many years before a younger brother of the person last seised had gone abroad, and that the belief of the family was that he had died there, and that the witness had never heard in the family of his having been married, is primâ facie evidence that the party was dead without lawful issue, to entitle the next claimant by descent to recover in ejectment. Doe d. Banning v. Griffin, 15 East, 293; 13 R. R. 474.

In pedigree cases, an old will, by which the testator purports to leave all his property to collateral relations or friends, is regarded as very strong evidence of his having died without children. Hungate v. Gascoyne, 2 Ph. 25; 15 L. J., Ch. 382; 10 Jur. 625.

Survivorship.]—A young sailor was last seen in the summer of 1840 going to Portsmouth to embark. His grandmother died in March, 1841. It was presumed that he was the survivor. Tindall, In re, 30 Beav. 151.

A son, first tenant in tail in remainder, left this country on the 11th of April, 1858, and was never heard of afterwards; his father, tenant for life, died on the 8th of May, 1858:—Held, in 1872, that it should be presumed that the son survived the father. Pennefather v. Pennefather, Ir. R. 6 Eq. 171.

A sailor, who left England in May, 1845, on the Arctic expedition with Sir John Franklin, and who had not been heard of since June, 1845, was presumed in 1856, under particular circumstances, to have survived another person who died in 1850. Ommaney v. Stilwell, 23 Beav. 328; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1058.

A. went abroad in September, 1830; his father died in September, 1833; about twenty months previous to that time A. was heard of for the last time. The court ordered a share of the father's residue bequeathed to A. to be transferred to his brother, as the sole next of kin of the father living at the father's death, on the brother giving security to refund it in case A. should be living, or should have died after his father. Dowley v. Winfield, 14 Sim. 277; 8 Jur. 972.

—— Insufficient Proof of.]—A testator gave a legacy to be equally divided, within twelve months, between the children of P. who should be living at his, the testator's death, such sum to be raised out of the property thereinafter given to his executrix for life. He then gave to his executrix real and personal estate for her life, and after her death to the children of P. living at his, the testator's, death. At the testator's death in January, 1847, there were four children of P. living, but another, J. T. P., had not been heard of since February, 1845, and nothing ever was heard of him afterwards. The executrix paid to the four children, who were known to be living, four fifth shares of the legacy, but did not raise the remaining fifth. In 1851 she became lunatic, and in 1852 the funds, to the income of which she was entitled for life, were transferred to the credit of the lunacy to the account of the lunatic and the children of P., and the income was ordered to be applied for her benefit. In 1871 the four surviving children of P. and the administrator of J. T. P. petitioned that the remaining fifth share of the legacy, with interest, might be paid to the four children, or, if not, then to the administrator of J. T. P.:—Held, that there being no proof that J. T. P. survived the testator, the share must be paid to the four children who were known to have survived him; that the manner in which the court had dealt with the fund took the case out of the statute as to the principal, but that only six years' arrears of interest should be given. Walker, In re, 41 L. J., Ch. 219; L. R. 7 Ch. 120; 25 L. T. 775; 20 W. R. 171.

A testator gave his residuary estate in trust for such of his seven nephews and nieces as should be living at his death, with a substitutionary gift to the issue of any nephew or niece who should predecease him leaving issue. The testator died in October, 1858. One of his nephews had gone abroad in 1848, being then unmarried and in delicate health. He occasionally wrote to his family, but his last letter was dated July, 1852, and since its receipt nothing had been heard of him. The court dealt with the residuary estate on the footing that the nephew in question had predeceased the testator and left no issue. Hanby, In re, 25 W. R. 427.

When the evidence that a legatee did not survive the testator is not conclusive, and it appears that better evidence might possibly be obtained, the court will not draw an inference that the legatee is dead, but direct the amount of the legacy to be carried to a separate account. Rhodes, In re, Fraser v. Renton, 28 L. T. 392.

—— Commorientes.]—There is no presumption of law arising from age or sex as to survivorship among persons whose death is occasioned by one and the same cause. Wing v. Angrave, 8 H. L. Cas. 183; 30 L. J., Ch. 65. S. C. sub nom. Underwood v. Wing, 4 De G. M. & G. 633; 3 Eq. R. 794; 24 L. J., Ch. 293; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 159; 2 W. R. 641.

Nor is there any presumption of law that all died at the same time. Ib.

The question is one of fact depending wholly on evidence, and if the evidence does not establish the survivorship of any one, the law will treat it as a matter incapable of being determined. The onus probandi is on the person asserting the affirmative. Ib.

Where, therefore, a husband, wife and two children were swept off the deck of a vessel by one wave, and there was no distinct evidence that any one was seen later than another, although evidence was given that the husband was a strong man and a good swimmer, and the wife was a weak and delicate woman, and could not swim at all, the court would not assume that one survived the other. Ib.

A. made a will by which, under a power of appointment reserved to her in her father's will, she bequeathed her property to her husband; "and in case my husband shall die in my lifetime," to W. The husband made a will in the same terms. The husband and wife were by the same wave swept off the deck of a vessel in a storm at sea, and were drowned. No evidence was given to prove that one survived the other:—Held, that W. could not claim under either will, and that the property went over to those who by the father's will were to take in default of appointment by the daughter. Ib.

The union of the two titles of W. did not affect the case, for he could not succeed in one because he did not succeed under the other, but was bound to establish his claim clearly under one or the other. Ib.

A husband and wife, having made mutual wills, each appointing the other sole executor and universal legatee, subsequently went to sea in the same ship, which never arrived at its destination, and was presumed to have been lost, with all hands:—Held, that there was no presumption of law as to which of the two, the husband or the wife, died first. Alston, In goods of, 61 L. J., P. 92; [1892] P. 142; 66 L. T. 591.

By an ante-nuptial marriage settlement, consols belonging to the husband were settled after the respective deaths of the husband and wife, and failure of children (which happened), in trust for the survivor of the husband and wife, absolutely; and certain Portuguese bonds belonging to the wife were settled upon trust for the husband during the joint lives of himself and his wife, and in case he survived her in trust for such persons as she should by will appoint, and in default of appointment for her next of kin, excluding the husband, but, in case she survived him, in trust for her absolutely. The husband by his will gave all his property to his wife absolutely; and the wife by her will gave all her property to her husband for life, with remainder to her sisters absolutely. The husband and wife having perished together at sea:—Held, that the consols belonged to the legal personal representatives of the husband, and the bonds to the legal personal representatives of the wife. Wollaston v. Berkeley, 45 L. J., Ch. D. 772; 2 Ch. D. 213; 34 L. T. 171; 24 W. R. 360.

A testator and two of the legatees in his will perished in a ship which was supposed to have foundered. There being no evidence of survivorship:—Held, that the bequest failed. Barnett v. Tugwell, 31 Beav. 232.

A testator left legacies to three persons, and if any of them died their share was to go to the others. One of the legatees and the testator died at the same instant:—Held, that "death" must, according to the ordinary rule, mean death in the testator's lifetime, and that the legacy of the legatee so dying became part of the residue. Elliott v. Smith, Elliott, In re, 52 L. J., Ch. 222; 22 Ch. D. 236; 48 L. T. 27; 31 W. R. 336.

Where two parties perish by the same event, as in a shipwreck, and nothing more is known as to which died first, the presumption of priority of death will be raised from the comparative age, health and strength of the parties. Sillick v. Booth, 1 Y. & Coll. C. C. 121; 11 L. J., Ch. 123; 6 Jur. 142.

When, on a claim by a class of next of kin, it is doubtful whether a deceased nearer of kin survived the intestate, the onus rests on the representatives of such nearer of kin to show that he survived the intestate. Greene, In re, 35 L. J., Ch. 252; L. R. 1 Eq. 288; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 70; 13 L. T. 541; 14 W. R. 192.

Two persons (a mother and daughter) died under circumstances which rendered it doubtful which of the two was the survivor. The mother was entitled absolutely to a fund which was claimed by those who were her next of kin, exclusively of the daughter:—Held, that the onus probandi lay on those asserting a nearer kinship; and that, in the absence of evidence that the daughter survived, the claimants were entitled. Ib.

5. As to Documents.

a. Stamp.

Deed duly Stamped.]—Although upon the presumption omnia rite esse acta, if secondary evidence is tendered to prove the contents of an instrument which is either lost, or retained by the opposite party after notice to produce it, the court will presume that the original was duly stamped unless some evidence to the contrary is given; yet where there is evidence that an instrument, unstamped at its execution, continued for a considerable time after its execution unstamped, the onus is shifted, and unless evidence is produced to lead to the belief that it was stamped at some time subsequently the conclusion is that it remained unstamped. Marine Investment Co. v. Haviside, 42 L. J., Ch. 173; L. R. 5 H. L. 624.

If a man withholds an agreement under which he is chargeable, it is presumed to have been properly stamped. Crisp v. Anderson, 1 Stark. 35; 18 R. R. 744. And see Closmadeuc v. Carrell, 18 C. B. 36; 25 L. J., C. P. 216; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 474; 4 W. R. 547. See further, post, IV., 6, e, ADMISSIBILITY OF UNSTAMPED DOCUMENTS (PROOF OF STAMP).

b. Execution.

Deed.]—A deed acknowledged by married women was signed by the parties and witnessed; but no seal or representation of a seal appeared at all on the deed:—Held, that the attestation clause, in which it was stated that the deed had been signed, sealed and delivered in the presence of the witnesses, was primâ facie evidence of due execution. Sandilands, In re, L. R. 6 C. P. 411, S. C., nom. Mayer, In re, 40 L. J., C. P. 201; 24 L. T. 273; 19 W. R. 641. And see Hall v. Bainbridge, 12 Q. B. 699.

Proof of handwriting of parties to a deed is a sufficient proof of execution under the C. L. P. Act, 1854, s. 26. Mair's Estate, In re, 42 L. J., Ch. 882; 28 L. T. 760; 21 W. R. 749.

If the handwriting to a deed be proved the jury may presume the sealing and delivery. Grellier v. Neale, Peake, 146; 3 R. R. 669. See also Smith, In re, Oswell v. Shepherd, 67 L. T. 64.

—— More than Thirty Years old—Proper Custody.]—See post, col. 709.

Will.]—In a suit concerning the validity of a will, the surrounding circumstances and the appearance of the document were in favour of its having been duly attested. The adverse evidence, viz., that of the two witnesses, who denied having attested in the presence of the testator, appeared to be of a doubtful character. The court acted on the presumption omnia ritè esse acta, and pronounced for the will. Bailey v. Frowan, 19 W. R. 511.

—— Attestation.]—A holograph will, signed at foot by the testator, and containing an attestation clause, appeared attested by two marksmen. Their names, as subscribed to the will, the attestation clause, and the words "mark—his," which appeared written above and below crosses opposite each of their names, were in the handwriting of the testator. At the date of the instrument, two persons of the names so subscribed as those of the attesting witnesses were in his employment; they were both illiterate, and both predeceased him. The document was found shortly after the testator's death in his house, preserved amongst others of his papers. It purported to give all his property to his widow. He stated to her the night before his death that he left her all he had—that everything was hers. It did not appear that any fourth person was present at the execution of the will, and no direct evidence of its due execution was given:—Held that there were reasonable grounds for presuming that the will had been duly executed and attested pursuant to the provisions of the Wills Act, and sufficient to enable the court to pronounce in favour of its validity. Clarke v. Clarke, 5 L. R., Ir. 47—C. A.

Doctrine of presumption as to the attestation of wills in presence of the testator. Winchilsea v. Wauchope, 5 L. J., Ch. 167. And see WILL.

c. Date.

On Face.]—The date which appears on the face of a document is primâ facie its true date. Malpas v. Clements, 19 L. J., Q. B. 435. S. P., Potez v. Gossop, 2 Ex. 191. Anderson v. Weston, 6 Bing. (N.C.) 296; 9 L. J., C. P. 194.

But quære, whether the date a letter bears is primâ facie its true date. Butler v. Mountgarrett (Viscount), 7 H. L. Cas. 633.

A receipt and also a delivery order, given by the plaintiff to a witness a month after the sale, but dated on the day of the sale, and not otherwise shown to be in existence before the sale, are admissible as affording some evidence of the sale having taken place on the day of the date of the documents. Morgan v. Whitmore, 6 Ex. 716; 20 L. J., Ex. 289.

There is a presumption that a cheque is drawn on the day of its date. Laws v. Rand, 3 C. B. (N.S.) 442; 27 L. J., C. P. 76.

Post Mark.]—See post, col. 677.

Posting Letters.]—Proof of the posting of several letters at several dates is not conclusive of any of them having been received at the address to which they were directed. Reidpath's Case, 40 L. J., Ch. 39; L. R. 11 Eq. 86; 23 L. T. 834; 19 W. R. 219.

The defendant applied for shares in the plaintiff company. The company allotted the shares to the defendant and duly addressed to him and posted a letter containing the notice of allotment, but the letter never was received by him:—Held, that the defendant was a shareholder. British and American Telegraph Co. v. Colson (L. R. 6 Ex. 108), overruled. Household Fire Insurance Co. v. Grant, 48 L. J., Ex. 577; 4 Ex. D. 216; 41 L. T. 298; 27 W. R. 858—C. A.

A contract is complete when a letter has been posted accepting an offer which can be accepted by letter so sent. Imperial Land Company of Marseilles, In re, Harris's Case, 41 L. J., Ch. 621; L. R. 7 Ch. 587; 26 L. T. 781; 20 W. R. 690.

And see CONTRACT, ante, vol. IV., cols. 11, 12.

d. Erasures, Alterations and Interlineations.

Time of.]—The entry of a resolution in the minute-book of a corporation, accepting a proposal for a lease of part of the corporate property, being partially erased, is, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, to be presumed to have been made before the book was signed by the chairman of the meeting at which the resolution was passed. Stevens' Hospital v. Dyas, 15 Ir. C. L. R. 405.

In Affidavit.]—A bankrupt was indicted for not surrendering. On the trial the proceedings in bankruptcy were put in, and it appeared that there were erasures and interlineations in the affidavit verifying the petition for adjudication:—Held, that the presumption of law was, that the affidavit was in the same state as when it was sworn; as to alter it after it was sworn would be an act of fraud and misconduct which would not be presumed. Reg. v. Gordon, Dears. C. C. 586; 25 L. J., M. C. 19; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 67; 4 W. R. 46; 7 Cox, C. C. 19.

Deed.]—As a deed cannot be altered after execution without fraud or wrong, the presumption, if an alteration appears, is that it was made before execution. Doe d. Tatum v. Catomore, 16 Q. B. 745.

Will.]—A testator, by his will, dated in 1834, devised and bequeathed real and personal estate upon trusts. Certain of the words in the declaration of trusts were interlineated. Probate was granted of the will by the consistory court of C. A question being raised whether, with regard to the real estate, the interlineation was made before or after the execution of the will:—Held, that, having regard to the granting of the probate by the consistory court, it must be presumed to have been made before the execution. Cruttenden, In re, 45 L. T. 465; 30 W. R. 57.

The presumption that a document was executed as it appears does not apply to the case of a will, which may be altered by a testator without fraud or wrong. Doe d. Tatum v. Catomore, 16 Q. B. 745.

—— Alterations—Attestation of.]—The clause appointing executors was written partly on the second and partly on the third side of a will. Subsequently the testator altered the clause, but his signature and those of the attesting witnesses appeared opposite only to the alterations, which were made on the second side. The court granted probate of all the alterations. Wilkinson, In goods of, 6 P. D. 100; 29 W. R. 896; 45 J. P. 716.

—— Interlineation after Execution.]—Testatrix duly executed her will in the presence of two witnesses, who subscribed and attested it. Immediately after its execution an omission was discovered in the will, and this omission was supplied by an interlineation. Testatrix approved of the will as altered, acknowledging it as her "last will and testament," and the witnesses then, in her presence, placed their initials in the margin opposite the interlineation:—Held, that there had been no re-execution of the will, and that consequently the interlineation should be omitted from the probate. Shearn, In goods of, 50 L. J., P. 15; 43 L. T. 736; 29 W. R. 445; 45 J. P. 308.

A will contained alterations and erasures affecting the amount and objects of the testator's bounty, the existence of which, at the time of the execution, the attesting witnesses could not depose to:—Held, there being an absence of all direct evidence as to the alterations and erasures, that the presumption of law was that such alterations and erasures were made after the execution of the will. Cooper v. Bockett, 4 Moore, P. C. 419; 10 Jur. 931.

—— Presumption of Mutilation.]—The will of a testatrix was found upon her death with the signature and attestation clause cut off and folded inside the will. There was no other evidence of intention:—Held, that this was a sufficient evidence of an animus revocandi. Magnesi or Maynes v. Hazleton, 44 L. T. 586; 45 J. P. 816.

Effect.]—Where any document has been or appears to have been altered in a material part, the person producing it cannot claim to enforce any right under it unless the alteration was made before execution or other completion of the instrument and with due consent, and this whether the alteration was made by the person producing or a stranger. Pigot's Case, 11 Rep. 47. And see Aldous v. Cornwell, L. R. 3 Q. B. 573; Suffell v. Bank of England, 9 Q. B. D. 555; and cases under BILLS OF EXCHANGE.

6. ACTING IN OFFICES.

Public Offices.]—Evidence of acting in a public office is evidence to go to the jury of a title to that office as against a wrongdoer, though the title is put in issue by the pleadings and the appointment is required to be under seal. Dexter v. Hayes, 11 Ir. C. L. R. 106.

Such evidence of acting raises a presumption that all the formalities necessary to be completed to authorise such acting have been complied with. Ib.

Trustees were created by an act for the purpose of building a bridge, and it was enacted that no person should be capable of acting as a trustee until he should have taken and subscribed the oath therein set forth, which oath so taken and subscribed by each trustee should be entered in the book of proceedings of the trustees. The book contained a blank form of oath, under which the names of the trustees were written by themselves, without any date; but there were entries from time to time in the proceedings, to the effect that they were appointed trustees, having qualified by taking and subscribing the oath prescribed:—Held, that it sufficiently appeared that the trustees were properly sworn, although there was no regular jurat or entry of the oath having been administered by the trustees. Miles v. Bough, 3 Railw. Cas. 668; 3 G. & D. 119; 3 Q. B. 845; 12 L. J., Q. B. 74.

Held, also, that in order to prove orders and directions of the trustees, it was necessary to give evidence of their having subscribed the oath. Ib.

In an action for money received by five churchwardens against one, who, wrongfully claiming to be churchwarden of a township, had therein collected money due under a church-rate, it appeared that one of the churchwardens had not made any declaration under 5 & 6 Will. 4, c. 62, s. 8, but his predecessor, who had made a declaration for the previous year, was willing to be substituted:—Held, that on such substitution being made, it was no valid objection that such predecessor had made no fresh declaration, inasmuch as he remained in office under his declaration, till he had a properly-constituted successor. Bremner v. Hall, 1 H. & R. 800; 35 L. J., C. P. 332; L. R. 1 C. P. 748; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 648; 15 L. T. 352; 14 W. R. 964.

In replevin, the defendants averred for a distress for poor-rates:—Held, that one of the defendants having acted as overseer of the poor, was primâ facie evidence that he was so. Bristol Governor v. Wait, 6 Car. & P. 511. S. P., M'Gahey

v. Alston, 2 M. & W. 206; 2 Gale, 238; 6 L. J., Ex. 29.

In ejectment by churchwardens and overseers, proof that they have acted in that capacity is sufficient, without proof of their appointment. Doe d. Bowley v. Barnes, 8 Q. B. 1030; 15 L. J., Q. B. 293; 10 Jur. 520.

Proof that a party holds the office of churchwarden is primâ facie evidence of his having been lawfully appointed, even where the question turns on his title to the possession of land in his capacity of such churchwarden. Garvill v. Utting, 9 Jur. 1081.

The fact that a party did a particular act, as signing a land-tax assessment, in an official capacity, may be proved, not only by showing that he exercised the office before or at the period in question, but also by evidence, limited to a reasonable time, of his having exercised it afterwards. Doe d. Hopley v. Young, 8 Q. B. 63; 15 L. J., Q. B. 9; 9 Jur. 941.

An averment in an information for a libel, that Lord St. Vincent was, at the time when such libel was published, first lord of the Admiralty, is supported by producing the patent of appointment, dated prior to the publication. Rex v. Budd, 5 Esp. 230.

Other Capacities.]—The plaintiff, part-owner of a ship, and who acted as ship's husband, being authorised by the other part-owners (of whom the defendant was one), to repair and lengthen the ship, gave verbal orders for the repairs, and entered into a written contract with a shipbuilder for lengthening the ship. Afterwards the plaintiff received a notice from the defendant that he would not be answerable for any alterations in the ship. The work was completed and the plaintiff paid for it, and on telling the defendant the amount, he said that "the ship had better have been sold." The plaintiff having sued the defendant for his proportion of the money paid:—Held, first, that the fact of the plaintiff having acted as ship's husband was sufficient evidence of his appointment, without any formal proof. Chapell v. Bray, 6 H. & N. 145; 30 L. J., Ex. 24; 3 L. T. 278; 9 W. R. 17.

Held, secondly, that the authority to make the alterations could not be revoked after it was acted on, and that it was for the defendant to prove that his notice was given before the work was commenced. Ib.

Held, thirdly, that the plaintiff need not produce the written contract, since the work was done, the money paid under it, and the defendant, on being told the amount, did not deny his liability. Ib.

7. As to Other Matters.

Rebutting.] — All presumptions may be rebutted by facts, or by contrary and stronger presumptions. Jayne v. Price, 5 Taunt. 326; 1 Marsh. 68; 15 R. R. 518.

Foreign Judgment.]—The presumption, when a foreign court has purported to act properly and within its jurisdiction, is omnia rite esse acta. Taylor v. Ford, 29 L. T. 392; 22 W. R. 47.

Conformity to Act of Parliament.]—An award by a commissioner acting under a local inclosure act, incorporating 41 Geo. 3, c. 109, and thereby empowered to stop up old roads over wastes, subject to the concurrence and order of two justices, directed such a road (being a carriageway) to be stopped up, and ever since the road had been stopped by a locked gate, and never used by any one with carriages or carts. There was evidence, however, of user by foot passengers:—Held, that although the award did not show that the concurrence and order of two justices had been obtained, and although there was no proof that it had, yet, after twenty-eight years, it might well be presumed that such order and concurrence had been, in fact, duly obtained. Williams v. Eyton, 4 H. & N. 357; 28 L. J., Ex. 146; 5 Jur. (N.S.) 770; 7 W. R. 291—Ex. Ch.

In support of a plea of coverture, the defendant stated that she was married at a Roman Catholic chapel by a priest, and according to Roman Catholic rites; that she had since lived with her husband; that he was then in Australia, but that she had heard from him within a few months. No evidence was given of the chapel being registered, or that the registrar was present, as required by 6 & 7 Will. 4, c. 85:—Held, that the evidence was sufficient, as the law would presume that the provisions of the act had been complied with. Sichel v. Lambert, 15 C. B. (N.S.) 781; 33 L. J., C. P. 137; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 617; 9 L. T. 687; 12 W. R. 312.

Attesting Recruit.] — A recruit received enlisting-money, knowing it to be such, from a soldier who was employed by a non-commissioned officer in the recruiting service, and who had belonged to a regiment for a longer period than that within which he ought to have been attested according to the Mutiny Act:—Held, that such soldier must be presumed to have been regularly attested. Wolton v. Gavin, 16 Q. B. 48; 20 L. J., Q. B. 73; 15 Jur. 329.

The fact that the soldier intended to have taken the recruit to be attested before a justice who had no authority to attest, affords no counter-presumption that the recruiting soldier had been himself improperly attested. Ib.

Production of Documents.]—There is a presumption against persons who keep back a document, and against them the evidence is to be taken most strongly. Att.-Gen. v. Windsor (Dean), 24 Beav. 679; 27 L. J., Ch. 320; 4 Jur. 518; 6 W. R. 220.

But there is no presumption of fact to be made against a party who enforces the rule against the disclosure, by his solicitor, of knowledge professionally acquired. Wentworth v. Lloyd, 10 H. L. Cas. 589; 33 L. J., Ch. 688; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 961; 10 L. T. 767.

In an action by an indorsee against the drawer of a bill of exchange, the only evidence of notice of dishonour was this statement of the defendant: "I have several good defences to the action; in the first place the letter was not sent to me in time." The letter was not produced:—Held, by Denman, C.J., that as the defendant withheld the letter, the jury were justified in assuming that, if produced, it would have appeared to have been in time. By Patteson, Coleridge, and Littledale, JJ., that though the date might have been correct, there was a possibility that the letter might have been sent otherwise than through the post, and that there was no reason why the defendant should have produced primâ facie evidence against himself. Braithwaite v. Coleman, 1 Harrison, 223.

But where a letter was proved to have been posted on the day of the dishonour, and the defendant defended on the ground of want of due presentment, but not that of want of notice, and did not produce the letter, the jury were held to be warranted in inferring that the letter contained due notice of dishonour. Curlewis v. Corfield, 1 Q. B. 814; 1 G. & D. 480. And see Mason v. Morley, 34 L. J., Ch. 422; 12 L. T. 414; 13 W. R. 669.

The plaintiff, in a suit in equity, relied on the defendants' knowledge of a fact said to be communicated to them in a letter of which no copy was kept, but the receipt of which the defendants admitted. The defendants denied that it contained the statement alleged, but did not produce the letter, or satisfactorily account for its non-production:—Held, under these circumstances, that the plaintiff's representation must be taken to be true. Lumley v. Wagner, 1 De G. M. & G. 604; 21 L. J., Ch. 898; 16 Jur. 871.

The suppression of some of a series of documents relating to the title, which are admitted to be in the possession of a party, is evidence that the documents withheld afford inferences unfavourable to the title of the party. James v. Biou, 2 Sim. & S. 600.

—— Loss.]—Where a loss of evidence has been occasioned without the default of the defendant, any presumption arising from the absence of such evidence is in his favour. Extent of the doctrine in Kennedy v. Green (3 Myl. & K. 699). Atterbury v. Wallis, 2 Jur. (N.S.) 343. S. C. on appeal, 4 W. R. 734.

—— Destruction.]—In some circumstances the voluntary destruction of books of account may be treated lightly; but where the transactions to which they related are recent, where the accounts have not been finally adjusted, or the balance ascertained or paid, and still more where the act of destruction is committed by a person who has filed a bill to have the accounts taken, some very cogent reason must be given to satisfy the court that the destruction was proper or justifiable, and it will presume against the destroyer everything most unfavourable to him which is consistent with the facts admitted or proved. An understanding (so-called) not amounting to an agreement is merely nothing. Gray v. Haig, 20 Beav. 219.

Name on Note.]—In an action on a note made by the defendant payable to J. H., and indorsed by him to the plaintiff, it appeared that there were two persons of the same name, father and son, and there was no evidence to show to which of them the note had been given, but it appeared that the indorsement was in the handwriting of the son:—Held, that although, primâ facie, the presumption would be that J. H., the father, was meant, that presumption was rebutted by the son's indorsement. Stebbing v. Spicer, 8 C. B. 827.

Legality and Honesty of Transactions.]—It is a presumption of law that a transaction was done legally and honestly, and this presumption acquires weight by lapse of time—per Bowen, L.J. Postlethwaite, In re, Postlethwaite v. Rickman, 60 L. T. 514; 37 W. R. 200; 53 J. P. 357.

Legal Origin of Right.]—A right should be presumed to have had a legal origin if such a legal origin was possible, and the court will presume that those acts were done and those circumstances existed that were necessary to the creation of a valid title—per Herschell (Lord). Philipps v. Halliday, 61 L. J., Q. B. 210; [1891] A. C. 228; 64 L. T. 745; 55 J. P. 741.

Legal Origin for existing state of things.]—In the absence of evidence as to the origin of an existing state of things, an illegal origin is not to be presumed, if it might naturally have had a legal origin. Croft v. Rickmansworth Highway Board, 57 L. J., Ch. 589.

Amount Lent—Unknown Note.]—In an action for money lent, the only evidence was, that the defendant having asked the plaintiff for some money, the latter handed him a note which was believed to be a banknote, but the amount of which did not appear:—Held, that the jury was rightly directed to presume it to have been a note for 5*l.*, as being the smallest note in circulation in this country. Lawton v. Sweeney, 8 Jur. 964.

Letters.]—Proof of the posting of letters, is not conclusive of their arrival. Reidpath's Case, 40 L. J., Ch. 39; L. R. 11 Eq. 86; 23 L. T. 834; 19 W. R. 219.

But posting of a letter accepting a contract held sufficient proof of completion of the contract. Household Fire Insurance Co. v. Grant, 48 L. J., Ex. 577; 4 Ex. D. 216; 41 L. T. 298; 27 W. R. 858—C. A. S. P., Imperial Land Company of Marseilles, In re, 41 L. J., Ch. 621; L. R. 7 Ch. 587; 26 L. T. 781; 20 W. R. 690.

Proof that the plaintiff wrote a letter to the defendant, purporting to contain a bill of exchange, with directions how the proceeds should be applied, and that the defendant soon afterwards had a bill in his possession, which answered the description contained in the letter, affords presumption that both the letter and the bill found their way to him. Kieran v. Johnson, 1 Stark. 109.

Possession of.]—The fact of a letter having been sent to a woman some years before her death, is not sufficient to raise a presumption that such letter is in the custody of her executrix three or four years after, as the testatrix might have destroyed it in her lifetime. Drew v. Durnborough, 2 Car. & P. 198.

Receipt of Special Message.]—On the trial of an action of trover for a bill of exchange, it was proved that the defendants, who were bankers, had discounted the bill for a customer for whom they were in the habit of discounting bills, and that the bill had been brought to them by the customer's clerk, who was directed to inquire whether they would discount it, and to state to the defendants the particulars of an arrangement between the holder of the bill and the customer. Neither party called the clerk as a witness:—Held, that the jury ought not to have been directed to presume that the clerk delivered the message, but that, in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the presumption was that the bankers had bonâ fide discounted the bill, without notice of the circumstances which the clerk had been directed to tell them. Middleton v. Barned, 4 Ex. 241; 18 L. J., Ex. 433.

Ownership of Money.]—Where money is found concealed in a house which had formerly belonged to and been inhabited by W., who has been dead for twenty-nine years, and it is shown that since the time of his death the house has been inhabited by poor people of improvident habits, this is evidence from which a jury may infer that the money was placed where it was found by W., and so is the property of his representative. Clegg v. Haslam, 16 L. T. 152.

Ship—Place of Building.]—The court cannot intend, without express allegation, that a ship is British built; where the bill only stated that it was built by B. & Co. of Newcastle, and not at Newcastle, a demurrer founded on the registry acts not supported. Smith v. Small, 14 Sim. 119.

—— Existence of.]—A ship never heard of, after having sailed, is presumed to have foundered at sea. Green v. Brown, 2 Str. 1200.

Value of Goods.]—When a person has wrongfully converted property it will be assumed as against him, if he will not produce it, to have been of the best description. Armory v. Delamirie, 1 Strange, 504.

If goods are sold without any express stipulation as to price, in an action by the vendor, if no express evidence of their value be forthcoming on the part of the plaintiff, the presumption is that they are of the lowest value at which such goods sell, unless the vendee has prevented the truth being arrived at, when a contrary presumption arises. Clunnes v. Pezzy, 1 Camp. 8.

Woman past Childbearing.]—The court will presume a woman to be past childbearing when she is in her fifty-fourth year. Widdow's Trusts, In re, 40 L. J., Ch. 380; L. R. 11 Eq. 408; 24 L. T. 87; 19 W. R. 468.

The presumption that a woman aged fifty-one years and eleven months, who had been married fifteen years and had never had any children, would not have any children, acted upon. Allason's Trusts, In re, 36 L. T. 653.

A fund in court was settled upon a married woman absolutely in default of issue. The woman gave birth to a stillborn child on the 1st June, 1871, and her husband died on the 12th of the same month. There was no other issue. On an application by the woman on the 9th December following, that the fund be paid to her:—Held, that the application was premature. Att.-Gen. v. Clements, 25 L. T. 739.

A wife, aged forty-seven, had had six children by her husband, but had not been since pregnant for seventeen years. Medical evidence was adduced to show that she had fourteen years ago suffered from a disease which, in the opinion of the medical men, rendered it improbable, if not absolutely impossible, that she should have further issue:—Held, that there was sufficient presumption against any future issue for the court to act upon. Summers' Trusts, In re, 30 L. T. 377; 22 W. R. 639.

A woman, aged fifty-two, who had been a widow for twenty-four years, was absolutely entitled in default of children to a fund in the hands of trustees:—Held, on petition for advice, that the trustees were justified in paying it over to her. Taylor's Settlement Trusts, In re, 43 L. T. 795; 29 W. R. 350.

In the administration of an estate, the court refused to act on the presumption that a married lady of fifty-two was beyond the age of bearing issue. Conduit v. Soane, 24 L. T. 656; 19 W. R. 817.

The court refused to treat a woman as past childbearing whose age was fifty-four and six months, and had never had any children, but had only been married three years. Croxton v. May, 9 Ch. D. 388; 39 L. T. 461; 27 W. R. 327—C. A. And see also Millner's Estate, In re, 42 L. J., Ch. 44; L. R. 14 Eq. 245; 26 L. T. 825; 20 W. R. 823: and Davidson v. Kimpton, 18 Ch. D. 213; 45 L. T. 131; 29 W. R. 912.

After Verdict.]—Nothing is to be presumed after verdict but what is expressly stated in the declaration, or what is necessarily implied from those facts which are stated. Spiers v. Parker, 1 Term Rep. 141; 1 R. R. 165.

Of Non-delivery of Goods.]—Whether proof prout de jure can be allowed of delivery of goods, where, subsequent to the alleged delivery, written statements of account containing partial settlements have been delivered containing no notice of the disputed articles, quære. Dunbar v. Harvie, 2 Bligh, 351.

Semble, that in such a case, where the dealing was between a publican and a distiller, who kept the accounts, it requires strong evidence of delivery of the goods to rebut the presumption arising from the accounts delivered. Ib.

Whether the account-books of the distiller in such a case afford a semiplena probatio, and lay a ground for the oath in supplement, quære. Ib.

Of Payment.]—Twenty years affords a presumption of payment on a judgment. Curties v. Fitzpatrick, Peake, Ad. C. 92.

To a bond of over twenty years standing, was pleaded payment and a release. To rebut the presumption of payment, an affidavit made by defendant, before a Master in chancery, was produced, in which he (being the son-in-law of the obligee) swore, that having applied to the obligee further to assist him, the latter refused, saying that he had already had his share of the estate; that he might do what he pleased with what he had, as he never should call on him for it. Although the presumption of payment was thereby rebutted, it was nevertheless evidence also of the bond having been cancelled or otherwise legally discharged. Washington v. Brymer, Peake, Ad. C. 200.

The mere fact of the delivery of an account, without evidence of contemporaneous or subsequent conduct, does not afford presumption of settlement. Irvine v. Young, 1 Sim. & S. 333.

—— By Surety.]—In an action by the surety on a sheriff's bond against his principal, for the recovery of money forfeited under the bond, and alleged to have been paid to the sheriff, the evidence of payment was, that an action having been brought upon the bond against both, they had defended the action by one attorney; that a compromise had been effected under the immediate authority of the surety; that the surety had sent a cheque for the agreed sum to the sheriff by post, and that he had subsequently verbally stated to the principal that he had paid the debt and costs in the action, to which the latter made no reply; and that eight or nine years had elapsed since the compromise:—Held, that there was evidence that the debt had been satisfied by the surety. Price v. Burca, 6 W. R. 40.

Arising from Assertion of Professional Privilege.]—There is no presumption of fact to be made against a party who enforces this rule against the disclosure by his solicitor of knowledge professionally acquired. Wentworth v. Lloyd, 10 H. L. Cas. 589; 33 L. J., Ch. 688; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 961; 10 L. T. 767.

Existence of Agreement.]—A court cannot, without proof, presume an agreement, on the ground that, if there was no agreement, there was fraud. Siree v. Kirwan, 9 Cl. & F. 716.

As to Duplicate Deed.]—Where a defendant seeks to obtain an annuity deed, bond and warrant of attorney, securing payment of the annuity, he must show that only one copy or part of these instruments was made at the time of their execution, the presumption being that there were duplicates. Griffin v. Smythe, 8 D. P. C. 490.

Of Conjugal Intercourse.]—Doctrine of law as to presumption of sexual intercourse between a husband and wife, living apart under a deed of separation but occasionally meeting; and as to the evidence by which that presumption may be rebutted. Morris v. Davies, 5 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 177.

Where Positive Evidence available.] — A party cannot rely on presumption to cast an obligation on another, if, from the nature of the case he must of necessity be able to show the obligation by positive evidence. Boyle v. Tamlyn, 6 B. & C. 329; 5 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 134; 30 R. R. 343.

On Belief.]—Presumption is not always on a belief that the thing has actually taken place. Hillary v. Waller, 12 Ves. 252.

Knowledge of Law.]—A witness's knowledge of the law enabling him to decline to answer criminating questions must be presumed on the maxim ignorantia juris non excusat. Reg. v. Coote, 9 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 463; 42 L. J., M. C. 114; L. R. 4 P. C. 599; 29 L. T. 111; 21 W. R. 553.

Knowledge of Rights.]—Primâ facie and presumptively, a person under no disability who has a full knowledge of facts from which rights of property arise or accrue to that person, ought to be deemed to be aware of those rights, semble. Horne v. Barton, 8 De G. M. & G. 587; 26 L. J., Ch. 225; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1032; 4 W. R. 821.

Inference from Answer of Witness.]—Witness swearing he never heard of an agreement at or before a certain time, is a negative pregnant that he heard of it after. Walker v. Walker, 2 Atk. 100.

Report.]—It is not the course to take the report to be right, unless it can be shown to be wrong. The court requires the party in whose favour it is to show how it is supported. Kilbee v. Sneyd, 2 Moll. 195.

See further, BURDEN OF PROOF, post, cols. 809 et seq.

8. MATTERS JUDICIALLY NOTICED.

Course of Nature.] — The courts will take judicial notice of the existence of facts which must have happened according to the constant and invariable course of nature. Rex v. Luffe, 8 East, 202; 9 R. R. 406.

Time.]—The court will take judicial notice of the day of the week on which a certain day of the month was. Hanson v. Shackleton, 4 D. P. C. 48; 1 H. & W. 542.

And on what day the king dies. Henry v. Cole, 2 Ld. Raym. 811; 7 Mod. 103.

The court will not take judicial notice of the hours of the day in the calendar. Collier v. Nokes, 5 Ex. 275; 2 Car. & K. 1012.

But will take judicial cognizance that a place lies east or west of Greenwich, and consequently has a time different from that of Greenwich. Curtis v. March, 3 H. & N. 866; 28 L. J., Ex. 36; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 1112.

—— Almanack.]—The almanack is part of the law of England. Tutton v. Darke, 5 H. & N. 647; 29 L. J., Ex. 271; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 983; 2 L. T. 361.

But an almanack is not evidence of the time of sunrise on a particular day. Ib.

Topography.]—The court will not take judicial notice that a particular street is not in a certain county, although it may be generally known to be situate in another. Humphreys v. Budd, 9 D. P. C. 1000; 5 Jur. 630. See Reg. v. Holborn Union, 6 El. & Bl. 715; 25 L. J., M. C. 110; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 571; 4 W. R. 606.

The courts do not take judicial notice that particular places are or are not within particular counties. Brune v. Thompson, 2 Q. B. 789; 2 G. & D. 110; Car. & M. 34.

The court will take judicial notice that a city is a county of a city. Reg. v. St. Maurice, 16 Q. B. 908; 20 L. J., M. C. 221; 15 Jur. 559.

The quarter sessions ought to take judicial notice of the petty sessional divisions in their county. Reg. v. Whittles, 13 Q. B. 248; 18 L. J., M. C. 96; 13 Jur. 403.

By the repealed statute 11 Geo. 4 & 1 Will. 4, c. 66, it was made an offence to utter any writing as and for a copy of an entry in any register of marriage made or kept by the vicar of any parish in England:—Held, that the judge would take judicial notice that the parish of Seighford, in the county of Stafford, is a parish in England, and that the indictment need not aver that fact. Reg. v. Sharpe, 8 Car. & P. 436.

—— Places on Admiralty Chart.]—A court should take judicial notice of the geographical positions of, and general names applied to, a district as shown on the Admiralty chart. Birrell v. Dryer, 9 App. Cas. 345; 51 L. T. 130; 5 Asp. M. C. 267—H. L. (Sc.)

Extent of Jurisdiction.]—The court will also take judicial notice that the common law of England extends to Ireland. Nesbitt, In re, 2 D. & L. 529; 14 L. J., M. C. 30.

The court will take judicial notice that the colony of Victoria is beyond seas. Cooke v. Wilson, 1 C. B. (N.S.) 153; 26 L. J., C. P. 15; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 1094; 5 W. R. 24.

So, of the maritime laws of nations. Chandler v. Grieves, 3 H. Bl. 606, n.; 3 R. R. 525.

Foreign Law.]—The courts in this country do not take notice of the revenue laws of another country, unless where the contract itself is made void by them. Bristowe v. Secqueville, 5 Ex. 275; 19 L. J., Ex. 289; 14 Jur. 674.

It is a rule of English law, that no knowledge of foreign law is to be imputed to an English judge sitting in a court of mere English jurisdiction. Nelson (Earl) v. Bridport (Lord), 8 Beav. 527 ; 10 Jur. 871.

Laws of France or Holland must be proved, else the court cannot take notice of them. Freemoult v. Dedire, 1 P. W. 431. And see cases, post, cols. 610, 611, 612.

Irish Law.]—The appellant, a domiciled Irishwoman being an infant without legal guardian, married in Ireland, before the passing of the Infants Settlement Act (18 & 19 Vict. c. 43), a domiciled Scotchman. An ante-nuptial settlement was executed. After the death of her husband she commenced the present action in the Scotch courts to set aside the settlement. No evidence was given as to the capacity of an infant to execute a binding contract by the law of Ireland : —Held, that, the point being raised in the pleadings, the house must take judicial notice that by the law of Ireland the settlement was not binding on the appellant, without regard to whether any, or what, evidence of the law of Ireland, as a matter of fact, had been given in the court below ; and, further, that the validity of the settlement was not affected by the fact that at the time of its execution both parties contemplated a Scottish domicil during their married life. Cooper v. Cooper, 13 App. Cas. 88 ; 59 L. T. 1—H. L. (Sc.)

Power of Irish Judge to administer Oath.]—The courts take judicial notice that the chief justice of a superior court in Ireland, is competent to administer an oath, and therefore will be satisfied with a mere verification of his handwriting. French v. Bellew, 1 M. & S. 302.

English Law and Practice.]—The courts take notice of their own course and practice of proceedings. Pugh v. Robinson, 1 Term Rep. 118.

The court would not take judicial notice of the general rules and orders made by the commissioners of bankruptcy for the regulation of the practice of their courts under 5 & 6 Vict. c. 122, s. 70. Ramsden, In re, 1 B. C. Rep. 133 ; 15 L. J., Q. B. 234 ; 10 Jur. 879.

Nor of the rules and practice adopted by, and in force in, the court of review when that court existed. Van Sandau v. Turner, 6 Q. B. 773 ; 14 L. J., Q. B. 154 ; 9 Jur. 296.

The courts of common law will take judicial notice of the jurisdiction of the Court of Admiralty, though not of its practice. Place v. Potts, 8 Ex. 705 ; 22 L. J., Ex. 269 ; 17 Jur. 1168.

But they will not take notice of any informality in the plaint in a county court, that being matter of practice to be dealt with by the judge at the hearing. Sargent v. Wedlake, 11 C. B. 732.

The general lien of bankers is part of the law merchant, and is to be judicially noticed, like the negotiability of bills of exchange. Brandao v. Barnett, 12 Cl. & F. 787 ; 3 C. B. 519.

The court takes judicial notice of the law of England as administered in equity. Sims v. Marryatt, 17 Q. B. 281.

The courts of common law take judicial notice that a bill filed in chancery by a creditor of a deceased testator for the administration of the estate under the direction of the court, does not of itself control or suspend the right of the executors to dispose of the property, and make a good title thereto. Neeves v. Burrage, 14 Q. B. 504 ; 19 L. J., Q. B. 68.

Record—Nature of Action.]—Where, after the execution of a writ of inquiry, the plaintiff obtained a rule calling on the defendant to show cause why the plaintiff should not have his costs, but the rule was not expressed to be drawn up upon reading the record, nor was the nature of the action stated upon the affidavit :—Held, that the records of the court were always actually or constructively before the court, and that the court would therefore take cognizance of the nature of the action as appearing upon the record. Craven v. Smith, 38 L. J., Ex. 90 ; L. R. 4 Ex. 146 ; 20 L. T. 400 ; 17 W. R. 710.

Notary's Seal.]—The execution of a release was attested by a notary in a colony :—Held, that the court would take judicial notice of the notary's seal and signature. Brooke v. Brooke, 50 L. J., Ch. 528 ; 17 Ch. D. 833 ; 44 L. T. 512 ; 30 W. R. 45.

The court will judicially notice the seal on a notarial certificate verifying an affidavit sworn before a magistrate abroad. Cole v. Sherard, 11 Ex. 482.

Stamp on Order.]—The court will not judicially notice the stamp upon a copy of an order, it not being the seal of the court, but the mark of the judge's clerk. Barrett Navigation Co. v. Shower, 8 D. P. C. 173.

Solicitor on Roll.]—In an application to tax an attorney's bill, the court will take judicial notice of his being on the roll. King, Ex parte, 3 D. P. C. 41.

On an application against an attorney for an attachment for his contempt of a judge's order made a rule of court, the court will take judicial notice of his being on the roll. Hore, Ex parte, 1 C. & M. 211 ; 3 D. P. C. 600.

Commissioners.] — The court will not take judicial notice of who are its commissioners for oaths or inspect the list to see if A. B. is one. Frost v. Hayward, 10 M. & W. 673 ; 2 D. (N.S.) 566 ; 12 L. J., Ex. 84 ; 6 Jur. 1045.

The court takes judicial notice of the signature of a commissioner lawfully authorised to administer oaths in a colony. Anon., 1 W. R. 187.

Nature of Company.]—The court will not take notice that none but freemen of the city of London are admissible into the livery of a company, unless it has been certified to the court by the recorder of London. Piper v. Chappel, 14 M. & W. 624 ; 9 Jur. 601.

Nor that, where a company is stated in a pleading to be constituted according to a certain principle known as a société anonyme, the shares in such company are transferable. Gerhard v. Bates, 2 El. & Bl. 476 ; 1 C. L. R. 868 ; 22 L. J., Q. B. 364 ; 17 Jur. 1097 ; 1 W. R. 383.

—— Cost-book Principle.] — What the cost-book principle is cannot be judicially taken notice of by the court. What that principle is must be proved in the cause, as any other custom. Pennant and Craigwen Consolidated Lead Mining Co., In re, Fenn's Case, 2 Eq. Rep. 944 ; 4 De G. M. & G. 285 ; 22 L. J., Ch. 692 ; 2 W. R. 282.

The court is not bound to take judicial notice of the meaning of the term "cost-book principle." Great Cambrian Mining and Quarrying Co., In re, Hawkins' Case, 2 Kay & J. 253 ; 25 L. J., Ch. 221 ; 2 Jur. (N.S.) 85 ; 4 W. R. 224.

The court will not take notice of the meaning of the term "cost-book principle." Bodmin United Mines, In re, 23 Beav. 370.

State of War.]—The courts will take judicial notice that a war exists between this country and a foreign state, which war is recognised in different acts of parliament. Rex v. De Berenger, 3 M. & S. 67; 15 R. R. 415. S. P., Alcenius v. Nygren, 4 El. & Bl. 217; 24 L. J., Q. B. 19; 1 Jur. (N.S.) 16; 3 W. R. 25.

Recognition of State.]—To prevent a demurrer to bill, it was falsely alleged in it that a revolted colony of Spain had been recognised by Great Britain as an independent state: the court is bound to know judicially that the allegation is false, and not to give it the intended effect. Taylor v. Barclay, 2 Sim. 213; 7 L. J. (O.S.) Ch. 65; 29 R. R. 82.

Oxford.]—And that the University of Oxford is a national institution, the purposes of which are the advancement of religion and learning. Oxford Rate, In re, 8 El. & Bl. 184.

III. DOCUMENTARY EVIDENCE.

A. PUBLIC AND OFFICIAL DOCUMENTS.

1. JOURNALS AND ACTS OF PARLIAMENT.

Journals.]—Copies of the journals of parliament are evidence. Rex v. Gordon (Lord George), 2 Dougl. 590. See Mortimer v. M'Callan, 6 M. & W. 67.

The journals of the House of Lords are evidence to prove, not only an address to the king, but the king's answer to the house. Rex v. Franklin, 5 Term Rep. 445, n.

An entry in a printed copy of the journals of the House of Commons is not receivable unless it has been compared with some original at the house, but an examined copy of an entry in the minute-book kept by the clerk at the table of the house is receivable. Chubb v. Salomons, 3 Car. & K. 75.

Where a patent of peerage cannot be found, entries on the journals of the House of Lords, showing the limitations of the patent, may be referred to for that purpose; or an examined copy of the record of the patent will be received. Saye & Sele (Barony), 1 H. L. Cas. 507.

Acts of Parliament.]—A local act, containing the usual clause that it shall be deemed and taken to be a public act, &c., may be read in evidence without any proof of its having been printed by the king's printer, or compared with the original on the rolls of parliament. Woodward v. Cotton, 6 Car. & P. 494.

If the counsel for a party rely on an act of parliament and cite it as an act to be judicially noticed, the opposite party has no right to insist that the counsel citing it should produce a copy of it printed by the Queen's printer. Faman v. Dawes, Car. & M. 127.

—— Explained by Usage of House.]—Evidence of the usages and practice of the House is admissible to explain the meaning of the Parliamentary Oaths Act, 1866, and the standing orders of the house with regard to making and subscribing the oath. Att.-Gen. v. Bradlaugh, 54 L. J., Q. B. 205; 14 Q. B. D. 667; 52 L. T. 589; 33 W. R. 673; 49 J. P. 500—C. A.

And see 8 & 9 Vict. c. 113, s. 3.

Lost Act of Parliament.]—See e. SECONDARY EVIDENCE, and Doe d. Bacon v. Brydges, 6 Man. & G. 282; 7 Scott (N.R.) 333; 13 L. J., C. P. 200.

—— Presumption as to.] — See Chilton v. London Corporation, 47 L. J., Ch. 433; 7 Ch. D. 735; 38 L. T. 498.

2. GAZETTES.

Gazettes.]—The Gazette, purporting to be printed by the king's printer, is good evidence of all acts of state therein contained. Rex v. Holt, 2 Leach, C. C. 598; 5 Term Rep. 436.

The Gazette is sufficient evidence of a proclamation issued under an order in council, because such proclamation is a public act regarding the crown and government, and must pass the great seal before it can be admitted into the Gazette. Att.-Gen. v. Theakstone, 8 Price, 89; 22 R. R. 716.

The Gazette alone is not evidence of the appointment of an officer to a commission in the army; but if the commission is not produced after notice, it may be admitted. Kirwan v. Cockburn, 5 Esp. 233; 8 R. R. 849. S. P., Rex v. Gardner, 2 Camp. 513; 11 R. R. 784.

A declaration alleged the division of a parish into several district parishes, by order of the king in council (under 58 Geo. 3, c. 45):—Held, that the allegation could not be proved by production of the Gazette containing a copy of such order. Greenwood v. Woodham, 2 M. & Rob. 363.

Where an act of parliament makes a gazette evidence, if it purports to be printed by the Queen's printers, or by the Queen's authority, a gazette purporting to be printed by A., without giving his style as Queen's printer, and purporting to be printed by authority, is not receivable. Reg. v. Wallace, 17 Ir. C. L. R. 206; 14 W. R. 462.

By 17 & 18 Vict. c. 104, s. 295, it was provided that the admiralty might make certain regulations, such regulations to be published in the London Gazette, and production of the Gazette to be sufficient evidence of the due making and purport thereof; and by s. 2, the admiralty was defined to mean the lord high admiral, or the commissioners for executing his office:—Held, that a notice published in the Gazette, purporting to be given by the lords commissioners of the admiralty, but signed only "by command of their lordships, W. G. Romaine," was by production of the Gazette proved to be duly made by the admiralty. The Olivia, 1 Lush. 497.

If a person adjudicated a bankrupt takes no steps within the prescribed period to annul the adjudication, the London Gazette containing the advertisement of his bankruptcy is conclusive evidence of the bankruptcy in criminal as well as in civil proceedings taken against him. Reg. v. Levi, L. & C. 597; 34 L. J., M. C. 174; 11 Jur. (N.S.) 450; 12 L. T. 502; 13 W. R. 724; 10 Cox, C. C. 110. S. P., Reg. v. Harris, 4 Cox, C. C. 140; Reg. v. Robinson, 36 L. J., M. C. 78; L. R. 2 C. C. 80; 16 L. T. 605; 15 W. R. 966; 10 Cox, C. C. 467. Reg. v. Randnitz, 21 L. T. 621; 11 Cox, C. C. 360. Revell v. Blake, 41 L. J., C. P. 129; L. R. 7 C. P. 300; 26 L. T. 578; 20 W. R. 756.

Cuttings from, Insufficient.]—A petition in bankruptcy having been presented against the prisoner in the D. county court, the court made an order that the publication of a notice of the petition in the London Gazette should be deemed service of the petition on the prisoner. The prisoner did not appear according to this notice, and there was no evidence that it had come to his knowledge. The prisoner was adjudicated bankrupt in his absence, and divers proceedings in the bankruptcy took place. Subsequently thereto the prisoner was arrested, and afterwards examined in court touching his affairs by the trustee in the bankruptcy, and the result was that he was indicted and convicted for various offences under the Bankruptcy Act. On the trial, in proof of the publication of the order of the county court in the Gazette, the file of the proceedings in the bankruptcy court was produced, containing a cutting from the Gazette of the advertisement of the order of the county court and notice to appear:—Held, that this cutting from the Gazette was improperly received as evidence of the publication of the notice in the London Gazette, and that the conviction could not be sustained. Reg. v. Lowe, 52 L. J., M. C. 122; 48 L. T. 768; 15 Cox, C. C. 286; 47 J. P. 535.

3. Acts of State.

Declaration of War.]—To ascertain the date of a declaration of war, the declaration from the ambassador of the court abroad, transmitted by him to the secretary of state's office, is evidence. Thelluson v. Cosling, 4 Esp. 266.

Articles of War.]—A copy of the articles of war, printed by the king's printer, is good evidence. Rex v. Withers, 5 Term Rep. 442; 1 East, P. C. 360.

Proclamations.]—A judge at nisi prius will not take judicial notice of the king's proclamations. Van Omeron v. Dowick, 2 Camp. 44; 11 R. R. 656.

The king's proclamation, reciting that it had been represented that certain outrages had been committed in different parts of certain counties, and offering a reward for the discovery and apprehension of offenders, is admissible to prove an introductory averment in an information for a libel, that divers acts of outrage had been committed in those parts. Rex v. Sutton, 4 M. & S. 532.

Certificate of Secretary of State—Conclusive as to Status of Foreign Sovereign.]—A letter from a secretary of state (in this case the secretary of state for the colonies) in his official capacity, in answer to an inquiry by the court as to the status of the alleged sovereign, is conclusive on the question of sovereignty and independence. Mighell v. Johore (Sultan), 63 L. J., Q. B. 593; [1894] 1 Q. B. 149; 9 R. 447; 70 L. T. 64; 58 J. P. 244—C. A.

Letter of Instruction from Lords of the Treasury.]—A letter of instruction from the lords of the treasury, signed by three lords of the treasury, is admissible upon proof of the handwriting of the three whose names are subscribed to it, without producing the commission. Rex v. Jones, 2 Camp. 131.

State Papers, Production of—Public Policy.]—If the production of a state paper would be injurious to the public service, the public interest must be considered paramount to the individual interest of a suitor in a court of justice. Beatson v. Skene, 5 H. & N. 838; 29 L. J., Ex. 430; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 780; 2 L. T. 378; 8 W. R. 544.

The question, whether the production of a document would be injurious to the public service, must be determined, not by the judge, but by the head of the department having the custody of the paper. Ib.

Commissions.]—A return to a royal commission, not signed or sealed by the commissioners, is not admissible to prove any matter therein stated. Slane Peerage, 5 Cl. & F. 23.

A document from the office of the duchy of Cornwall, purporting to be a caption of seisin to the use of the duke, by persons assigned by his letters patent to receive seisin, is receivable as a public instrument. Rowe v. Brenton, 3 M. & Ry. 156; 8 B. & C. 765.

A visitation was produced from the proper office; the commission under which it was taken could not be found. The visitation purported to have been taken by deputation from Clarenceux king-of-arms. The deputation was produced. It recited the commission, and the power therein contained for Clarenceux to appoint his deputies:—Held, that the visitation was admissible. Shrewsbury Peerage, 7 H. L. Cas. 1.

Warrant of Precedence.]—A record of a royal warrant of precedence was produced from the Heralds' office; the original had been sought for at the Home office and the State Paper office, but in vain. It was a part of the duty of the heralds to record such warrants. The record was received. Ib.

4. Foreign, Colonial, and Indian Documents and Laws.

Report to Foreign Government.]—The report of a committee appointed by a public department in a foreign state, though addressed to that department and acted on by the government, is not necessarily admissible in the courts here as evidence of all the facts stated therein. M., the consul in London for the then Genoese government, applied in 1789 to his government to receive the rank and employment of diplomatic agent here. The executive government (collegii) referred the application to a committee called the Giunta della Marina to inquire into the propriety of the proposed change of appointment, and into M.'s fitness for the post of diplomatic agent. The Giunta reported favourably on both points. In the course of the report the Giunta described him as "a native of Quarto, of about forty-five years of age." He was appointed in 1790, and died in England in 1803. His only child, a daughter, died here in 1871 without any known relations. Her property was taken possession of by the crown, but, on a process instituted here, a decree was made directing payment of the fund to certain persons of the Freccia family, who claimed to be next of kin, and whose claim was founded on an allegation that M. had been born at St. Ilario, near Genoa, in 1735. Other persons then claimed to be next of kin, asserting that M. had been born at Quarto in 1744. In a suit between these two sets of claimants, the report of the Giunta was tendered in evidence as fixing the real place and time of M.'s birth :—Held, that it was not admissible for that purpose. Sturla v. Freccia, 5 App. Cas. 623 ; 43 L. T. 209 ; 29 W. R. 217 ; 44 J. P. 812. Affirming 49 L. J., Ch. 41—C. A.

Per Lord Blackburn : "A public document" means a document that is made for the purpose of the public making use of it, especially where there is a judicial or quasi-judicial duty to inquire. Its very object must be that the public, and all persons concerned in it, may have access to it. Ib.

Judicial Proceedings.]—An order of a foreign court made ex parte on a shareholder of an insolvent company to contribute to the assets, is an order or other judicial proceeding within 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, ss. 7, 11, and may be proved by a certified copy. Leishman v. Cochrane, 1 Moore, P. C. (N.S.) 315 ; 9 L. T. 104 ; 12 W. R. 181.

An insurance company was formed in Calcutta, and registered in the Supreme Court, pursuant to the act of the Indian legislature. L., resident in the Mauritius, was a shareholder in this company, which was limited for five years. That time being about to expire, a new company was formed to take the business of the old company, in which L.'s name was entered by F., the company's secretary at Calcutta, whom he verbally authorised to execute the new co-partnership deed. The company having become insolvent, was wound up by the Supreme Court at Calcutta. L.'s name being on the list of shareholders, certain orders were made by the Supreme Court, calling upon him to pay a contribution to the assets of the company. L. refused and repudiated his liability, on the ground that he was not a shareholder, never having given authority to F. to execute the deed of partnership. Upon an action in the Supreme Court in the Mauritius, by the official assignee of the insolvent company, against L. to recover the amount of contribution ordered by the Supreme Court at Calcutta :—Held, first, that the certified copies of the orders of the Supreme Court at Calcutta in the matter were properly admitted in evidence, under 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, without proof of the official seals or signatures of that court. Ib.

Held, secondly, that being satisfied upon the evidence that L.'s name had been put on the list of shareholders with his consent, so as to entitle him to a share in the profits, the judicial committee was of opinion that L. was liable to pay the contributions claimed, and that it was unnecessary to inquire whether parol authority would warrant the execution of the deed by F. Ib.

Where the proceedings in an Austrian court were tendered, and it was proved that the court out of which the proceedings issued used a seal, and the documents tendered had the seal impressed upon them for the double purpose of cancelling the stamps affixed to the documents and for authentication :—Held, that this was sufficient to make them admissible in evidence here. Loibel v. Strampfer, 16 L. T. 720.

Proceedings in a sheriff's court in Scotland held admissible as to matters of pedigree, on the same principle on which answers and decrees in chancery have been admitted in peerage cases, the facts of the pedigree not being in dispute but only incidentally stated in the proceedings. Lyell v. Kennedy, 59 L. J., Q. B. 268 ; 14 App. Cas. 437 ; 62 L. T. 77 ; 38 W. R. 353—H. L. (E.)

Will.]—The copy of a foreign will contained in the ancillary probate granted in this country to the foreign executors, is the only admissible evidence of the will. Enohin v. Wylie, 10 H. L. Cas. 1 ; 31 L. J., Ch. 402 ; 6 L. T. 603 ; 10 W. R. 467.

Probate.]—A Scotch probate is not recognised by the Court of Chancery in England. M'Donald v. Bryce, 22 L. J., Ch. 779 ; 17 Jur. 335 ; 1 W. R. 261.

Copy of Patent.]—Where a document purported to be an official copy of a Belgian patent sealed with the Belgian seal, it was admitted without proof of its being an examined copy or proof of the seal, inasmuch as it came within the words "or other acts of state," in 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 7. Betts, Ex parte, 9 Jur. (N.S.) 137 ; 7 L. T. 577 ; 11 W. R. 221—P. C.

Colony—Release attested by Notary.]—The execution of a release was attested by a notary in a colony. There was no evidence that the attestation was for the purpose of using the deed in court :—Held, nevertheless, that it was a document to be used in court within 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 22, and that the court would take judicial notice of the notary's seal and signature. Brooke v. Brooke, 50 L. J., Ch. 528 ; 17 Ch. D. 833 ; 44 L. T. 512 ; 30 W. R. 45.

—— Registrar's Certificates.]—The certificate, by the registrar in the island of St. Vincent's, of the registration of a deed :—Held, not to be admissible, under the 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, s. 22, without proof of the signature, on the ground that the registrar was not a person authorised to administer oaths. Baillie v. Jackson, 3 De G. M. & G. 38 ; 10 Hare (App.), xlvi. ; 22 L. J., Ch. 753 ; 17 Jur. 170 ; 1 W. R. 196.

—— Notarial Certificate.]—In an action in Lower Canada, the plaintiff produced a deed of sale executed before a notary public in Upper Canada, and a certificate by such notary of the due execution of the deed. No further evidence of execution was produced:—Held, that the certificate of a notary public of the due execution of a deed in a colony regulated by English law does not dispense with the proper evidence of execution, though the certificate is put in evidence in a colony regulated by French law, where such certificate is sufficient evidence. Nye v. Macdonald, 39 L. J., P. C. 34; L. R. 3 P. C. 331; 23 L. T. 220; 18 W. R. 1075.

—— Probate of Will.]—A petitioner asked for payment out of court of money to which he was entitled under an appointment by will:—Held, that probate of the will in the supreme court of New Zealand was not sufficient for this court to act upon, but the will must be proved in England. Limehouse Board of Works, Ex parte, Vallance, In re, 52 L. J., Ch. 791; 24 Ch. D. 177; 48 L. T. 941.

Letters testimonial sealed by the supreme court of the colony of Victoria, setting forth verbatim a will of real estate made in that colony, and stating that it had been duly proved, were accepted as sufficient proof of the will for the purposes of the usual preliminary decree in a partition action. Waite v. Bingley, 51 L. J., Ch. 651; 21 Ch. D. 675; 30 W. R. 698.

India—Acts of Council.]—A book containing the acts of the legislative council of India, produced by a clerk from the India office, is sufficient evidence of the acts therein contained. Gardner v. Wright, 15 L. T. 325.

—— Registers of Baptisms.]—In an action to determine the right to letters of administration, the issue being as to the legitimacy of certain persons, copies of registers of baptisms in India were admitted in evidence. Queen's Proctor v. Fry, 48 L. J., P. 68; 4 P. D. 230; 41 L. T. 530. See also Evans v. Ball, 38 L. T. 141.

Before 14 & 15 Vict. c. 99, s. 7—Foreign Documents.]—To prove the seal of a foreign cour de commerce a witness should be called who has known the seal used on other occasions, and a witness who has never known it used, but who speaks to its being the seal of that court from an inscription around it so stating, is not sufficient. Bristow v. De Secqueville, 3 Car. & K. 64.

A document under the seal of the court of the Holy Office or Inquisition of Rome, but apparently drawn up by a notary whose name is attached to it, from a record in that court, but which was not set forth in the document, is not evidence to prove the grounds of a judgment pronounced by that court, the ratio decidendi not being stated, although it is admissible in support of an allegation in a plea of justification of a libel, that such a judgment has been pronounced. Reg. v. Newman, Dears. C. C. 85; 3 Car. & K. 252; 1 El. & Bl. 268; 22 L. J., Q. B. 156.

A charterparty was entered into at Java. By the law of Holland, which is the law in force there, the parties upon entering into such a contract, go before a notary public: he makes an entry in his books, which the parties sign, and he makes out copies from time to time, when requested, which he delivers to the parties. These copies are received in evidence in the courts of Holland, but at Java, the notary's book itself must be produced. These copies cannot be received in the courts in England (no proof being given when they were made), either on the ground of the notary being a public officer, whose duty it was to make copies, or of his being the agent of the parties by whose acts they had agreed to be bound. Brown v. Thornton, 1 N. & P. 339; W. W. & D. 11; 6 A. & E. 185; 6 L. J., K. B. 82.

The sentence of a foreign court of admiralty cannot be received in evidence, without proof of the ship having been captured. Marshall v. Parker, 2 Camp. 69; 11 R. R. 665.

The English courts cannot take notice of any judicial act done in a foreign country, without evidence of the laws of such country. Ganer v. Lanesborough (Lady), Peake, 25; 3 R. R. 647.

In an action on a foreign judgment, it is not sufficient to prove the judge's handwriting subscribed to it, without proving that the seal affixed thereto is the seal of the court. Henry v. Ady, 3 East, 221; 4 Esp. 228.

In an action on a foreign judgment, the judgment produced at the trial must be authenticated by the seal of the foreign court, or evidence must be given that the court has no seal; and then the judgment may be established by proving the signature of the judge. Alves v. Bunbury, 4 Camp. 28.

An exemplification of a sentence in Holland, under the common seal of the States, may be read in evidence in a suit in chancery. Anon., 9 Mod. 66.

Decree at Leghorn allowed to be read as evidence. Burrows v. Jamereau, Dick. 48.

—— Colonial Documents.]—If a colonial court possesses a seal, it must be used for the purpose of authenticating a judgment of the court, although it is so much worn as no longer to make any impression. Curan v. Stewart, 1 Stark. 525.

In an action on two judgments recovered in the supreme court of Jamaica, copies of the judgments purporting to be signed by the clerk of the court, and certified by him to be true copies, accompanied by a certificate of a notary public of his being clerk of the court, and by another certificate of the governor, under the seal of the island, that the person so certifying was a notary public, were held to be admissible to prove the judgments. Appleton v. Braybrook (Lord), 6 M. & S. 34; 2 Stark. 6; 18 R. R. 294.

A judgment in the court of common pleas in the island of Tobago was proved by a witness swearing to the handwriting of the chief justice of the court, and saying that he would have acted upon the seal appended to it as the seal of the island. Buchanan v. Rucker, 1 Camp. 63; 9 East, 192; 9 R. R. 531.

Semble, an examined copy of a letter of attorney, enrolled in the office of record, in Jamaica, is not admissible (without more); although an examined copy of a deed so enrolled is, by force of acts of the local legislature, admissible. Faulkener v. Daniel, 3 Hare, 221.

Foreign Laws.]—The law of France as to marriage may be proved by the production of a printed book, purporting to contain the code of France, and proved by parol testimony to contain the law of that country; and a book purporting to have been published at the royal printing-office, at Paris, which (according to the statement of the witness) was authorised to print the laws of France by the government of that country, was received as evidence of such law, and on which the courts in this country would act. Lacon v. Higgins, 3 Stark. 178; D. & R. N. P. C. 38; 25 R. R. 779.

A printed copy of the Cinq Codes of France, produced by the French vice-consul resident at London, who purchased it at a bookseller's shop in Paris, was received as evidence of the law of France, upon which the court would act. Ib.

In support of a plea of discharge by a Jamaica court of insolvency, a printed copy of a colonial act, from the colonial office, was received with evidence that there was an insolvent debtor's court in that island. Clarke v. Emery, 1 F. & F. 446.

An English barrister practising in Canadian appeals before the privy council is not competent to give evidence as an expert as to the validity, according to the law of Canada, of a marriage solemnised in that country. Cartwright v. Cartwright, 26 W. R. 684.

An opinion of a Scotch advocate was in evidence. The judge considering that there was implied therein an opinion on a question of Scotch law raised in the suit, decided the question on that evidence. Macdonald v. Macdonald, 41 L. J., Ch. 566; L. R. 14 Eq. 60; 26 L. T. 685; 20 W. R. 739.

A witness whose knowledge of the law of a foreign country is derived solely from having studied it, is incompetent to prove the operation or effect of such law. Bonelli, In goods of, 45 L. J., P. 42; 1 P. D. 69; 34 L. T. 32; 24 W. R. 255.

On a question of foreign law, a joint written opinion given by two jurists was exhibited to them on their examination, which they verified as being according to the law of the foreign country:—Held, that this evidence was receivable. Nelson (Earl) v. Bridport (Lord), 8 Beav. 527; 10 Jur. 871.

The affidavit of a person describing himself as a "solicitor practising in the supreme courts of Scotland" was not received in evidence on a question of Scotch law. Todd, In re, 19 Beav. 582.

—— Proved as Facts.]—Foreign laws must be proved as facts, if a question arises on their existence. Mostyn v. Fabrigas, Cowp. 174.

A commission granted to examine at Paris as to the extent of jurisdiction of a particular court erected there, but not as to the original constitution of it. Gage v. Stafford (Lady), 2 Ves. 556.

Laws and customs of France or Holland must be proved, else the court cannot take notice of them. Freemoult v. Dedire, 1 P. W. 431.

Foreign law must be proved as a fact. Cridland, Ex parte, 3 Ves. & B. 99. S. P., Nelson (Earl) v. Bridport (Lord), 8 Beav. 527; 10 Jur. 871.

A question of foreign law, being one of fact, must be decided in each cause on evidence adduced in it, and not by a decision or on evidence adduced in another case, although similarly circumstanced. M'Cormick v. Garnett, 5 De G. M. & G. 278; 23 L. J., Ch. 777; 18 Jur. 412; 2 Eq. R. 536; 2 W. R. 403.

Where reliance is placed upon a difference between the law of England and the law of a foreign state, the party is bound by witnesses or books of authority, to shew that there is such a difference. Smith v. Gould, 4 Moore, P. C. 21; 6 Jur. 543.

A question whether an interest in a heritable bond charged upon lands in Scotland will pass by will, referred to the master to report the law of Scotland. Glover v. Strathoff, 2 Bro. C. C. 32.

A question arose as to the right of the parties under a Scotch settlement. The court referred to the master to inquire as to its construction according to the law of Scotland. The master made his report founded on the opinion of Scotch advocates, and the cause coming on the court acted thereon, and ordered accordingly. Williams v. Williams, 3 Beav. 547.

Where a question arises in consequence of estates in Scotland being devised to a certain person, the court will not adjudicate upon that question until it has been ascertained, by a reference to one of the masters, whether the estates did pass by the Scotch law or not. M'Call v. M'Call, 2 Con. & L. 184.

And see post, cols. 915, 916.

—— Construction of.]—Foreign law and the construction of a foreign contract, just as much as the construction of an English contract, are matters for the decision of the judge, after having the foreign law, or the language of the foreign contract, interpreted and explained to him by the evidence of foreign experts, and are not in any case questions for a jury. Copin v. Adamson, 43 L. J., Ex. 161; L. R. 9 Ex. 345; 31 L. T. 242; 22 W. R. 658.

In the construction of a foreign document in the English courts, the judge or court must obtain, first, a translation of the document; secondly, an explanation of any terms of art used in it; thirdly, information on any special law; and fourthly, on any peculiar rule of construction of the foreign state affecting it; and it is the duty of the English court with such light to construe the document. Di Sora v. Phillips, 10 H. L. Cas. 624; 2 N. R. 553; 33 L. J., Ch. 129—H. L. (E.)

When the question at issue in an English court is what is the foreign law on the subject, and an expert refers in his evidence to sections of the foreign code as supporting the propositions for which he vouches, the English court may refer to and construe those sections. Concha v. Murietta, 40 Ch. D. 543; 60 L. T. 798—C. A.

There may be cases in which a judge may take upon himself to construe the words of a foreign law, and determine their application to the case in question, especially if there should be a variance or want of clearness in the testimony. Semble. Nelson (Earl) v. Bridport (Lord), 8 Beav. 527; 10 Jur. 871.

Under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 63—Proof of Scots Law.]—In a suit instituted in this country, where a question of Scotch law arises, the court has power under the 22 & 23 Vict. c. 63, to order a case to be settled for the opinion of the Scotch court, and, on a return of the judgment of such court, to apply the facts to such decision, and make an order accordingly. Wilson v. Moore, 12 W. R. 1137.

Where a settlement creating a power of appointment is in the Scotch form, the court will not decide the question of the validity of the appointment without ascertaining the law of Scotland on the subject, and for this purpose will direct a case to be stated for the opinion of the court of session under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 63. Topham v. Portland (Duke), 1 De G. J. & Sm. 578; 32 L. J., Ch. 257; 11 W. R. 507.

In a case of conflict of opinions on a question of pure and difficult Scotch law, the court will not decide on the usual evidence, the opinions of advocates, but will send a case to the Scotch court under the 22 and 23 Vict. c. 63, but it is matter of discretion in the court. Lord v. Colvin, 1 Dr. & Sm. 24; 29 L. J., Ch. 297; 6 Jur. (N.S.) 189; 8 W. R. 254.

Where the court of chancery, for the purpose of disposing of a case depending before it, thinks it expedient to send a case to any other court in the queen's dominions where a different law is administered, it can, in its discretion, do so. Such case must state shortly, but sufficiently, all the facts, and the foreign court would, primâ facie, act in the same manner with respect to it, as courts of common law in this country would do upon a case sent under the old practice. S. C., 8 W. R. 201.

By 18 & 19 Vict. c. 63, disputes are to be referred to the county courts, which are to make such orders as the court of chancery may make, but in Scotch friendly societies the jurisdiction is given to the sheriff. Some members of a Scotch society having sought relief before the sheriff, the defendants pleaded to the jurisdiction, whereupon the sheriff directed a case to the court of chancery, under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 63, to ascertain whether that court had jurisdiction in such a case in England:—Held, that the case did not come within the statute, and the court declined to express its opinion. Brodie v. Johnson, 30 Beav. 129.

Where previously to the marriage of a domiciled Englishman to a domiciled Scotchwoman in Scotland a settlement was executed in Scotch form, the court declined to decide questions arising out of the terms of the settlement and affecting the husband's property in England, without being informed as to the construction which would be put upon the instrument by a Scotch court; and it therefore directed a case to be sent to the court of session, under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 63, to ascertain the law of Scotland applicable to the settlement. Eglinton (Earl) v. Lamb, 15 L. T. 657.

—— Hindoo Law.]—Form of reference to the supreme court at Calcutta of questions of Hindoo law under 22 & 23 Vict. c. 63. Login v. Coorg, 30 Beav. 632.

5. Certificates.

College.]—The certificate of the veterinary college, that the plaintiff had attended lectures there, is not admissible in evidence, as not coming from a body known to the law. Sewell v. Corp, 1 Car. & P. 392.

Enrolment.]—On a proviso in a duchy lease, that it shall be enrolled with the auditor, the certificate of the auditor on the margin is sufficient evidence of the enrolment. Kinnersley v. Orpe, 1 Dougl. 56.

Burthen of Ship.]—A master of a foreign vessel arriving in the port of London, delivered to the custom-house officers a report of the burthen of his ship, and the number of his crew, and it was filed at the custom-house:—Held, that 8 & 9 Vict. c. 86, ss. 2, 7, 18, did not give this the character of a public document, so as to make it evidence of the burthen of the ship. Huntley v. Donovan, 15 Q. B. 96.

A certificate was produced from the custom-house, where it had been filed, signed by a party who certified that he had measured the vessel and stated the amount of the tonnage:—Held (it not being shewn that this was an act prescribed by statute), that the certificate could not be received as a public document to prove the burthen of the ship. Ib.

Masters' Certificates.]—The plaintiffs were the owners of a cargo, shipped on board the defendant's ship, and they alleged that the master of the ship so negligently navigated her, that by reason of his negligence the ship went aground and the cargo was lost. The conduct of the master had, before the trial, been the subject of a Board of Trade inquiry, and his certificate had been suspended upon the ground that he had been guilty of negligence on the occasion. This appeared by an entry in the record of certificates kept in pursuance of the Merchant Shipping Act, 1854, s. 138:—Held, that a certified copy of the entry in the record of certificates was not admissible. M'Allum v. Reid, L. R. 3 Adm. 57, n.

Baptismal.]—A baptismal certificate, when adduced at nisi prius, is evidence only of the fact of baptism, and not of any independent fact which is therein stated. It would be misdirection if the judge who had admitted such a certificate, failed to tell the jury that they were not to treat it as evidence of such independent fact. But the court will not, on that ground alone, grant a new trial, if it appears that there was other and abundant evidence on which the jury might have found their verdict, if the certificate objected to had been altogether excluded. Thrussell v. Barker, 17 L. T. 665.

A certificate of baptism from a Roman Catholic chapel, signed by the priest, is not good evidence. D'Aglie v. Fryer, 13 L. J., Ch. 398.

Death.]—The certificate of the district registrar is sufficient evidence of a person's death. Traill v. Kibblewhite, 10 Jur. 107.

Funeral.]—A funeral certificate from a manuscript book, entitled "Funeral Certificates of the Nobility," produced from the Heralds' College, is admissible evidence of the state of the deceased's family, and of the other statements contained in it. Vaux Peerage Case, 5 Cl. & F. 542.

Highway.]—A certificate by justices of the peace that a highway (indicted) is in repair, is a legal instrument, recognised by the courts of law, and admissible after conviction, when the court is about to impose a fine. Rex v. Mawbey, 6 Term Rep. 619; 3 R. R. 282.

Ordination.]—A certificate of the ordination of a clergyman in Ireland, signed by the Archbishop of Tuam, found amongst the papers of the clergyman after his death, is properly received in evidence, having come from the proper custody, and being more than thirty years old, and not being the act of any court; and not having any relation to the corporate character of the archbishop, the seal was to be considered the seal of the natural person, and not of the corporation. Rex v. Bathwick, 2 B. & Ad. 639.

Under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 20, s. 5.]—Signature of chairman of committees of house of lords to a certificate under 9 & 10 Vict. c. 20, s. 5, must be proved. Anon., 2 W. R. 614.

Redemption of Land Tax.] — The proper evidence to shew that the land tax has been redeemed, is the certificate of the commissioners or a copy of the register. Buchanan v. Poppleton, 4 C. B. (N.S.) 20 ; 27 L. J., C. P. 210 ; 4 Jur. (N.S.) 414.

Excise Accounts.]—The certificate of the secretary of the Board of Excise, as to the accuracy and effect of accounts in the books of excise, ought not to be received in evidence. Dunbar v. Harvey, 2 Bligh, 351.

Registration of Company.]—The certificate of the registration of a company under the hand of the assistant registrar, is admissible, without any allegation in the certificate, or proof, aliunde, of the absence of the registrar ; although by 7 & 8 Vict. c. 110, s. 19, the assistant registrar was only empowered to act in the absence of his principal. Baker v. Cane, 1 H. & N. 674 ; 26 L. J., Ex. 190 ; 5 W. R. 345.

Of Stock Broker.]—The unsupported declaration of the party interested, viz. of the mortgagee alone, is not sufficient evidence of the nonpayment of mortgage money upon which the power of sale arose, and the certificate of a stockbroker of a corresponding fund in the bank-books is not evidence of the identity of stock as between vendor and purchaser. Hobson v. Bell, 2 Beav. 17 ; 8 L. J. Ch. 241 ; 3 Jur. 196.

As to Custom of London.]—If the lord mayor and aldermen have once certified to the custom of London, the certificate is conclusive, and the court never refers the same question a second time. Bruin v. Knot, 12 Sim. 453 ; 9 Jur. 979.

Foreign.]—A copy of an entry made from a certificate of baptism by a chaplain of a British minister at a foreign court, is not sufficient evidence of birth and parentage. Dufferin and Clandeboye's Peerage, 2 H. L. Cas. 47.

In an action to determine the right to letters of administration, the issue being as to the legitimacy of certain persons, copies of registers of baptisms in India were admitted in evidence. Queen's Proctor v. Fry, 48 L. J., P. 68 ; 4 P. D. 230.

The certificate of the Hanoverian ambassador, under the seal of the legation, is admissible evidence of the law of Hanover as to the validity of a testamentary paper. Klingemann, In goods of, 3 Sw. & Tr. 18 ; 32 L. J., P. 16 ; 8 L. T. 172 ; 11 W. R. 218.

In proof of a marriage in Chili, a document was tendered purporting to be an extract from a register of marriages, and signed by the curate-rector of the church where it was solemnised. His signature was verified by a public notary, whose signature was verified by other notaries, and their signatures were verified by the foreign minister of the Chilian Republic, and a certificate under the hand and seal of the British consul at Chili was added. On the evidence of a witness that a register was kept by the curate-rector of every church in Chili of marriages solemnised in it, and that certificates of marriage such as that tendered were in the Chilian courts received in evidence, that he knew the name of the curate-rector, and was also well acquainted with several of the persons whose signatures were appended to the certificate as witnesses, the document was admitted as evidence of the marriage. Abbot v. Abbot, 29 L. J., Mat. 57.

—— Damaged Goods.]—The certificate of a British vice-consul at the Brazils, of the amount of the proceeds of damaged goods, which by the law of that country are compelled to be sold under his inspection, is not evidence. Waldron v. Coombe, 3 Taunt. 162 ; 12 R. R. 629.

The certificate of an agent for Lloyd's at a foreign port, ascertaining an average loss upon a cargo damaged by sea-water, is not of itself admissible to shew the amount of the loss, in an action brought by the assured against the underwriters in this country. Drake v. Marryat, 2 D. & R. 696 ; 1 B. & C. 473 ; 25 R. R. 464 ; 1 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 161.

Colonial.]—The certificate of a deed, as registered in a registry office in one of the colonies by the registrar, who was not "a person lawfully authorised to administer oaths," is not, per se, evidence of the fact of such registration under the 22nd section of the act 15 & 16 Vict. c. 86, but the signature of the registrar requires verification. Baillie v. Jackson, 3 De G. M. & G. 38 ; 10 Hare (App.), xlvi. ; 22 L. J., Ch. 753 ; 17 Jur. 170 ; 1 W. R. 196.

Notarial.]—A notarial protest under seal is no evidence that a foreign bill of exchange has been presented for payment in England. Chesmer v. Noyes, 4 Camp. 122.

The protest of a captain is of itself evidence only to contradict the captain's evidence, and not to shew a variance between it and the condemnation. Christian v. Coombe, 2 Esp. 490.

The court will judicially notice the seal on a notarial certificate verifying an affidavit sworn before a magistrate abroad. Cole v. Sherard, 11 Ex. 482.

A notarial copy of the condemnation of a ship, as not being worth repairing, is only evidence of the fact of her having been condemned, and not of the particular defects on which the condemnation was grounded. Wright v. Barnard, 2 Esp. 699 ; 5 R. R. 767. And see Nye v. Macdonald, 39 L. J., P. C. 34 ; L. R. 3 P. C. 331 ; 23 L. T. 220 ; 18 W. R. 1075 ; and Brooke v. Brooke, 50 L. J., Ch. 528 ; 17 Ch. D. 833 ; 44 L. T. 512 ; 30 W. R. 45 ; ante, col. 608, and Fox v. Bearblock, 50 L. J., Ch. 489 ; 17 Ch. D. 429 ; post, col. 644.

Appointing Creditors' Assignee.]—Assignees were chosen before action, but the certificate of their appointment was not signed until after action :—Held, that as the certificate was good on the face of it, it could not be impeached, and was conclusive evidence of their due appointment to the office of assignee. Kelly v. Morray, 1 H. & R. 684 ; 35 L. J., C. P. 287 ; L. R. 1 C. P. 667 ; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 769 ; 14 L. T. 624 ; 14 W. R. 939.

6. Ancient Surveys and Terriers.

When Admissible.]—A document purporting to be a survey of a manor made while it was part of the possessions of the Duchy of Cornwall, and coming out of the proper custody, is admissible as evidence of the boundaries and customs of the manor. Smith v. Brownlow (Earl), L. R. 9 Eq. 241 ; 21 L. T. 739 ; 18 W. R. 271.

Plaintiff tendered a document in evidence, dated 26th August, 26 Eliz., which, after reciting a commission under the great seal of England, directed to certain persons therein named, granting them power by all modes to survey what honours, manors, lands, &c. in Ireland, had or ought to have come to the hands of the crown by reason of the treason of the Earl of Desmond, and others named, and to survey all the ancient possessions and revenues of the crown in Ireland, stated that the commissioners had seen and examined the honours, &c., which had come to the crown by reason of the aforesaid treason, it was proved that the original of the commission was not forthcoming. Held :—That the survey having been prepared by public officers in reference to a matter affecting the interests of the public was admissible in evidence, though it had not been taken by a jury. Devonshire (Duke) v. Neill, 2 L. R. Ir. 132.

The Down survey, though it is conclusive only as to the boundaries of the new and old interests, defined by the statute of Car. 2, is, as a public document, admissible evidence on questions between any persons of matters stated in it. Dublin (Archbishop) v. Trimleston (Lord), 12 Ir. Eq. R. 251.

The books of distributions being only abstracts of the survey, are not admissible as evidence of matters stated in them. Ib.

The poor-law valuation is evidence as a public document, of the value of land comprised in it. Swift v. M'Tiernan, 11 Ir. Eq. R. 602. S. P., Welland v. Middleton (Lord), 11 Ir. Eq. R. 603.

Tithe Map.]—A sealed copy of a tithe commutation map is not receivable on a question of ownership of land. Wilberforce v. Hearfield, 46 L. J., Ch. 584 ; 5 Ch. D. 709 ; 25 W. R. 861.

The proceedings (properly authenticated) of the commissioners acting under the Tithe Commutation Acts, are public evidence of the matters therein stated, and to be received as such. Giffard v. Williams, 38 L. J., Ch. 597.

Crown Surveys and Valuations.]—A valuation made for the crown, tempore Edward VI., is not evidence to establish a manorial custom. Phillips v. Hudson, 36 L. J., Ch. 301 ; L. R. 2 Ch. 243 ; 16 L. T. 221 ; 15 W. R. 370.

Where a manor formerly belonged to the crown, a grant and survey recorded in the augmentation office are not evidence for the tenants against the lord. Ib.

A survey taken by commissioners from the crown, when seised of a manor, is admissible to shew what were the demesne lands of the manor at that time. Dimes v. Arden, 6 N. & M. 494 ; 5 L. J., K. B. 158.

To prove the extent and rights of a manor, which had formerly been parcel of the duchy of Lancaster, a document produced from the duchy-office was tendered, purporting to be a survey of the manor made in 33 Eliz., while the manor belonged to the duchy, by the deputy-surveyor of the duchy, founded on the presentment of the tenants of the manor, at a court of survey ; and it appeared that Queen Elizabeth had paid the expenses of the survey :—Held, to be inadmissible, either as a document made under public authority, or as evidence of reputation. Evans v. Taylor, 3 N. & P. 174 ; 7 A. & E. 617 ; 7 L. J., Q. B. 73.

Queen Elizabeth granted the lordship of Denbigh in fee to the Earl of Leicester, who mortgaged it to the corporation of London, and died in the 30th Eliz. In the 33rd Eliz. the corporation conveyed the lands to the crown, and covenanted to deliver up all muniments of title, surveys, &c., and the property has ever since remained in the possession of the Crown. In the reign of Charles I. the Crown granted in fee farm "a messuage and escheat lands and tenements, containing by estimation 112 acres of arable lands, situate in the vill of Kernynyved, now or late in the tenure or occupation of David ap John ap David." In replevin for a distress for this rent, made in a close of a farm called Plas Bach, the defendant for the purpose of proving that Plas Bach was parcel of the 112 acres of escheat lands out of which the rent issued, tendered in evidence the following survey, from the office of the Land Revenue Records : "Lordship of Denbigh. Survey taken in the reign of Queen Elizabeth, 11th. The Comot of Kynmerch. The presentment of the jury of survey for town lands within the Comot of Kynmerch." Various townships were then mentioned, and Kernynyved, as to which it was stated that David ap John ap David occupied certain parcels of land, amongst them one messuage called "Y Place Baghe," and in the margin were the words, "Acres, 112 ; li. 3*s.* 4*d.*" :—Held, that the survey was not admissible. Daniel v. Wilkin, 7 Ex. 429 ; 21 L. J., Ex. 236.

An ancient extent of crown lands found in the office of inland revenue records, and purporting to have been made by the steward of the crown lands, is evidence of the title of the crown to lands therein stated to have been purchased by the crown of a subject. Doe d. William the Fourth v. Roberts, 13 M. & W. 520 ; 14 L. J., Ex. 274.

Evidence of a payment in lieu of tithes was given, extending as far back as the reign of Charles I. Still more ancient documents relating to the same parish, and among them the ecclesiastical survey of Henry VIII., made no mention of such payment :—Held, that in these circumstances, an allegation that such payment existed before the time of legal memory, was not supported. Graves v. Fisher, 3 Cl. & F. 1 ; 8 Bligh (N.S.) 937.

Under the Commonwealth.]—To support a claim for payment of 4*d.* a wey for all coals gotten within a manor and seigniory, and exported to sea, a book was produced from the custody of the plaintiff, purporting to be a survey taken in 1650, after the manor and seigniory had been granted to Oliver Cromwell, by the authority of parliament, and purporting to be taken by virtue of a commision to certain persons named in the survey given by Oliver Cromwell, lord general of the parliament forces. After specifying certain rents, it stated "that the jury present &c. 4*d.* due unto the lord for every wey of coals that is transported out of the lordship." No commission was proved, nor was it signed by the jury :—Held, that this survey was inadmissible either as a public document or as evidence of reputation. Beaufort (Duke) v. Smith, 4 Ex. 456 ; 19 L. J., Ex. 97.

A parliamentary survey made during the Commonwealth is evidence of reputation, whether made under competent authority or not. Freeman v. Read, 4 B. & S. 174; 32 L. J., M. C. 226; 10 Jur. (N.S.) 149.

Commission of Lord.]—An ancient survey of a manor made before commissioners appointed by the lord of the manor and a jury of the tenants of the manor, is admissible as evidence to shew the boundaries of the manor; but is not admissible as evidence of the lord's title to wreck. Talbot v. Lewis, 6 Car. & P. 603.

Terriers.]—A terrier or a map of the parish, not signed by any of the parishioners or parish officers, is not admissible evidence of the boundary of the parish. Earl v. Lewis, 4 Esp. 3.

In order to render a terrier or other ancient document admissible, it is not necessary that it is produced from the most proper place of custody; it is sufficient that it comes from a place where it might reasonably be expected to be found; and, therefore, where a terrier was produced by the son of an attorney who was a registrar of a diocese, and who stated that he brought the document from his father's office:—Held, that it was receivable, although it appeared there was a general registry-room belonging to the cathedral. Croughton v. Blake, 12 M. & W. 205; 13 L. J., Ex. 78; 8 Jur. 275.

A copy from the parish registry, if the original cannot be found, is evidence. The proper repositories of terriers and vicars' books to make them evidence, are the church chest, the registry of the bishop, and the registry of the archdeacon. Armstrong v. Hewett, 4 Price, 216; 18 R. R. 707.

A return made by the incumbents of a parish church, and another clergyman, in answer to queries sent to them by the bishop of the diocese, for the information of the governors of Queen Anne's Bounty, when an augmentation took place, is admissible, as being in the nature of an inquisition in a public matter. Carr v. Mostyn, 5 Ex. 69; 19 L. J., Ex. 249.

Terriers of the glebe lands and other rights belonging to a parish church, dating from 1727 to 1825, containing the following clause: "Easter Offerings. Every communicant, 2*d.*; every cow, 2*d.*; every plough, 2*d.*; every foal, 1*s.*; every hive of bees, 1*d.*; every house, 3½*d.*"—are evidence of such a custom as excludes the common-law right (if such exists) to a payment of 2*d.* for every member of a family of the age of sixteen as an Easter offering, because it includes items to which the common-law right does not extend. Reg. v. Hall, 7 B. & S. 642; 35 L. J., M. C. 251; L. R. 1 Q. B. 632; 12 Jur. (N.S.) 892.

A terrier without date and bearing the signatures of various persons, having no addition or designation affixed to their names, is admissible in evidence on behalf of the vicar, if produced in circumstances shewing it to be a genuine document. Hall v. Farmer, 2 Y. & C. 145.

County History.]—The manors of R. and of S., the parishes of C. and of Y., and the counties of B. and of G., were conterminous:—Held, in an action for disturbance of common, in which the boundaries of the two manors came in question, a county history of the county of B. which stated the boundaries of the counties at this spot was not receivable. Evans v. Getting, 6 Car. & P. 586.

Grants.]—Ancient grants are not to be received in evidence, unless they can be accounted for, as coming from the hands of some one connected with the estate to which they relate. Swinnerton v. Stafford (Marquis), 3 Taunt. 91.

7. Parish Registers.

Baptism.]—An entry in the register of the christening of a child, as to the time of its birth, is not of itself sufficient evidence of the age. Wilson v. Law, 3 Stark. 63; 23 R. R. 757.

If a parish register of baptisms states that the person baptised was born on a particular day, that is not evidence of the date of its birth. Rex v. Clapham, 4 Car. & P. 29. S. P., Burghart v. Angerstein, 6 Car. & P. 690.

A baptismal register, in which the party is described as the illegitimate son of his mother, is admissible on the trial of an issue as to the legitimacy of such party. Cope v. Cope, 1 M. & Rob. 269; 5 Car. & P. 604. S. P., Morris v. Davies, id. 271, n. (b); 3 Car. & P. 215.

A register of baptism is not per se evidence of the place of birth of the party baptised. Rex v. North Petherton, 5 B. & C. 508; 8 D. & R. 325; 4 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 213; 29 R. R. 305.

A baptism cannot be proved by a minute written at the time by the parish clerk, nor by an entry in the parish register, made at a subsequent period by a succeeding incumbent, founded upon such minute. Doe d. Warren v. Bray, 3 M. & R. 428; 8 B. & C. 813; 7 L. J. (O.S.) K. B. 161.

It requires very strong evidence to satisfy the court that a parish register is not to be trusted in so material a matter as a christian name of a child whose baptism is recorded. Webb v. Haycock, 19 Beav. 342.

Marriage.]—The registry of a marriage is evidence between strangers of the time of the marriage. Doe d. Woolaston v. Barnes, 1 M. & Rob. 386.

An examined copy of an entry in a parish register of marriages is receivable to prove a marriage, although the entry in the register purports to be attested by one witness only, the words, "in the presence of" in the entry being followed by one name only. Doe d. Blayney v. Savage, 1 Car. & K. 487.

—— Licence.]—To prove a marriage by special licence in a private house, the affidavit made for the purpose of obtaining it, and the fiat by the archbishop from the proper office, and also a copy of the register of the parish which stated the marriage to have been by special licence at a private house, were produced:—Held, sufficient, without producing or accounting for the licence. Doe d. Egremont (Earl) v. Grazebrook, 3 G. & D. 334; 4 Q. B. 406; 12 L. J., Q. B. 221; 7 Jur. 530.

Burial.]—The 52 Geo. 3, c. 146, s. 5, requires parish registers to be kept at the parson's house or in the church; the custody of such registers by the parish clerk at his house is not, unless accounted for, such reasonably proper custody as to render receivable in evidence an extract made by a witness from a book produced to him as the parish register by the clerk at the clerk's house. Doe d. Arundel (Lord) v. Fowler, 14 Q. B. 700; 19 L. J., Q. B. 151; 14 Jur. 179.

A witness sent to verify a copy of a register of burial, went to a house which he was told by a person whom he met in the street was the house of the parish clerk, and compared it with the entry in a book which was produced as the parish register by a person who said he was the parish clerk:—Held, that the copy was inadmissible, the custody of the book not being that prescribed for the parish register by s. 5, and being unaccounted for. Ib.

In an action for use and occupation by the reversioner, against a person who had been tenant for years, determinable on three lives, a register of burials at a Wesleyan chapel is not admissible to prove the death of one of the cestuis que vie; nor is the evidence of a witness, who heard in the family that another of the cestuis que vie was dead. Whittuck v. Waters, 4 Car. & P. 375.
